LOCAL OPTION IS AN ISSUE

Legislative Candidates Given a Chance to Decide

W. C. T. U. ASKS POINTED QUESTION ABOUT THE VITAL ISSUE.

Republican Candidates Have Already Filed Their Answers and As Soon as the Democratic Candidates Have Replied Circulars Will be Printed.

Twin Falls, Idaho, Oct. 29, 1908. Mr. J. Sweeley, Republican Candidate for State Senator, Twin Falls, Idaho.

Dear Sir:—The ladies of the W. C. T. U. of Twin Falls county have studied carefully the county Republican platform, and we find that you are instructed to vote for a county local option bill.

This letter will be printed in both the local papers, and your reply will not be published if you so desire it. Yours respectfully,

THE LOCAL W. C. T. U. Per Mrs. A. F. Hauser, Secretary.

A similar letter to Mr. Sweeley's was sent to A. D. McKinlay and his reply follows: Dear Madam:—In answer to your inquiry as to where I stand on the local option...

Dear Madam:—In answer to your inquiry as to where I stand on the local option, will say that I stand squarely on the platform and if elected will work and vote for the passage of a COINTEL PLANK LAW.

THE PRACTICAL AUTO COAT. Like the looks of our AUTO Coats? They are extremely popular this year—not only for motoring, but for street wear as well. They button up close to the neck with a double, well-fitting collar, and have the length to protect from wind and cold. Plenty of style and snap. Some are made of plain fabrics and others are handsome patterns in plaids and stripes. Good overcoats for any purpose. E. L. DRIDGES

"I'll tell you if you'll appoint an investigator."

"I'll come, too," began Belwether, who had been listening, loose mouthed and intent. "We're all in it—Howard, Kemp Fernall and I."

"An Stephen," observed Plank, as mildly that Quarrier never even raised his eyes to read the stolid face opposite.

"I'll tell you," said Quarrier, "Do you know anybody who can deliver you any considerable amount of Amalgamated Electric at the market figures?"

"I could deliver you several blocks, if you care to bid," said Plank bluntly.

Belwether grew red, then pink. Quarrier stiffened in his chair, but his eyes were only skeptical. Plank's under lip had begun to protrude again.

He swung his massive head back, and looked at Belwether.

"Pool or no pool," he continued, "I'm not going to bid. Amalgamated people will want to see the stock chain back into the branches."

"I could deliver you several blocks, if you care to bid," said Plank bluntly.

"I propose to put it there. That is all I had meant to say to you, Mr. Quarrier. I'm not averse to saying it here to you, and I do. There's no secrecy about it. Figure it out for yourself how much stock I control and who let it go. Settle your family squabbles and put your house in order, then invite me to call and I'll do it. And I have an idea that we are going to stand on our own feet again and recover our self respect and our fighting capacity, and I rather think will stop this holding business and that our Intercounty ticket will let go the sand bag and racket the Jimmy and talk business across the line fence."

Quarrier's characteristic pallor was no index to his feelings, nor was his lip reflexes. All he might be boiling below.

"When anybody gave Quarrier a letter to read he looked at it and read it, but if he was slow he was also minute. He went over every word again and again, studying, absorbing each letter, each period, the conformation of every word. And when he ended he had in his brain a photograph of the letter which he would never forget.

And now, slowly, minutely, methodically, he was going over and over Plank's words, and his manner of saying them, and their import, and the hidden sense, if any.

If Plank had spoken the truth—and there was no reason to doubt it—Plank had quietly acquired a controlling interest in Amalgamated Electric. That meant treachery in somebody. Who? Probably Sward, perhaps Belwether. He would not look at the latter just yet; not for a minute or two. There was time enough to see through that withered, old and white old fraud. But why had Plank done this? And why did Plank suspect him of any desire to wreck his own property? He did suspect him, that was certain.

"After a silence he spoke quietly and without emotion.

"Everbody concerned will be glad to see Amalgamated Electric declaring dividends. This is a shock to me," he glanced impatiently at the shrunken major, "but a glorious shock. I think it well to arrange a meeting as soon as possible."

"Tomorrow," said Plank, with a number of closing discussions. And in his brusque ending of the matter Quarrier detected the ringing undertone of an authority he never had and never would endure. If Plank suspected him, he must also suspect him of complicity in the Intercounty grab. He must suspect him of the ruthless crushing power that corrupts or annihilates opposition, making a mockery of legislation, a jest of the courts and an epitaph of a people's indignation.

As Quarrier then, the meeting, his long white fingers encircling his soft, pointed beard, Sylvia came in, greeting the men collectively with a nod and offering her hand to Plank.

"Dinner is announced," she said. "Please go in farm fashion. Wait!"

As Plank, following the major and Quarrier, stood aside for her to pass.

"No, you go ahead, Howard, and you," to the major.

Left for a moment in the room with Plank, she stood listening to the others descending the stairs, then:

"Have you seen Mr. Sward?"

"Yes," said Plank.

