CHAPTER TEN

A BOUT 7 o'clock on the following afternoon Mrs. Mortimer's maid, who had almost finished drying and dressing her mistress's hair, was called to the door by a persistent knocking, which at first she had been bidden to disregard. It was Mortimer's man, desiring to know whether Mrs. Mortimer could receive Mr. Mortimer at once on matters of importance.

"No," said Lella petulantly. "Tell Mullins to say that I cannot see anybody." And, catching a glimpse of the shadowy Mullins peering about the dusky corridor, "What is the matter? Is Mr. Mortimer ill?" But Mullins could not say what the matter might be, and he went away, only to return in a few moments bearing a scratchy note from his master, badly blotched and still wet, and Lella, with a shrug of resignation, took the blotched scrap and dabbed between thumb and forefinger and unfolded it. Behind her the maid, watching by the masses of dark, fragrant hair, read the note very easily over her mistress's shoulder. It ran, without preliminaries:

"I'm going to talk to you whether you like it or not. Do you understand that? If you want to know what's the matter with me you'll find out fast enough. First that check! Get it out before I leave."

She closed the note thoughtfully, folding and double folding it into a thick wad. The ink had come off, discoloring her finger tips. She dropped the soiled paper on the floor and held out her hands, pump fingers spread. And when the maid had finished removing the stains and had repolished the pretty hands her mistress slipped her check over thoughtfully, added a bit of dry cosset, then motioned the maid to take the tray and her departure, leaving her the cup.

A few minutes later Mortimer came in, closed the door, looking around the room, then dropped into a seat, sullen, inert, the folds of his skin showed on his collar, his heavy abdomen crumpled on his short, thick legs. He had been freshly shaved, his hair and clothing were spotless, yet the man looked unclean.

Save for the network of purple veins in his face there was no color there, none in his lips. Even his baby hands were the hue of clay. "Are you ill?" asked his wife coolly. "No, not very. I've got the jumps. What's that? Ten? Eight? It's chocolate. Push it out of sight, will you? I can smell it."

Lella set the delicate cup on a table behind her. "What time did you return this morning?" she asked, stilling a yawn. "I don't know—about 5 or 6. How the devil should I know what time I came in?"

Sitting there before the mirror of her dresser she stole a second glance at his marred features in the glass. The loose mouth, the squared eyes, the long, thin tremors that twitched the bands where they tightened on the arms of his chair, became repulsive to the verge of fascination. She tried to look away, but could not.

"You had better see Dr. Crosby," she managed to say. "I'd better see you; that's what I'd better do," he retorted thickly. "You'd want it, all right?" "Very well. What is it?"

He passed his swollen hand across his forehead. "What is it?" he repeated. "It's the flu, this time, if you want to know, I'm all in."

"Roulette?" raising her eyebrows, without interest. "Yes, roulette too. Everything's got me upstars at Harlow's. The game's crooked. Every box, every case, every wheel, every pack is crooked, crooked, crooked, by God! He burst forth in a fever, struggling to sit upright, his hand always tight on the rim of the chair. "It's nothing but a crooping joint, run by a bunch of hunchbacks! 1-11!"

Stuttering, choking, stammering impingement, she pressed her hand to her forehead. She sat there, head bent, silent, impassive, acquiescent under the physical and mental strain to which she had never become thoroughly hardened. How many such scenes had she witnessed. She could not count them. They differed very little in detail and not at all in their ultimate object, which was to get what money she had. This was his method of reimbursing himself for his losses.

"A bad time?" he broke out violently. "How can it come at any other sort of time? With us all times are bad. If this is worse than the average it can't be helped. We are in it for keeps, this time!" "We?" "Yes, we!" he repeated, but his face had grown ghastly and his uncertain eyes were fastened on hers in the mirror. "What do you mean—exactly?" she asked, turning from the dresser to confront him. He made no effort to answer. An expression of dull fright was grawling on his visage, as though for the first time he had begun to realize what had happened.

She saw it and her heart quickened, but she spoke absently: "Well, I am ready to discuss—as usual. How much do you want?" He made no sign. His lower lip hung loose. His eyes blinked at her. "What is it?" she repeated. "What have you been doing? How much have you lost? You can't have lost very much. We hadn't much to lose. If you have given your note to any of those gamblers it is a shame—a shame!—to carry a load of that. You must come on your honor, never to do that again. Have you lost, after all the times I have helped you out, stripped myself, denied myself, put off treatment, faced creditors? At all—I have done, do you dare come here and ask for more—ask for what I have not got—with not one bill settled, not one servant paid since December?"

"Lella, I've got to tell you—" "What?" she demanded, appalled by the change in his face. If he was overdoing it, he was overdoing it real-terribly enough. "I've used Plank's check!" he mumbled and moistened his lips with his tongue. She stared back at him, striving to comprehend. "Plank's?" she repeated slowly. "Plank's check? What check? What do you mean?"

"The one he gave you last night to pay his bridge losses and forgot to fill in."

"The one he— But you couldn't! How could that. It was not filled in."

