Twin Falls Progress Little Short of Marvelous

PROF. HOLDEN OF IOWA AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE SO DECLARES.

Interesting Figures and Data Furnished by Mr. Holden Upon His Return to Iowa, Which Started the Nation

Idaho has been attracting a good deal of attention from Iowans. And a large number of them have gone to that state since the passage of the new famous Carey Act.

Some of them took their fishing rods along, thinking to take advantage of the most excellent fishing in the streams of Idaho.

Professor Holden's estimate of the new country will be of great interest to Iowans because of the unquestionable authority of the source.

Odd Fellows of City Infatuated Into Highest Order.

Last Friday evening was the crowning event for the Odd Fellows in this city when Col. William Crocker and L. C. Bower, organized a Canton of Patriarch Militant, the highest branch of the order.

The above team has had an enviable record this season for victories and few without exception played winning ball with amateur teams of the state.

ADJUSTMENT OF WATER PROBLEM

Proposition of Twin Falls Land & Water Co. Accepted.

CANAL ASSOCIATION HELD SPECIAL SESSION.

Winter Maintenance to Be Charged to the Irrigation Season of 1909 For Every Acre Irrigated in that Season.

The settlers, through the medium of the Canal association, have finally decided to accept the proposition of the Twin Falls Land & Water company to maintain enough water in the canals during the winter months for the supplying of the stock and for domestic purposes and to charge the same to the operating season of next year at the rate of eighty cents per acre for the season for every acre under cultivation that season.

The meeting was held last Saturday afternoon by the association and eight of the twelve members of the governing board were present.

The first game of football on the local ground this season was played at the ball park last Saturday and was witnessed by a large and enthusiastic crowd. Pocatello high school with a number of old players on its team, put up a strong game, and with the exception of one of two times during the game, the forward pass was used.

TO HEAR ELECTION RETURNS.

Non-Partisan Gathering Planned to Receive Election Results at Bank.

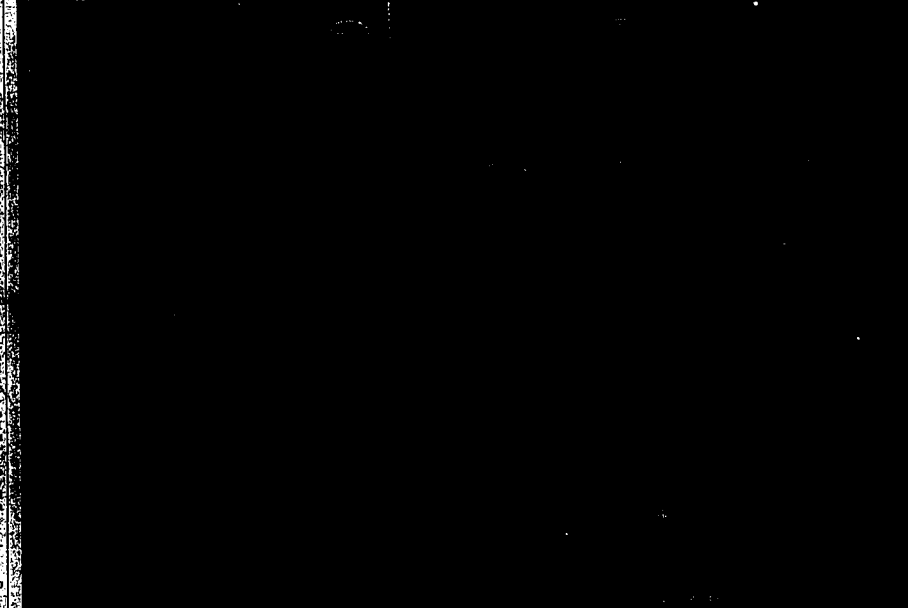

A number of enthusiasts, both Republicans and Democrats, are making arrangements, if the Western Union can be counted on, to hire the rink for Tuesday night of November 3rd and get all of the returns from all over the country. The seats will be sold at so much per, and all smoking forbidden, so that the ladies may feel free to attend. Music and slides from the stereopticon are among the features planned by the men heading the affair. Provided that satisfactory arrangements can be made with the telegraph company, all night service will be given.

HON. JOHN DALZIEL'S SPEECH

The Republican party invites the issue upon every ground on that of professions, its achievements, its consistency, and its loyalty to principles and pledges.