"What is he well?"

"Not very."

"Is he well enough to read a letter and to answer one?"

"Oh, yes; he's well enough in that way."

"I supposed so. That is why I said to you, over the wire, not to trouble him with my request."

"You mean that I am not to say anything about your offer to buy the hammer?"

"No. If I make up my mind that I want the horse I'll write him—perhaps."

"Lingering still, she let one hand fall on the banisters, turning back toward Plank, who was following.

"I understood you to mean that that Mr. Sward's financial affairs were anything but satisfactory?" she asked, trailing upward indignation making it a question.

"What did I say that?" demanded Plank.

"Once— a month ago."

"I didn't," said Plank bluntly.

"Oh, I had inferred it, then, from something you said or something you were silent about. Is that it?"

"I don't know."

"An getting wrong then?" she asked, looking him in the eyes.

And Plank, who never lied, found no answer. Considering him for a moment in silence, she turned again and descended the stairs.

"This dinner was one of those thoroughly-well chosen dinners of few courses and faultless service—suitable for card players, who neither care to stuff themselves as a preliminary to a battle royal, nor are they themselves, eliminating for themselves what is not good for them. The major drank a light, sound, aromatic Irish of the major's; the women—except Marion, who had the man looked—used claret sparingly. Coffee was served where they sat; the men smoked Agatha and Marion produced their own cigarettes.

"I don't care if you are ready we will go through the ceremony of cutting for partners—unless otherwise you decide. How say you?" said Sylvia.

"I don't care to enter the scramble for a man called Grace. If it's to be a chase, I'll as soon choose Marion."

Plank looked at Lella, who laughed.

"All right; choose, then," said Sylvia.

"Howard, you're dying of course, to play with me, but you're looking very glibly at Agatha."

The major asked Lella at once, so Plank felt for Sylvia, pitted against Marion and Grace Fernall.

A few moments later the quiet of the library was broken by the rattle of cards entering with decanters and ice and glasses that thickled frostily.

May began at table No. 1 on a passed mink of no trumps by Sylvia, and at the other table of a doubled and redoubled heart make, which sent a delicate flush into Agatha's face and drove the last vestige of lingering thoughtfulness from Quarrier's leaving it a tense, pale, expressionless mask, out of which looked the veiled fringed eyes of a woman.

Of all the faces there at the two tables Sylvia's alone had not changed, neither assuming the gambler's mask nor the infatuated glare of the amateur. She was thoughtful, excited, delighted or dismayed by turns, but always wholesomely so, the game for its own sake and not the stakes absorbing her; partly because she had never permitted herself to weigh money, and pleasure in the same balance, but kept a mental pair of scales for each.

As usual, the fever of play was fiercest in those who could afford to lose most. Quarrier, playing to rule with merciless precision, coldly exacted every penalty that a lapse in his opponents permitted. Agatha, her teeth set in her necker, her eyes like living jewels, answered Quarrier's every signal, interpreted every slight, her play fitting in exactly with his, as though she were the subconscious self balancing the partly hidden mechanism of his body and mind.

Now and then lifting her eyes she sent a long, limpid glance at Quarrier like a pale shaft of light, and under his heavy fringed brows at moments his level gaze encountered hers with a slow narrowing of lids—as though there was more than one game in progress, more than one stake being played for under the dull rose glow of the quartered light.

The color of diamonds and aquamarines illumined the reflection of shadowy lightning across her throat. A single splendid jewel glowed on her hand as her fingers shuffled among the cards for the minkup.

"A hundred aces," broke in Plank's heavy voice as he played the last trick and picked up the scoring card and pencil.

Once Marion, overintent, touched a card in the dummy when she should have played from her own hand, and Sylvia would have let it pass had not Plank calmly noted the penalty.

"Oh, dear! It's too much the business," sighed Sylvia. "Can't we play for the sake of the sport? I don't think it good sportsmanship to profit by a blunder."

"That," observed Marion laconically. "Ware barred wife if you want the brush."

"I myself never was crazy for the brush," murmured Sylvia.

Grace whispered intelligently, "But you've got to hand me in those diamonds and put 'em, and her mischievous hand barely tipped backward in the direction of Quarrier.

"Especially the mask," returned Sylvia under her breath and hid on the table the least of a Y. K. Ferguson.

Toward midnight Sylvia, absorbed in her dummy, fancied she heard the electric bell ringing at the front door. Later, having barely made the add, she was turning to walk to the major when, beyond her, she saw Larry Mortimer enter the room, sullen, pasty skinned, but perfectly sober and well groomed.

"You are a trifle late," observed Sylvia carelessly. "Mr. Fernall and Marion ignored him. Plank bade him good evening in a low voice.

The people at the other table, having completed their rubber, looked around at Mortimer in disagreeable surprise.

"I'll cut in if you want me. If you don't, say so," observed Mortimer.

It was plain that they did not, so he settled himself in an armchair with an ugly glance at his wife and an unpleasant one at the guest. "You've got to be in silence, Letta and the man's still looting heavily under the encroaching gaze of Mortimer.