"I filled it." Her, dawning horror was reacting on him, as it always did, like a fierce tonic, and his own courage came back in a sort of sudden desperation. "You—you are trying to frighten me, Leroy," she stammered. "You are trying to make me do something give you what you want—force me to give you what you want. You can't frighten me. The check was made out to me—in my order. How could you have used it, if I had not indorsed it?"

"I indorsed it. Do you understand that?" he said savagely. "No, I don't. Because if you did it's forgery."

"I don't give a— what you think it is!" he broke in fiercely. "All I'm worried over is what Plank will think. It don't mean to do it, I didn't dream of doing it. When I saw that check in my hands I thought I'd use it temporarily—merely as moral collateral to flash at Harlow's—something to back my 1-11's. So I filled it in."

"For how much?" she asked, not daring to believe him, but he ignored the question and went on, "I filled it and indorsed it and—" "How could you indorse it?" she interrupted coolly, more unconvinced again and suspicious. "I'll tell you if you'll stop that fool tongue a moment. The check was made to 'L. Mortimer,' wasn't it? So I wrote 'L. Mortimer' on the back. Now do you know? If you are L. Mortimer, so am I. Lella begins with L; so does Leroy, doesn't it? I didn't indorse your two-words-to-a-page autograph. I put my own flat to a check made out to L. Mortimer, and I don't care what you think about it as long as Plank can stand it. Now put up your nose and howl, if you like."

But under her sudden pallor he was taking fright again, and he began to bolster up his courage with bluster and noise as usual. "How all you like," he jeered. "It won't alter matters or square accounts with Plank. What are you starting at? Do you suppose I'm not sorry? Do you fancy I don't know what a fool I've been? What are you turning white for? What?"

"How much have you?" She choked, then, resolutely, "How much have you—taken?" "Taken?" he broke out with an oath. "What do you mean? I've borrowed about $20000. Now why? Eh? What? No why? Probably some went there. Turn 'em on and run 'em. I'll wait. And be managed to cross one bulky leg over the other and lean back, after a resigned resignation, while Lella, bent upright in her low chair, every curved outline rigid under the flowing silken wrap, stared at him as though stunned.

"Well, we're good for it, aren't we?" he said threateningly. "If he's going to turn ugly about it, here's the house!" "My—house?" "Yes, your house! I suppose you'd rather raise something on the house than have the thing come out in the papers."

"Do you think so?" she asked, staring into his bloodshot eyes. "Yes, I do. I'm sure of it!" "You are sure?" "You mean that you are not inclined to stand by me," he demanded. "Yes, I mean that."

"Do not intend to help me out?" "Do not intend to—out of the time?" "He began to show his big teeth and that nervous sneaking "tick" twitched at his upper lip. "How about the divorce courts?" he suggested. "Do you want to figure in them with Plank?"

"I don't want to," she said absently, "but you cannot frighten me by that threat."

"Oh! Can't frighten you! Perhaps you think you'll marry Plank when I get a divorce? Well, you won't for several reasons. First, because I'll name other correspondents and that will make Plank sick; second, because Plank wants to marry somebody else and I'm able to assist him. So where do you come out in the shuffle?"

"I don't know," she said under her breath and rested her head against the back of the chair, as though suddenly tired.
 "Well, I know. You'll come out unshaken, and you know it," said Mortimer, gazing intently at her. "Look here, Lella. I don't come here to threaten you. I'm a blackmailer. I'm no criminal. I'm simply a decent sort of a man, who is pretty badly scared over what he's done in a moment of temptation. You know I had no thought of anything except to borrow enough on my I O U's to make a killing-out lick. I had to make something big, so I filled in that check, not meaning to use it, and before I knew it I'd induced it and was plunging against it. Then they started everything on me—by God, they did, and if I had not been in the condition I was in I'd have stopped payment. But it was too late when I realized what I was against. Lella, you know I'm not a bad man at heart. Can't you help a fellow?"

His manner, completely changed, had become the respectful and fretful of a man who is in a predicament of circumstance. All the savage brutality had been eliminated. The sneer, the truculent attempts to browbeat, the pitiful swagger, the cynical justification, all were gone. It was really the man himself now, normally scared and repentant; the frightened, overfed pensioner on his wife's bounty, not the human beast maddened by fear and desperation, half starved, half panic-stricken, driven by sheer terror into a role which even he shrank from—had shrank from all these years. For leech and parasite that he was, Mortimer, however much the dirty acquisition of money which tempt him in theory, had not yet brought himself to the point of attempting the practice, even when in sorest straits and bitterest need. He didn't want to do it. He wished to get along without it, partly because of native inertia and an aversion to the mental ugliness that he would be required to show as a blackmailer, partly because the word "blackmail" stood for what he did not dare suggest that he had come to, even to himself. His distaste was genuine. There were certain things which he didn't want to commit, and extortion was one of them. He could at a pinch lie to his wife or try to scare her into giving him money. He could when necessary "borrow" from such men as Plank, but he had never cheated at cards, and he had never attempted to blackmail anybody except his wife—which, of course, was purely a faulty matter and concerned nobody else.

