ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE EILERS 500 PIANO CLUB

You, With 499 Others, Join in Wholesale Buying 500 New Scale $425 Eilers Pianos—Oost to Club Members Only $292.00.

One unalterable price, either for cash or pay $11 when you join then $5 monthly with interest. Quarterly or yearly payments to suit crop conditions can also be arranged. The books are now open—memberships will be taken by mail and also at our store where the New Scale $425 Eilers Piano is now on exhibition. No waiting, no delay, no drawing—piano is sent home at once, if in the city, or delivered here at short notice for members. As all our stores will be given their proportion of the 500, it will take only a short time to fill the club—the time is now—this week—today—to join in this unusual co-operative buying and benefit by a positive saving of $133.

FREE LIFE INSURANCE

We do not collect from widows and orphans. In case of death of club member the family is handed a receipt in full for the balance due now—they do not pay another dollar, provided all payments have been made according to agreement. The insurance is not a mere life insurance, but the fairest and best plan proposition ever made—one you cannot afford to allow to pass by. However, we do not admit full details. Call at the store and send for booklet—use coupon, but do not wait too long.

We do not believe there is a piano made or sold on the Coast or the Northwest for much less than double the club price of $292 that will equal the Eilers New Scale $425 model—no one will not admit of full description—the piano speaks for itself. If once seen, and heard, and the booklet explains all the advantages in which you share.

"I wish Sward were back here," said Fleetwood thoughtfully, turning his eye to his own rack. "I wonder what he does with himself—where he keeps himself all the while? What the devil is there for a man to do if he doesn't do anything? He's not getting out anywhere since his father's death. He has no clubs to go to, I understand. What does he do—to go to office and come back and sit in that study? He's been here all day and blink at the blue portraits of his aunt and distinguished ancestors?"

For awhile they talked of Sward and of his unfortunate story and the city of it, until when the two men ceased.

"Do you know," said Plank mildly, "I don't believe he ever did it."

"O'Hara looked up surprised, then shrugged. "Unfortunately he doesn't deny it, you see."

"I heard," said Fleetwood, lighting a cigarette, "that he did deny it; that he said, no matter what his condition was, he couldn't have done it. If he had been sober the governors would have been bound to take his word of honor. But he couldn't give that, you see. And after they judged out to him that he had done it, his condition to know exactly what he did do, he shut up. And they dropped him, and he's falling up."

"For I wish Sward were back here. He was a good deal of a man, after all, Tom."

They were unconsciously using the past tense in discussing Sward, as though he were dead, either physically or socially.

"In one way he was always a singularly decent man," mused O'Hara.

"How exactly do you mean?"

"Oh, about women?"

"I believe it was if he did take the Vice left into the batrooms it was his fault with her, and I believe his fault with any woman. He was absurdly decent that way. He was, indeed."

"And now look at the reputation he has. Isn't it funny? Isn't it, now?"

"What sort of an effect do you suppose all this business is going to have on Sward?"

"It had one effect already," replied Fleetwood. "Ferral's wife looks sick, and Belweher says he's going to the devil, but that's the sort of thing the major is likely to say. By the way, wasn't that the substantial girl between that pretty Landa girl and Sward? Somebody—some gossiping somebody—talked about it somewhere recently."

"I don't believe that, either," said Plank in his heavy, measured, soundless voice as they descended the steps of the white portico and looked around for a cab.

"As for me, I've got to bustle," observed O'Hara, glancing at his watch. "I'm due to shine at a function about five. Are you coming uptown, either of you fellows? I'll give you a lift as far as Seventy-second street, Plank."

"Tell you what we'll do," said Fleetwood impulsively, turning to Plank. "We'll drive downtown, you and I, and we'll look up poor old Sward. Shall we? He's probably all alone in that God-forsaken red brick family tomb. Shall we? How about it, Plank?"

O'Hara turned impatiently on his heel with a gesture of aloof, elitist disdain, his electric hansom and went buzzing away up the avenue.

"I'd like to, but I don't think I know Mr. Sward well enough to do that," said Plank diffidently. He hesitated, coloring up.

"The night misanthropist with his eyes as blue as—"

"—which perhaps I might not have ventured on had he been less-less unfortunate."

Again Fleetwood warned toward the fully loaded young man beside him. "See here," he said, "you are going as a friend of mine if you care to look at it that way."

"Thank you," said Plank. "I should be very glad to go in that way."

"The Sward house was old only in the comparative Manhattan meaning of the word, for in New York nothing is really very old except the faces of the young men."

Recollections of it had been considered a big house, and it was still so spoken of a solid, dignified, red brick structure, bulky in proportion, unornamented by fancy chimneys, the depth of its sunken windows hinting of the thickness of its walls and foundation.

Light rain pattered, all along and all drawn, massive window panes. Three massive windows, the curbed steam as thick as free trucks, craved upward to the roof, creaking the facade equally and furnishing some relief to its flatness, otherwise unbroken except by the deep recess of window and door. Two huge and unornamented columns, even stouter than the facade, stood before it, dividing curb from asphalt, and from the centers of the shriveled brown grass plots flanking the stoop under the basement window, two aged Rose of Sharon trees bristled up to the height of a white marble capitals of the flanking pillars supporting the stained portico.

"Nice old family mausoleum," commented Fleetwood, descending from the hansom, followed by Plank.

The door was opened by a very old man wearing the black aviator-tail coat and choker of an old time butler, spotted, quite immaculate, but cut after a fashion no young man remembers.

"Good evening, Gumble," said Fleetwood, entering; followed on thither by Plank.

"Good evening, sir," a pause and in the unsteady voice of age: "Mr. Fleetwood, sir. Mr. Plank."

"The Swards were always that," said the young man gently.

"Yes, sir. Thank you, Mr. Stephen. Mr. Sward," he corrected quickly, "is deceased, sir. It was—a great shock to us all, sir." He bowed and turned away, holding his silver stiffly, and they heard him muttering under his breath: "Bravely, sir; bravely. A— a great shock, sir. Thank you."

The butler returned presently, saying that Mr. Sward was at home and would receive them in the library above, as he was not yet able to pass upon the stairs.

Sward was sitting in an armchair by the window, one leg extended, his left foot, stiffly cased in bandages, resting on a footstool.

"Why, Stephen," exclaimed Fleetwood, hastening forward, "I don't know you were laid up the this?"

Sward offered his hand inquiringly; then his eyes turned toward Plank, who stood behind Fleetwood, and, without a word, he laid his hand on Fleetwood's sympathetic grip, he offered it to Plank.

"It is very kind of you," he said. "Gumble, Mr. Fleetwood prefers 17c for some insertable reason, Mr. Plank?"

"If you don't mind," said Plank, "I should like to have some tea—that is, if."

"Ten, Gumble, for two. We'll tattle in company, Mr. Plank," he added.

"And the cigars are at your elbow, Gumble," with another smile at Fleetwood.

"Now," said the butler after he had lit his cigar, "what is the matter, Stephen?"

Sward glanced at his stiffly extended foot, "Nothing much." He red-dened faintly. "I slipped. It's only a twisted ankle."

For a moment or two the passenger smiled Fleetwood; then a sudden, curious gleam of sympathy came into his eyes. He glanced sharply at Sward, who lowered his eyes, while the red tint in his hollow cheeks deepened.

"Neither speak for awhile," Plank sipped the tea which Gumble, the second man, brought. Sward brooded over his cup, head bent. Fleetwood made more noise than necessary with his tea.

"Why did you drop the Saddle club, Stephen?" asked Fleetwood.

"I'm not riding. I have no use for it," replied Sward.

