CHAPTER NINE

His world and his city had almost ceased to think of Steward. But there were two people who had not forgotten him—Howard Quarter and Beverly Plank—old one, other, a third, who could not yet forget him if she would, but as yet she had not tried very desperately.

The day that Steward left New York to visit everybody's friend, Mr. Plank, queen, in the country, Plank called on him for the second time in his life and was presently received in the south drawing room, the library being limited to an informality and intimacy not for Mr. Plank.

Steward, still lame and using painstakingly two shiny new crutches, came down the stairs and stamped into the drawing room, which, in spite of the somber, clustering curtains, was brightly illuminated by the winter sunshine reflected from the snow in the street.

Plank, who was seated at the table, looked up at the sound of the door, and his eyes, which were fixed on the door, started so that he forgot his shyness and retained the boy hand tightly in his and instinctively laid his other great cushions away over his head. He impressed, unable to speak, unconscious, in the impulse of the moment, of the library he permitted himself to talk with such a man as Steward.

The effect on Steward was composite—his tired voice ceased; surprise, inability to understand, tinged with indignity to disfigure, were succeeded by humorous curiosity, and very slowly he became plain to him that this beefy young man liked him, was naïvely concerned about him, felt friendly toward him, was observing it all spontaneously as a child.

"I thought I'd come," began Plank, growing redder and redder as he began to realize the enormity of familiarity committed on his part, and of impulse. "You don't look awfully good."

"It is curious that what you cast away from you so easily I am willing for with all the patience I have in me. And yet it is always yours to pick up again whenever you wish; and I may never live to possess it."

He was so perfectly right that Steward said nothing—in fact, he could have no particular interest or sympathy for a man's quest of what he himself did not understand the lack of. He was, however, the lawyer Plank, contented to accept him anywhere he met him, but Plank's upward evolutions upon the social ladder were of no interest to him, and his naive snobbery was becoming something of a bore.

So Steward directed the conversation into other channels, and Plank, accepting another cup of tea, became very communicative about his studies and his dogs.

"I would you—I should like to ask you to try some shooting at the Falls," stammered Plank, "next season if you would care to."

"Yes, very good. I should like to if I were going to shoot at all, but I fancy my shooting days are over for awhile."

"Business," nodded Steward, absently grave again. "I see no prospect of my doing for the next year or two."

"You are in—In Amalgamated Electric, I think," ventured Plank. "Very much so," said the other frankly. "You've read the papers and heard rumors, I suppose?"

"Some. I don't suppose anybody quite understands the attacks on Amalgamated."

"I don't—not yet. Do you?"

Plank sat silent; then his shrewd under lip began to protrude.

I'm sure I heard you think that question? I'll answer it. The nearest river to these projects is Twin Falls, located in Idaho. Before you cleared the ranch from about 1900-1901, if you're fortunate enough to draw one of the standard gauge railroad will be built through the Salmon river tract clear up to the dam. I can reliably informed that the Salmon river dam electric project will be run down to Wells, Nevada, on the U. P. railway, 92 miles south of the dam. When this is done then the mining camps of Nevada and the markets for the Salmon, Cedar Creek and the Twin Falls projects are assured.

The contractor I told you a little about the Herndon-Roche project. I want to add a little more, for something. In that section on November 13, 1907, that may interest you. This project is called the Idaho Irrigation Co. and its headquarters are at Gooding, Idaho. On November 13, I met last they had a drawing of 30,000 acres that will be supplied with irrigation water in May next, under the 'Cary' law. The drawing took place at Gooding. In twenty-eight hours the whole 30,000 acres were sold; that is, the land for $25,000 an acre and the irrigation company sold the water for each acre at $10 on ten years' time.

This 30,000 acres joins to part the North Side Twin Falls tract of 150,000 acres. The town of Gooding is to be the metropolitan city for the irrigation company's project. It can't be otherwise. Gooding is on the main line of the O. S. L. railway and the junction of the Idaho and Utah railroads. The new building. Over 100,000 acres of intensely cultivated lands will surround and make tributary to this town of Gooding.

The experiments of sugar beets at Gooding show the soil and climate particularly adapted to this vegetable. I doubt if any portion of the state can surpass this section for sugar beet culture. The state has the best soil, sugar factories now running night and day and in a few years it will have many more and Gooding will have one of the best dates or oranges in Idaho.