His policy of alternately frightening, deceiving and supplying Lella had carried him so far, and though it was true that this was a more serious situation than he had ever yet faced he was convinced that his wife would pull him out somehow, and long that was to be accomplished he did not very much care as long as he was paid out safely.

"What this household requires," he said, "is economy." He spread his legs, denting the Amishon carpet with his boot heels, and glanced askance at his wife. "Economy," he repeated, furtively wetting his lips with a heavily coated tongue, "that's the true solution. Economical administration in domestic matters. Retrenchment, Lella, retrenchment. Fewer foldovers."
 Lella's head was lowered. He could not see her expression, but his indignity had been confident of his ability to talk himself out of trouble, so he rambled on in pretense of camaraderie, carrying favor, as he believed, ingratiating himself with the cool blue eyes that served him among some men, even among some women.

 "We'll fix it somehow," he said reassuringly. "Don't you worry, Lella. I've confidence in you, little girl."

You've got me out-of-sticky messes before, eh? Well, we've weathered a few, haven't we? De you? Well, you won't for several reasons. First, because I'll name other correspondents and that will make Plank sick; second, because Plank wants to marry somebody else and I'm able to assist him. So where do you come out in the shuffle?"

"You needn't be scared if I'm not," he said reproachfully. "The house is worth two hundred and fifty thousand and there's fifty on now. If that fat Dutch skinkin', Plank, shows his tusks we can clap on another fifty." And as she made no sound or movement to reply: "As far as Plank goes, haven't I done enough for him to square it? What have we ever got out of him except a thousand or two now and then when the cards went against me? If I took it, it was practically what he owes me. And if he thinks it's too much—look here, Lella, I've a trick up my sleeve. I can make good any time I wish to. I'm in a position to marry that man to the girl he's mad about—start, rushing mad."

"Mortimer, stop your raving! Her head and looked at her husband.
 "Lena, are you mad?"
 "Not much! No exclaimed gleefully. "I can make him the husband of the most beautiful girl in New York—if I want to. And at the same time I can penetrate the most arrogant, the most cold blooded, selfish, pure profit, inflated nincompoop that ever sat at the head of a director's table. Oh! Now you're staring, Lella. I can do it. I can make good. What are you worrying about? Why, I've got a hundred ways to square that check, and each separate way is a swifter."

He rose, shook out the creases in his trousers and adjusted the spigot gold Tob which ornamented his protruding waistcoat.
 "So you'll fix it, won't you, Lella?" he said, apparently oblivious that he had expressed himself as able to adjust the matter in a hundred equally effective and satisfactory manners.
 She did not answer. He lingered a moment at the door, looked back with an ingratiating leer, but she paid him no attention and he took himself off, confident that his readiness could not result in anything unpleasant to anybody except himself.

Nor did it, as far as he could see. The days brought no noticeable change in his wife's demeanor toward him. Plank, when he met him, was still enough, though it did occur to Mortimer that he saw very little of Plank in these days.
 "Ingratious begger," he thought bitterly. "He's too busy. He's busy now. I can't do anything more for him, so I don't interest him."

And for awhile he wore either a triumphant, aggrieved air in Plank's presence, or the meek demeanor of a martyr, sentimentally misunderstood, but patient under the affliction.
 Then there came a time when he needed money. Durkin, the few days before the check was against his balance. If, indeed, as Mortimer feared, the bank itself had not communicated with Plank as soon as the check was presented for payment. Therefore Plank must have been placated by Lella—how, Mortimer was satisfied not to know.

One thing was certain. Plank had not remained very long in ignorance of the check's draw against his balance. If, indeed, as Mortimer feared, the bank itself had not communicated with Plank as soon as the check was presented for payment. Therefore Plank must have been placated by Lella—how, Mortimer was satisfied not to know.
 "Some of these days," he said to himself, "I'll catch her tripping, and then there'll be a decent division of property or—there'll be a divorce." But, as usual, Mortimer found such practices more attractive in theory than in execution, and he was really quite content to go on as things were going, if somebody would see that he had some money occasionally.

One of these occasions when he needed it was approaching. He had made a "killing" at Desmond's and had used the money to stop up the more threatening gaps in the tottering thingy fabric known as his "personal accounts." The fabric would hold for awhile, but meantime he needed money to go on with. And Lella evidently had none. He tried everybody except Plank. He had scarcely the impudence to go to Plank just yet, but when completing the vicious circle he found his borrowing capacity exhausted and himself once more face to face with the only hope, Plank, he sat down to consider seriously the possibility of the matter.

Of course Plank owed him more than he could ever pay—the unpaid payments—but what Plank had thought of that check transaction he had never been able to discover.
 Somehow or other he must put Plank under fresh obligations, and that might have been possible had not Lella invaded the ground, leaving nothing, now that Plank was secure in club life.

Of course the first thing that presented itself to Mortimer's consideration was the engineering of Plank's matrimonial ambitions. Clearly the man had not changed. He was always at Sylvia's heels. He was seen with her in public. He went to the Belwether house a great deal. No possible doubt but that he was as infatuated as ever. And Quarrter was go-

INDEPENDENT TICKET.

Mass Meeting Turned Into Nominating Convention.