"You've cut out the Proceunium club, too, and the Owl? Head and the Froggy? It's a shame, Stephen."

"I'm tired of clubs."

"Very well, I won't," said Sward, smiling. "Tell me what is happening out there." He made a gesture toward the window. "All the gossip the newspapers miss. I've talked Dr. Grishy to death. I've read myself stupid. What's going on, Billy?"

So Fleetwood sketched for him a gay cartoon of events, caricaturing various episodes in the social kaleidoscope which might interest him. Politics were touched upon, and they spoke of the possibility of Ferral, owing to the assembly, the sport of boss latter having become fashionable among the young men and providing a new amusement for the idle rich. So city, state and national issues were run through lightly, business conditions noted, the stock market speculated upon, and a presently conversation died out.

With a yawn from Fleetwood as he looked into his empty glass at the last bit of tea.

"Don't do that, Billy," snorted Sward. "You haven't discoursed upon art, literature and science yet, and you can't go until you've adjusted the affairs of the nation for the next twenty-four hours."

"How soon will you be out?" inquired Fleetwood.

"Out? I don't know. I shall try to drive to the university tomorrow."

"Why the devil did you resign from all your clubs? How can I see you if I don't come here?" began Fleetwood impatiently. "I know, of course, that you're not going anywhere, but a man always sees a club."

"I don't look well, Stephen. You are too much alone."

Sward did not answer. His face and body had certainly grown thinner since Fleetwood had last seen him. Plank, too, had been shocked at the change in him—the dark, hard lines under the eyes; the pallor, the curious immobility of the man, save for his fingers, which were always restless, now moving in search of some new object to worry and turn over and over, now nervously settling into a grasp on the arm of his chair.

"How is Amalgamated Electric?" asked Fleetwood abruptly.

BOISE WILL HAVE AN AIRSHIP.
Stroh's Airship was the winner of the first prize at the great airship races held in St. Louis last year. Stroh's mammoth sailing vessel of the air will be the one that will fly at Boise during the exposition. This feature alone will be worth going to see. The airship is one of the most novel, attractive and educational entertainments that could be offered. It will make two flights each day, weather permitting. Greatest attraction ever brought to the Intermountain country. You can't afford to miss it.

MAKE THE MOST OF THE FAIR.
Go to Boise and see the best fair in the state. There will be plenty of free shows and at the same time they will give a chance to study any particular branch of industry or art in which you might be especially interested.

Send for a complete premium list and book of rules and regulations. Address all communications to Will H. Gibson, Secretary Idaho-Mountain Fair association, Boise, Idaho.

75-POUND PUMPKIN.

Filer Sold Capable of Raising Anything.
Filer, Sept. 30, 1908.
A few of the Democrats of Filer tried very hard to have a caucus in the Commercial club rooms on Monday, to elect delegates for the Buhl convention. After a rag-chewing match and much wrangling, the citizens were delighted to hear the meeting dismissed. The delegates were named as: Mr. Frank Lower paid a visit to Twin Falls this week, incidentally visiting his wife and children while there.

John Summers, one of Filer's progressive ranchers, would like to have all those that are skeptical in regard to the soil in Filer, and who is a can producer, call at the Hibel Bros' real estate office and see some of their exhibits. Mr. Summers' pig paddocks weigh from 6 to 7 pounds each. Cars of non-moth size that yield 20 tons to the acre. Mr. Summers is one mile southeast of Filer and his impression is: "Filer against the whole world for me."
Mr. G. H. Ripley and family moved in the cozy new home built by Charles Allen. The house is modern and up-to-date.
E. E. Finch was so radiant with smiles on Monday that his friends commenced to inquire the cause. Mr. Finch says: "Oh, only a 10-pound piglet." J. P. Harris of Portland, was in Filer this week looking for a location for a barber shop. Mr. Harris says Filer looks good to him and even better than anything he has had in sight and expects to locate here.
E. H. Brennan was in Twin Falls via train on Tuesday.
The contractors are working rapidly on the new school house and expect to have it complete in a short time.

Contested Notice.

State Land Department, Boise, Idaho, August 20, 1908. A sufficient contest affidavit having been filed in this office by Joseph P. Eddy, contestant, against the entry No. 1744, made November 12th, 1905, for Lots Nos. 7 and 8, Section 18, Township 3 S., Range 16 E., by Oscar A. Conright, Witness, Eddy, who assigned said entry to Loren M. Eldred, Twin Falls, Idaho, contestant, in which it is alleged that neither the original entryman, Oscar A. Conright, nor his assignee, Loren M. Eldred, both of whom are named as contestants herein, resided upon the land covered by said entry or established a residence thereon within six months after notice was given that water was ready for delivery, and that neither of said contestants has at any time established in good faith a local residence on said land.

This matter is set for hearing at any time hereafter said land of sage brush or irrigated or cultivated the same or made the improvements as required by the rules and regulations of the State Board of Land Commissioners of the State of Idaho, said parties are hereby notified to appear in person and offer evidence touching said allegation at 10 o'clock A. M. on October 10th, 1908, before the office of the State Board of Land Commissioners, in Boise, Idaho.

The said contestant having, in a proper affidavit, filed August 20th, 1908, set forth facts which show that after the diligence, personal service of this notice can not be made, it is hereby ordered and it is noted that such service is given by due and proper publication.

TAKE IT IN TIME.

Just as Scores of Twin Falls Physicians have.

Waiting don't pay. If you neglect the aching back. Urinary troubles, diabetes, surely follow. Doan's Kidney Pills relieve back-ache.

Care every ill. Robert Walter Buchanan, near Bonnevill street, Pocatello, Idaho, brickman on the Oregon Short Line railroad, says: "I suffered from backache and heavy aching pains across my loins for more than two years. When I caught the least cold it settled in my back and caused an considerable suffering. If I stooped I was rewarded with severe pains across the region of the kidneys and I was unable to lift any great weight. There was also a feeling of soreness in the back and had difficulty with the kidney secretions. This was particularly annoying at night. All these symptoms showed me that I had kidney trouble and used many different remedies to cure it, but obtained little benefit. Finally I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and commenced using them. They proved to be just the remedy that I needed. In a short time the backache ceased, the soreness was removed from my back and the annoying urinary difficulty was corrected. I am pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills.

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's and take no other.

Do not let anyone tell you that something else is just as good as DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills, because there isn't anything just as good for weak back, backache, rheumatic pains, inflammation of the bladder, or any Kidney and Bladder disorder. A week's trial will convince you. Sold by Sprague's Pharmacy.

TO ADJUDICATE WATER RIGHTS. Canal Association Endeavoring to Ascertain Priority.

At a meeting of the Governing Board of the Twin Falls Canal Association, it was decided necessary upon the best legal advice obtainable, to procure a decree from the courts showing the standing of the water right for the land on the original Twin Falls tract. This is necessary in order to secure the rights of land owners in case a dispute arises as to the priority of the South Side Twin Falls tract over the surrounding tracts which have made claims on one waters of the Snake River, or in case any of the surrounding tracts show a disposition to encroach upon the rights of settlers upon the lands of the South Side Twin Falls tract.

Every owner of land on this tract, which includes the original appropriation of 20,000 acres on the North Side, is invited to join as a plaintiff in this suit to be brought, and if he so joins, the expense will be nominal. If he fails to join as a plaintiff, he will be made a defendant in the case, making it necessary for him to engage legal help at a considerable expense.

The secretary of the Canal Association will be in his office over the Courthouse in Twin Falls on Tuesday and every Saturday from 9:00 A. M. to 5:00 P. M., and will receive the names of all the claimants to be made plaintiffs and answer any questions to those desiring information.