My eloquent friend from New York (Mr. Cockeran) in his speech the other day did not confine himself to the discussion of men, but to the discussion of present and vital importance. He invited a review of the entire history of a party, differences from the beginning of the Union to the present day. In so doing he advanced some claims so amazing in their character as to invite examination. To address Jackson, for instance, he implied, at least, gives credit for the saving of the Union. To him he attributes the first declaration that the federal government possessed the power to prevent by force a nullification of its laws; in that he is mistaken. Long before the time of Jackson, George Washington announced the same doctrine and sent Alexander Hamilton at the head of an army to cross the Alleghenies and bring into subjection the rebels of western Pennsylvania, who sought a nullification of the revenue laws. (Applause on the Republican side.)

The doctrine of the inextinguishability of the Union, which was attributed to Jackson, is the antithesis of Democratic doctrine until 1865. Until that time Democratic doctrine was continued by the doctrine of the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of Jefferson and Madison, namely, not that the Union was inalienable, but that it represented only a compact from which there existed upon the part of individual States the right to withdraw. If the gentleman from New York is correct in saying that the inextinguishability of the Union was Democratic doctrine in 1865, that he has stripped the Democratic party of the south, who sought to destroy the Union, of its greatest achievement, that in so doing they believed they were acting within their rights. When they made war on the Union they either believed it did not exist, or that the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of which they were inexpressibly wicked and desecrated the constitution of the country. Nothing can detract from the fame of Andrew Jackson, noble and fearless patriot that he was; but it still remains a historic truth that there existed no power in the government to coerce a sovereign state, and who sat idly by while the enemies of his country, every man of them a Democrat, possessed themselves of its arms, its ammunition, and its fortifications, and desecrated its flag.

It will require a historic truth also that it was a Republican president who, backed by the heroism of a great people, not only held the Union together and shall be preserved, but preserved it for all our people, North and South alike, the priceless heritage of fathers; and who, not born to the purple, a plain man of the people, wears such a crown of immortality as never in all the time granted to any man, brow of king or emperor, Abraham Lincoln. (Prolonged applause on the Republican side.)

But the saving of the Union by Andrew Jackson in 1865 is not the only achievement, that the gentleman claims for his party. He ventures the assertion—and it is a venturesome assertion—that from the very first establishment of this government there has been a policy permanently incorporated into our political system that was not of Democratic origin.

I assert that there never has been such policy that was of Democratic origin, with the exception of the establishment of the independent treasury system and the extension of territory in the interest of slavery. The history of the United States is the history of the continuous struggle between two opposing schools of political thought. One school is represented by the party which has contended from the beginning that the United States is a nation, a solid compact, and that while the other school has contended that it is but a confederacy, an aggregation of sovereign states bound together by a constitution, the terms of which are to be strictly construed. The conflict between these two schools of thought reaches to the Revolution, and prevailed in the Confederation, and made itself felt in the convention which framed the constitution. When the constitution was framed and the new government created thereby entered upon its experimental career this conflict existed between the two parties, which, under one name and another, struggled for mastery until a decision was rendered on the tented field in the greatest war of all time.

One of these parties was the party of Alexander Hamilton, the other that of Thomas Jefferson. The latter was the party of constructive statesmanship, the other the party of obstruction and criticism. He certainly is bold man who, in the face of history, denies today that the permanent policies which have entered into the constitution were framed by Hamilton are not the policies advocated by Alexander Hamilton and his followers. Hamilton's relation to the constitution was threefold—first, with respect to its formation; second, with respect to its adoption; and third, with respect to the rule of its construction. In the formation he bore but a comparatively small part, though Guizot, the great Frenchman, said: "There is not in the constitution of the United States an element of order, of force, or of duration which he has not powerfully contributed to introduce into it. His cause to predominate." It can not be denied that, when made, the constitution failed in many respects to meet his views. He regarded it as weak, and he feared, insufficient as a framework of successful government. My friend from Missouri, I think, said to the friends of Hamilton claims which they do not make. No man ought to deny that to James Madison, eighthly belongs the glorious title of father of the constitution. (Applause.) But when it was finally framed, certainly no man did more good than Madison. It is his name which is adopted by the South. (Applause.) No treatise on statecraft, in all the literature of government, equals in popularity of thought, in clear and convincing logic, in attractiveness of style, the papers upon the constitution. From our their pages their chief author, a colossal figure in the world's history. (Applause.)