"At last, 'who's carrying you?' he broke out, exasperated. "You've made a movement, to rise, but Quarrier laid his long finger across her arm, pressing her backward.

"You don't know what you're saying," he remarked, looking coldly at Mortimer.

"Plank laid down his cards, rose and walked over to Mortimer.

"May I have a word with you?" he asked bluntly.

"You may. And I'll help myself to a word or two with you," retorted Mortimer, following Plank out of the room, down the stairs to the lighted reception room, where they wheeled, coasting on one another's heels.

"What is the matter?" demanded Plank. "At the club they told me you were asleep in the card room. I didn't tell Letta. What is wrong?"

"I'm dead broke," said Mortimer harshly. "Billy Fleetwood took my paper. Can you help me out? It's due tomorrow."

"Plank looked at him gravely, but made no answer."

"You may," repeated Mortimer violently. "Haven't I done enough for you? Haven't I done enough for everybody? Is anybody going to Quarrier's manner to me just now?"

"And this very day I did him a service that all his millions can't repay. And there you stand, too, staring at me as though I were some impertinent shabby fellow hitting around for an opening to touch you. Yes, you got. And this very day I have done for you the most vital thing—the most sacred favor a one-man can do for another."

"He halted, stammered, something incoherent, his battered eyes wet with tears. The man was a wreck—nerves, stamina, mind on the very verge of collapse.

"I'll help you, of course," said Plank, giving him. "Go home now and sleep. I tell you I'll help you in the morning. Don't give way. Have you no grit? Pull up sharp, I tell you!"

But Mortimer had fallen into a chair, his ravaged face cradled in his hands. He began to rattle and even to bludge weakly, pushing his puffy, shaking hands across his eyes.

"It's good of you, however. I appreciate it. But I've been good to you. You're all to thank, aren't you? Understood? All to the good. I fixed it. I did it for you. You can have your things now. You can have her when you want her, I tell you."

"What do you mean?" said Plank menacingly.

"Mean? I mean what I told you that day at Black Falls, when we were riding. I told you you had a chance to win out. Now the chance has come—mine's I told you. Start in, and by this time you're ready to say 'When?' she'll be there with the bottle."

"I don't think you are perfectly sane yet," said Plank slowly.

"Not a bit of it," sniggered Mortimer, struggling to his feet. "Bring Letta back. I'm all in. I'm going home. You'll be around in the morning. Won't you?"

"Yes," said Plank. "Have you got a car?"

Mortimer had one. The glass and iron doors clanged behind him, and Plank, venting a moment, glanced, raised his head and, encountering the curious gaze of a servant, traded off upstairs again.

The game had ended at both tables. Quarrier and Agatha stood by the window together, conversing in low voices. Plank, at a desk, set out cards and fanning with a check book. The others were in Sylvia's apartments.

A few moments later Kemp Ferrall arrived in the best of spirits, very much inclined to consider the night as still young, but his enthusiasm met with no response, and presently he departed with his wife and Marion in their big car.

Letta, in her wraps, emerged in a few moments, looking at Plank out of nervous eyes, and they made their brief adieu and went away in Plank's brougham.

When Agatha's maid arrived Quarrier also started to take his leave. Sylvia, seated at a card-table, lay arranging the cards in geometrical designs and fanciful arabesques, looked up at him, saying:

"I wanted to say something to you, Howard."

Agatha passed them, going into Sylvia's room for her wraps, and Quarrier turned to Sylvia.

"Well?" he said, with the slightest hint of impatience.

"Can't you stay a minute?" asked Sylvia, surprised.

"Agatha is going in the motor with me. Is it anything important?"

She considered him without replying. She had never before detected the manner, that hardness in a voice always so even in quality.

"What is it?" he repeated.

She thought a moment, putting aside for the time his manner, which she could not comprehend. "Then—"

"I wanted to ask you a question—a rather ignorant one perhaps. It's about your Amalgamated Electric company. May I ask it, Howard?"

"After a second's stare, 'Certainly,' he said.

"It's only this: If the other people—the intercom, I mean—are glowing Amalgamated, why don't you 'top it'?"

Quarrier's eyes narrowed. "Oh! And how have you been discussing the matter with—"

"Mr. Plank," he said stupidly. "I asked him. He shook his head and said I'd better ask you. And I do so."

For a moment he stood mute. Then his lips began to thrink back over his beautiful teeth in one of his rare laughs.

"I'll be very glad to explain it some day," he said, but there was no mirth in his voice or eyes, only the sickening lip wrinkling the pallor.

"Will you not answer now?" she asked.

"No, not now. But I desire you to understand it some day—some day before November. And one or two other matters that it is necessary for you to understand. I want to explain them, Sylvia, in such a manner that you will never be likely to forget them. And I mean to. For they are never out of my mind, and I wish them to be as ineffaceably impressed on yours. Good night."