There last any business homes at Gooding yet, just a new little frame hotel and a building on an acre and a store. With over 100,000 acres dependent on this town for its supplies, if you are a merchant, banker, real estate man, lawyer, doctor or dentist, I think you can see what's ahead for Gooding's new inhabitants.

Everything has its price. Even politicians, it is said. So have water rights. A few years ago no one thought of investing in irrigation projects in the arid west and the law was $5 an acre for water rights. Why? Because there was no chance to sell these water rights at a profit. In Idaho irrigation projects are being constructed that will involve a cost of $200 an acre. The demand for these Idaho sugar beets, apple, peach, almond, wheat, corn and barley lands is so high that the cheaper water rights lands are all gone and now the highest priced water right lands must be sought forth carefully. This demand.

Down on the Snake river valley in Washington county, with a 5,000 acre tract owned by named Wheeler. There is a fine water right on these lands with water sold for $40 to $75 a year ago. These Wheeler rights did not appreciate as the water right was sold. They are just 'coming to knock their own'. This fall hundreds of apple orchard proprietors are receiving parcels of trunks and boxes of their Jonathans and Roman Beauties. These orchard lands have gone to dry growers and yet prices that will sell for $50 to $75 per cent an acre on the investment now.

The St. Paul will operate its passenger trains from the start by electric motors and handle its freight trains in the same manner as soon as the plan is completed. The 'St. Paul' will be the road for transcontinental travel and freight transportation, by reason of its low grades, straight track and electric power.

Down in southern Idaho great changes are being developed of water power. Great rivers are being 'harnessed up' to furnish electric 'juice' to the inhabitants.

Again I call your attention to the Snake. You can't talk or write about southern Idaho without mentioning the Snake river. About 25 miles northwest of Boise, the state's capital, Missouri and Michigan people, headed by Senator W. A. Clarke of Montana, are constructing a unique electric power plant.

Snake river for a distance of about 25 miles passes through a rock canyon situated like an ox bow, or the upper half of the letter 'S'. The nearest stream comes together in about 1,000 feet of elevation. The water is in granitic and big tunnels are being run through this granite for the 2,000 feet. The water, which is the Snake can be diverted through these tunnels, around by the river, to the dam and only 1,000 feet across. Well does the name 'Snake' fit the stream not only for its crookedness in plan, but for the further fact that its banks are all the time, for it carries 5,000 to 60,000 cubic feet of water per second.

In the six miles the river falls fifty-six feet; so when the tunnels are finished and the dam is built the big Snake will enter these tunnels and fall, perpendicular, fifty-six feet water wheels that will produce from 35,000 at the lowest stage of water, to 100,000 at the highest. The water will be sent out on wires to Pendleton, La. Grand and Idaho City, all in Oregon, and to Boise and all the cities in southern Idaho. This project, called the Snake River Ox Bow Electric Power Co., and its work named 'The Snake'.

The dam will be on the river about six miles from the town of Twin Falls. Here is where the river falls 210 feet and the electric dynamo are located. The dam will be on the North Side Twin Falls North and South Side Habitats.

W. P. Guthrie, the popular candidate for county attorney, has not to any extent made any canvass throughout this county, and yet is running so strong that his friends are beginning to count on his election so early in the name. Mr. Guthrie is the type of a man whom people usually wish to honor, because he is a man of the people and has throughout his professional career been a powerful force in law enforcement. His name grew to be terror to the criminal element in North Yakima, and it was known to be a sure conviction when Guthrie took the case. It is to men of this type that Twin Falls can safely entrust the legal business of the county, with the full assurance that he will at all times render his best service.

Now that the court house is assured, Twin Falls has other things to accomplish other than the punishment of those who voted and worked against the bonds. The Twin Falls tract is broad enough to contain most of all kinds, and fair enough to furnish common boasting effort from all sections and all men. Let's forget that the past contained anything of menace to the prosperity, and moderate our personal feelings in order that new life and new capital can be brought to this section. Twin Falls tract has nothing to expect from the other portions of the state, and if our efforts are to amount to anything it will be from united strength of the tract regardless of local partisanship and prejudice. Men will acknowledge a mistake a great deal quicker if treated fairly than if a whip is swung over them.

The court house bond vote has proved that the Twin Falls spirit will not down and that when any question concerning the interests of the tract of city strikes the whole city puts its energies into the contest. Business and personal prejudices are thrown aside and as a result Twin Falls has grown beyond the expectations of any one and far beyond that of the neighboring towns where factional spirit has been rife.