A mass meeting was called to order in the Commercial club rooms on Thursday afternoon for the purpose of organizing an independent party. F. E. Drake of Filer, was nominated temporary chairman, and J. Warren White, of Buhl, secretary. Discussions were then in order upon the nomination of a ticket, and the following ticket endorsed:

Senator, Theo. T. Davis, of Buhl; representative, C. A. Waters, Twin Falls; sheriff, J. W. Dyer, of Twin Falls; treasurer, Mrs. T. D. Connor, of Filer; probate judge, Judge Shieffelin, of Twin Falls; no county superintendent or tax collector endorsed; coroner, W. F. Pike, of Twin Falls; surveyor, Chas. Hall, of Twin Falls; commissioner, district No. 1, E. T. Newbury, Kimberly; district No. 2, C. A. McManter, Twin Falls; and district No. 3, W. P. Shinn, of Filer.

A county center committee was then named, consisting of one lady and one gentleman from each voting precinct. The committee members named are: H. H. Strong, Milner; H. B. Beverlin, Martinigh; Mrs. Stinson, Mary; G. W. Crater, Hansen; Wm. J. Calkin, Rock Creek; H. W. Turner, Kimberly; D. W. Brunk, Rev. Beauchamp and C. F. Gloydin, of Twin Falls; E. J. Rettig, Filer; Mrs. M. A. Pease, Filer; T. E. Moore, Maroa, and B. Boyd and Mrs. E. A. Wyatt, of Buhl.

The following committee was appointed on resolutions and platform: G. A. Drake, Filer; E. H. Rettig, Filer; Theo. T. Davis, Buhl; J. W. White, Buhl; and C. F. Wheeler, of Filer. The committee drew up the following platform declaration of principles for their consideration and support:

First, We contend that in all matters of local and county government the will of the people is more important than strict party rule, and the administration of the law more desirable than party allegiance.

Second, We are in favor of a county local option law and pledge our legislative candidates to use all honorable means in their power to secure the enactment of such a law. We point to the record and character of our candidates as a guarantee of our sincerity of our purpose.

Third, Believing that the convention method of nominating public officials to corrupt practices and defeating the will of the people, and having faith in the wisdom and judgment of the electorate of Idaho, we are unqualifiedly in favor of practical direct primary law.

Fourth, Reiterating our faith in the good judgment of our citizens we favor the election of United States senators by a direct vote of the people.

Fifth, We favor a railway and warehouse commission to be elected by the people, and also an effective anti-pass law.—Filer Films.

NO HOWL COMING.

The statement published in the Chronicle of this week that the Republicans had rented the rink for tonight and had thus forced the Democrats out, will scarcely hold water in view of the fact that the Republicans did not rent the rink until Monday of this week. The Democrats had just the same chance to get the hall as did the Republicans and failed to avail themselves of the opportunity until it was too late. It would seem that knowing that their speaker, Mr. Case, was coming, that they could have secured the hall long before Monday. It is a pretty bluff to accuse the Republicans of taking advantage of Democratic neglect.

FIRE AT MINIDOKA.

The Shigt Line depot at Minidoka station was completely destroyed by a fire early Thursday morning. The loss is estimated at $1500, exclusive of the value of a small quantity of merchandise in the freight house and three box cars on a siding. All of the United States mail matter awaiting transport to the Twin Falls branch and all the express matter was saved from the flames. The origin of the fire is unknown. It caught from a burning box car on a side track, but how the car was ignited is a mystery. The first blaze was discovered at 1:30. A special train consisting of an engine and a coach was sent out of Emmet, with Supervisor James A. Weed of the bridges and building departments, Roadmaster McDonogh and Chief Clerk R. N. Stockstager of Division Superintendent Onstead's office in charge. A day coach was sent out as a temporary depot. The building will be rebuilt at once. Telegraphic communication was interrupted on account of the fire for three hours.—Pocatello Tribune.

CARL'S ASPIRATIONS.

Little Carl, a yearling, had been teased a great deal by his uncle about the vocation he would choose when he became a man. One day he overheard his mother and a caller talking about a certain gentleman being a bachelor. When the caller left, his mother noticed that he was unusually quiet and seemed to be in a deep study. Finally he said to her, "Mamma, is a bachelor a good trade?"—The September Delineator.

MCLEOD OF THE BOISE SHAMROCKS, IS INDIGNANT.

The Boise Shamrocks, champions of southern Idaho, returned home yesterday morning from Twin Falls, where they played a return series of three games with the Farmers. In two of these games the locals lost.

Members of the Shamrock band are very indignant over an alleged statement of the last game of the series. With the score in the second inning 5 to 0 in favor of Boise, Twin Falls called out the umpire who, the Boise players say, had been giving a square deal, and put in another man.

Speaking of the trip, Manager Hobby McLeod of the locals, said yesterday afternoon:

"I consider the last game of the series stolen from us. In the second inning we were leading by a score of 5 to 0, and Empire Hays giving a square deal, to all, the Twin Falls team called out the umpire and he put in another man. He called Case out once when he was safe a mile. Casey had bunted, and the umpire called him out on an alleged interference with the ball when he had not touched the sphere. Green had to grove the ball every time it was called at all. No corners were allowed.