He took her limp hand almost brutally, released it and stepped down the stairs as Agatha entered, clothed, to say good night.

They kissed at parting—"the embracing death"—said Mortimer and observed on a similar occasion. Then Sylvia, gliding, in her bedroom, hands linked behind her, her lovely head bent, groping with the very ghosts of thoughts which staked her, feeling, vanishing, reappearing to peep out at her only to fade into nothing ere she could follow where they lit through the dark labyrinths of memory.

The major, craning his neck in the bay window, saw Agatha and Quarrier enter the big yellow motor and disappear behind the luncheon. And it worried him horribly, because he knew perfectly well that Quarrier had lied to him about a jeweled collar precisely like the collar worn by Agatha Calliwell, and what to do or say to anybody on the subject was for the first time in his life utterly beyond his capacities.

Another matter. He had violated his word and had been caught at it by his prospective nephew-in-law—broken his pledged word not to sell his Amalgamated stock, but he had done it. Yet how could Plank dominate unless another also had done what he had done? And it made him a little more comfortable to know he was sharing the fault with somebody—probably with Seward, whom he now had the luxury of despising for the very thing he himself had done.

"Drunkard!" he muttered to himself. "I'm in the gutter at last."

"I'm in the gutter at last," he muttered, almost reconciled to his own shortcomings, because it was the first time, as far as he knew, that a Belvedere might legitimately enjoy the pleasures of holding the word of a Seward in contempt.

Sylvia had dismissed her maid, the old feeling of distaste for the touch of another had returned since the last mad, crushed sentence in Seward's news had become again a memory. Now blue eyes dreaming under the bright masses of her loosened hair, she sat watching the last glimmer amid the ashes whitening on the hearth, thinking of Seward and of what had been between them and of what could never be—never, never be!

One red spark among the ashes—her ambition, deathless amid the ashes of life. When that, too, went out life must be extinct.

What he had romped in her had died when he went away. It could never awaken again unless he returned to awaken it. And he never would. He would never come again.

One brief interlude of love, of passion, in her life could neither tint nor stain the cool, normal sequence of her days. All that life held for a woman of her caste had gone—the moment when she stretched out her hand for it—hers by right of succession, of descent; hers by warrant unquestioned, by the unuttered text of the ukase to be launched if necessary, by that very, very old lady, devious, entrenched, as the endless peasant would like a jeweled river at her feet.

So Seward could never come again, scattering toward her through the night, snuffing his absent snuff. She caught her breath painfully, straightening up. A single ash fell in the fire. The last spark went out.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

THE park was very muddy and damp and still that February morning. Far away on the wooded bridge path the dulled double gallop of horses sounded, low muffled in a hollow, now higher, jarring the rising ground, nearer, heavier.

Then suddenly checked to a trample, as Sylvia drew her horse by the reins and, straightening in her saddle, raised her flushed face to the sky.

"Rata!" she asked as Quarrier, controlling his beautiful, restive horse, turned up alongside of her.

To die up with is the work of a scavenger and should not be usurped by political candidates.

This week the last despairing effort of the Democratic papers in the line of mud-slinging may be expected. Get under cover!

The amount of howl going up from the Democracy about President Roosevelt battling in politics shows that the "big side" has not lost its impressiveness.

The unanimous opinion of the business men who contributed toward getting the carnival here could be expressed by one word, "stun." The whole amount contributed can be safely placed on the loss side of the ledger and charged to experience. The thing to do now is to commence early and get things lined up for the best county fair in the state for next year.

It isn't often that a man's political opponent will speak a good word for him during the campaign, but Mr. Sweeley's ability as an attorney seemed to have made an impression on the Democratic candidate for state senator and he launched into a glowing account Tuesday night of the great amount of money which Mr. Sweeley is getting from his business each year. That's the truth! "The people of the tract need a good able attorney in the senate."

The value of a good honest business man in the office of assessor should not be underestimated by the voters. George E. Harlan of Ingham, fills that description to the fullest extent and the taxpayers will get a square deal from him every time. Mr. Harlan is a heavy taxpayer and has repeatedly expressed himself in favor of an economical administration. He proposes to run the business for the county if elected, with the same degree of care that he would give to his own affairs. Vote for him.

The opposition to M. J. Sweeley on the part of some of the Anti-Saloon League is very hard to understand in the light of Mr. Sweeley's well-known reputation for being a good citizen in his private and public life. Not another candidate on either ticket could be said to stand higher in this community than does Mr. Sweeley. Where he is known Mr. Sweeley is recognized not only as a man of blameless character, but one who always stands for what is right and for the public good. The Republican party has also placed the local option plank in its platform and Mr. Sweeley has sworn to support that platform. Just how the Anti-Saloon League can suffer by his election is a difficult question for some of the voters in this community.