Owing to the fact that the Twin Falls Commercial club has been severely criticized for the taking up of the central proposition, the Times wishes to state for the benefit of its readers, that the carnival is coming to Twin Falls on a liberal basis offered by the business men and not by the Commercial club. Furthermore, the Times does not consider that it has any how coming if those business men see fit to invest a lot of money in getting the carnival here, and does believe on the other hand that such action on the part of the enterprising business men should not be open to criticism, much as it does, in a measure, take the place of the fair that has been allowed to die out from lack of proper backing on the part of every man on the tract. The Times would have much preferred to see a big county fair instead of the carnival, and would have boosted for it just as heartily as it is now going to boost for the carnival.

President Booth, of the Commercial club, has been in this city for three years, and has, during that time, built up a splendid business, and has invested every cent he could in Twin Falls projects and land. He has, during that time, devoted a great deal of money in the furthering of good roads and bridges, and in fact for everything that has tended to make Twin Falls boom. His reputation as a booster and as a successful business man, made him president of the Commercial club and if his method of boosting differs from those who have criticized him, nevertheless he has worked faithfully for this city and for the club, and should be given credit for what has been done and not blamed for the neglect of other members. To the man who attempts to criticize, the Times wishes to put one question, how many times has that man attended called meetings of the club, and shown by his action that the club was his concern also?

At a recent meeting of the Commercial club considerable discussion took place with regard to the club sending out descriptive circulars in order to advertise the city. The friend of discussion was for the most part that such advertising was money wasted, because of the extensive advertising being done by the irrigation firms. The Times will take issue with the gentleman advancing the above argument. For the sake of argument, the Times will admit that such advertising does advertise the tract in a general way and is of benefit, but at the same time the sending out of a Salmon River folder to prospective settlers is of no immediate benefit to the business men of this city, with regard to their respective businesses. How the gentlemen in question can consider that such advertising on the part of the Commercial club pays this paper for its payment of dues and support of Commercial club projects is hard to conceive, for no mention is made of but one paper in that literature and that paper is not the Times. The same might be said of every real estate dealer who contributes toward the club's support, for the five or six brought in by such circular of irrigation company seldom reaches the majority of the dealers. On the other hand the Times does believe that a circular of this nature, briefly telling the kinds and classes of grain, fruits and produce that can be raised here, general information about business prospects and prices of land could be gotten out for a very small sum of money, in which information no business man is given a boost and in which the man, when coming to town, has not been cornered by any interest or set of interests in the city and is free to get his impressions from whom he pleases. As for the cost of sending out the information, it would be far less than to employ an extra stenographer and would be augmented to great extent by people using the circular to send to their friends. The Times' object in presenting this side of the argument is not for the purpose of bringing out any controversy with any business man or corporation, but merely to show where a great injustice can be done to many members of the Commercial club unless the Commercial club literature is made absolutely impartial and disinterested.

TAFT A MASTER WORKMAN

"Mr. Taft's industry is expressed by his activity." He is a "quiet worker

than Edwin M. Stanton was, but he is not a less active worker. He is not as quick in his motions, either physically or intellectually, as the president; but he is not less a master workman. The day he was to start for Cuba he was at his desk finishing up some last details. His assistant gave him this warning: "Train starts in half an hour." "All right," was the reply. Presently a second warning, "Only fifteen minutes left, sir." "All right." Finally, "You've only three minutes left, sir." "All right," came back as serenely as before. And in two minutes the alert secretary of war came out of the office door smiling, calm, imperturbable, unhurried. So the story comes to me, and I can well believe it. The legend seems probable.

If Mr. Taft's industry is expressed in his actions, his homeliness and his sense of justice are both expressed in his face. There are some men whom you like but are not quite sure you can trust; and there are some men you can trust but do not like. Indeed, I am inclined to think that stalwart principle and kindly good-nature are not very often combined in equal proportions in the same person. But in this respect the faces of Mr. Taft and of Bishop Brooks are alike. A child would be as ready to go up to the one as to the other and put his hand confidently in his big hand and go wherever he led the way. That this quality of attractive and unshakable integrity is manifested in Mr. Taft's face was apparent to the writer in the American, according to I have already quoted. "The bond were sinking, and he could swim and you couldn't, you'd hand him your $50,000—if you had it—saying, 'Give this to my wife,' and she'd get it if he lived to get ashore." Outlook.