The secretary has also been instructed by the governing board to call upon as many of the land owners as possible for him to see and give them an opportunity to become plaintiffs in the case. Messrs. Stuckelager & Bowen are the attorneys for the association and will consult with the board. They, as well as others who have given this matter much thought and study, consider an early action of the courts most important, and it is their earnest desire that the decree be of benefit to any particular piece of land that the owner of that land should signify his intention to join in the suit. The whole tract cannot be treated as a body, and the fact that your neighbor has a decree does not prevent you from being a plaintiff in the suit, so it is important to you that you are not overlooked.

LESLIE E. BARROW, Secretary Governing Board, August 29-08.

Alvin Summons. In the District Court of the Fourth Judicial District in and for the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho. Eliza Fritz, Plaintiff, vs. Benjamin A. Fritz, Defendant.

The State of Idaho sends greetings to Benjamin A. Fritz, Defendant, and you are hereby summoned and required to appear in an action brought against you by said plaintiff in the said court of the county of Twin Falls, County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer said complaint as above required, the said plaintiff will take judgment against you, as prayed for in plaintiff's complaint and for costs of this action.

Attest my hand and the seal of the District Court of the Fourth Judicial District, State of Idaho, in and for Twin Falls, County, this 20th day of August, 1908. H. T. WEST, (SEAL) Clerk of the District Court. W. P. GUTHRIE, Attorney for Plaintiff Residing at Twin Falls, Idaho.

It is about time that the Republican leaders stopped the scrap which is being waged among themselves and turn their attention to the Democracy.

The Twin Falls Chronicle, (Democrat) made its initial appearance this week in a neat six-page edition, ably edited and nicely printed. The Times extends to the new firm a hearty welcome to the journalistic field.

"If I am elected president I propose to devote all the ability that is in me to the constructive work of suggesting to congress the means by which the Roosevelt policies shall be clinched."—Hon. Wm. H. Taft, at Sandusky, Ohio, September 8, 1908.

Lots across the street from the site given to the county for a court house sold for $12,000, and there are thirty-two lots in the court house block. This makes the value of the property given to the county $28,000. The only provision the donor makes is that no temporary structure be put up and that the permanent building be put up within a given time. By voting the bonds the county becomes possessor of this valuable property already set out in beautiful lawn and shade trees. In five years $70,000 would be required to duplicate the property.

It is really funny how many reasons some men can advance against a public improvement which when shimmered down, prove only a selfish do-it-yourself spirit. The court house bond issue is showing a good many alleged boosters up in the light of knackers.

When a man will tell you in the same breath that he is opposed to the court house bonds because we should have a better building and then states that the taxes are too burdensome, by pretty sure to be a selfish relative of knacker; and is not giving his real and purely selfish motive for knacking.

A good many of the men in this county who counsel delay in the erection of the court house would be the first to howl if the records were destroyed by fire. For it is a well-known fact that a goodly number of our ranchers are borrowing money on their land. If the records were destroyed not a bank in the county would loan money or carry a loan on a ranch to which the mortgage could not deliver title. For this reason the destruction of the records would mean that many ranchers now being carried by banks would be forced to give up their land and quit the country heavy losers. For their own selfish interests it will pay such men to vote for the bonds.

"If ten thousand dollars of the county's money has already been squandered, how much of the $150,000 will go in the same way? If we vote for the bonds, must we expect to be called upon for another $100,000 to complete the county court house?"

The man who wrote the above dirty insinuation and then lacked courage to sign his name is too cowardly to be taken seriously by any man who believes in fair play. The attack and only casts reflection on the present county officers, but upon every man, Democratic or Republican, who is a candidate for office in this county, for it will be the new county officers who will disburse the money from the bond issue. Throwing dirt never took the place of logic with reasonable men, and if a man has honest objections he should not be afraid to come out and give them over his signature.

One of the arguments put forward against the court house was that we could put up temporary quarters and later erect a handsome building. Let the voter figure the proposition from a business standpoint and the proposition loses its feasibility. Five-proof vaults large enough to hold the records for say four years, would cost about $15,000. In order to accommodate the officers a building around the vaults would use at least $15,000 more. Next a site for the building must be purchased and the way property is selling another $20,000 would have to be expended for a block clear out in the suburbs or if purchased in a locality like the park would be an outlay of nearly $100,000. This brings the court house unexpended up to over $50,000, and still leaves the county with no jail and with an unsightly and merely a temporary building. Four years later, this temporary structure would be vacated and could not be sold for a fourth of its actual cost because it would be out of the business district. Thus the county would have paid at least a rent of five thousand dollars per year during four years, or the total sum of $20,000. On the other hand as the court house bond call states, the $150,000 is to build court house and jail and to completely furnish the same.

NOMINATION BY PUBLIC OPINION.

In the last analysis the president's intervention was the outcome of public opinion. His advice, cannot, at least, be ascribed to personal favoritism or partisanship. He seems to have realized, as the sectional leaders in New York believed by their own antagonism to the governor's methods, could not or would not, that the best sentiment of the state demanded Mr. Hughes' renomination, and that the popular approval of the Hughes administration in many other parts of the country was a Republican asset not to be lightly sacrificed. The renomination was a triumph of public opinion, not less a personal triumph for Mr. Hughes. In all his administration he has steadfastly refused to build up a personal machine. His only act looking toward a renomination has been to announce that he would accept the nomination if it were offered him. At Saratoga he had no headquarters, no one was authorized to speak for him, no one was influenced by him to work in his behalf. For the second time the office has sought the man. Both times, it is true, the influence of the president has been a strong factor in directing the seeking, but only because the Republican party in New York has no other leader with clearness of vision and breadth of mind to preserve the strength which Mr. Hughes would add to the party cause. The history of the Saratoga convention is an argument for the system of direct nominations. Surely the party leaders who for three days conferred and temporized in their effort to avoid doing what the people wanted, did not represent the party. If the nomination had been made at direct primaries, the governor, or we believe, would have named overwhelmingly. When the delegate system threatened to thwart the popular will it needs radical modification. It is a danger of party management that party workers tend to make the organization an end in itself instead of a means toward public service, and that the "leader" wisely guided and faithfully expressing public opinion, tends to become the "boss," representing private interests and personal ambitions. This danger the direct primary helps to avert. It binds leaders and workers to more rigid responsibility and reduces their opportunities for arbitrary and selfish action. Direct nominations, in connection with the Massachusetts form of ballot, have been one of the most important items in Governor Hughes' program during his first administration. We hope, in spite of the fact that the platform adopted at Saratoga indirectly opposes the one and declares flatly against the other, that he will not give up his fight for these admirable measures.—Outlook.

FRANK CONFESION.

The following story, from Washington, is one of the most remarkable of this very eccentric campaign: Of all the men who intend to vote for Bryan in November, there is probably not one more frank in stating his reason than a very wealthy business man of Baltimore, with whom your correspondent talked a few days ago. In 1896 and in 1900 this gentleman, though a lifelong Democrat, voted for McKinley because he was afraid of Bryan; he was afraid that Bryan's election would mean business disaster. In 1904 he voted for Roosevelt, because he felt that Roosevelt's election would insure a continuance of prosperity. But now he is going to vote for Bryan, and in response to a question he told why.

It should be said, by way of explanation, that this merchant, during the past 12 years of prosperity under Republican administrations, made practically every cent he owns today. He is now sufficiently wealthy to permit him to retire from the active direction of his business, which has been turned over to trusted employees. While not one of Baltimore's wealthiest men, he can count his cool million.

