

DEMOCRATIC BLUFF CALLED

Fight on M. J. Sweeley Dropped Like a Hot Potato.

COUNTER SUIT BY REPUBLICANS HAS CHASTENING EFFECT.
Democratic and Republican County Committees Get Together and Agree to Drop Suit Tuesday Night.

The big spurge about the contesting of Sweeley's election as state senator on the part of a few of the Democrats, passed away like the snow under the Chitwood, and left exposed the bare and contemptible crawling on the part of a few disgruntled men in the county. Late Tuesday afternoon, by mutual agreement, Chairman C. D. Thomas of the Republican county committee, and A. S. Baty, chairman of the Democratic county organization, appeared before the clerk of the district court and asked for the withdrawal of the contest suits filed against Mr. Sweeley and Mr. Dyer. The papers were handed, and the suit attempt at creating a sensation died a peaceful death.

The whole affair seems to have been taken up on the spur of the moment by a few men of the Democratic party, who on Monday night at eight o'clock, filed papers with the court officer asking that the action of the counting board be set aside and the recount made with regard to the vote on the state senator. The action was considerable of surprise to the Republicans and for the moment caught them napping. At a late hour of the afternoon suit was filed contesting the election of C. W. Dyer, the only successful candidate on the Democratic ticket. The result of this counter suit was effective and after some hurried work on the part of the conservative elements of the Democratic ticket, the below agreements were filed, quashing both suits:

IN THE STATE SENATE OF THE TWENTY-THIRD DISTRICT OF THE TERRITORY OF IDAHO, IN SENATE CHAMBER OF THE STATE OF IDAHO,
A. S. Baty, a Qualified Elector of the Twenty-third Senatorial District for the State of Idaho, Contestant, vs.
Marlin J. Sweeley, the Incumbent of the County of State Senator from the Twenty-third Senatorial District of the State of Idaho, Contestee.

Dismissal and Withdrawal of Contest.
Comes now A. S. Baty, the Contestant above named and hereby stipulates and agrees that he hereby withdraws and withdraws the contest above entitled and the notice thereof and his affidavit signed by him in connection therewith, and also withdraws his objection of F. A. Hutto as a person to take depositions in said matter for which he has been appointed, and his said contest, and withdraws and cancels all authority given to the said F. A. Hutto and any other person to depose any witness in this matter, and all matters connected therewith. The said contestant further states and agrees that he is in possession of the reason that after further investigation and consideration of the matters set forth in his said affidavit, and that he is of the opinion that said contest should not be further prosecuted.

Witness my hand at Twin Falls, Idaho, this 21st day of November, 1908.
A. S. BATY, Contestant.

Witness:

It is further agreed that if said contestant should fail to have said contest dismissed and withdrawn by the first day of the next month, the said contestant will file in said court an order based thereon entered by the court dismissing said contest at the costs of the contestant.

This stipulation is signed by the contestant for the reason that after further consideration of the matters set forth in his complaint he is of the opinion that said contest should not be further prosecuted.

A BIG BLOCK OF ENTERPRISES

Nordling Building Fully Leased for New Business.

HOTEL AND GRILL ONE OF THE VENTURES.
Meyer & Company Will Occupy Two Middle Store Rooms, Nordling Tea Room on the Corner, with Stationery in Connection.

The big, handsome Nordling block, owned by Robert Rosecrans and Bonham & Peters, is getting rapidly along to the completed condition and the lower floor has been leased for some time. Mr. Tohn of Salt Lake City, an experienced hotel manager, has leased the upper floor and will conduct a first-class medium-priced hotel and is already making his purchases for fitting up the rooms. On the ground floor Mr. Tohn has secured the store room fronting on Second street east and will put in a grill and office for Joe Meyer & Co. Meyer & Co. has been in the city for the past month and despite the uncompleted condition of the building has moved a big stock into the basement and with creditable energy unpacked his goods. Despite the above condition, Mr. Meyer has engaged a good business man and has recently secured the two central store rooms for his big stock of ladies' and gentlemen's ready-to-wear furnishings. Mr. Harry Meyer and his partner, the well-known Racket store of this city, will occupy the room next to the present quarters, when they will put in a much heavier stock than their present heavy one. Bonham & Peters, the proprietors, are planning to make their new store one of the most complete in the county.

ANOTHER AMUSEMENT CENTER.
F. A. Hutto Will Erect Theatre On Shoshone Street.
During the past week, Attorney F. A. Hutto, who a short time ago purchased the corner lot next to the Hill block on Shoshone street, has made full arrangements for putting up a two-story building on the lot and has leased the same to Douglas Smith for a moving picture show. The building will be twenty-five by ninety feet, and fully equipped with modern plumbing and heating. The theatre will be made as nearly up-to-date as the space will afford with raised opera seats and a stage for the numerous vaudeville trunks which the new manager will put on in his endeavor to give the people first-class entertainment.

LOSE THE CHAMPIONSHIP.
Albion Normal Basket Ball Team Too Strong.