PAST AND PROSPECTIVE SUNDAY REST

The national government has received considerable attention the past year from the Federation of the Sunday Rest associations, according to what this organization has in view it will receive considerable more. The appointments as well as the plans of the federation are outlined in The Christian Observer (Louisville), from which we quote:

"Acting under the direction of the federation, the committee on petitions secured a large number of petitions addressed to congress and to the president and cabinet officers, signed by two millions of persons, in the interest of the better observance of Sunday. Among the suggestions was to see that Sunday law for the District of Columbia, which would prohibit unnecessary business, such as the selling of candy, cigars, etc., as well as labor, and that no exception be made on account of religion; to secure the cessation of the immigration of aliens at Ellis Island on Sunday; to diminish as far as possible Sunday work in the postoffice. Among the matters accomplished are the securing a provision to the bill authorizing an appropriation for the Alaska-Yukon-Buena Vista expedition, which forbids the opening of the doors of the exposition to visitors on Sunday; the president issued an order that Sunday work in the departments must be restricted to "that which is of an emergency character, or which is recognized as being absolutely necessary to the public interest and welfare"; and the closing of the gates of the League Island Naval station to the public on Sunday.

"Among the things the federation is attempting to do may be mentioned the following, namely, to secure national legislation which will compel all railroad companies to diminish the Sunday work of their employees as much as practicable, and to give all employees who work on Sunday a full twenty-four hours' rest day during the next six days, and to secure an order by which any postoffice may be closed altogether on Sunday where a majority of its patrons petition for such closing; and that the soldiers and sailors of the United States be not allowed to engage in ball games or other sports on Sundays.

At the same time other friends of Sunday rest are urging up. Mr. Gompers says the American Federation of Labor, which represents over five million workmen, has emphatically declared in favor of the Sunday rest day. The National Druggists' association adopted a resolution in 1904 requesting all druggists to lessen their Sunday sales by confining their Sunday trade strictly to work of necessity and mercy."

M. J. SWEETLEY Republican Candidate for State Senator.

The original of the above picture is one of the real pioneers of the tract and when he severed his connections

the following handsome tribute to his type of citizenship: "During his residence in Sioux City he has been a leader at the bar and has taken a prominent part in public movements. Mr. Sweetley has also had experience in legislative work, having been a member of the Iowa legislature in 1902, where his work was highly pleasing to his constituency. This experience will be of great value to this county in the next legislature with a senate made up for the most part of new members. The trying period during the formation of this county and the drafting of the county division bill brought out to no small degree Mr. Sweetley's constructive ability and the fact the division was not killed in the house was in a measure due to the perseverance of this public spirited attorney, who gave his personal attention to the effective work done at Boise during the action on the bill. Twin Falls has had the usual experience of all fast growing towns of having independent government for the business and legal circles and here again our candidate for the senate used his legal ability for the public good and aided immensely in making the draft for a second class city charter, thus giving the city a more liberal form of government. As an attorney in this city, M. J. Sweetley has a record of which any man could be justly proud and the firm of Sweetley & Swezey enjoys a lucrative practice because of their well-known ability and integrity."

DIRECT PRIMARY IN CLARITY.

Oregon Election Shows Clearly That "People" Rule.

In the defeat of Lev Ankeny, United States senator from Washington, upon the first application of the direct primary law in his state to the nomination of a senator, the principle of the direct primary has obtained a victory that is of interest to the voters of the nation generally, says the Chicago Record-Herald. The Republican electors of the state have decided that they wish Wesley L. Jones, not Senator Ankeny, to represent them in the upper chamber of congress for the next six years. This means that a senator who has been openly charged with having bought his election six years ago will retire from office in favor of a man who is able, clean and worthy.

There has been something cynical in the reports of the elections of senators from the Pacific slope for many years. If ever the senate deserved to be called a "rich man's club" it was because of the way in which electors to that august body in the different states were chosen. But with the adoption of the direct primary the people are asserting their rights; they are taking more than a theoretical interest in the game of politics, and they cannot only control but they can dictate nominations hereafter. It is not claimed by any intelligent advocate of the direct primary that it will nominate ideal men when public sentiment in a state is low; but it is claimed that if upright men are nominated it will be the fault of the people rather than of their self-contaminated bosses.