It is largely due to Hamilton's powerful influence, the constitution was finally adopted, it was, he who stamped upon it the character of finality. His measures as secretary of the treasury embodied an entire system of public policy. Our system of taxation, our system of currency, in the words of Webster: "He smote the rock of the national revenue, and abundant streams of revenue gushed forth to the public credit, and it sprang upon its feet. The fabled Jove was hardly more sudden or more perfect than the financial system of the United States as it burst forth from the conception of Alexander Hamilton." (Applause.) In his first report on the public credit he advocated the payment of the public debt, and the policy of funding the public debt as of the assumption by the general government of the debts of the States. There is no doubt that these measures, there is no doubt that they are to the genius of his conception and ability with a view to what he urged. Their significance was political, not commercial. To satisfy foreign creditors was to establish credit for the government which did them justice. To satisfy home creditors was to create credit for the States. It is the central government, which became their debtor, and to enlist the allegiance of their interest in its stability and recovery. It was a policy of national credit, the government, and rally to its support all the elements of influence and power in the country.

Close upon the heels of the funding system and the assumption of state debts came Hamilton's cherished policy of national bankruptcy. With expediency or necessity we have nothing to do. The relation of the mortgage to the constitution of the United States is the whole of its importance for us. Might this federal government, whose wheels were but lately set in motion, be allowed to go bankrupt? This was the question, for and against which men rallied with the enthusiasm of the religious conversion. Hamilton and Madison, "though it be not written in terms, if it be useful, proper, and necessary in the enjoyment of the national system in today's world, it is implicitly written in the constitution."

This fundamental doctrine of Hamiltonian federalism is today the central idea, embodied in and justified by the clear logic of John Marshall, the greatest of American chief justices. (Applause on the Republican side.) Of this chief justice of any land the poet, pure, upright, fearless and patriotic, planned in an unclouded vision of jurisprudence, no problem ever left his great mind unsolved; no principle dear to the lovers of liberty ever failed to find in his noble and valuable judgment and judgment. (Applause on the Republican side.)

It was the part of Hamilton's comprehensive statesmanship to enlist the national resources in the protection of the varied industries of his country. The growth and production of the materials natural and capable of adaptation to its soil and their manufacture, his judgment, entitled to the specific aid of the general government. "Whatever," said he, "concerns the general interest of the nation, agriculture, manufactures, and of commerce, is within the sphere of the national concern." That general interest, in the appropriate sense of the word, is the science of research and the diffusion of knowledge; which by protection fosters its growth, and which encourages the system of internal improvements for locking the lakes, binding ocean to ocean, and Canada to the Gulf—practical, beneficent, and of the highest importance as does the grandeur of London's St. Paul's proclaim the genius of the Republican. (Applause on the Republican side.)

The policy of internal improvements, is it not a permanent policy? Is it not firmly established in the system, and does it not now command universal support? Was it Democratic origin? The constitutionality of appropriations for internal improvements was denied by Jefferson, by Madison, and by Monroe. In the latter instance his official life Madison vetoed a bill "for constructing roads and canals and improving the navigation of water courses." The terms of the bill had no constitutional power to expend the public revenues for any such purpose. Madison's first veto message announced in most explicit terms the same doctrine. Andrew Jackson followed. In his first annual message he contended the constitutionality of an internal-improvement system, and in a veto message, May 27, 1830, summed up at great length the objections to the system. The first convention of the national Republicans (Whigs) asserted in one of its resolutions that "a uniform system of internal improvements, sustained and supported by the general government, is calculated to secure the highest degree of harmony, the strength, and the permanency of the Republic." From 1840 to 1864 the Democratic party quadratically condemned the internal-improvement system in every shape and form.

From the foundation of the government until the present day the tendency of our national life has been in accordance with the principles handed down by Hamilton. The government control of all matters that a mature and intelligent public opinion hold to be of national concern. This tendency has been aggravated by the advances in the means of intercommunication whereby matters once considered of local interest are now recognized as of continental importance.

The gentleman from New York is no more fortunate in claiming for Andrew Jackson the credit for saving the Union than he is in claiming for Thomas Jefferson the credit of the preservation of the Union. It would serve but little purpose for me now to go into a length discussion of this question. Only a word in passing. Let me refer to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Stark), who is so thor-

The Times is in receipt of the Tacoma Daily Tribune's big forty-page centenary edition, a paper which F. H. East, man, formerly editor of this paper, established in Tacoma, and of which he is business manager.

The Times was this week requested to print a communication, which calls in question the record of one of the Republican candidates for this county. The Times is always glad to print communications from its patrons and subscribers on topics of general interest; it refuses to aid any man in furthering scandal or satisfying a personal grudge. The Times will, throughout this campaign, conduct an absolutely clean paper, and will not publish anything which reflects on the private life of any individual, either Democrat or Republican.