"Our treatment by the Twin Falls team was not nearly as good as the treatment given them here, of which they complained. When they came here they were accorded the best respect customary in such cases. They were kept at a first-class hotel and at one of the best restaurants in the city, no limit being placed upon the expense of their meals. We were taken into the rear of a billiard hall to eat, and the food was anything but good.

"I am sure we can beat the Twin Falls team every jump in the road with a fair deal from the Umps. We proved here that we were their superiors, beating them two games out of three.

The Twin Falls bunch is not in our class.

Manager McLeod is enthusiastic over the work of his team at Twin Falls. Case, Green and others of the team did some good stick work. There were numerous errors in the first game, but the field was muddy and one could hardly move without slipping and falling. On the whole the Shamrocks presented a strong line-up.

Wells and Bragaw each pitched excellent games.—Statesman.

The above article published in the Statesman, reflects little credit upon the sportsmanlike character of the Boise Shamrocks. Most teams that have visited here have been game enough to take their defeats in a gentlemanly manner and have not gone home with the cry of being bogus.

Boise is the first town to ever defy Twin Falls hospitality and show very likely alone in that howl.

As to the charge of unfairness on the part of the umpire the victors did not state the truth.—Henderson, the umpire whom they accuse of unfairness, umpired the morning game, which Boise won and showed unmistakably that he understood the game. In this game it was Tom Umpire Hayes was taken out, but upon his request, because of illness and not because Twin Falls wished to win the game by a foul.

The decision which the Boise manager kicked on when Case was put out for interference was such an obvious attempt at interference that no one could question it. The ball was at least ten feet within the line along which Case should have run and when he went that ten feet out of his way in order to prevent Murphy, the Twin Falls pitcher, from fielding the ball he stooped to dirty ball playing and richly deserved what he got from the umpire. On this one dirty act of one of their players the Shamrocks base their whole kick.

With regard to the hotel accommodations accorded them, it was better than they deserved. The Times reporter was at the train when the Boise players arrived and it was so apparent that two of the players were outrageously drunk, and when taken to their hotel, which by the way is one of the best in the state, the manager of the hotel refused to take them in, because of the evident condition of the players he could not be blamed in the slightest. If the Boise players did not receive the treatment they desired it was due solely to their own failure to measure up to standard.

GLAD HE STOPPED PRAYING.

Little Bob, who for some months had invariably ended his evening prayer with "Gimme send a baby brother," announced to his mother that he was tired of praying for what he did not get, and that he did not believe God had any more little boys to send.

Not long afterward, he was carried into his mother's room very early in the morning to see twin boys, who had arrived during the night. Bob looked at the two babies critically, and then remarked, "It's a good thing I stopped praying, or there'd been three of them."—The September Delineator.

UNLucky MAN WAS LUCKY.

Mr. Carl Lewis of this city, who was unfortunate enough to have his arm broken, is shaking hands with himself for the fact that he had been injured the day before the accident hit the Fraternal Brotherhood, an insurance order which pays accident benefits, as well as life, permanent disability and old-age benefits.

He has just received a check for the amount of his benefits from the insurance order, and he is very much pleased with the prompt manner in which his claim was paid.

The Fraternal Brotherhood was organized here in August, and this is the first claim. The judge has been notified, as it takes both men and women into the same lodge, and members do not discriminate between men and women.

The policy they offer is a very attractive one, and the member who whether he dies or lives. For total disability the full face of the policy is paid.

Mr. Chas. Dempre, the state manager, is the one to contact and expect to find another class soon. He is also organizing the drill team, which will be in charge of Capital Loomis, one of the best drill teams in the state.

T. F. R. drill team consists of not less than eight young men and eight young ladies, and it makes a very attractive body. It is a valuable experience for the members.

$20,000 HOTEL FOR JEROME.

Investment Co. Anticipates Growth of Town.

Jerome, Ida., Oct. 10.—The finishing touches of the Twin Falls North Side canal are now being given. Donald Grant, the contractor, has completed his contract for the main canal ahead of time. One of the most prominent features of the canal is the concrete bridge, 10 feet wide and one-fourth mile long and 10 feet high. The width on the bottom is a little over half the height. The bridge is well constructed of lava rock and concrete and is a masterpiece of masonry. O'Neill & Bro. were the sub-contractors and Donald Grant built the main canal. Donald Grant and his score of sub-contractors are now actively engaged on the 20 miles of canal. The canal will be ready for delivery, as per Mr. Kuhn's promise to the settlers, April 1, 1909.

The water did not a dollar misapplied. Mr. Kuhn has certainly had the support of an local farmer in his march across the desert as Grant had. It has been a mighty victory—130,000 acres of Idaho land most fertile soil reclaimed, homes created for thousands of people, opportunities furnished on every hand to the wage earners. These towns have been started, schools and churches built. In fact, all classes have been included in the great triumphant march from desert to garden. Over 200 miles of railroad constructed, water works under construction, hundreds of miles of canals made, and many thousands of dollars of taxable property added. Idaho's support and advancement—and all this accomplished in 18 months—these are the facts of the case. Never before made in the United States of like class.