"I am going to vote for Bryan," said he, "for purely selfish reasons. I feel as sure now as I did 12 years ago that Bryan's election will bring on a panic. That is just what I want. If we have a panic I will be able to loan my money at high interest, and on ample security and make more in one year than I can make out of my business in 10 years. A severe panic would double my wealth, and naturally I want to double it if I can. That, frankly, is my reason for voting for Bryan."

And the striking feature of this declaration is that it is absolutely true; that man meant every word of it. There may be others supporting Bryan for the same reason, but none have been frank enough to confess it.—Statesman.

Merritt Elmer of Kimberley, is in the city today on business. Mr. Elmer is boasting with all his might for the court house bond and is sure they will carry.

Mr. and Mrs. William Seaver entertained a number of their friends at cards Saturday evening. Mrs. G. D. Alken and Mrs. W. H. Greenhow carried off the honors by getting highest score at cards.

Dr. A. R. Wilcox has arrived from Minook, Ill., and will reside on his farm three miles east of the city. He will make extensive improvements on his ranch and will make his home in this country in the future.

Victor Bink, who has been manager of the Kimberley Drug store for the last three months, will leave this evening for Chicago. Rumor has it that he will not return home, but will bring one of Chicago's belles back with him, as Mrs. Bink.

Arthur, the nine-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Johnson, died at the family home in this city, yesterday afternoon. Funeral services were held from Miller's chapel this afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by Rev. H. W. Parker, of the Methodist church.

G. D. Eldridge of Middlebury, Vermont, arrived in the city yesterday to visit with his son, W. H. Eldridge, of the Eldridge Clothing company. Mr. Eldridge is highly pleased with the country and the great improvements that have taken place in the last four years.

H. A. Barton will address the public on "Working Class Politics," October 2nd, 8:00 p. m., in Halverson & West's old business stand, corner 10th avenue and 10th street. Mr. Barton is the nominee for congress on the Socialist ticket and will make it interesting. All welcome. No admission fee charged.

Dr. C. M. Pettit of Minneapolis, Minn., is visiting with Benj. Wolpert of the Palace Clothing company. This is the doctor's first visit to the Twin Falls tract and he says he can see clearly realize what has been accomplished in the last four years. He is highly pleased with the country and when he returns home will boast for Twin Falls and the tract.

Mrs. C. E. Booth entertained a number of ladies at Thursday afternoon at cards. The favors and tally cards were beautifully tinted autumn leaves served to the guests by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Pickett, Misses Nell Bule and Lydia Boyd. The prizes were won by Mrs. F. L. Dell, Mrs. W. S. Hill and Mrs. G. F. Baker.

Mrs. A. E. Gross was at home on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon of this week to a large number of her friends and the guests enjoyed the novel entertainments to the full. On Tuesday Mrs. C. A. Tush, Mrs. B. W. Pickett and Mrs. E. D. Shadley received the prizes for their skill in the spirited contests held during the afternoon. On Wednesday the prizes went to Mrs. W. J. Young, Mrs. B. J. Hall and Mrs. S. B. Perrine. The delicious refreshments which did full justice to the culinary skill of the hostess, were served by Mrs. E. C. Lavering, Mrs. Ed. Hartdegen and Mrs. B. J. Hall.

A very pretty stock and socking shower was given for Miss Florence Higbee by Mrs. T. O. Boyd and Mrs. C. E. Booth at the home of the former last evening. Hot herbs on ribbons were used for decorations and added greatly to the charm of the rooms. A large heart was fastened from the festoons of smaller hearts and into this the guests dropped their parcels. The amusement of the evening was bridge and the prizes were won by Miss Ladd, Mrs. Redford and Miss Higbee. Later in the evening little heart-shaped cakes were passed to the unmarried ladies and from these Miss Root, of Salt Lake, and Miss Reeve of Morris, Minnesota, were fortunate in gaining such prizes and rings. Later the award of honor upon the many packages amid the bandage of her friends and received a great many beautiful articles, some of which were accompanied by original verses.

RURAL ROUTE ONE ORDERED.

Government Notify Postmaster Greenhow About Carriers.

This week Postmaster Greenhow received a letter from the postoffice department, ordering him to have all applicants for the position of rural carriers send in their applications before October 7th, at which time the same would be acted upon and the examination forwarded to the applicants. From the letters which have passed between this office and Washington, Mr. Greenhow is of the opinion that the first route will be started about December 1st. All of the blanks and materials for the route have been forwarded to the postoffice here. The route as approved embraces the following sections and fraction of section and Mr. Greenhow advises the ranchers on the route to begin having the route address added to any letter sent out.

Route one will leave town on the north and run on Blue Lakes boulevard as far as the section line at Waters' corner and will then run north three miles to Basset's corner; will cover west, north and south sides of section 10, north and south sides of section 11 and north, east and south boundaries of section 12. Returning the route will pass through city via Shoshone street and strike west, covering north boundary of section 17, north, west and south of section 20, east and west of 19, north of 30, south of 31, south and east of 32 and east of 29, west line of 21, 25 and 33, in ranges 17, E. In range 18 E. the following section boundary will be traversed and receive service: East and north of 21, north and west of 25, west and south of 29, south of sections 14 and 13, east line of 22 and 27, north and east of 25, west and south of 36.

SWEET-GAMBLE.

Miss Ruth Gamble Wedded to Nebraska Lumberman.

A very quiet but pretty home wedding marked the nuptials of Miss Ruth Gamble, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Gamble, to Mr. Delas F. Sweet of Wynot, Nebraska, yesterday afternoon at thirty. The bride and groom united in the sacrament of matrimony at the ceremony before Rev. John Gurry, while Miss Beth Hamilton, sister-in-law of the bride, acted as bridesmaid. Only the immediate friends and relatives of the family were present and the bride, a couple left on the evening train for their future home in Wynot.

Miss Gamble has been a resident of the tract for about two years, and has gained the esteem and respect of a large number of friends by her splendid character and womanly attributes and her friends regret her departure from this community. The groom is a prominent lumberman of Wynot and highly esteemed in his community.

REVIVAL SERVICES.

Arrangements are being made by the Christian church people for a great revival meeting in the near future. Mr. Amos K. Clarke, an evangelist of Indianapolis, Ind., will bring with him prominent lumberman of Wynot and a corps of workers to lead the forces here. His company will consist of his wife and daughter, a fine soloist, who will organize a chorus of forty voices. Besides those there will be one or two other singers and helpers.

The Clarke family have held great meetings all over the United States, some of the best being in this state. The Victor revival of last spring closed with 123 additions to the church of Christ there.

As the church building is too small to accommodate very large audiences the Stoddard warehouse between Main and Twelfth avenues, one-half block southeast of the Hall building house, will be fitted up for the meeting.

We will be pleased for all those who will assist in the chorus to give us their names.

RAY M. DEUCHAMP, Pastor.

For the Bonds. Long Beach, Cal., Sept. 29, 1908. Editor of Times.

Seeing in your valuable paper the opinions of some of our lending citizens on the proposed bond issue to build a court house, I thought I would like to help push it along, being that I am interested. I am very sorry that I cannot be there to cast a vote, but you can say to the people that I am heartily in favor of it. Hoping this will reach you in time, I remain, Yours Resp., R. W. JONES, 1140 Elm St., Long Beach.

NEW NATIONAL BISON RANGE IN MONTANA.

The bison range in the Flathead Indian reservation in Montana, to establish which congress at its last session appropriated $400,000, has been selected. The location of the range is the one recommended by Prof. Morton J. Elrod, of the university of Montana, after he had carefully examined several parts of the country. It lies directly north of the Jocko river near the towns of Ravalli and Jocko. Approximately 12,300 acres are embraced in the tract which will be fenced in a substantial manner under the direction of the engineering department of the United States forest service.