Perhaps no man believes more thoroughly in advertising than does Manager George B. Banta of the Idaho Department store, and no store on the tract is more talked of for that reason and for the reason that the big store backs up its advertisements with the goods. Mr. Banta believes so thoroughly in the value of printer's ink that a sum of money larger than some business men spend in a year, is spent each month by this enterprising store in its successful effort to reach every home on the Twin Falls branch. And it is successful beyond even its expectations. Customers from all along the branch are making Twin Falls their shopping center, due to the business push and advertising spirit of this man, together with that of the other hustling business men of this city. The Idaho Department store is a direct argument in favor of the value of newspaper advertising. Besides his spirit of push for the Idaho Department store, Mr. Banta is ever ready to help build up the tract and no man is more ready to contribute for any project that has the promotion of business for the whole country.

ANTI-MILITARISM IN JAPAN.

We learn from the Avenir du Tonkin, a paper of considerable circulation in French Asiatic possessions, whose editor follows the course of events in the Far East with a great deal of attention, that the Japanese army is becoming with discontent, and the nation at large is sick of the crushing load of militarism. The rank and file think their services in Manchuria and more recently in Korea have earned them fortunes for life. Says the editor of the Tonkin paper:

"It is very significant to notice that in two Japanese regiments at least the men are deserting in squads and at frequent intervals. It well-informed Japanese are to be believed in their report regarding the soldiers of the Sixty-second regiment who recently fled from their quarters, it was bad treatment that drove the men to this extremity. And if the army is inclined to complain of the burden of military service, much more do the people utter energetic protests against the new taxes to meet the expenses of the last war. Their complaints are every day more emphatic. Crushing taxation, dwindling commerce, paralyzed industries, and an exorbitant budget form the burden of their lamentation. Such are the charges and recriminations which fill the newspapers from day to day."—Literary Digest.

Once in awhile the editor of this paper has occasion to find out the opinion of his subscribers on political subjects, but he had the pleasure this week of meeting for the second time in the history of his newspaper work, a man who thought for the price of two dollars subscription, he purchased the editor's mild, body and soul and had a mortgage on the paper besides. The editor of this paper has every day of his career opportunity to listen to men on all subjects, and has, to the best of his ability, tried to treat every man's opinion with respect, regardless of his personal feelings. Now all that the Times tries to do each week in its editorial pages, is to give an honest expression of the subjects treated and all that the Times asks its readers to do is give to those editorials the same tolerance which the editor gives to them when they visit his office. It is absolutely impossible for any man to suit editorially every one of his patrons, and the newspaper attempting to do so gains nothing but contempt for straddling the fence.

REPRESENTATIVE SWEETLEY OF SIOUX CITY.

"Marlin J. Sweetley of Sioux City, is one of the honored representatives to the general assembly from Woodbury county.

"Mr. Sweetley has respectfully earned for himself the enviable reputation of being one of the most industrious members of that body.

"Among members of organized labor Mr. Sweetley does not need an elaborate introduction; his record is well-known among those who have kept track of the actions of public men of the state. Mr. Sweetley took a prominent part in the struggle for the right during the strenuous days when the Temple amendment was being agitated among the people of the state, and it is believed by his constituents at Sioux City that the part he took in that memorable and worthy movement was of much importance in that it saved the Eleventh congressional district from being divided at the Cedar Rapids convention of the Republican party in 1897.

"When it was known in Sioux City that Mr. Sweetley was a candidate for the general assembly there were none who hailed the opportunity to support him more than the members of organized labor of his district. How well they decided has been demonstrated by his activity and watchfulness for their and the people's interests in general. During the present session his efforts are especially noteworthy in connection with the work that has been done to secure the endorsement of the lower house for the anti-injunction law, known as the Hoar-Grosvonor bill which is now before congress. So far this salutary measure has not received the support it should by the members of the house of representatives, but every time it has come up for discussion, Mr. Sweetley has bravely and cleverly borne his share of the endeavor to persuade the house of the righteousness of the bill.

"Mr. Sweetley is an orator of more than ordinary ability; he has the faculty of persuading men to change their views, and by his earnestness instantly secures and holds the attention of his colleagues until he has closed his arguments.

"It would be well for the state and especially that class of our citizens who get their daily bread by the sweat of their brow if they would always select men of the caliber of Mr. Sweetley for their representatives and public servants."