The recent primary election in Illinois the bosses were defeated in the rejection by the voters of Charles Mammor for clerk of the supreme court—a member of the "machine" who chief if not only qualification for the place was that he was supposed to control a number of votes. "Boss" Mitchell as a candidate for the legislature, a man notorious in his legislative records, and of "Hank" Evans, the Aurora tool of corporations and leader of the "senate combine" against legislation not desired by the men who in former years put Evans in the legislature.

The neighboring state of Wisconsin also has profited out of her direct primary law, in making nominations for representatives in congress. In the eleventh district, John J. Jenkins, who has been elected seven consecutive times under the old system of party conventions and party machine control, has been defeated by a leader of the reform element, Irving Leonard. Their defeat is regarded as an indication of the desire of the Republicans of the district for relief from boss rule and a significant expression of their disapproval of the Cannon anti-Roosevelt policies in congress. For Jenkins has been one of Cannon's strongest aids as chairman of the house judiciary committee has been able to suppress or advance measures according to the speaker's wishes. The other Wisconsin representatives Henry Allen Cooper of the first district, John Mandi Nelson of the second district and Gustav Kusterman of the ninth district, all opponents of the Cannon rule, have been renominated under the direct primary system.

against strong efforts of the machine element to capture their seats. These experiences in Illinois and Wisconsin give much promise for the operation of the direct primary law as soon as its effects and benefits have become known to voters generally. As an example of what may be accomplished under even its imperfect working in its early stages, the case of Senator Ankeny is worthy of careful study.

This man, according to careful investigation of his record in office, personally and politically, to represent his state at Washington. His main strength is his bank account, and it is charged that he used his money lavishly in obtaining his election six years ago. Indeed, Collier's Weekly, which recently published a scathing review of his record, asserts that he bought votes with practically no concealment.

"Lev Ankeny's real name is Smith, Jr. Schmidt," says C. P. Connolly, in Collier's. "When a boy he was adopted by Captain A. P. Ankeny, an old Oregon sea captain. In the 60's Captain Ankeny bought his adopted son a pack train with which young Ankeny journeyed to Lewiston, Idaho, and engaged in merchandising. In Lewiston he acquired sufficient wealth to move later to Walla Walla, then the most considerable town in Washington, where he opened a bank."

Having thus early in life made a start in a financial way, young Ankeny prospered, but he is described as having been always a peevish man, except in politics. To control a county convention, it is asserted, he has been known to spend $20,000. All his life, if States Senator W. Neamith is true, he has been a money lender at high rates of interest and a note shaver. "The court records of Walla Walla are cluttered with foreclosure suits in which Ankeny's name appears as usurer, and in which 2 per cent a month is the basis on which the interest is largely figured," writes Mr. Connolly.

himself to the spectacle of his candidacy. The cost to him was nominal, notwithstanding like $10,000—it was about the first money used in senatorial politics in Washington—but, the cost to the state, morally and politically, has been sufficient. The state was without representation in hurt for two years. Allen, who had come within three votes of election, was appointed by the governor after the legislature adjourned, there being no election, but the senate, of course, refused to seat Allen.

Ankeny's senatorial aspirations were looked upon as a joke in Walla Walla and in Washington generally when he announced himself as a candidate in 1895. George Turner of Spokane was again a candidate. Congressman John L. Wilson also announced himself as a candidate. John B. Allen had moved from Walla Walla to Seattle, but was not an active aspirant.

In this campaign and in 1899 Ankeny was defeated, notwithstanding. It is all that the law can do to further his interests. In 1903 he obtained a new manager, George H. Stevenson, said to be "the great railroad lobbyist of Washington," attempted the struggle for the honor again, and again. How the election was accomplished is described by Mr. Connolly as follows:

Governor Henry McEldred had organized a powerful public sentiment in favor of a railroad commission bill to check the abuses of the railroads, to equalize freight rates and to secure just railroad taxation. The first move Stevenson made was to secure a back room conference of the railroad attorneys and Ankeny's representatives in the city of Portland, Oregon, outside the Washington state boundary. Crozier and Stevenson and five Washington state hold-over senators, who were Ankeny's supporters, represented Ankeny. Will H. Thompson, a prominent Seattle attorney, represented the Great Northern; a Portland attorney represented the O. R. & N.; and H. S. Grosbeck of Tacoma, a railroad attorney and lobbyist, represented the Northern Pacific. Grosbeck is a brother of Judge Peter Grosbeck of Chicago.