Of the $400,000 appropriated, only $10,000 will be available for fencing the range and constructing the shelter sheds and other buildings necessary for the proper maintenance and care of the bison. The remaining $390,000 will be paid to the owners of the land, many of whom are Indians. Funds for the purchase of bison are being raised under the auspices of the American Bison society, which was largely instrumental in securing the appropriation.

The first person to spend actual money in the effort to preserve the American bison from total extinction was the late Austin Corbin, who many years ago fenced some 6,000 acres at Blue Mountain park, New Hampshire, and secured a herd of bison. The Corbin herd became in course of time the inspiration of the national movement which is now furthered by the American Bison society. This society, of which President Roosevelt is honorary president, and William T. Hornaday, director of the New York zoological park, is president, was founded in 1904, and the Montana bison range is directly the result of its efforts.

Details of the management of the herd in the new national bison range will be worked out as soon as the herd is purchased, when the construction work on fences and buildings will also be begun.

THE LARGEST GIVER.

I want to tell you of an inquiry of my little five-year-old Helen. She attends Sunday school regularly. Returning home one Sunday, she said: "Mama, every Sunday the man reads how much money each class gives, and then he tells how much Total gives, and Total gives more than any one. He must be a rich man. Who is Total, mama?"—The September Delinquent.

PEOPLE MUST RILE. Chairman O'Sell Declares for Direct Primary.

State Chairman B. F. O'Neil, before leaving for the southern part of the state, made the following declaration in regard to the direct primary question, after having had his attention called to the issue which had been raised in the Capital News:

"The people must rule. They must not let a few men decide for them, but as in their best judgment, conforming to representative self-government, they should rule. If, in their experience, it is demonstrated that the highest purpose of a government for the people and by the people is not attained to its fullest extent, and that under constitutional principles there is a way in which this defect may be remedied, it is a right inherent in the very concept of this nation, that a change should not be limited by mere previous custom, but should be expanded to meet the changing requirements.

"The direct primary, so construed as to actually as well as theoretically give the people a greater voice in their own government, is the present almost universal demand, and the fact that it is so general argues in favor of its necessity.

"When the proposal of a direct primary law was first presented to me, it was construed in such a light as to narrow my legislation to a direct primary, but now, as I understand the possibilities of its better application, I am wholly convinced of its practicability. Mistakes have been made in other states, but they do not undermine the fundamental principle upon which a strong and satisfactory law may be built.

"I do not look upon the action of the state convention as a rejection of the primary law. I believe that the majority of the delegates were in favor of an enactment of some sort, but rather than place the party in a definite law, which could be given no more than caucus consideration, preferred that the counties should either instruct their legislative candidates for or against such a statute or leave it to their best discretion after a thorough investigation. This attitude has thus been left open to a free and thorough discussion, which is necessary to a wise mature conclusion on the part of the people.

"The opinion of the delegates was not to hastily bid the legislators to a particular law, and may have been the way unanticipated when the legislators convenes for the passage of a direct primary law which will be satisfactory to the voters of the state. Their attitude was not in opposition to such a measure but rather that the people were not at the time sufficiently informed as to the merits of an individual law, and that to pledge their legislative candidates would be unfair.

"A discussion of the primary law is already under way, and the result will only give voters a better understanding of it but will assist them in their selection of a candidate for the legislature and in their decision as to what he should do when elected. It will also give both the state and county candidates an opportunity to support the proposition from their own volition from their own heart.

"Many leaders of the party have offered conclusive evidence that while in the true state of affairs by declaring in favor of a direct primary statute, they would have done so, promising to do everything in their power to secure such an enactment.

"When the proposal came before the convention to pledge the party to a specific measure I would assist it for the reasons I have mentioned, but when the substitute proposition was presented which bound the legislators to a promise that was general in its nature, I was not prepared to do so. The delegates rejected it on the ground that it had no teeth and they thought it better to leave the question entirely open to a campaign, but I personally regarded it as a means of registering my favor for some sort of a direct primary law.

"I am confident that the people of this state will produce men with sufficient mental attainments to give them an adequate understanding of the issue—one which will in no way lessens party ties, but will preserve party integrity and bring closer to both voter and candidate the idea of party responsibility.

"The situation has crystallized into a more definite demand within the last few years, and that the people expect the next legislature to give them such a law is shown by the platform of several county conventions which have been held since the state convention. In many instances, they have declared in unmistakable terms for a direct primary. To procrastinate longer in the adoption of such a system by the entire state would be no less than to rob the voter of his just right to self-government.

"The advantages of a direct primary have within the last few years of its adoption, become generally recognized. It will free the party, and as a natural sequence, the state, from the rule of any set of men who attempt to dictate testines and conform them to their own individual ideas or interests. It will give men who have proven themselves successful in their office, and whose qualifications necessary to an efficient servant of the public, an opportunity to present themselves or be presented by those who have faith in them, although under the present system they might have been ignored. Moreover, it will induce people to look more seriously at their own duties that duty which many of them have neglected—that duty which is the highest imposed upon those who live under a republican government.

JACKSON-LAKE RESERVOIR.

Protect Engineer J. G. Kemp, who recently returned to Idaho, to the head waters of Snake river in company with Chief Engineer A. P. Davis and several other examination officials, reports a most satisfactory trip.

The party went to the head of the south and north forks and inspected the reservoir sites. They returned to their headquarters where they were met by Chief Engineer Davis who was well pleased with what they found in the way of natural reservoir sites and is confident that all of the good water of the Snake can be stored when it becomes necessary.

The total storage capacity of all the reservoir sites is over three million acre-feet. The information obtained on this trip, with the surveys that have been made, will be submitted to the consulting board, which will decide what reserves it is advisable to construct first.

Mr. Kemp states that the present preliminary dam at Jackson Lake has given most satisfactory results. 175,000 acre feet were stored during the present season, and next year about 250,000 acre feet will be stored in permanent dam when completed will greatly increase the storage capacity of the lake.—Barley Bulletin.

GOING SOME FOR OATS. One Head Over Three Feet Long —Grown on Twin Falls Tract.

R. L. Stewart, who owns a ranch in section 18, township 31 N. and range 12 E., was in town yesterday with a few head of 8 1/2 bushels measured exactly. The heads are on exhibition in the window of this office and anybody with plenty of leisure can count the grain on the head.

R. L. Stewart, who by the way, is an enterprising real estate man of Seattle, during the past week sold 150 acres of land here for $25,000 per acre, which is the highest price paid here beyond the low line.

The lucky purchaser was Dwight Williams of the Omaha base.

court house, but I do not believe that there is a man on the entire tract who will say that we made a mistake in creating a new county; or who does not believe in the wisdom of having having transacted the business that has grown up here, had the new county not been formed. The county records would not have been returned on the month, or fully 20 a day, and you can imagine the confusion and inconvenience that would have had occurred on the month of the confounding the last year, and a half to send out papers to Albany. At the very best they have been scattered from the engineer's office in Twin Falls. They would have accumulated still more at Abing, and these would have been sent off and lost. It is hard for you to comprehend to take them there, for by mail it would take four days for the going and coming of the papers.

Public and private business has grown more rapidly than any of us anticipated. Had we known that there would be so much more of it, we would have been in opposition at the time the question of creating it came up. I believe that the spirit of the people of the city of Twin Falls in regard to its improvement should be the spirit of the whole county. We cannot have the city of Twin Falls go along without. We bonded the city for $10,000 for a sewer system, and $20,000 for a school house. HISTORIC FOREST FIRES.

