CITY CALLS FOR BONDS

Council Awaits Wishes of Voters on Improvements.

FIRE PROTECTION TO BE GIVEN ENTIRE CITY FOR $10,000.

Ordinance Calling for Special Election Passed at Monthly Meeting Last Evening. Improvements Asked for Streets.

Last night the council and mayor met in regular session to discuss the many requests on the part of taxpayers for fire protection and improvements in the streets. After viewing the conditions the treasury it was found impossible to spend any more money on improvements out of the general funds, and the council therefore voted to put the matter up to the voters by calling for special election December 15th, to vote $10,000 bonds to purchase suitable fire apparatus and to make such improvements as are deemed necessary to give ample protection to all of the city. At the same time the voters will be asked to vote for $10,000 more to put on crossings and culverts and to otherwise improve the present condition of the streets of the city. It is now up to the taxpayers and the council feels that the demands made upon it for improvements, if absolutely necessary, should be voted and if the voters do not think so, they will have to do so to vote the bonds down. Purchases of street crossings and culverts will be made without such bonds.

ORDINANCE NO. 32.

An ordinance providing for the holding of a special election in the city of Twin Falls, for the purpose of submitting to the qualified electors who are taxpayers thereof, the question of the issuance of municipal coupon bonds in the total amount of $10,000.00 for the following purposes, to-wit: $10,000.00 for the purpose of providing for the establishment, equipment and maintenance of a fire department for said city and the purchase of suitable and necessary apparatus and building therefor. $10,000.00 for the purpose of providing necessary public improvements in said city, consisting of walks, cross-walks, bridges and culverts on the streets and alleys of said city. And to provide for the collection of an annual tax upon the taxable property in the city of Twin Falls, sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds as it falls due and to create a sinking fund for the interest on the principal thereof within twenty years after the date of issuance of the same as they become due.

Be it ordained, that the Mayor and Council of the City of Twin Falls, Idaho:

Section 1.—That a special election of the qualified electors who are taxpayers thereof, of the city of Twin Falls, state of Idaho, shall be held on Tuesday, the 15th day of December, 1908, for the purpose of submitting to the electors the question of the issuance of said bonds in the total amount of $10,000.00, payable within twenty years from date of issuance, redeemable at the pleasure of said city, at any time after the expiration of ten years, bearing interest at a rate not to exceed six per cent per annum, and not more than semi-annually, in an amount not to aggregate to exceed the sum of $20,000.00 and to provide for the levy and collection of an annual tax upon all taxable property in the city of Twin Falls, sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds as it falls due and to create a sinking fund for the payment of the principal thereof within twenty years after ten years from the date thereof, the principal of said bonds to fall due, respectively fall due, for the following purposes, to-wit:—

First.—Municipal coupon bonds to the amount of $10,000.00, to be designated "City of Twin Falls, Fire Department Bonds," to provide for the establishment and maintenance of a fire department for said city and the purchase of suitable and necessary apparatus and buildings for the use thereof.

Second.—Municipal coupon bonds to the amount of $10,000.00 to be designated "City of Twin Falls, Street Improvements Bonds," to provide necessary public improvements in said city, consisting of walks, cross-walks, bridges and culverts on the streets and alleys of said city.

Said bonds or any of them, if authorized by the vote of the qualified electors who are taxpayers thereof, shall be payable in twenty years from the date of issuance, and the interest on the same shall be payable semi-annually, at any time after the expiration of ten years from the date of said issuance, and each bond shall be redeemed in the order it is numbered. Said bonds shall bear interest at a rate not to exceed six percent per annum and shall be paid semi-annually and shall in all respects comply with

UNFORTUNATE SHOOTING.

Martin McMillan Shot White Bent on Halloween Fun.
An accident which marred the Halloween sport for a number of people occurred about 12 o'clock when a number of small boys visited the premises of Paul Robertson and attempted to put a cutting from a wagon and carry it off. Mr. Robertson's premises had been visited once before that evening and he was in the house for the next visit. Mr. Robertson says that he merely wished to frighten the boys and shot toward the crowd but that the bullet must have glanced. At any rate, Martin McMillan, one of the boys in the crowd, received a bullet from the revolver in his left leg just below the thigh and is at the hospital at present, due to recover in a short time. Mr. Robertson explains the accident greatly and has had several times to see his little victim. When visited by the Times reporter Martin told his story candidly and did not seem to think that the shooting was intentional on the part of Mr. Robertson.

Col. Thomas R. Hamer, the next congressman from Idaho, delivered the closing address of the state convention held at Twin Falls last Saturday evening to an audience that taxed the capacity of that building to the utmost and many were unable to gain admission. The address was well received by the large crowd if the frequent applause he received was any criterion. Mr. Hamer proved to be an orator of ability and will no doubt be heard in the coming year at the convention as the congressman from the growing state of Idaho.

EXTEND O. S. L. TO WELLS, NEV.