Some time in June, before the Republicans had fully made up their ticket, the editor of the Times, thinking from indications, that the present incumbents in the offices of sheriff and probate judge would be the nominees of the party to succeed themselves, pledged himself to the support of the Democratic aspirants for those two offices because at the time they seemed the only choice of any man desiring efficient county officers. As it turned out, the Republican ticket, with regard to those two offices, proved very satisfactory, and the men put up are very worthy of the office, yet at the same time the Times feels that having made such promise to Messrs. Dyer and W. J. Smith, that it can do no less than keep the promise. Believing that such a promise is absolutely binding and above party loyalty, the Times will this week give to its readers its honest opinion of the above two men as related to their official conduct.

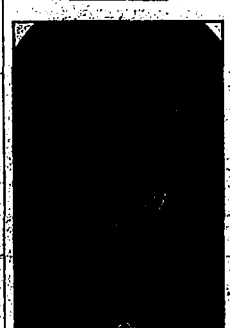

With regard to W. J. Smith, who is at present municipal judge of the city of Twin Falls, our praise is due him as a citizen and as a judge sitting on the hardest class of cases known, those of the petty criminal offenders. Attorneys who have had the pleasure of trying cases before Judge Smith speak in highest terms of his clear perception of right and wrong and of the manner in which he passes judgment on purely legal points in any case. They also speak in highest terms of his impartiality. In the office of probate judge such characteristics would be invaluable because of the broad nature of the cases tried in that court, it being the county court of permanent session. As to his citizenship the Times can give a personal expression. Judge Smith is absolutely honest and his record in the county since coming here three years ago from Shoshone, has been an open book and at all times worthy. The editor of this paper has enjoyed the friendship of this man since coming to Twin Falls, and in that time has never seen a man with as keen a sense of honor as well as a strict sense of justice.

Charles W. Dyer has, during the past two years, since the formation of this county, been the real sheriff of the county, though doing the work in the capacity of deputy. During that time he has faithfully discharged every duty of that office. His peculiar fitness for the office to which he aspires at this election is based upon many years of active experience in both the office of sheriff and of chief of police in various counties and cities of the west. Mr. Dyer has a faculty of being able to fathom the workings of the mind of the average hobo and crook with such certainty that since coming to Twin Falls he has been able to practically free this section from the confidence men and hobos. When men have committed crimes here the able ability has been fortunate in getting track of the man wanted in a short time, and has brought him back to the county. As to the clerical work of the sheriff's office Mr. Dyer has taken the best of care and has at all times given prompt attention to the service of legal papers. His experience in the line of preservation of public peace, places him beyond the class of ordinary officials and makes him pre-eminently fitted for the office of sheriff in this county.

"Now, from a somewhat intimate acquaintance with him for the last 20 years, I say that he is progressive in principle, and he is equipped most wonderful in experience."

All who know Judge Taft will concur in every word of this utterance. His weight is added to by the fact that Wisconsin senator during his residence in the national capital had many intimate associations with the former secretary of war and bases his statements upon the knowledge gained by close personal contact. Senator La Follette is recognized as one of the most courageous, progressive and upright men in public life. Senator Goro said of him: "He is the greatest Republican either within or without the Republican party." While that is Mr. Goro's personal opinion, it certainly is true that Senator La Follette is universally acknowledged to be one of the greatest among Republicans. His praise of Taft is that of a great man for a great man.—Chicago Tribune, Sept. 30.

LA FOLLETTE'S TRIBUTE TO TAFT.
The tributes paid a few days ago to Judge Taft by Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, is of special significance in view of the opportunities Mr. La Follette has had to become intimately acquainted with the Republican candidate for the presidency. Speaking at the state university in Madison, Wis., he said:

"Nature gave him poise, judicial temperament, great force of character and tenacity as to purpose. His long service in the public service is distinguished for its marked ability, its wisdom, its integrity, its patriotism. He has taken advanced ground among the great issues that are engaging the profound thought of the people of this great country."

"Now, from a somewhat intimate acquaintance with him for the last 20 years, I say that he is progressive in principle, and he is equipped most wonderful in experience."

All who know Judge Taft will concur in every word of this utterance. His weight is added to by the fact that Wisconsin senator during his residence in the national capital had many intimate associations with the former secretary of war and bases his statements upon the knowledge gained by close personal contact. Senator La Follette is recognized as one of the most courageous, progressive and upright men in public life. Senator Goro said of him: "He is the greatest Republican either within or without the Republican party." While that is Mr. Goro's personal opinion, it certainly is true that Senator La Follette is universally acknowledged to be one of the greatest among Republicans. His praise of Taft is that of a great man for a great man.—Chicago Tribune, Sept. 30.