The terrible work of a forest which have burned over and destroyed the timber and property to the value of millions in the lakes states, recalls in memory the forest fires which have obtained historic importance.

One of the earliest of these was the great Miranched fire of 1825. It began in the town of Newcastle, near 30 miles from the city of Newcastle, and it spread in the afternoon of October 7 of that year, at a place about 50 miles above the town of Newcastle, in New Brunswick. Before ten o'clock at night it was 20 miles below Newcastle. In nine hours it had covered a strip of land 100 miles long and 25 miles wide. Over more than two and one-half millions acres almost every living tree upwards found dead in heaps on the river banks. Five hundred and ninety buildings and another number of town including Newcastle, Chatham and Douglonstown, were destroyed. One hundred and sixty persons perished, including a number of stock. The loss from the Miranched fire is estimated at $300,000, not including the value of the timber.

Another of the great forest fires was the destruction of the timber in a more serious loss, by far than that of the Miranched forest fire, was carried with it the impoverishment of a whole region for tens or even hundreds of years afterwards. The loss of timber in this case was more than the time of the fire is but a small part of the damage to the neighborhood. The wages that would have been earned by lumbering for more than a century the products that would have been purchased to supply the lumber camps, and the taxes that would have been paid for the same and other public improvements, furnish a much truer measure of how much sooner or later, it costs a region when it is ruined.

The Peshtigo fire of October, 1871, was still more severe than the Miranched forest fire. It covered more than 2,000 square miles in Wisconsin, and involved a loss in timber and other property, of many millions of dollars. The loss in timber alone was estimated at 2,000,000,000 feet of lumber. A strip about 40 miles wide and 180 miles long, extending across the central part of the state, from Lake Michigan to Lake Huron, was devastated. The estimated loss in timber was about 1,000,000,000 feet of lumber. Several hundred persons perished. In the early part of September, 1891, a great forest fire covered 1,800 square miles in various parts of Michigan. The estimated loss, in property, timber and other things, was more than $2,300,000. Over 5,000 persons were made destitute, and the number of persons who are estimated at more than 150 to 200.

The most destructive fire of more recent years was the fire which broke out at Hinkley, Minnesota, September 1, 1894. While the area burned over was less than in some other great forest fires, it was much more extensive. Very heavy, Hinkley and six other towns were destroyed, about 600 lives were lost, more than 2,000 persons were made destitute, and the estimated loss in property of various kinds was $25,000,000. Except for the heroic stand of the firemen, and another 1,000 railroad men the loss of life would have been much greater.

This fire was all the more deplorable because it had been so long necessary. For many days before the high wind came and drove it into uncontrollable fury, the forest had been in the hands of Hinkley, and had been long and long extinguished.

The ONLY

EXCLUSIVE FRUIT Lands Ever Offered

Under "Carey Act" -- 15,000 Acres

15,000 Acres

15,000 Acres

THESE Fruit Lands are conceded, by competent Judges and men of experience, to be unquestionably the best in the entire West for fruits, early vegetables and melons of all kinds.

Here late frosts do not occur; the Spring season comes two to three weeks earlier than in the lands of greater elevation. This early season enables the fruit, melon or vegetable grower to put his product on the market at a time when he realizes the top market price, and before competition interferes with marketing his crop. This mesa, or cone land, lying as it does on the south bank of the famous Snake River, protected from cold and severe winds in the early Spring by high lava bluffs on both sides of the river, makes this possible.

The soil is of the best, composed of a combination of lava, ash and sandy crassive matter, all of which give it productive strength, as well as perfect drainage, essential elements for high-class fruit and vegetable land.

This tract of land is paralleled its entire length by Snake River and the MAIN LINE OF THE OREGON SHORT LINE RAILROAD, making easy the shipping and marketing of all products.

A telephone line is being built the entire length of ditch; also good wagon roads.

Four acres of this land planted to fruits, berries and melons will, in ten years, make an independent fortune, and will find ready sale at $1,500 to $2,000 per acre. This is not exceptional, for good orchard land elsewhere has sold as high as $3,000 per acre.

An up-to-date cannery will be constructed at King Hill (which is centrally located to this project) for the express purpose of creating a market for the product of this land and yielding, enabling settlers to make profit almost from the beginning.

Don't forget the date. THE OPENING AND DRAWING will take place at KING HILL, IDAHO, October 12th. 15,000 ACRES OF CHOICE FRUIT LAND IN SUNNY SOUTHERN IDAHO, TIME IS SHORT.

NOTABLE GATHERING.

Thousand Leading Men of South to Meet Commission.

Washington, Oct. 1.—The national conservation commission has received word that at least a thousand of the leading business men of the south will be present in Washington when the commission holds its first full meeting here early in December. This information comes in a letter from G. Grosvenor Dawes, secretary of the Montgomery, Ala., Commercial club, who tells of a meeting of the representatives of numerous business associations in the southern states, held in Atlanta. These men formed a working organization, and after receiving assurances of support from commercial bodies all through the south issued a call for a southern commercial congress. The time and place were set so that the members can be in Washington during the first meeting of the conservation commission (November 1), the conference between the commission and the governors of the states or their representatives which follows, on December 5, and the meeting of the national rivers-and harbors congress which will be held here during that time in the proceedings of all of which the men who will compose the southern commercial congress are intensely interested from a business standpoint. The chief purpose of the southerners in holding their big meeting is, in the words of one of the organizers, "the brooking of a fuller understanding by the people of the south of the gifts that nature has placed under their control." But, without discounting the vital importance of promoting the business interests of their section of the country, the promoters of this congress have also said they hope that it will have an even deeper significance and bring about a clear union between the north and south. "Of course the congress has practical and commercial aspects," says one of these men, "but there lies in the minds of the southerners a public urge looking towards a fuller understanding and union between those who have for a generation suffered from misunderstanding and a seeming separation of interests."

Mr. Dawes in his letter suggests that the attainment of a fuller understanding between the south and other parts of the country would have its effect in bettering business conditions in the south also.

"The southern commercial congress is also intended as a means of combating misleading articles that exist against the south in both northern and eastern states. We have felt that such prejudices are most easily removed by personal contact, and we shall therefore work to have present on December 7 and 8 a thousand or fifteen hundred leading business men of whom we will later stay to participate in the deliberations of the national rivers and harbors congress, and also be present in Washington to receive inspiration from the reports made to the national conservation commission."

"Beyond all this we feel that the presence of our best business men in meetings made up largely of solid business men of the north and east will act as a guarantee and pledge of business men's participation in further political affairs of the south and thus guarantee safety to investors."

Many of the men who are most active in organizing this southern commercial congress have for a long time been preaching that the south should not only develop its agriculture to a higher degree of efficiency, but that it is time for that part of the country to take more energetic measures to expand their manufacturing and business interests. They believe that the attendance of a large number of the most enterprising men of the southern states at the conference between the national conservation commission and the state governors or their representatives will lead to a fuller realization of the immense natural resources of the south.

In this connection they cite a recent report by the geological survey which stated that there is an abundance of about 2,800,000-horsepower developed by the rivers rising in the southern Appalachian mountains, the bulk of which, it is very likely could be utilized for power. So far hardly enough has been developed to make an appreciable amount of power. Full development of storage facilities in these river basins would increase the horsepower from 2 to 20 times, according to the experts. But taking the minimum of 1,400,000 horsepower, its rental at $20 per horsepower per year would amount to an annual return of $28,000,000. Water power is much cleaner than fuel power and will be more abundant as the available supply of fuel is depleted. This means that the demand for water power will increase. These southern business men foresee a great manufacturing future for their section and are determined to build their ideas into the minds of others. The point of view is increased not only for manufacturing, but for transportation. The improvement of the lumber business and of the allied industry of turpentine has also received much attention from them. In some states, they say there are very rich mineral deposits which might be worked with great profit.