The general idea prevalent in the west is that the genuine booster is the man who gets out and peddles his air and for that reason the men who stick to their business and work every day of the year to build the country by industry and push, are shunted to the background while the more windy and shallow man is set up as the real article. An example of the real booster in this community is W. H. Eldridge of the Eldridge Clothing Company. Mr. Eldridge never peddles "hot air" but for reliable information—and conservative judgment—the prospective investor can get the best there is going. If any public in-provement is on foot the pioneer clothing man is always ready to stand his share of the expense. If anything worth while is to be obtained by active work, Mr. Eldridge is ever to the fore with good solid effort. It is to men of this stamp that the city of Twin Falls owes its growth and success and not to the wind jammers.

Tom Newbery, the Republican candidate for county commissioner, is probably as well known to the voters of this county as any candidate on either ticket and he stands as high with all of the people who know him. While employed by the water company as a ditch rider, Mr. Newbery retained the respect of the ranchers in every instance and has shown throughout his residence that he believes in a square deal and that no personal interest can swerve him from his duty. This is the man who is asking for the votes of the people of this county for one of the most important offices in the county. If he secures the office it is a mortal clutch that the interests of the taxpayers will be looked after with the honesty with which he deals with his neighbors during his duties as water master. Mr. Newbery is a shrewd business man and farmer, too, and has been very successful in conducting his own business affairs so that he is regarded all over the county as one of the solid taxpayers. Mr. Newbery originated from the same state as Tatt and like him is making a great run, due to his popularity with his neighbors, who are boosting his candidacy with all their might. When a man's neighbors will speak a good word for him while running for office it is a pretty good criterion for the rest of the county. Vote for him and help to give this county a good business administration.

IN A GLASS HOUSE.
Inasmuch as Judge J. E. Davies has referred to the records of the county to prove that M. J. Sweeley, candidate for state senator, was attorney for the Twin Falls Land & Water company, the Times has taken the pains to look up the records and finds that Judge Davies is attorney for the Twin Falls-Shoshone Land & Water company, a corporation, and that he is foreclosing a mortgage against a contractor engaged on that project on behalf of that water company. M. J. Sweeley, the "terrible corporation man" is defending the contractor. When you throw stones Judge, be careful you do not reside in a glass house.

REDUCTION IN GRAZING RATES FOR SHEEP ON THE NATIONAL FORESTS.

Following out a statement made a year ago at the meeting of the National Wool Growers' association in Salt Lake City, Clifford Pinchot, forester, and A. F. Potter, assistant forester in charge of the branch of grazing in the United States forest service, have just announced a reduction of 10 to 15 per cent in the rates for sheep grazing on the national forests of the west. The general reduction in the schedule of grazing rates will take effect for the coming season of 1909. The changes in market conditions which have made the sheep business less profitable this past year, especially in the greatly reduced prices offered for wool and the depreciation in the value of mutton, make the announcement of great interest not only to those who are interested in the sheep business, but to the men of every allied industry. In 1907, when the prospect for a reduced schedule were made, it was with the understanding between the stockmen and the forest service that the grazing rates would not be changed for minor fluctuations in the market which would naturally occur from year to year, but would apply only in case of radical or unusual changes.

The new schedule does not affect the cases where the minimum charge of 5 cents per head has already been allowed or a specially low rate has been fixed on account of some local condition. In most cases the revised fees will mean a reduction of about one cent per head.

In fixing the rates for grazing by different kinds of stock, the local conditions, the effect of grazing by different kinds of stock on forest growth, the demand for the use of range by owners of different kinds of stock, the needs of the homesteader, and the profits of the business have been taken into consideration.

M. N. Pomeroy, who was one of the trustees of the Grand Lodge of Twin Falls lodge No. 23, was honored by the grand body with the office of Grand Herald.

J. P. Holohan, the crack trap shooter from Twin Falls, was in the city Thursday on business. He is traveling representative—Pocatello Tribune.

Mrs. Sidney Venable, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Berry, has been in the city for the last ten days nursing her mother, who is now rapidly recovering. She left for her home in Ketchikan Saturday evening.

John W. Easton, one of the prominent business men of Boise, was in Twin Falls Saturday on business. He reports the Inier-Mountain fair that was held in the capitol city a grand success in spite of the bad weather that prevailed the first two days.

L. A. Inkster of Spokane, Washington, arrived in Twin Falls Friday to look after his interests here. Mr. Inkster is interested in some of the Twin Falls tract dirt, and makes a visit about once every six months to see how things are progressing.

Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Westenhaver and Mrs. H. W. Westenhaver of Boise, left Tuesday evening for Twin Falls, where the Mesdames Westenhaver will spend the winter. Mr. Westenhaver will leave there for Placerville, where he has accepted a position in one of the mines—Filer Files.

John Graff, one of the prominent ranchmen of the Filer neighborhood, was in Twin Falls Saturday on business. Mr. Graff says that the threshing has not all been completed in his part of the country, but that it will not be many days until the grain is all in sacks.

Perry Miller, who was taken to a Salt Lake hospital sometime ago to undergo a very serious operation, is reported to be home in about three weeks, which will be welcome news to his friends in this city. The doctors in Salt Lake where Mr. Miller is, claim that it is the only operation of that nature that the patient has survived, that has ever come under their observation.