To the Voters of Twin Falls County

Here are some significant statistics: During the first three months of 1908 there has been a decrease in the internal revenue receipts of the government greater than has occurred at any other time during the last fifty years. In January the decrease was $470,535.63; and on beer $222,580.71. In February the whisky decrease was $1,184,567.91, and on beer $187,283.56. March shows this decrease: Whisky, $2,549,210.26; and beer, $402,283.56—which makes a total decrease of revenue of $4,869,744.88, on the production of these two items for the quarter.

Of course the distillers and brewers do not like this. But the decent folks don't know that prohibition does prohibit after all, doesn't it, Mr. Distiller and Mr. Brewer?

I wish you would take the above figures and sit down to your desk and do a little figuring. Figure up the cost of the liquor to the consumer, of what has been saved, and figure how many tracts the size of Twin Falls tract this money would build. Then figure how many homes this would make; then close your eyes and see if you could imagine the number of homes and the amount of good that would be done if all this liquor money could be turned into legitimate and righteous work. Then go to the polls and vote as your conscience tells you to.

Yours respectfully, W. J. CALKINS

At last! With all this gain in Prohibition territory, there should be some decrease in the consumption of whisky, or rather in the force of the anti-liquor spirit. But it has come. During the fiscal year ending June 30, the loss of revenue of distilled liquors was nearly sixteen million dollars, indicating a decrease of over fourteen million gallons in the production of spirituous liquors. It is more than ten per cent of the total for the preceding year. The report of the commissioner of internal revenue shows that the production of beer, ale, etc., was slightly larger last year than one-half of one per cent. Let us hope that this small gain, which in the face of the increase of population is even smaller than it appears to be, may be the forerunner of an actual and appreciable decrease.

THE POLITICAL CAMPAIGN

THE FUNDAMENTAL ISSUE.

Is there any fundamental issue in the present campaign? Or is it merely an issue between personalities—the personality of the candidates and their constituents and counselors? I think there is an issue, confused, not clear, vital and fundamental. What it is I try to state in this article. The capitalist once owned the laborer; this was slavery. Then he owned the land and the laborer was attached to the land. The capitalist owed the laborer protection, the laborer owed the capitalist service. This was feudalism. Then the laborer was set free from his obligation of service to the capitalist, and the capitalist was set free from his obligation of protection to the laborer. Both laborer and capitalist were set free from all obligations to each other except such as they voluntarily assumed. Out of this has grown the present wages system. Under the wages system a small body of men known as capitalists own the tools and implements of industry; a larger body of men, known as workmen, use these tools in productive labor; the owner pays the tool-user for his work and takes the product of his labor, with the resultant loss to the worker of the amenities which his own produce is unable to furnish. This system is not much over a century old. I do not believe that it will survive for a century more. A century old? Hardly. It has been largely developed during my lifetime.

When I was a boy going to the village in Maine where my vacation hours were spent, I took a steambath to Portland or Hallowell, and thence a stage to Farmington. The driver was largely the owner of the stage and the four horses, and it was the height of my ambition to be able to own and handle a four-in-hand as he handled his—an ambition never realized. In the village was a blacksmith who was to change from slinging a roof to building a house. The work was mainly done by hand. Ten or fifteen miles from Farmington was a carding mill. In every farm-house was a spinning-wheel, in some houses a loom. The farmer took his wool to the mill to be carded; but his wife spun it, and sometimes wove it into cloth with her own hands. Every competent farmer had a blacksmith, and mending and shoeing tools was a considerable part of the winter's occupation. He generally killed a "best critter" for the winter's consumption; the slaughter of a sheep or a hog for the family use was a necessary incident of farm life. I do not think there was a bakery in the village; the bread was home-baked. The knitting of stockings for the household was the perpetual source of the frustration to which the individual who used the tools owned by the tools' labor organizations were to be subjected—strikes and lockouts unheard of.

ton carried us from Portland to Farmington in three hours, a journey which by stage took twice as long. A plowing-mill supplied the material for a thousand horses; in less time than the village carpenter took to provide the material for one. The farmer imports his masts from a Chicago packing-house. The loom has been broken up into three-wood, and the spinning wheel has been banished to the attic, or stands in the corner of the sitting-room, a relic of a past age; and the spindles and looms of Lowell and Fall River supply, at least not and less labor, better than the overtaxed mother could supply by hand.