Minidoka & Southwestern Officials Hold Meeting

ELECTRIC LINE PROPOSED ROUTE RESPONSIBLE FOR ACTIVITY.

At a Meeting in Pocatello Last Week, Officers Vote to Submit Proposed Extension to Stockholders at an Early Date.

It has seemed to be the policy of the O. S. L. to get into every town compelled to do so by the act of competition and it is evident by their sudden activity last week in Pocatello that the Kuba electric extension to Wells has awakened the old time fear. At any rate the officials have decided to put the matter up to Minidoka & Southwestern stockholders. The people of this tract are eagerly awaiting a western outlet for shipping produce but it is hoped that such outlet will be furnished by a competing line rather than by the Harriman road. The following article from the Pocatello Tribune shows that something will be done shortly:

A meeting of the board of directors of the Minidoka & Southwestern Railroad company, subsidiary to the Oregon Short Line, was held this forenoon at the office of the division superintendent of the Idaho division in this city. G. K. Smith, secretary of the company, came up from Salt Lake. The other directors present were W. H. Jones, superintendent of the Montana division of the Short Line, and being superintendent of the Idaho division, during the leave of absence of Superintendent Olmstead, and D. Worth Clark of this city, counsel for the Short Line in Idaho and Wyoming. Plans for an extension of the M. & S. W. from Twin Falls or some convenient point on the line to Wells, Nev., and plans for the Rupert-Fuller cut-off, connecting with the main line, were discussed and approved. That the extension to Wells and the cut-off will be submitted to the stockholders of the company, at a meeting to be held at some early convenient date—Pocatello Tribune.

LATEST RETURNS OF IDAHO.

Brady Elected by Small Plurality. Whole Ticket Carries.

Practically complete returns show Idaho voted for Taft by approximately 18,000; that the plurality of Mr. Brady, Republican, for governor, is about 6,000; that every candidate on the Republican ticket is elected, although some by small pluralities, and that the next legislature will be overwhelmingly Republican.

Every county in Idaho went for Taft and all but Latah for Brady. The southeast went solidly for Taft and Brady, and practically solidly for the Republican legislative candidates.

There were some notable legislative contests. In Blaine county Frank Brady, Republican, was elected senator by 18 votes.

In Fremont county John Hart, Republican, was elected senator by 25 votes.

In Clear Lake county the only Democratic legislator from the southeast.

The present indications are that the following are possible: The governor: Senate: Republicans 12, Democrats 11.
House: Republicans 41, Democrats 12.

This gives the five Nez Perce members of the house to the Democrats, Blaine, Clear Lake, and the governor. Another is also in doubt and it may require the official count to decide it. Other changes in the made on other counties. There is no doubt, however, that the legislature will be overwhelmingly Republican on joint ballot.

The fruit of her imprudence was happiness, until the happiness which lasted for a day. The rain lasted, too for another day, then turned to snow, choking the city with such a fall as had not been seen since the great blizzard.

Sylvia, at her toilette, chin cradled in her lorgnette hand, sat listlessly inspecting her mail.

She turned her head, looking wearily across the room at the brightly burning fire beside which Mrs. Ferrall sat, nibbling salt paste, very serious over one of those books that "everybody was reading."

"What is the matter?" demanded Mrs. Ferrall, withdrawing her finger from the pages and plumping the closed book down on her knee.

"I have been imprudent," said Sylvia in a low voice.

"You mean?" Mrs. Ferrall looked at her keenly—"that he has been more?"

"No, I telephoned him, and I asked him to drive with me."

"Oh, Sylvia, what nonsense! Why on earth do you stir yourself up by that sort of silliness at this late date? What is it? Can't you get litigation? Are you Stephen Steward's keeper?"

"I felt as though I were for awhile. He is ill."

"With an illness that, thank God, you are not going to nurse through life. Don't look at me that way, dear. I'm obliged to speak harshly; I'm obliged to harden my heart to such a monstrous idea."

"Grace, I cannot endure!"

"You must! Are you trying to drag your silly self with romance so you won't recognize truth when you see it? There was no earthly reason why you talk to Stephen. No disinterested impulse moved you. It was a sheer perverse, sentimental tenderness, the delicate, mediocrity devilry of your race. And if that passion is in it you're well for you to know it."

"It is in me," said Sylvia, starting at the fire.

"Then you know what to do for it."

"No, I don't."

"Well, I do," said Grace dolefully, "and the sooner you marry Howard and interpose yourself behind Sylvia, the better off you'll be. That's where, fortunately enough, you differ from your ancestors. You are unable to understand marital treachery. Otherwise you'd make it lively for us all."

"It is true," said Sylvia deliberately, "that I could not be treacherous to anybody. But I am wondering—I am asking myself just what constitutes treachery to myself. I was in love with him, you know."

"You liked him," insisted Grace patiently.

"No; loved him. I know. Dear, your theories are sound in a general way, but when it is a girl going to die about it when she loves a man? Could you tell me?"

"If you marry him," said Mrs. Ferrall quietly, "your life will become a hell."