Both Will Grow Happily.

Jerome and Wendell will be large, prosperous towns, located in the heart of one of the richest tracts of land in Idaho. These towns are being fitted up with every modern improvement, electric lights, sewerage, electric railroads, and power for manufacturing purposes.

"Truly it is good to dwell in a land of canals, where there is work for all who are willing to accept opportunity, knock at every man's door. Idaho may well be proud of the Twin Falls North Side tract and its wonderful record.—Bismarck.

SAVVIEY FOR BRUNEAU PROJECT.

Bids Opened and Contracts Awarded for General Survey.

Bids were opened late Saturday afternoon by Surveyor General Utter for the survey of the Twin Falls-Bruneau project. The survey was split into two contracts and the successful bidders on the first were Frank E. Maxwell and Walter E. Tolbooy, their bid being $7,911. This contract calls for the survey of 11 townships. The second contract went to Oscar Sonnenkalm and Fred W. Mitchell, and included the same amount of acreage as the first, their bid being $7,112. The terms of the contract require the work to be completed December 31, 1908.

The tract of land embraced in the two contracts is about 50,000 acres and the price the company will have to pay for the survey is $16,024. The government requires that a successful bidder on a contract of this character give a bond for twice the amount of his bid. This brings the bond required from Messrs. Maxwell and Tolbooy up to $15,822, and from Messrs. Sonnenkalm and Mitchell, $14,226. This is the biggest survey contracted for at any one time by the government in the history of the state of Idaho.

The land included in this survey is that of the Twin Falls-Bruneau project, comprises the largest section that any irrigation company has ever attempted to provide water for. The land is located to the west of the present Twin Falls tracts and can be described as being in the south central part of the state. It runs in parallel with Snake river and is said to be of the very finest land to be found in the southern part of the state. Water under the proposed irrigation project will be carried from the headwaters of the Snake river through the canals in the Twin Falls project and then out of these onto the new tract. The total length of the main canals will probably be between 300 and 400 miles. The promoters of the Twin Falls and Bruneau irrigation project lie behind the irrigation of this large section. The successful bidder on the survey is to start into the field Monday with large crews and push their work as rapidly as possible. The first real construction work is to start early next spring.—Capital News.

The remains were prepared for shipment by Hunt & Co. of Twin Falls, and were received here by Evans & Johnson, and buried in the J. O. O. F. cemetery. Halph Leroy was the first babe born in Bull and was named after Frank Bull, whom the city was named for. Mrs. J. W. Sandness has the heartfelt sympathy of all.

The monthly business and social meeting of the Veterans Christian League society, was held Monday evening at the home of Miss Hazel Alvord. A. F. McClusky favored the young people with a vocal solo, and was heartily enjoyed. She responded with a sweet little German song which was greatly appreciated. Cannon, Jay Cannon, Bishop and Lapham.

Contractor John Stanley (it is thought) is the real negotiator in this matter. It was reported that he went to the hospital in Twin Falls with typhoid, Saturday evening, but he was seen in Bull after train time. Parties who are interested in John Stanley are depending on him for the building of their houses. The first article of news in the local paper was that he was not at the hospital and had not been there. This of course, aroused suspicion. Inquiry was made and it was found that he had walked to Silverdale Saturday evening and was covered from the roof. He told the reporter that he had just received a telegram that his mother was not expected to live. The last known of him, was at this place. If he has left for a town (which is supposed) he has left a great number of the Bull people in a very bad condition, but it is hoped that all that everything will come out right in the end. If he has flower the crop for good, it certainly will prove a lesson to the people not to put too much dependence in strangers.

Rev. C. F. Wheeler, Methodist minister of Piler and Bull, was in the city Wednesday evening. Ernest Undermann, Socialist candidate for governor, returned Saturday evening in the Modern Woodman-hall. Mr. Undermann is a very interesting speaker and held his audience well. After the lecture he answered very ably the questions of those interested in politics. The hall was well filled, and the speaker was well received. About one hundred present.

JEROME HAPPENINGS. Jerome, Oct. 14, 1908. Dr. Piper returned Thursday from a ten days trip to Boise, where he had been called by the state cause. E. Talm, midwinger of the Booth Mercantile Co. of this place, was called away to Boise, where he died on account of the recent death of his father. He returned to Jerome Saturday. Mrs. R. G. Shores of Olympia, Wash, arrived in town Friday and stated that Sunday. Sunday morning she was in town for a short time. Mrs. Shores will build and locate permanently.

Although the Piper and Bloom family was completely out for two weeks ago, business increased so rapidly that it was necessary to build an addition. The work has been done on short notice, and the building will be completed, ready for occupancy, in a few days. With Jerome going just the last week two new buildings have been started, and owing to the progressive spirit displayed in their construction, they will soon be ready for use. One, a law office, erected by A. B. Barney, is located on Main street, east of the corner of the Court, where a Mr. Goring and more extensive one, is located on Lincoln ave. south of the building corner of the Court, which is owned by a real estate office and residence for R. H. Traill.