The result of this conference was that it was agreed between Ankeny's managers and the railroad lobbyists that the railroad attorneys to the railroads should be invited in the Washington state senate, in return for which the railroad representatives in the coming legislative session 1903 were to vote for Ankeny for the senate.

"On one Saturday afternoon Preston's supporters called a meeting in the supreme court chambers. The Seattle delegation, being told at this conference of certain support, sufficient to elect, that would be available to Preston on the following legislative day, lined up before the bar of the supreme court and one by one resolved themselves that they would attend their written agreement not to go into caucus until released by Preston. Fifteen minutes later 13 of them walked across to the Ankeny headquarters and signed the caucus bill which resulted in Ankeny's election on the following legislative day. This was 10 days after a great mass meeting had been held in Seattle, reminding those legislators of their pledges, at which meeting Judge Burke, a staunch friend of the railroads, was hissed down when he attempted, in pursuance of a preconcerted railroad plan, to refer favorably to Ankeny's candidacy.

The Seattle Times, which, upon the same management, is now openly supporting Ankeny for re-election, made in its columns the following comparison of the amounts paid to the King county men:

King county men	$15,000
King county men	$2,000
King county men	$5,000
King county men	1,000
King county men	$19,000
King county men	$5,000

Forest experiment stations will be established in the national forest states of the west according to plans which have just been completed by the United States Forestry Department.

Forest experiment stations will be established in the national forest states of the west according to plans which have just been completed by the United States Forestry Department. These new stations are expected to do the same for the development of American forests as agricultural experiment stations have done for the improvement of the country's farms.

the work of the new experiment stations will be the maintenance of natural forests typical of the region. These areas will furnish the most valuable and instructive object lessons for the public generally, for professional foresters, lumbermen and owners of forest land, and especially to the technical and administrative officers of the national forests.

In the recently established station on the Coconino national forest one of the first problems to be taken up will be the study of the reproduction of western yellow pine and the causes of its success and failure. A solution of this problem of how to obtain satisfactory reproduction of the yellow pine will be of far the most valuable tree there, in many cases not forming a satisfactory second growth. The study will be carried on largely by means of sample plots, which will be laid out for future observation to determine the effects of grazing of the different methods of cutting and disposing of the brush, and of other factors on the success of reproduction.

Other studies which will be taken up soon are a study of the light requirements of different species at different altitudes and the construction of a scale of tolerance which will be based on the actual measurements of the light intensity, and not only, as has hitherto been the case in general observations alone, the taking of meteorological observations to determine the effect of the forest upon temperature, humidity, melting of snow, wind velocity, etc.; a study of the relative value of the germinating power of seeds from trees of different ages, ages and degrees of health; and similar studies of value to the region. A complete collection of the flora of the forest will be made to form a herbarium, which will be kept on the forest and will be available for reference at any time.

These stations will carry on scientific experiments and studies which will lead to a full and exact knowledge of American silviculture, and the indirect benefits of the forests and will deal particularly with those problems of particular importance to the regions in which they are located. While work of this character is new in this country, it is not without precedent abroad. The value of the systematic organization of forest research work was officially recognized in Germany in 1870, when the first forest experiment station was established in Baden, in connection with the Polytechnicum at Karlsruhe. Half dozen of the German stations followed the example, and in 1890 the first forest research work was officially recognized in the United States at present, the work of forest research has been almost wholly neglected, and the result is apparent in the poor progress of technical forestry. Very lately, however, the need has been recognized by the government and an imperial forest research

GUTTERS RUN WITH LIQUOR.

Four Thousand Dollars' Worth of Wines and Beers Spilled.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—The "gentlemen" of Hammond, Ind., ran blind-drunk with liquor yesterday. Derelicts from the city's slums fall over each other in a mad fight to drink from the foaming canteen. Thousands of men and women cheered as barrels of beer were poured into the gutters and bottles of wine cracked and tossed on the city dump.