"Yes. But would it make life any easier for him?" asked Sylvia.

"How to know that you had been dragged down?"

"No; I mean could I do anything for him?"

"No woman ever did. That is a sentimental falsehood of the emotional. No woman ever did help a man in that way. Sylvia, if love were the only question and if you do truly love him, I—well, I suppose I'd be fool enough to advise you to be a fool. Even then you'd be sorry. You know what your future may be. You know what you are fitted for. What can you do but out Howard? In this town your role would be a very minor one without Howard's money, and you know it."

"Yes, I know it."

"And your sacrifice could not help that doomed boy?"

Sylvia nodded assent.

"Then is there any choice? Is there any question of what to do?"

"Sylvia looked out into the winter sky, through the tops of snowy trees. Everywhere the stark, scantly rigidity of winter! Under it, frozen, lay the rain that had scented the air. Under her ambition lay the ghosts of yesterday.

"No," she said, "there is no question of choice. I know what must be."

For a week or more the snow continued. Colder, gleamier weather set in, and the impending menace of Ash Wednesday redoubled the social pace, culminating in the Westervall ball on the eve of the forty days, and Sylvia had not yet seen Steward or spoken to him again across the wilderness of streets and alleys.

In the first relaxation of Lent she had instinctively welcomed an opportunity for spiritual consolation and a chance to take her spiritual fatigue, not because of bodily fatigue, for in the splendor of her youthful vigor she did not know what that meant.

To St. Bernard's she went in cure of her soul. Mortimer stayed out at night very frequently now, also he appeared to have a certain air of a rickety old flogger at his "card killings," because he seldom attempted to bully Lella, being apparently content with his allowance.

Once or twice Plank saw him with an unusually attractive girl belonging to a world very far removed from Lella's. Somebody said she was an actress when she did anything at all.

Sylvia, of course, somewhat celebrated for an actress not too delicate. But Plank was no more interested than any man could afford to be in a girl's prospects by a closer acquaintance with that sort of pretty woman.

Meanwhile Mortimer kept away from home, wife and church, and Plank frequented them, so the two men did not meet with often, and the best they met the less they found to say to one another.

Though the opera was over, theaters unapproachable, formal functions suspended, and dances ended, the season still continued at a discreet and decorous trot, and those who had not fled to California or Palm Beach remained to pray and pray bridge with an unbroken continuity.

And all this while Sylvia had not seen Sylvia.

Sylvia was changing. The characteristic amiability, the sensitive reserve, the sweet composure which the world had always counted on in her, had become exceptional and no longer the rules which governed the caprice and impulse always latent. An indifference so pointed as to verge on insouciance, named it instances at times. A sudden, flushed impatience startled the halitues of her shrine. There was a new, unseeing hardness in her eyes, in her attitude the faintest hint of cynicism. For the first time a slight sense of fear tinged the general admiration.

In public her indifference and growing impatience with Quarrier had not reached the verge of bad taste, but in private she was scarcely at pains to conceal her weariness and inattention. That he noticed it was evident even to her, who carelessly ignored the consequences of her own attitude.

At the McCreane dance given by the Stowa Hunt, Quarrier, who was M. P. II., led the cation with agreeable precision and impersonal accuracy, favoring her at intervals. She returned to town next morning with Grace Ferrall, irritable, sulky, furious with herself. All but with self contempt, she lay back in the comfortably upholstered corner of the limousine, staring straight before her, sulky and mouth responsive to the occasional inconsequent questions of Grace Ferrall.

"After awhile," observed Grace, "people will begin to talk about the discontented beauty of your face."

Sylvia's eyebrows bent still farther inward.

"A fretful face, but rather pretty," commented Grace maliciously. "I won't be, dear. Your role is dignified enough. Oh, dear, Oh, my! She stilled a yawn behind her faintly gloved hand. "Oh, dear, how I do yawn! And Lent only half over! Sylvia, what are you staring at? Oh, I see."

They had driven south to Washington square, where Mrs. Ferrall had desired to leave a note, and were now returning. Sylvia had leaned forward to look at Steward's house, but with Mrs. Ferrall's first word she sank back, curiously expressionless and white, for she had seen a woman entering the front door and had recognized her as Marion Page.

"Well, of all indiscretions!" breathed Grace, looking helplessly at Sylvia.

"She has courage," said Sylvia, very white.

"Courage! Do you mean foolhardiness?"

"No; courage—the courage I lacked. I knew he was too ill to leave his room, and I lacked the courage to go and see him."

"You mean alone?"

"Certainly alone."

"You dare tell me you ever contemplated?"

"Oh, yes. I think I should have done it yet, but—Marion!"

Suddenly she lent forward, resting her face in her hands, and between the fingers a bright drop ran, glistened and fell.

days before with a curt recommendation that he master their contents. The curious persistence of youth in his features seemed unaccountable in view of the heavy marks imprinted there. In every movement, every turn of his head, there still remained much of that indefinable attractive gaze which had always characterized his race—much of the unconscious charm usually known as breeding.