Mrs. A. Ashton and brother of Twin Falls, were in town Saturday, closing out some land deals. They, like all other Jerome visitors, became very much interested in the business spirit manifested in the business world, and have hopes for the bright future of Jerome. Mr. Helwig Becker, pastor of Mrs. J. M. Hale, has begun the erection of a store building located on Main street. The building is in progress and is quiet and snugger, in commemoration of the first anniversary of Jerome, was held in the Jerome restaurant. First prize in the program was the dinner, which was very much enjoyed by all present. Singers were then directed all their best songs and songs of the pleasure of the evening and render the affair a perfect success. Many hearty laughs and a rounds song were rendered by the guests given by the following named gentlemen: Major Fred R. Reed, A. B. Barney, J. H. Clark, Charles J. Owens, Kernanck, Nims, Harlybush, Ostrander and others. Well-trailed affair as a teamster. There were sixty well-dressed business men and North Side settlers present and all enjoyed it to the fullest extent. Such an affair, like this, is needed by Jerome, some, considering that a year ago there were only five buildings on the town-site. The growth has been so rapid that now there are at least one hundred buildings, and more being built. As a fitting close to the evening, a regatta was arranged and it was interesting to note that more than twenty states were represented at this meeting.

On Saturday evening, Oct. 10th, a crowd of young people of Jerome, drove by moonlight, to Shoshone Falls, for a return summer afternoon. The crowd were: The Milnes Cover, Miller, Trull, Nupton, William, Diefendorf, Durrough Trull and Mary Nupton; Messrs. Owens, Burke, Sevornis, Barely, Schoenthal, Chapin, Kinney and Graham. This jolly bunch was accompanied by Mrs. Decker Christensen, who performed her duty excellently. Every one thoroughly enjoyed every minute of the time, and all look forward to more such good times for the winter. Those registered at the Sturgeon lodging house for the week were: C. F. St. Stone, Eannacker, Wash.; C. E. McClint, Kirkwood, Ill.; R. G. Shores, Olympia, Wash.; At the Jerome lodging house: T. Robertson, C. H. G. Cutler, Idaho, Falls; H. L. Knoud, Chicago; J. E. Cessno, Salt Lake.

GUTTERS RUN WITH LIQUOR.

Four Thousand Dollars' Worth of Wines and Beer Spilled.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—The gutters of Hammond, Ind., ran brimming with liquor yesterday. Derelicts from the city's slums fell over each other in a mad fight to drink from the foaming current. Thousands of men and women cheered as hurls of beer were poured into the gutters and bottles of wine cracked and tossed on the city dump.

Four thousand dollars' worth of wine was spilled by the authorities as a wholeonation to the county option law. The wine and beer were seized two months ago in a raid on four "blind tigers" near Hammond.

SPECIAL DAYS AT BIG FAIR.

Intermountain Fair Will Make Feature of Special Occasion for All.

With three days set especially aside for features of the intermountain fair to be held in this city next month and several other days which will be designated for Boise, Canyon, Elmore, Ada and other counties, as well as "Baby Day" the county fair of the Inter-Mountain Fair association will be larger and better than ever and will assume more the appearance of a state fair than it ever has before.

Derby Day.

The first of the three big days is to be known as "Derby Day" when the great race of the entire meet will be pulled off. A large purse is offered the winner and many of the fastest horses in the northwest will be entered. The race committee has made arrangements to hold their meet during the six days of the fair and four days afterwards, making a 10-day meet in all. Entries are now being made for this event and many of the horses and time breakers that will tear at Portland, Seattle, Spokane and Walla Walla, will try for purses in this city during the fair and the four following days.

"Oregon Day" will be the next of the three big days set aside for the fair and at this time many centers Oregon people from Ontario, Vale, Baker City, Pendleton and other places will be in attendance. Secretary Gibson states that he has been in correspondence and working hand in hand with the Ontario Commercial club, with the result that city will put forth every effort to make "Oregon Day" a howling success.

The third day falls on Thursday and is to be known as "Odd Fellows Day." At this time the grand lodge of that order will be in session in this city and it is expected that between 400 and 500 Odd Fellows will be in attendance. The local order will combine with the fair association management to see that the guests are properly entertained and shown the "wino of their lives." On Wednesday evening before "Odd Fellows Day" the Imperial Order of Muskovites, a branch order of the Odd Fellows, will give a big parade in the city with at least 400 members in attendance. They will endeavor to entertain the populace with their costumes and various portrayals of characters true to their order. It is expected that this will be a grand spectacle.

County Days.

The counties named above are to be especially honored with days during the big fair and every effort will be made to influence the residents of these counties to be in Boise at that time. Special transportation rates have been obtained on all of the railroads which means that the fare to Boise from any point within a reasonable distance will come within the reach of all. The various counties are planning on exhibits at the fair and it is expected that this feature alone will be an attraction. It will be on a larger scale than ever before.

Fair Advertised.