WANTED TO GO THE SAME WAY.

We were taking a little trip into the country. The only vacant seats in the train were turned so as to face each other. I told my little girl, four years of age, to take the seat in front of me, as riding backward was not made for sick. She hesitated, and said: "I know it won't make me sick, but if I ride backward will I go the same place you are going to?"—The September Delirator.

FOOTBALL WITH THE NORMAL.

High School to Play First Game There Saturday.

This week closes the first month of school for this year, and on next Monday the monthly reports to parents will be sent out. These reports are of extreme importance to the school, the parent and the pupil. It is the desire of every teacher that no parent sign these reports until after having examined them carefully. Read the "Notice to Parents" in the card and they can be sure that the reports are made with the requirements and so if the work is satisfactory. The school working alone can do much for the child.

The school and parents working together can do everything for him. Our first monthly tests—having a very retarding effect on many of the pupils, and especially on the boys who are trying to make the foot-ball team. No pupil is allowed to take part in any of the contests who has not made satisfactory grades in at least three subjects, from the beginning of the term.

Through the liberal subscription of one people the foot-ball team was enabled to buy a fine new outfit. The suits came Monday and the boys have been hard at work preparing for the game with the state normal at Albion Saturday. While this is our first year at foot-ball the boys are showing up well, and Coach Pierce is very enthusiastic.

The girls' basket-ball team will play the normal school team at Albion Saturday. Our basket-ball team has earned the reputation of being the best in the southern part of the state and they expect to maintain it.

On October 17th the Potomac high school will have its foot-ball and basket-ball teams here to contest with our high school teams.

Miss Gibson of the Latin department of the high school is ill at present and is expected to return to school the last of the week.

Our school is now very comfortably located in the Hotel building, the Christian and the Methodist churches. There is little doubt but that the Lutheran building will be ready for occupancy by the first of the year. Then we will be happy.

J. O. P. PROSPECTS BRIGHT.

The State Will Line-up With His Vote.

Boise, Idaho, Sept. 17.—Returning to Boise yesterday from his home in Wallace, Chairman B. F. O'Neil of the Republican state committee, declared that the prospect of a strong party majority were as definitely promising as in previous Idaho campaigns.

Everything points at present to a complete Republican victory this fall. There is no doubt that every man on the ticket, without exception, will be elected, and a poll for Taft and Sherman, of which we may be proud, will be recorded. The situation does not admit of a single discouraging element.

In pursuance of the plan which he announced some time ago, Chairman O'Neil made known the following vice-chairmen: C. J. Shoemaker of Coeur d'Alene City; for the northwestern district, C. C. Gannals of Boise; for the southwestern district, George H. Day of Oakley; for the southeastern district, each of these will have control of the local situation, in connection with the general supervision of the chairman.

The finance and executive committees determined upon the following Finance Committee—John McMillin, Boise; H. N. Coffin, Boise; D. W. Clark, Pocatello; Major Richard R. Reed, Gooding; Dr. Hugh France, Wallace; A. B. Moss, Payette; Warren Truitt, Moscow.

Executive Committee—H. C. Haight, Albion; W. B. Heyburn, Wallace; W. E. Horah, Boise; J. H. Brady, Pocatello; Burton French, Mountain View; Ross, Wallace; Walter C. Shoup, Salmon; Leo Cranner, Halley; James A. Brown, Blackfoot; C. G. Moore, Anthony; N. C. Fox, Challis; James E. Bath, Lewiston; James W. Walker, Rexburg; James E. Steele, Idaho Falls; J. H. Richards, Boise; J. Eckert, Cottonwood; James Stephenson, Jr., Boise; W. P. Gathrie, Twin Falls; F. F. Johnson, Wallace; E. H. Grayson, R. J. Hayes, Pocatello; W. C. Colver, Mountainhome; O. H. Barber, American Falls; Robt. E. McFarland, Coeur d'Alene; William L. Rich, Paris; Dr. E. V. Kilien, Heyburn; John Lamb, Silver City; John D. Robertson, Yreka; Maurice Myera, Idaho City.

It is the purpose of the popular state chairman, whose friends are by no means limited to the north, and whose name it is thought to be requested generally, to visit each county during the campaign.

 "I think it's all right. Want to buy some?" asked Seward, smiling.
 Plank tilted his chin ponderously. "Somebody is kidding it to pieces," he said.
 "Somebody is trying to," smiled Seward.
 "Harrington," nodded Fleetwood, Seward nodded him. Plank was silent.
 "Of course," continued Fleetwood tentatively, "you people need not worry with Howard Quarrier lack of you."
 "Nobody had anything for awhile. Presently Seward's restless hands, moving in search of something, encountered a pencil lying on the table beside him, and he picked it up and began drawing lines next scrolls on the margin of a newspaper, and all the initials were the same, twining and twisting into endless variations of the letters S, L.
 "Yes, I must go to the office tomorrow," he repeated absently. "I am better—in fact, I am quite well except for this sprain." He looked down at his bandaged foot, then his pencil moved listlessly again, continuing the endless variations on the two letters. It was plain that he was tired.
 Fleetwood rose and made his adieux almost affectionately. Plank moved forward on three, bulky and noiseless, and Seward held out his hand, saying something suitably formal.
 "Would you like to have me come again?" asked Plank, red with embarrassment, yet so nervously that at first Seward found no words to answer him; then:
 "Would you care to come, Mr. Plank?"
 Seward looked at him curiously, all most cautiously. His first impression of the man had been summed up in one contemptuous word. Besides, hearing that what was there in common between himself and such a type as Plank? He had not even troubled himself to avoid him at S. Hoveler, had he merely been aware of him when Plank spoke to him.
 "Perhaps," he changed, when Seward, however, he found nothing offensive in the bulky young man now—nothing particularly attractive, either, except for a certain singularity, a certain direct candor in the heavy blue eyes which met his own.
 "Come in for a clear when you have a few moments idle," said Seward slowly.
 "It will give me great pleasure," said Plank.
 And that was all. He followed Fleetwood down the stairs. Wands held their coats and bowed them out into the falling shadows of the winter twilight.