In one of Mortimer's fiercest dispartions produced coarser symptoms—distended veins and sagging flesh—where in Sward it seemed to bruise and burn, driving the color of blood out of him and leaving the pallor of marble and the bluish shadows of it staining the hollows. Only the eyes had begun to change radically; once nothing in them had been quenched.

That he could never hope to become human he had learned at last when he had returned, physically whole, from his long course of training under a famous Irish specialist on the Hudson.

He had been a fool. He had fringed that he could control himself and practice the moderation that other men practiced when they chose. The queer result annoyed him, his impaired facility to master himself afflicted him, the more so because of the he had been so hardy in the remote depths of his heart.

Exactly how it happened he did not remember except that he had gone down to his business and had lunch with several men. There was Clark. Later he remembered another café farther uptown and another night brightly lighted. Gamble had found him again, this time in the street and this time the same ankle, not yet strung, had been broken.

Through the waiting winter days a big brooding bitterness, realizing that it was all to go over again, Plank's shy moods became a permanent part of the routine. But it was many days before Sward perceived in the big lumbering, pink faced man any thing to attract him beyond the faintly amused curiosity of a man-for-murder who in the presence of a fellow being himself in the first of a race.

As for reprobation in other form except the most superficial or of perceiving a personal note to ward one so directly, Sward tolerated it. The whole idea even the tentative nuances of Plank hinting on witlingness and perhaps ability to help Sward in the unaccomplished tangle were pleasantly ignored. Capital service rendered by men like Plank was in itself possible any obligation to Plank was utterly out of the question. Mean while they began to like one another—at least Sward often found himself looking forward with pleasure to visits from Plank. There had never been any question of the latter's attitude toward Sward.

Plank began to frequent the house but never informally. It is doubtful whether he would have pressed to formality in that house event at Sward's invitation.

One very bad night Plank came to the house and was admitted by Gamble. Wanda, the second man, stood behind the door. Both were apparently frightened.

That something was amiss appeared plainly enough, and Plank, instinctively producing a card, dropped it on a table and turned to go. It may have been that the old butler recognized the innate delicacy of the native or it may have been a sudden confidence born of the necessities of the case, for he asked Plank to see his young master.

It was a bad night outside, and it was a bad night for Sward. The master vice had him by the throat. He sat there clenching the arms of his chair, his broken leg in his plaster, coming extended in front of him, and when he saw Plank enter he glared at him.

Hour after hour the two men sat there, the one white with rage, but helpless; the other stolid, inert, deaf to demands for intercession with the arch vice, dumb under pleadings for a compromise. He refused to interfere with the butler, and Sward insulted him. He refused to go and had the decanter himself, and Sward deliberately cursed him.

Once toward morning Sward felt ached and Plank, heavy head on his breast, felt a too. Then Sward bent over stealthily and opened a drawer in his desk, and Plank was on his feet like a flash, jerking the morphine from Sward's fingers.

The doctor arrived at daylight, responding to Plank's summons by telephone, and Plank went away with the morphine and Sward's revolver being in the side pockets of his dinner coat.

He did not come again for a week. A short note from Sward started him toward lower Fifth avenue.

There was little said when he came into the room.

"Hello, Plank! Glad to see you."

"Hello! Are you all right?"

"All right. Much obliged for pulling me through. When you'll pull me through this Amalgamated Electric knothole, too, some day."

"Do—do you mean—?" ventured Plank, turning red with delight.

"Mean it? Indeed I do—if you do sit here. Ring for whatever you want, or perhaps you'd better go down to the sidewalk. I'm not to be trusted with the odor in the room just yet."

"I don't care for anything," said Plank.

"Whenever you please, then. You know the house, and you don't mind my being unceremonious, do you?"

"No," said Plank.

"Good!" rejoined Sward, laughing. "I expect the same friendly lack of ceremony from you."

But that for Plank was impossible. All he could do was to care the work for Sward without crossing the border line so suddenly made free. All he could do was to wait there, rolling and unrolling his gloves into yards with his clumsy, highly colored hands, and gaze consecutively at everything in the room except Sward.

On that day at Plank's shy suggestion they talked over Sward's business affairs for the first time. After that day, and for many days, the subject became the keynote to their inter-ference, and Sward at last understood that this man desired to do him a service absolutely and purely from a disinterested-looking for him and as an expression of that liking; also he was unexpectedly made aware of Plank's secret business success.

As for the quiet pro quo, Sward had listened from the first on a business arrangement. The treachery of Major Belcher through sheer fright had knocked out of Sward from the syndicate, and the dam which made the golden pool possible collapsed, showering Plank's brokers, who worked patiently with him and his maps.

The double treachery of Quarrier was now perfectly apparent to Plank. Sward, true to his word, held his stock in the face of ruin. Kemp Ferrall, furious with the major and beginning to suspect Quarrier, came to Plank for consultation.