Secretary Gibson stated today that he has opened his campaign of advertising and publicity for the fair and that many of the newspapers of the state are carrying "ads" as well as writing up the big six and ten-day event. Special rates were given by the papers in the state to the fair management, making it possible to carry more advertising. The advertising of the fair through bill posting has been cut down this year, the management believing that it pays to address the public through the newspapers. Considerable advertising is being done through the medium of bill boards, however, and the display matter for this arrived recently and is being put in place.

IT HURTS THEM.

It is interesting to observe the frenzy of righteous indignation which some of the Democratic newspapers of the county profess to feel over the action of a president in awarding the great weight of his personality into the presidential campaign. Among these is the Boise Capital News. In a double-column editorial headed, "Roosevelt Common Politician," it declares he has laid aside the dignified robes of his office and descended into "dirty" politics. It scolds at him as those only could who find their party given a fatal blow by some commanding personage, able and willing to strike, hard whenever necessity may arise for such action.

But scolding at the president cannot set aside the truths he proclaims, nor can it prevent these from taking a deep hold upon the minds of the people. Those who indulge in frantic scolding only weaken their own cause. They disclose the measure of their disapproval of their cause by the utterances of the president. Those hurt always cry out in some manner, excepting in rare cases, and that is as true in politics as it is in any situation in life. That is what is hurting the Democrats and the people of the county. He is just indulged in by the Boise paper. Instead of raving at the president, these papers should return devout thanks that we have an executive who is ready to take a bold and righteous stand for the people on the great questions that are now before them as a people of the county. He is just demonstrated in the past few years. He came to the front at a time it was essential that some man with the conscience and the courage and determination to accomplish results should step forward and take the giant combinations by the throat. He did that in the name of and for the welfare of the people of the county. He is just as earnest in that cause today as he ever was in the past and he knows that it is essential to that William H. Taft be elected president. He does not hesitate to discharge his duty to the people whom he has so well served by casting the weight of his influence in favor of the candidate who he knows will carry a great work he has begun already to a conclusion that will be lastingly beneficial to all the people of the county.

The Democrats cannot cry him down in a bottle when he feels that there is work for him to do in connection with the great cause which bears his name. When he found the trail of the Standard Oil serpent leading into the Democratic headquarters, he felt it was his duty to speak to the public on the subject. Instead of echoing the hubgrubration of the Democratic leaders and papers, the masses give forth a shout of rejoicing over this renewed evidence of Theodore Roosevelt's devotion to the principles he has espoused, and his assurance that William H. Taft is as loyal as himself on these great questions and on all others affecting the welfare of the nation, cause them to return thanksgiving because of his fearlessness and truthfulness in speaking his mind to them so freely.

It hurts those Democrats who desire success at any cost, but the people, inspired by his utterances, are marching forward in confidence that the great statesman chosen by the Republicans of the country to continue Roosevelt's work, will be triumphantly elected.—Morning Post, Sept. 29.

SKETCH OF SENATOR WELDON AT HEYBURN.

Weldon Britton Heyburn, United States senator from Idaho, and the Republican nominee for re-election to that office, has been elected in June, 1876, and was afterward admitted to the supreme courts of the western and northwestern states, the United States district court, circuit courts and the supreme court of the United States. For over 30 years he has been extensively engaged in the practice of law, largely connected with mining litigation, but his practice has covered every branch of the profession and he has met with conspicuous success.

Senator Heyburn was elected a member of the constitutional convention of 1889, which framed the constitution of the state of Idaho, and participated actively in all of its deliberations, serving as chairman of the committee on the judiciary, as well as on other important committees.

Although not a candidate for the office, he was nominated for congress in 1895, which he defeated. He was a member of the Republican ticket in 1898, but was defeated on account of the free silver disaffection at that time. He was a delegate to the Republican national conventions of 1888, 1892, 1896 and 1904, and served as national committee member for Idaho from 1894 to 1896. In 1895 he was elected to the United States senate, receiving all of the Republican votes in the legislature. Upon entering the senate he was made chairman of the committee on manufactures, which had charge of the pure food legislation. He was a distinguished blazer in the manufacture fight he made for the passage of the pure food bill which is now a national statute. During this fight he demonstrated that he was one of the ablest debaters in the upper house of the national legislature, and since that time has maintained his reputation on many an occasion.

READY IN THE NORTH.

James H. Brady, the Republican candidate for governor, is making a great campaign in north Idaho. He is preaching the gospel of honest citizenship and good government, and he is creating a splendid impression. The Republican candidate does not pretend to be an orator. He is a business man, and a plain man—one of the people. He has experienced the hard knocks of the world in his efforts to make a living and his sympathies are all on the side of the masses. As a broad-gauged business man, though, he encourages the investment of capital in his state. He says to it, "Come, and if you do right you will have the protection of the state if I shall be placed at the head of affairs; if you do wrong, you may expect to suffer for it." He says to the laboring man, "We want capital, but we must have the men to do the work. We want them well paid and we will protect them in their employment, but they must obey the law." Rich and poor alike must obey it. As a citizen he stands for those things that are lofty and inspiring. He wants good government and is advocating a direct primary as one of the best means of securing it. He is talking these things over with the people. They have confidence in him and in his words and they propose to make him Idaho's next governor.—Boise Statesman, Oct. 7.