Four thousand dollars' worth of liquor was spilled by the authorities as a whole blizzard to the sanitary condition. The wine and beer were soiled two months ago in a raid on four "blind tigers" near Hammond.

instillate and college has been created at Dehra Dun, with a faculty chosen from the imperial forest service. In the United States considerable research work has already been done in the chief trouble with forest problems but the lack of persistence and permanence which has characterized the work, and failure frequently to consider all the factors which are involved. The new system provides for the permanent assignment in a given region of specially trained men who will have an opportunity to become thoroughly familiar with their region, and the work will thus be conducted with the greatest effectiveness and least expense.

The work will be not only scientific in character, but will also be extremely practical, and will aim in every case to solve problems of most importance to the lumberman, the forester, and the people as a whole. Valuable results will undoubtedly be obtained in this way which were not possible under the old system of general observations.

STILL RUNNING.

Edwin, aged four, owned a picture-book in which a fierce-looking cow was running after a small boy. He looked at it a long time, then carefully closing the book he laid it away. A few days later he got the book again and turned to the picture. Bringing his chubby fist down on the cow, he exclaimed in a tone of triumph, "She ain't caught him yet!"—The September Dentist.

DONALD KNEW.

Margaret, aged ten, was a beginner in history. "Mama," she asked, "what does behind mean?" "It means 'to cut off a man's head, dear.'" There was a moment of silent study; then another question. "What does 'defeat' mean, mama?" "Little Donald, aged four, was interested.

HE'D BE HALF-ASLEEP.

Five-year-old James was temporarily deprived of the use of one eye by a painful sty. As night approached, he said to his mother, "Mama, I'll have to go to bed early tonight, because I haven't got but one eye to sleep with!"—The September Dentist.

UNIVERSITY NEWS ITEMS.

When the early freeze three weeks ago cut short the tomato season, Professor Shinn figured up his account on the produce of two-thirds of an acre on the University of Idaho experiment farm and found that his sales had amounted to over $300. All the crop was disposed of to local merchants at wholesale, the price being from 50 cents to 85 cents per crate of 20 pounds.

President McClellan in his opening address to the students said that the present enrollment of over 400 made it certain that the total for the year would pass the 500 mark. Last year's total attendance was 425. Another new feature that may be arranged for during the year is a college of law in connection with the university. There is at present no law school in the state, and if the members of the bar are favorable the Regents may ask the legislature for an appropriation to establish one.

MILK POWDER.

Great Trade Can Be Built Up For Milk Powder.
The Creamery Journal of London predicts a bright future for the milk powder trade. It says: Now that practical processes have been invented for the conversion of milk into powder the question of the possibilities of such a business demands the attention of all creamery proprietors and managers. The great difficulty in most manufacturing businesses is the proper utilization of by-products. Now, separated milk in creameries is practically a waste material. It fetches on the average a price of a penny per gallon. It can only be sold in the immediate neighborhood of the creameries, as carriage to a distance is not possible at such a price.

The process referred to gets rid of practically the whole of the water contained in the milk, and the residue of milk powder amounts to only about one-tenth of the weight of the milk. Even were it possible to send the separated milk economically to a distance the heavy cost of the packages required would be a very serious drag on the business. But the milk powder can be forwarded in any ordinary light commercial package that can stand the strain of a railway journey.

For wholesale purposes it may be packed in bags, like flour, or practically as good whatever. The trade being a perfectly practical one, the next question is, What are the possibilities of finding a successful market for the product? And it seems to us that if milk powder is properly placed on the market it will find an immense profitable outlet. It will be used in enormous quantities by biscuit manufacturers and by bakers and confectioners to a large extent in the manufacture of milk bread, cakes and pastry of various sorts. As it will keep for any length of time, it will obviously be invaluable on board

A QUEEN FOR CARNIVAL.

Miss Co. Will Conduct Contest of Popular Lady.

One of the features of the carnival will be the election and public coronation of a popular young lady, who will reign supreme as the Queen of the Carnival for the last three days of the festivities.

The advance agent having this feature of the carnival in charge, arrived in the city this morning, and at once commenced getting the contest in running order.

Already several popular ladies of the city have been nominated to run for this honor, and when the first list of the candidates is announced the rivalry will be keen. The young lady who is finally chosen by her friends to this enviable position, will be treated to the best there is in the way of royal honors. She will have two maids whom she may select from among her friends, and these ladies will accompany her majesty on all her official visits along the Midway.

The first list of the active contestants will be made public early in the week, and from that time until the end of the contest, the standings of the ladies will be published daily.

One of the features of the contest will be the presentation to the Queen