The tears dried in his hot eyes. He jerked the old fashioned bell savagely and after a long while he heard servants whispering together in the passageway outside his door.
 "Graby came into the room from the outer shadows of the hall.
 The man very small, very meager, very bald and clean shaven, with a face like a nut cracker, and the brown wig he wore was atrocious and curled forward over his forehead.
 He wore steel rimmed spectacles, each glass divided into two lenses and he stood on three to look out through the upper lenses on the world and always kept almost double to use the lower or reading lenses.
 "What's all this racket?" said the little old doctor hurriedly. "Got cold? Got the toothache? I'm ashamed of you, Stephen. Look at me! Look at me! Out with your tongue! Well, now, what the devil's the trouble?"
 "You know," muttered Seward, abandoning his vest to the little man, who worked himself inside him. Dr. Graby scarcely noted the pulse. The delicate pressure had become a strong caress.
 "I know what," he grunted. "How do I know what's the matter with you? Here? Now, now, don't try to explain, Steve. Don't try off the handle. All right; grant that I do know what's bothering you. I want to see that ankle first. Here, somebody! Light that gas. Why the mischief don't you have the house wired for electricity, Stephen? It's wholesale gas isn't it. Lamps are worse, sir. Do as I tell you." And he went on loquaciously, grumbling and muttering, and never ceasing his talk, while Seward, whining as the dressing was removed, lay back and closed his eyes.
 Half an hour later Graby appeared to announce dinner.
 "I don't want any," said Seward.
 "Eat," said Dr. Graby harshly.
 "Eat, I tell you. Do you think I don't mean what I say?"
 So he ate his broth and toast, the doctor curiously declining to join him. He ate hurriedly, closing his eyes in aversion. Even the foot tea was flat and distasteful to him.
 And at last he lay back; white and unstrung, the momentarily deadened desperation shimmering under his hair like lightning. And for a long while Dr. Graby sat, doubted almost in two, cuffing his bony little knees and studying the patterns in the faded carpet.
 "I guess you'd better go, Stephen," he said at length.
 "Up the river to Milwaukee?"
 "Yes. Let's try it, Steve. You'll be on your feet in two weeks. Then you'd better go up the river to Milwaukee."
 "You may leave that decenter."
 "But the old servant may have mis- understood, for he only bowed and went off decenterly with the decenter, either heedless or deaf to his master's sharp order to return.
 Lamplight brought out sharply the physical change in Seward—the night in shadows that under those eyes the hand, slightly swollen, flesh in the bluish shadows around the eyes. The mark of the master vice was there in its stamp in the swollen, worn out lower lip, its impulse in the thin, the corners of his mouth; its slow manner in the faintest relaxation of the under lip, which had not yet become a looseness.
 For the last of the Seward had at last stopped in the front hall, where his doimed forehead had traveled before him.
 "Gumbie," he called irritably.
 A quivering voice, an unsteady step, and the old man entered again. "Mr. Seward, sir?"
 "Huz that decenter back. Didn't you hear me tell you just now?"
 "Sir?"
 "Didn't you hear me?"
 "Yes, Mr. Seward, sir."
 There was a silence.
 "Gumbie?"
 "Sir."
 "Are you going to bring that decenter?"
 The old butler bowed and ambled from the room, and for a long while Seward sat motionless listening and seeing the edges of the paper with his trembling pencil. Then the lead broke and he fell on the floor. His hand pulled the belt. Wands came this time, a lank, stony, silent man, grown gray as a rat in the service of the Seward. He received his master's orders and then, in the next moment, he was biting his under lip and tearing bits from the edges of the newspaper with fingers never still, but no body came with the decenter, and after awhile his tense muscles relaxed. Something in the way he seemed to snap, and he sank back in his chair. The hot tears blinding him.
 He had not as far as that. Moments of self pity were becoming almost frequent as scorching intervals of self contempt.
 So they all knew what was the matter with him. They all knew—the doctor, the servants, his friends. It had not surprised the quick Dr. Graby and it had not surprised the old butler when he fell—fell on his own doorstep, carried to the old Seward house by his own servants, and set on his forehead there. It was none of Fleetwood's business. It was nobody's business except his own.

weather the nights. Now, you help me, do you hear?"
 "Yes, I will."
 "You say now do it. Do some thing for yourself. Do anything. If you're sick of reading—and I don't blame you, considering the stuff you read—get people down here to see you; get lots of people. Telephone 'em. You've a telephone, haven't you? There it is by your elbow. I so it. Call up people. Talk all the time."
 "Yes, I will."
 "Good! Now, Steve, we know what's the matter physically, don't we? Of course we do. Now, then, what's the matter mentally?"
 "Mentally?" repeated Seward under his breath.
 "Yes, mentally. What's the trouble? Stocks? Bonds? Law suits? Love?"
 The slightest pause and a narrowing of the glimmer eyes behind the lenses. "Love?" he repeated harshly. "Which is it, boy? Do you see all good to let alone?"
 "Business," said Seward. But, being a Seward, he was obliged to add "partly."
 "Business—partly," repeated the doctor. "What's the matter with business 'partly'?"
 "I don't know. There are rumors. Harrington is poisoning me—apparently. That infernal crowd is acting unbecomingly too. They're something or derling somewhere." He bent his head and fell to plucking at the faded brocade on the arm of his chair, muttering to himself. "Somehow, somehow, something unbecomingly, I don't know what—I really don't."
 "All right; all right," said the doctor testily. "Let it go that. Business symptoms admitted, what about the 'partly,' Stephen? What about it, eh? What about it?"
 But Seward fell silent again.
 "EH? Did you say something? No? Oh, very well, very well, sir! Perfectly correct, Stephen. You haven't earned the right to admit further to the 'partly' to admit further to the 'partly'?"
 "She has refused me," Seward said shaply.
 The little doctor, after an incredulous stare, began chattering with wrath. "Refused you? Faith! Faith! That's nothing. That's nothing! Absolutely nothing. It's unbecomingly. It's a detail. You get well, do you hear? You go and get well, then try it again. Then you'll see. And if she is in the habit of the worst of her tenacious persistence in an incredible and utterly indefensible attitude at Seward—take her away, sir! Run off with her! Dominate circumstances, sir! Take charge of events! But you can't do it till you've clipped yourself into prison for life! And God help you if you let yourself escape!"
 Seward smiled again, a worn, pallid smile.
 "I can stand it while you are here, doctor; but when I'm alone it's hard. One of those crises is close now. I've a hunch night ahead—a bad outlook. Couldn't you?"
 "No."
 "Just enough to—"
 "No, Stephen."
 "Enough to dull it just a little? I don't ask for enough to make me sleep, not even a wink of the eye. You have your needle, haven't you, doctor?"
 "I dare not help you any more that way."
 "Not this one?"
 "Yes. There was a dead silence, broken at last by the doctor with a violent gesture toward the telephone. "Talk to the girl. Why don't you talk to the girl. If she's worth a hill of beans still, I'll help her to hang on. That's she for if she isn't for such moments? Tell her you need her voice. Tell her you need her faith in you. Good night."
 Seward lay still for a long while after the doctor had gone. More than an hour had passed before he slowly sat up and groped for the telephone book, opened it and searched in a blind, hesitating way until he found the number he was looking for.
 He had never telephoned to her. He had never written her—except once in reply to her letter in regard to his mother's death—that strange, final, central letter in which, after stumped as he was, he saw only the formality and had answered it more formally still. And that was all that had come of the days and nights by that northern sea—a letter and its answer and silence.
 And, thinking of these things, he shut the book wearily and lay back in the shadow of the faded curtain, closing his sunken eyes.

Dr. Graby came into the room.
 "What's all this racket?" said the little old doctor hurriedly. "Got cold? Got the toothache? I'm ashamed of you, Stephen. Look at me! Look at me! Out with your tongue! Well, now, what the devil's the trouble?"

AT CUT PRICES---OR CASH PRICES

This Tells the Story

You buy a stamp of Uncle Sam you pay cash, you buy a railroad ticket you pay cash, you send a telegram you pay cash, you get freight and it's cash. A merchant buys goods from the manufacturer, it is cash or they charge him 15 to 20 per cent for carrying him 60 or 90 days. Now why should you pay a concern more than you can buy the same goods for elsewhere? When you spend your money at a credit store you are paying just the same prices as the man who buys on a year's time, and you also pay for bad accounts, losses, etc. Do you get your discount when you pay cash?

When You Buy of a Cash Store

You are getting prices right down to the bone. When and where is there any other house that makes the prices that The Golden Rule Stores do? Our buyers have just returned from a six weeks' purchasing trip among the best manufacturers of New York and Boston. We found goods cheaper than we have been able to buy them in the last five years and we have spared neither time, labor or expense to reach the bottom of the market.