Then the defense formed under Plank. Legal machinery was set in motion, meeting followed meeting, until Harrington cynically showed his hand and Quarrier smiled his rare smile, and the fight between Sward and Sward was on in the open, preceded by a furious clamor of charges and countercharges in the columns of the daily press.

That Quarrier had been guilty of something or other was the vague impression of that great news reaching the public, which, stamped by the perforation of figures in the columns, forms to the simpler pleasure of a murder trial. Besides, whatever Quarrier had done was done alone, without the charitable inference of a crime, though probably his shoes may have become a little dusty.

Sward, at his desk, the May sunshine pouring over him, sat counting the beads of his investment, striving to see between the lines some sign of fortune for his investments. Gamble knocked presently. Sward raised his perplexed eyes.

"Miss Ferguson is here."

"Oh!" said Sward doubtfully. Then, "Ask Miss Fargo to come up."

Marion stroiled in a moment later, exclaiming a vigorous hand shake with Sward, pulled up a chair and dropped into it. She was in a white flannel robe, faultlessly groomed, as usual, her smooth pale hair sleek in its thick knot, tulle and its immaculate as her gloves.

"Hello!" she said, "any news of your ankle, Stephen?"

"I inquired about my ankle," said Sward, amused, "and they tell me it is better, thank you?"

"Is it home pretty soon?" she asked, dropping one leg over the other and balancing the riding crop across her knee.

"Not for awhile. You have a fine day for a gallop, Marion," looking after her as she vanished behind the screen through the first green leaves of the tree outside his window.

"It's all right—the day. Where are your cigarettes, Stephen? Oh, I see. Don't let me know when to get in."

She came over the desk, her fresh young face close to his, and reached for the cigarettes. The clean cut head, the sweetness of her youth and femininity, boyish in its allure, were very attractive to him—more so perhaps because of his isolation from the atmosphere of women.

"It's all very well, Marion, your coming here, and it's all very sweet of you, and I enjoy it immensely," he said. "I'm horribly afraid somebody will talk about you."

"What would you do then?"

"I?" he asked, disturbed. "What could I do?"

"Why, I suppose," she said slowly, "you'd have to marry me."

"Then," he rejoined, with a laugh, "I should think you'd be scared into prudence by the prospect."

"I am not frightened," she said gravely.

Gravity fell upon him too. In this young girl's eyes there was no evasion. For a long while he had felt vaguely that matters were not perfect if balanced between them. At moments even he had felt an indefinable uneasiness in her presence. The situation troubled him, too, and though he had known her from childhood and had long ago learned to discount her vagaries of informality, his common sense could not countenance this deduction of social usage, sure to involve even such a privileged girl as she in some unpleasantness.

"I'd be very glad to marry you—if you cared to," she said.

"Marion?"

"Yes!"

"Oh—I'm it—is of course it's a joke."

"No, I'm serious."

"But I—but you don't love—can't be in love with me!" he stammered.

"I am."

It was only a currency question any way. The difference in the size of the two bills.

About ten days from now the politicians will be without occupation unless they get an appropriate plan.

After all of the shouting on the part of the Democrats, there was little to their campaign work but wind, and wind in this section is a cheap asset.

It will take about two years to offset from the minds of the people that the candidates are not the rascals and rogues they have been pictured during the past campaign. If the elections came more frequently some of the perennial candidates would never get entirely furnished from the ledger.

It is hoped that the delayed financial statement of this county will be forthcoming now that the campaign is off the minds of the commissioners and the auditor. The law requires that it be published and the taxpayers should see that it is published in order that the expenditures of the county's money may be accurately known to the people.

The four-fold increase in the Socialist vote in this county is an indication of the rapid spread of the doctrine in the western states, where the natural independence of man is not crushed out by injustice. The eastern states have been for a number of years hounded by the various ideas advanced, and the Debs vote is indicative of the numerical strength of the party. In another four years they will have to be reckoned with as a political asset.

The result of Tuesday's election should be a warning to the Republican machine of this state. The failure of the party in the Republican primaries for state candidates can be attributed to just one thing. People don't want men in state offices who do not measure up to the full responsibility of citizenship. Another election may be needed to convince the Republican leaders that there is an issue above party acclamations. That issue is simply honest administration of the duties to which the state officers pledge themselves. Other issues cannot serve as a cloak for the officials to hide behind and deceive the people.

The refusal of the Republican party to put the direct primary plank in the state platform is to blame to a great extent for the Republican votes that went astray. Another factor for which the party paid a dear price was the blinding of the brewers and liquor dealers up with the Democrats because of local option. The Times fully believes that in this case the voters lost will be compensated by the votes that in two years more will be given them by the independent element, which is getting stronger each year. This element is merely waiting until its strength is sufficient, when it will force either of the two dominant parties to enter the state politics on a strong platform of reform.