Judge E. A. Walters was recently honored by an invitation tendered him by the board of county commissioners of Twin Falls county, to accompany them on a tour of inspection covering the principal points of the county as the guest of Twin Falls county. The people of that county recently voted bonds for the building of a fine court house in Twin Falls and the county commissioners will inspect the county court houses in many of the important cities of the county before deciding on plans and specifications for the new building in Twin Falls. It is to be regretted that Judge Walters' time is occupied by official duties in his district that he was compelled to forego the pleasure of the trip—Shoshone Journal.

Attorney M. J. Sweeney returned Friday on his home, where he had been on legal business.

G. H. Grayford of the Miller-Perline Lumber company of Buhl, was in the county seat Monday on business.

R. N. Trall, one of the bustling real estate men of Jerome, was in town the first of the week on business.

Alfred Olden left Tuesday for the Salmon river where he has accepted a position with a surveying crew.

J. J. Fieko of Milledgeville, Ill., arrived in the city Friday to visit for a while with his daughter, Mrs. S. S. Nehor.

R. M. McCollum departed Monday for Boise on business for a few days. He expects to return the last of the week.

Duncan Cameron, representing the Idaho Paper company of Boise, was in the city Tuesday calling on the paper trade.

W. D. Garlock returned Monday from Shoshone where he has been visiting with his family since the Kluge Hill opening.

Mr. H. H. Hill, who is connected with the North Side company, with headquarters at Jerome, spent Sunday in town, visiting with friends.

P. H. Holohan came in Friday from a number of six weeks in the interest of the DuPont Powder company, which he is representative for the northwest.

Dr. Hilkington returned last week from Kirkville, Mo., where he was attending to the time spent by the illness of his daughter, who has since recovered her health.

Mr. and Mrs. C. U. Moles returned Saturday from Boise where Mr. Moles was a representative of Twin Falls at the grand lodge of O. O. F. convention in the capitol city last week.

John Peters, candidate on the Republican ticket for sheriff, returned Friday from Boise where he was attending to the duties of his office. He is a delegate from the Twin Falls lodge.

Hon. E. O. Stocklander of Halley, Democratic nominee for U. S. senator, was in the city—the first of the week last week. He is surrounded by friends and looking into the Democratic politics.

Mrs. Amanda L. Wann and her son Frank, relatives of W. O. Wann and Frank Barton, an old neighbor, are in the city. They are "double" and will return here to make his home as soon as the water is on the land.

The Times office wishes to thank Mrs. Cady for the present of a fine large watermelon which was left in the city. The Grand Lodge of Twin Falls tract can rightly be called the largest tract when melons can be picked the last of October.

G. M. Dawey of Albion, accompanied by D. A. Doney of Sloux City, Ia., left for the city on Monday. They are in the city and expressed themselves as being highly pleased with the rapid growth that this new and wonderful country country is making.

James Young, aged 55 years, died in the city Monday afternoon. The funeral services were held at the arrival of a sister from North Vernon, Ind., who arrived here Sunday. The funeral services were held from Miller's chapel Monday with interment in the Twin Falls cemetery.

Col. Thomas R. Hamer, Republican candidate for congress, will speak in the rink Saturday evening, October 31, at 8 o'clock. Music will be furnished by the Twin Falls Glee club and the Twin Falls band. Col. Hamer has a reputation of being one of the best speakers in the country and should be given a large audience.

J. M. Hale, one of the best real estate men of Jerome, was in Twin Falls over Sunday and reports things looking at a lively rate in the North Side. The real estate men are going every where and as soon as water is on the tract they expect a good healthy boom. The North Side is the best place in Lincoln county.

E. H. Butler of Rock Creek, was in the city Monday on business. Mr. Butler came to the Twin Falls tract about one year ago from Colorado, purchased the tract from the state, but in some manner the boys were informed that it was the residence of Police Judge Smith on Main avenue and they went to look it up. It was found to be a lot of land and the boys did not need to be extinguished. Then the lot was bought by the use of the telephone found out where the tract was located, but it had been put out with but very little damage.

To comply with a recent ruling of the state board of health, it is necessary to use a reliable material such as turpentine and gasoline, that is shipped, must bear a red label, a part of the label being a red cross. Notice to callaway employees, Caution, Inflammable Liquid, Keep away from fire, stoves, lanterns, lights, etc. Do not use in direct sunlight. This ruling does not include refined oils or kerosene—Ex.

The fire department had a call last Saturday morning to a small blaze two blocks from the city limits, but in some manner the boys were informed that it was the residence of Police Judge Smith on Main avenue and they went to look it up. It was found to be a lot of land and the boys did not need to be extinguished. Then the lot was bought by the use of the telephone found out where the tract was located, but it had been put out with but very little damage.