But the tool-user no longer owns the tool—he uses. Industry is organized into two camps—tool-owners and tool-users. How to adjust their mutual relations satisfactorily to both camps constitutes the labor problem. I do not believe that they can be adjusted until the users of the tools, that is, the workers—the worker with hand and the worker with brain, the laborer and the superintendent, the men who produce for the market and the men who find a market for the article produced—own the tools and instruments by which the work is carried on. The perpetual problem between workmen and capitalists will not be settled until the working-men become capitalists. We cannot hark back to the individualism of the past. We cannot forgo the advantages which machinery, organization, and division of labor have given us. We cannot abolish the railway and go back to the stage, the plowing-mill and go back to the village carpenter, the woolen-mill and go back to the domestic spinning-mill and loom. We can go forward to an era of joint ownership of railroads, mills, and factories. And there are many indications that we are moving, though slowly and fitfully, in that direction.

of industrial democracy. This is not Socialism, certainly it is not state Socialism. It is not a plan for the state to own the tools and employ the workmen; another thing for the workers to own the tools and employ themselves. It is one thing for the state to own my pen and paper and tell me when and what I may write, another thing for me to own my pen and paper and write when and what I will. I am not a state Socialist, because I do not wish to see the workers seize the whole power of government in order to transform the state into a joint stock company. I am not a Democrat, because I do not wish to destroy the trusts or limit the size of industrial organizations whined of by laborers, or capitalists, or a combination of the two. I am an Independent Democrat, because I wish to see the men who are carrying on the industries of the country own the instruments and control the organizations by which they are carried on.

This cannot be accomplished by political action alone. It involves a rejection of all more disastrous to promote righteousness and good will among all people on the earth than to prepare a few elect colonial votes for them. It involves an education of all the people and for all kinds of vocations. It means Point Savings banks, that it may be as easy for a child to deposit a dime for safe-keeping as to deposit a letter to be mailed. It means that coal lands from private hands and national development of stock-farms and national development of unused waterways for the people's benefit. It means prohibition of stock-gambling. It means the substitution of direct for indirect partnerships between the government and private enterprise in which the government is sure to get the profits. It means immigration laws which will exclude such populations as cannot be fitted to live in our joint ownership and control of our joint industries. And it means (of that I am not sure) the prohibition of the use of any selective system—waterway, incidental evils may attend it; that we may be enabled to work out our international problems and crises without having shut ourselves out from the world.

mediate points." I have sketched above what seem to me some of the intermediate points between the wages system and industrial democracy. Despite much hostility from old-time leaders, the Republican party has, in the main, adopted, or is adopting, these principles. The party which overthrew slavery, or the ownership of the laborer by the capitalist, is on the way to abolish by peaceful measures the wages system, or the ownership of all the means of production by the capitalist. I advocate the election of Mr. Taft and the Republican party because I am an Industrial Democrat, and count with a good degree of confidence a gradual and peaceful evolution of our industrial system from an oligarchy to a democracy, by the election of the principles which the Republican party has espoused, and by carrying forward the work it has begun under the leader whom it has selected.

An event of unusual occurrence and great interest and importance to the public will take place at the rink on Monday night, October 26, at 7:30 p. m. A lecture will be given by Sydney W. Motin, who is well known to the front by his profound handling of economic questions of government and social reform. His manner of expounding the theories of Socialism stamp him as a convincing logician of superior rank, and is attracting widespread attention. His subject upon this occasion will be "Socialism—Its Relation to Christianity." The ministers of the various churches have been especially invited to attend and ask questions pertaining to theories and doctrines of Socialism in its different branches. The public is most cordially invited. Admission is free. HE WASN'T AFRAID. One morning last spring, little Ruth, aged seven, was watching a meadow lark in the adjoining field, and listening to his song. In a little while the cunning wile of the house came to her mother and said, "Mother, he wasn't a bit afraid!" He looked at me and then at the bird, and sang another verse."—The September Delineator. BUHL HAPPENINGS

Hotel Buhl Has Changed Hands—Rues W. Alfred Receives Telegram. From Boise.

Buhl, Oct. 20, 1908. Thomas Clifton has accepted a position at Ed Larson's store. Miss Alpa Lindstrom has resumed her duties at the Elison Drug Co. after a two months' vacation.

Mr. Newton has returned to Buhl to work for the Parker & Marshall Hardware Co.

The plans have been drawn for the new Baptist church.

The Buhl Brick Co. loaded a car of precious blocks last week for the McCormick bank of Twin Falls.

Patten & Wilson have bought the Buhl restaurant, from Mrs. Hughes and are now doing business.

Bert Atwood went to Twin Falls Sunday to put the finishing touches on Willard Wyatt's residence.

Carl Osterburg is expecting his wife, mother and two sisters, soon.