The plurality given Hughes in New York state despite the opposition of Wall Street and the tin horns, shows that the people are not so easily tricked away in the minds of the majority of the people is a deep seated love for the square deal and for the man who plays the game like a sportsman. Hughes will now have an opportunity to show more than ever that he is made of presidential stuff. If he is able to cope successfully with one of the deepest rooted evils of his state, it will place him on a footing with Roosevelt and make his nomination imperative in four years. While he does not wield a big stick, yet he has stick-to-it-iveness that accomplishes things, and that is what the American voters want.

THE PRESIDENCY AS A PARTY ASSIST.

President Roosevelt's recent plunge into the partisan warfare of the campaign has raised a question wider than that of its effect upon the political situation. Although rumors that the president would probably take the stump in behalf of Mr. Taft have subsided, the echoes of his epistolary duel with the Democratic candidate are still faintly reverberating through the press, and Independent and Republican as well as Democratic papers are questioning the propriety of his high office being carried into the range of mud-slinging. Mr. Bryan himself protests vigorously against "an office which belongs to the whole people" being used "as a party asset," and even foreign papers comment upon the situation with a considerable show of interest.

"Nothing in this business, has stranger notions," remarks The Westminister Gazette (London), "than the manner in which the president has plunged into the controversy to champion his own party at a time when he might naturally have held himself aloof from the rough-and-tumble of the election fighting." This comment leads the Springfield Republican (Ile.) to point out that neither the French president nor the English king has to play the double role of party leader and head of the nation which is the part of our chief executive. But even in the latter case, adds this paper, "when a President is not nominated to succeed himself, his paragono appiao piao piao oia unpunishment," otherwise, "the presidential office faces its greatest peril of being degraded, in the eyes of at least half of the people, into a mere party asset." "It is strongly felt among all classes of American citizens," asserts the Washington Herald (Ile.), "that the presidential office should not be merely partisan, and that it is an unfortunate misdeed of its powers and influence to devote them to the interests of a particular candidate or party. And the Philadelphia Eagle Ledger (Ile.) claims to find among all Democrats and among a large number of Republicans a feeling that "the president of the United States should not exhibit himself as a party man."—Literary Digest.

THE NIGHT RIDERS.

Two men, well-to-do lawyers, connected with a land company and a fishing club in Tennessee, made a trip last week to look after some property that they owned in the region of Walnut Log. One of them is dead; the other escaped death only by a narrow margin. The people of the neighborhood had been roused by the action of the land company in securing exclusive fishing rights. These people had fished and hunted without interference until the company had secured injunction. They regarded the company and the club as their enemies, undertaking to deprive them of their means of livelihood. The court had held that fishermen must sell their catches to a fish company which had leased the fishing rights from the land company, and the people resented this limitation upon their hitherto unrestricted occupation. The judge who passed upon the issue has been shot at, and, fearing assassination, is said never to sleep at home. Acts of violence have been committed. The climax came when the two lawyers were set upon at midnight by an armed body of men. One of them was hanged to a tree and his body riddled with bullets; the other, in spite of his seventy years, escaped by a race, and was rescued after thirty-six hours in a swamp. This is the latest and most dramatic outrage committed by what are called "night riders." Not long ago a crowd of these lawless cowards in revenge for some act which had roused their unrestrained indignation attacked a man in his house and in cold blood killed him, his wife, and his two children. This happened in Kentucky. Because of discontent with prices and conditions of the market, night riders have been burning cotton plants in Georgia and in Missouri. Indeed, night riders are becoming a menace throughout many parts of the south. One sheriff in Arkansas and another in South Carolina have won honor for themselves and their community by facing mobs of night riders and upholding in their persons the majesty of the law. The night riders first made their conspicuous appearance in the tobacco fields of Kentucky, fighting with vengeance and cowardly violence the Tobacco Trust and the growers who dealt with the trust. The example of these Kentucky night riders has now, as we have said, extended to the growers of cotton and even to the fishermen and post-hunters of the mountains. Civilization is at an end in a democratic community when the masses of the people in that community become imbued with the notion that the way to cure wrong or to secure redress is by private war or assassination. Those people of the south who care most for the good name of the south are most keenly aware of this. Governor Patterson, of Tennessee, has expressed the hope that the governors of Missouri, Mississippi and Alabama may join with Governor Willson, of Kentucky, Governor Gentry, of Arkansas, and himself, representing the states most acutely suffering from this evil, in a conference to decide upon an effective plan of action. What the people of these states need is not criticism, but the sort of sympathy that will hearten those officials who, at no small stake and with a lively sense of responsibility for the lives of citizens, are undertaking to withstand these ignorant and dangerous enemies to order and popular liberty.—Outlook.

Development of Gem State Under Irrigation Causing Interest All Over the Country.

Portland, Nov. 3.—Idaho's magnificent development through irrigation is attracting international attention, but no other city in the United States seems to take such a direct and personal interest in this remarkable advance as is felt by the business men and general citizenship of Portland.

The Portland newspapers have constantly kept their readers advised of the progress that was being made. Among recent guests at the Portland Commercial club was a special delegation composed of Messrs. James McMillan, W. P. Guthrie, John F. Hannon, George L. Crocker and H. T. West, of Twin Falls, Idaho. They visited Portland and other cities to get pointers on the building of a $150,000 country house. No delegation that has honored this city in recent years received more hearty welcome, and all the newspapers contained elaborate accounts of the visit.