For Sale, Cheap, or Trade—80 acres 5 miles south of Twin Falls, Salmon tract; 150 acres of ideal stock farm, North Side. Deaver property for Twin Falls residence or close acreage. George Varman, Donner Cove, Oct 29-11-12 p.m.

THE CLARKE MEETINGS. The Clarke Family Evangelists, who have been announced for some time to begin a revival in Twin Falls, have concluded to hold their first meeting on Wednesday evening. Miss Ruth Drollinger, whose picture with those of the Clarke Family are given in this week's issue of the Times, and Miss Clarke with the music. Dr. D. A. Stevens, also a fine musician and preacher, is here to assist them in the services.

The first service was a splendid success in every way, and indicates a revival in the city. The meeting at the Christian tabernacle is not in a very public place and the meeting last week, comes with them to the church, still there was a good audience of five hundred to listen to the masterly discourse from the text, "One thing thou lackest." Another inspiring feature of the service was the music. Miss Clarke and Miss Drollinger—both smart women that added greatly to the spirit of the service. For a beginning service the chorus was a surprise. Miss Clarke had sixteen voices to lead in the songs. Within a few days the chorus will probably be increased to one hundred.

The Christian tabernacle, located on Main avenue three and one-half blocks from the city limits, is a union temple. The building is well lighted and is fitted up to comfortably seat nearly one thousand people. The services will be held every evening at 7:30 except Monday. Sunday evening's meeting will be held in the morning. Contributions which all churches are invited to participate. Evangelist Clarke will deliver the address.

POULTRY ASSOCIATION MEETING. The Twin Falls County Poultry Association met at the Commercial club room in Twin Falls, on Saturday, November 1st, at 2 p. m. Special business is to come before the association and to elect officers for the coming year. Mrs. H. F. McPherson, Secy.

New Stock of Shoes. The Fourth Street shoe store is receiving a large new stock of shoes for men, women and children, which makes a valuable addition to their large stock. The Fourth store should make a great shoe market with their reputation for good merchandise and their superior service. Goods always stand behind their goods.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church is a union temple. The building is well lighted and is fitted up to comfortably seat nearly one thousand people. The services will be held every evening at 7:30 except Monday. Sunday evening's meeting will be held in the morning. Contributions which all churches are invited to participate. Evangelist Clarke will deliver the address.

A FINE DODGER. Carol's grandpa had served in the Civil war, and Carol liked to hear of the many battles in which he had fought. One day, after listening to the vivid recital of many heroic deeds, Carol said: "Grandfather, you went through all those battles?" "Yes," "And the shot and shell fell all around you?" "And soldiers were falling and dying everywhere?" "Well, grandfather, what a fine dodger you must have been!" The September Delinquent.

WHAT HELEN WOULD DO. Mamma and baby Randall, in his high chair, sat at the breakfast table, their backs to the fire. The room was not very warm. Little Helen, aged four years, sat beside her father at the other end of the table. Silverly, she said: "Daddy, is cold?" "It was a mamma I would like my hair in my lap, and if I had a little girl about the size of me I'd let her sit where Randall is." The September Delinquent.

To the Voters of Twin Falls County

Here are some significant statistics: During the first three months of 1908 there has been a decrease in the internal revenue receipts of the government greater than has occurred at any other time during the last fifty years. In January the decrease on whiskey was $475,523.65; and on beer $292,586.71. In February the whiskey decrease was $1,184,867.01, and on beer $187,369.56. March shows this decrease: Whiskey, $1,151,210.25; and beer, $187,369.56—which makes a total decrease of $4,559,741.88, on the production of these two items for the quarter.

Of course the distillers and brewers do not like this. But the decent folk do. It shows that prohibition does prohibit after all, doesn't it, Mr. Distiller and Mr. Brewer?

I wish you would take the above figures and sit down to your desk and do a little figuring. Figure up the cost of the liquor to the consumer, of what has been saved, and figure how many tracts the size of Twin Falls tract this money would build. Then figure how many homes this would make; then close your eyes and see if you could imagine the number of homes and the amount of good that would be done if all this liquor money could be turned into legitimate and righteous work. Then go to the polls and vote as your conscience tells you to.

Yours respectfully, W. J. CALKINS

Anti-SALOON League

- We endorse the following candidates for officers in Twin Falls county:
- For Senator: M. J. SWELLEY
 - For Representative: C. W. DYER
 - For Prosecuting Attorney: W. P. GUTHRIE
 - For Probate Judge: JAMES SHIELDS
 - For Commissioner, 1st District: T. N. NEWBERRY
 - For Commissioner, 2nd District: C. A. McMASTER
 - For Commissioner, 3rd District: W. P. SHINN

At last! With all this gain in Prohibition territory, there should be some decrease in the consumption of whisky, or much of the force of the anti-saloon appeal is lost. And it has come. During the fiscal year ending June 30, the loss of revenue on distilled liquors was nearly sixteen million dollars, indicating a decrease of over fourteen million gallons in the production of spirituous liquors, a little more than ten per cent of the output for the preceding year. The report of the commissioner of internal revenue shows that the production of beer, ale, etc., was slightly larger last year, less than one half of one per cent. Let us hope that this small gain, which in the face of the increase of population is even smaller than it appears to be, may be the forerunner of a net and appreciable decrease.