The electric light poles are being raised, so Buhl's light will soon shine forth and show to the outsiders what a bright town he have.

Charlie Martin made a trip to Owley's Ferry, Sunday, for fruit.

Miss-Willa Eden returned Monday from Murghug, where she has been visiting her husband and family.

J. W. Smith has sold his harness shop to A. L. Bradley of the Pioneer harness shop at Twin Falls.

H. E. Hunt was in town Friday on business.

Charlie Martin and his brother-in-law, Bert Walker, went to Twin Falls Monday to attend the big carnival.

Mrs. A. L. Bradley and child came up from Twin Falls Sunday, on their honeymoon.

Herman Geer and Miss Ethel Jacoby went to Riverside, Sunday. "To see the judge," so L. J. Johnson presumes. (He is quite an authority in those parts).

ADDITIONAL LOCAL

Mrs. John E. Hayes and Mrs. O. A. Staker gave a cyclone shower last Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Hayes, in honor of Miss Elva McCollum, whose engagement and approaching marriage to Mr. Joel W. Craven has recently been announced.

The guests were entertained at bridge during the evening, and the prizes were awarded to Mrs. McCollum. Miss Marie Barretto and Miss Elva McCollum. The gifts to the bride-elect were many and beautiful, one of the gifts being a small thoroughbred bull pup, decorated with pink ribbons.

E. E. Gillespie, a special correspondent, with headquarters at Washington, D. C. was in the city between trains Tuesday. Mr. Gillespie has a ranch near Kimberly and was here to take a view of the country.

This was his first trip to the tract the land was thrown open, and he was greatly pleased with the growth of Twin Falls and the tract in general. He has been touring the country with Governor Hughes on his campaign tour and he predicts a raft for president.

R. D. Stover and his partner, O. B. Stapleton, have commenced the erection of a building on the lot that they purchased last week from T. L. Orr, which is located between the office of Miller & White and the Hackett store.

Mr. Stover will occupy part of the building with a book and stationery store, while the other side will be occupied by Mr. Stapleton with a jewelry store. The gentlemen hope to have the building ready for occupancy by the first of December.

Col. C. A. Varnum, U. S. A., now on duty with the Idaho state militia, was in the city last week, being called here to organize a militia company, but the plan was vetoed for the militia to be out of the city so nothing was done in the matter. There is a chance for Twin Falls to get a company if they wish, as one of the companies in the northern part of the state has been disbanded and this city can take the place of that company.

The state provides the equipment and $500 per year for rent of armory. If the matter was taken up by some responsible party there should not be much trouble in getting the company started here.

Will F. Carter, one of the members of the Carnival company now showing in this city, was arrested yesterday on the complaint of A. P. Taylor charging him with the theft of $320.00.

Mr. Carter was taken before Justice W. J. Smith and entered a plea of not guilty, claiming that he was innocent and that he did not know anything about the matter at all. Shortly afterward Mr. Taylor appeared on the scene and informed the judge that he had found his money in his room, where he had left it and evidently forgotten about it. The judge immediately dismissed the case against Mr. Carter and the matter was brought to an end.

Jack Peth came up from Thousand Springs, the other day, with a big load of fruit.

There was a visit Monday morning with a slight snow storm. It was quite a surprise, for it came about a month earlier than did the first snow storm last year.

Mr. Emberson has returned from the Twin Falls, hospital, and is looking fine.

COURT HOUSE JUNKETING THP.

Commissioners Absent Inspecting Different Court Houses of State.

The county commissioners and Auditor H. T. West are away this week for the northern part of the state, inspecting a number of court houses while endeavoring to get pointers on the best plans for the new court house for this county. The members of the board are going to make every effort to see that this county gets the benefit of the constructive failures and successes of the other counties before any start is made on plans for the new building.

YOU NEED A PIANO!

One of the largest and most progressive Piano firms in the entire country Carlsensen and Anson Co., of Salt Lake City, are showing samples of their pianos at Sprague's Pharmacy, Twin Falls. If you expect to buy a piano at any time in the near future you should "Look them over." For various reasons they offer advantages that the ordinary dealer is powerless to overcome.

Being jobbers for several states and having sufficient capital to buy in large quantities for cash, their account is most desirable to the manufacturers, and the result is they have the oldest and best agencies.

As an introductory proposition in this territory, they are offering Pianos on easy terms without advance in price, which will give you all the advantages of their $40,000.00.

Be sure to see their Mr. Muller (at Sprague's Pharmacy) and get prices, terms, etc., etc.