Twice during the last two months the most centrally located and the department store of Olds, Wertman & King, at the corner of Fifth and Washington streets, the business center of Portland, have been filled with fruit from Lewiston shown by the Lewiston Land and Water company. The first was a display of peaches which attracted much attention, following this was a most artistically arranged window of grapes, and these were served upon the tables of the Portland Commercial club yesterday to almost 500 business men who assembled for luncheon.

"Idaho is doing her full part toward making the northwest portion of the United States the best known section of the country, and with each succeeding month it is becoming more generally appreciated that her farmers and horticulturists are adding millions of dollars to the wealth of the state and the country at large. Oregon and Idaho are closely allied in the work of irrigating the Snake and Columbia rivers, and probably the most widely quoted meeting held during the last three months, as judged from the newspaper columns, was the recent session of the Idaho and Oregon Development League of Roseburg, Ore.—Vocational Tribune.

OLD SETTLERS LEAVE. Mr. and Mrs. James Beauchamp for Idaho. James W. Beauchamp and wife, after a residence of nearly half a century in Taylor county, have decided to cast their lot in another time and have decided to leave their home and go to Idaho for Twin Falls, Idaho, where they will make their future home.

In 1858 Mr. Beauchamp's parents settled in Boone township, and that who was then a well laid, came with them. It was there he grew to manhood and was married to Miss Alice January, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Huston January, who for years were among the best known residents of the county.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Beauchamp moved to Hopkins where Mr. Beauchamp engaged in the mercantile business. A few years later they returned to town, and Mr. Beauchamp taught school for eight successive and successful terms. They then removed to Bedford where they have since made their home.

Mr. Beauchamp served as county auditor four years, 1895, '97 and '99. Later he was elected city clerk and served in that capacity until he resigned to leave for the west. Mr. Beauchamp takes an active interest in church work, and a better citizen in every way no town ever needed. He is a man of high moral and aggressive type, but he is always active in promoting any enterprise that might redound to the welfare of the community, and is a supporter of any movement for better government and cleaner citizenship. In business affairs his integrity and honesty have been his inescapable traits. Jim Beauchamp is a man with no round corners--he is square in all his dealings with his neighbors. In his new home he will never regret giving him their entire confidence.

Mr. Beauchamp's two sons, Alvin and Homer, have finished their college course, and are now located at Twin Falls--it is this fact that has induced him to move to this city. He has a large amount of stock and it is the intention of himself and sons to "rest" on the farm. The Times joins a large number of friends in wishing them prosperity--Bedford, Iowa, Times-Republican.

RAINBOW TROUT. Attached to the northbound passenger train Thursday was a United States fish distributing car from the Fish Hatchery at Hizenman, Mont., in charge of Capt. H. L. Cannon of the bureau of Fisheries. The car is on a tour of the northwest distributing fish along its route. One thousand rainbow trout were left at this station for Dr. Plummer, who has them in his pond at the Haylett hot springs. Some were also left at the state fish hatchery at the Hay Spur, and some at the station at Bellefleur.

Mr. Isaacs, superintendent of the Hay Spur hatchery was aboard the train for the purpose of seeing how to secure some of the rainbows for stock breeding purposes, and he was successful. He will raise them for his own purpose. He says that this species of trout is superior to our native or any other trout in the world, selling in Utah for $2 a thousand. He is now able to propagate spawn from the fry obtained yesterday this hatchery will soon be able to stock this hatchery at a greatly reduced expense.

Work will be commenced soon on additional buildings at the Hay Spur hatchery, which will be made second to none in this part of the United States--Wood River News-Miner.

TO ADJUDICATE WATER RIGHTS.
Canal Association Engineering to Ascertain Priority!

At a meeting of the Governing Board of the Twin Falls Canal Association, it was decided necessary, upon the best legal advice obtainable, to procure a license from the State of Idaho, showing the standing of the water right for the land on the original Twin Falls tract. This is necessary in order to secure the right of land over in case a dispute arises as to the prior right of the South Side Twin Falls tract over remaining tracts. It is to be noted that the original tracts have made filings on the waters of Snake River, or in case any of the surrounding tracts show a disposition to encroach upon the rights of users upon the lands of the South Side Twin Falls tract.

Every owner of land on this tract, which includes the original segregation of 30,000 acres on the North Side, is invited to join as a plaintiff in this suit to be brought, and if he so joins, the expense will be nominal, if he fails to join as a plaintiff, he will be made a defendant in the case, making it necessary for him to secure legal help at a considerable expense.

The secretary of the Canal Association will be in his office over the Commercial Savings Bank in Twin Falls every Saturday from 9:00 A. M. to 5:00 P. M., and will receive the names of all those wishing to make filings, and answer any questions to those desiring information.