JEROME HAPPENINGS.

Jerome, Oct. 24th, 1908.

Eugene Newell returned to Jerome Monday after a six weeks' trip to Portland, Seattle, Spokane and other western cities.

The representative for the Western Lumber Co. has spent the last four or five days in Jerome, getting things ready for the opening of the new lumber yard here. They are waiting now for the arrival of the lumber, and as soon as they receive their supply will be ready to do business.

Mr. Ostrander, of the Ostrander & Reed Lumber Co., left Jerome Thursday morning. He intends to make a business trip to Portland and other Oregon cities, where he will purchase a supply of lumber. The above named company has the contract for furnishing building material for the new hotel, and many other building now in the course of construction, and the demand for lumber is increasing every day.

H. L. Owens, who spent several days visiting on the western coast, returned to Jerome Wednesday. He reports having had a very pleasant trip, but was glad to get back to Jerome. "It's only natural."

Mr. Carter, a young lawyer of Pittsburg, arrived in town Wednesday, and intends to locate here. He will first open a real estate office, and later a law office. Mr. Carter spent several days in different towns, Wendell, Gooding and Milner, and as a final choice chose Jerome as being the liveliest and most prosperous town on the North side.

Rev. C. A. Varnum and family of Shoshone, came to live on their farm two miles north of Jerome, Friday of last week. Mr. Varnum has built a nice two-story house on his farm and is comfortably located there.

Dr. Piper, who passed a successful examination before the state medical board, at Boise, will, after November the first, open an office in a room above the Jerome Drug store. Dr. Piper has secured the confidence of all the people in Jerome, and they will be glad to know that he will remain in their midst.

D. C. McWatters, S. H. Hay and Consulting Engineer A. J. Wiley of Boise, were in town Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Twin Falls, North Side Realty Co., and Mr. Kartke drove to Twin Falls Sunday.

On Sunday morning the Misses Trull, accompanied by Messrs. Graham and Chalm, rode to Wendell on horse back. They returned Sunday evening, and report a very pleasant trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Sturges will leave Tuesday morning for Boise. They go on a pleasure trip in connection with business which they are transacting there. They expect to be gone for about a week.

On Saturday afternoon a party of young folks from Jerome, left for Twin Falls for the purpose of attending the carnival, and ball. They returned Sunday afternoon very much pleased with the good time they had enjoyed.

The new business building located on Main street, just east of the bank, has been completed and made ready for occupancy this week. Mr. Baker has moved in and fixed up things in proper style for his meat market. He is ready now to serve the public in a first-class manner.

R. H. Trull's new store building on Lincoln avenue is nearing completion, and will be occupied some time this week. It adds much to the business part of Jerome.

John F. Schmershall, a physician, has arrived in Jerome, and intends to locate here.

Two four-horse loads of machinery for the printing office arrived in Jerome Friday. This begins to look like business, and the people are anxiously awaiting the first issue of the "North Side News," which will probably appear not later than November 1st.

Last week a party of Oregon Short Line surveyors spent a few days in Jerome. They have been surveying for a main line run from Milad City to Rupert and Gooding.

The Jerome Drug Co. has lately ordered a number of phonographs, and these phonographs are greatly appreciated by the people of Jerome.

R. B. Haddock of the Haddock Land Co., offices at Shoshone and Gooding, arrived in Jerome week. Mr. Haddock is a graduate from the state of Iowa law school, and has lately been admitted to the bar in Idaho. He will open a real estate office in connection with a law office, and with his shrewd business qualities will, without doubt, be very successful. He has already become a booster for Jerome and will be heartily welcomed into the circle by the business men of Jerome.

On account of the increase in business the Jerome Concrete Co. found it necessary to enlarge their quarters this week. Carpenters are now at work on the building. The Concrete Co. is doing a rushing business, and are there to do it right. They will furnish blocks for the veneering of the Haddock real estate and law office, which will be the first fire-proof building in Jerome.

THE MUSICAL ARTISTS.

Lecture Course Satisfies Proved a Rare Treat.

If the managers of the lecture course, Messrs. Colles and Fisher, have provided as well for the remainder of the course as they have for the first two numbers, the people of this city should accord them the best of support. Last Thursday evening the Four Musical Artists greeted a crowd of house and every number was greeted with a storm of applause. It is seldom that a city of this size has the opportunity to listen to artists like Miss Smith and Messrs. Plouts, Shonert and Carr. The violin selections of Mr. Plouts were a revelation to the music lovers and they repeatedly expressed the sentiment, "Mr. Shonert on the piano in his first selection, 'Rigoletto,' showed that he had the interpretive powers of a master, and his numbers met with a hearty reception. The grand opera selections by the whole company proved to be most welcome. The program given below was