The secretary has also been instructed by the Governing Board to call upon as many of the land owners as possible for him to see and give them an opportunity to become plaintiffs in the case.

Messrs. Stockelager & Bowen are the attorneys for the association and will conduct the case. They, as well as others who have given this matter much thought and study, consider an early action of the courts most important, and it is necessary in order that the decree be of benefit to any particular piece of land that the owner of that land should immediately join in the suit. The whole tract cannot be treated as a body, and the fact that your neighbor has a decree does not put your land in the same standing as his, unless you are a plaintiff in the suit, so it is important to you that you should immediately join in the suit.

HAVING R. DARRROW,
Secretary Governing Board,
August 20-17.

Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup not only heals irritation and allays inflammation, thereby stopping the cough, but it moves the bowels, and thus that way drives the cold from the system. Contains no opiate. It is pleasant to take, and children especially like its taste, so nearly like maple sugar. Sold by Sprague's Pharmacy.

Notice For Publication—Final Proof.
I, Jesse W. Eaton, of Twin Falls, Idaho, who made entry No. 2123, under the provisions of an act of the legislature of the State of Idaho, commonly known as the "Carey Act," approved March 2nd, 1899, which embraces SW 1/4 NW 1/4 of section 25, township 9 S., of range 16 E., do hereby give notice of my intention to make final proof to establish my claim to the land above described, and that I expect to prove that I have resided on, reclaimed and cultivated said land as required by law, before E. B. Williams, representative of the State Land Board, at Twin Falls, Idaho, on the 28th of November, 1908, by two of the following witnesses:
Charles Eldred, Moses Hill, R. L. Eaton, Samuel Woodhead, all of Twin Falls, Idaho.
JESSE W. EATON, Entryman.

Kodol contains the same digestive juices that are found in an ordinary healthy stomach, and there is, therefore, no question that any form of stomach trouble, indigestion or Nervous Dyspepsia, will yield readily and naturally to a short treatment of Kodol. Try it today on your next meal. Take it for a little while, that is all you will need to take. Kodol dissolves what you eat and makes the stomach healthy. It is sold by Sprague's Pharmacy.

The said action is brought to recover a divorce by the plaintiff from the said defendant on the grounds of desertion, and to set aside the said divorce, and defendant is dissolved. FAD M ORCHARD AND GARDEN BY FETRIGG REGISTER ROCKFORD, ILL CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

Copyright, 1908, by F. E. Trigg. This matter may be reprinted without special permission.

This is mighty little virtue in doing a job in a hard way if there is another in which it can be done more easily and just as satisfactorily.

We passed a country home the other day when an inverted order of things was plainly noticeable—the odor of the food smelling hoggen reached the nostrils of the passerby before the sweet fragrance of the lilac bushes which stood in the front yard.

A dozen hills of pumpkin planted among the hills of corn and potatoes in the garden will provide a fine supply of good food for the cow heat fall. Incidentally, too, the vines will hold in check a whole lot of weeds.

If planting of sweet corn is made at intervals during May and June a fine supply of tender corn will be provided for table consumption covering several weeks, while the family cow will have a nice lot of green feed at a time when pasture will be quite likely to be short and flies troublesome.

A washing machine of more recent manufacture than I see ought to form part of the equipment of every household where the washing is done at home. It is for the good wife, with her manifold and exacting duties, what the hayfork or manure spreader is for the man of the house, a great reducer of hard, back breaking work.

Will some small boy who reads this department try to figure out for himself and mail the writer of these notes an equivalent of how long it takes to get into the tub by the well during the night—that is, why are they not seen there at night, but are found there in the morning? This is a natural history phenomenon that has caused a good many other boys and girls to scratch their heads.

In both young and old especial care should be given the eyes and teeth to prevent their getting out of condition and causing no end of distress and inconvenience as a result. When a fellow gets to the point where his eyes go back on him or he has to sleep at nights with a double set of false teeth in his mouth he is in a state of mind to appreciate, if somewhat tardily, the force of the above suggestions.

If the suggestion of certain Wisconsin paper manufacturers, manufacturers and proves practicable, it will not be a great while until some newspapers will be of blank paper printed with white ink. It is claimed by those makers of this suggestion that old newspapers or any other brown stock could be used in the manufacture of such paper and at about one-half the present price of white print paper, which is made almost exclusively from spruce and hemlock.

How often as a result of keeping the curtains down in the parlor, while both in practice as well as theory ought to be the best room in the house, dampness, mustiness and cheerlessness prevail! True, the poles in the carpet may lose some of their brightness, though none of their fragrance. If curtains are kept up for weeks, dampness and the gloomy germ destroying atmosphere is allowed to pour in, but it will mean cheerfulness, light and health for the members of the family, who ought to be urged to more consideration than carpets and wall paper.

The election officials were: J. H. Satterlee, Frank Harrington and Frank Kendall. Judges: Mrs. Harrington and Mrs. Kendall; clerk: W. H. Turner. E. W. Davis and Martin Sullivan, counting judges; Geo.