Last Saturday afternoon one of the hardest basketball ball games of the season occurred between the Albion Normal and the local high school teams and the result was a narrow one. The last half there was not one who could predict the outcome. While Albion eventually won by a score of 15 to 14, there is no doubt that the local team played a very fine game for the girls of the Twin Falls team in being the losers and their play all things considered was of a very kind. The game settled the championship of eastern Idaho.

The Fighting Chance.

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS.

Copyright, 1906, by the Curtis Publishing Company.
Copyright, 1906, by Robert W. Chambers.

Into the twilight squar Quarrier, lean but, but his soft, dark lashed eyes of a woman fixed steadily ahead. Every energy, every thought, was now bent to this newest phase of the same question which he had fate were finding simpler to solve every minute. Of all the luxuries he permitted himself openly or furtively, one—the rarest of them all—his self denial had practically eliminated from the list. The luxury of punishment where no end was served save that of mere personal satisfaction. The temptation of this luxury now presented itself, and the means of gratification were so simple, so secret, so easy to command, that the temptation became almost a duty.

Seward had not turned out of his way to injure. Seward had been in the way that he had expected to meet, and it necessary sacrifice, had suddenly turned vicious. And he now laid her as coldly as the hated Major Belveher for betraying suspicions of a similar nature. As for Plank, fear and hatred of him were becoming hatred and contempt. He had been the means of checking Plank if Mortimer did not drop dead before midnight. There remained Sylvia. Long ago, whatever of liking, of affection, of passion he had ever entertained for her had yielded to indifference as the unemotional contemplation of a future mechanically arranged for. Now of a sudden this young girl he had loathed—she knowing what she sold and what he was paying for—had become exposed to the infection of a suspicion concerning himself and another woman—a woman unmarried and of his own caste and numbered among her own friends.

And he knew enough of Sylvia to know that if anybody could once arouse within her a feeling on which could induce her to look into his face again. Suppose Lella should do so this evening?

Certainly Quarrier had several motives to ponder over and provide for and first and foremost of all to provide for his own security and the vital necessity of preserving his name and his character unimpaired. In this he had to deal with that miserable woman who had betrayed him with Mortimer, who had once blackmailed him and who now was temporarily in his service; with Mrs. Mortimer, who—God deducted Mortimer. Mortimer had dined heavily, but his disorganized physical condition was such that it had scarcely affected him at all.

Again Quarrier went over patiently and carefully the very simple part he had reserved for Mortimer that evening, explaining exactly what to say to Lella and what to say to Plank in case of insolent interruption. Then he told Mortimer to be ready at 9 o'clock, turned on his heel with a curt word to the Japanese, descended to the street, entered his motor car again and sped away to the Hotel Santa Helena.

Miss Callithness was at home, came the message in exchange for his cards for Agatha and Mrs. Vendenning. He entered the glide of elevator, stepped out on the sixth floor into a tiny, roomy, public reception room. Nobody was there besides himself. Agatha's maid came presently, and he turned and followed her into the large and very handsome parlor belonging to the suite which Agatha was occupying with Mrs. Vendenning for the few days that they were to stop in town.

"Hello!" she said serenely, sauntering in, her long, pale hands bracketed on her narrow hips, her lips disclosing her teeth in a smile so like that nervous muscular recession which passed for a smile on Quarrier's visage that for one moment he recognized it and thought the words "mocking him." She stroked up to him, meeting his eye calmly, and lifted her slim neck, lips passive under his impetuous kiss.

"Oh, Mrs. Ven, this evening!" he asked, laying his hands on the bare shoulders of the tall, pallid girl—tall as he and as pallid.

"No, Mrs. Ven. Is in, toward."

"Now? You mean she is coming in to interpose?"

"Oh, no! She isn't fond of you, Howard."

"You said"—he began almost angrily, but she laid her fingers across his lips.

"I said a very foolish thing, Howard. I said that I'd manage to dispense with Mrs. Ven. This evening."

"You mean that you couldn't manage it?"

"Not at all. I could easily have managed it. But—I didn't care to."

She looked at him calmly at close range as he held her embraced, lifted her arms and with slender white fingers pulled her hair into place where his arm around her head had disarranged it, watching him all the while out of her pale, haunted eyes.

"You promised me," he said, "that you—"

"Oh, Howard! Do men still believe in promises?"

Quarrier's face had color enough now. His voice, too, had lost its passionless, monotonous prelude. "Whatever was in the mind of custom was astray. His impatient voice, his lack of pulse, the almost human lack of caution in his speech betrayed him in a new and interesting light.

"Look here, my girl, how long is this going to last? Are you trying to make a fool of me? What is the matter? Is there anything wrong?"

"Wrong? Oh, dear, no! How could there be anything wrong between you and me?"

"Agatha, what is the matter? Look here! Let's settle this thing now and settle it one way or the other! I won't stand it—I can't! Did you ever misunderstand me? Did I ever give you any chance to? Were you ignorant of what that meant? With a gesture toward the splendid crescent of flashing teeth, scintillating where the low face looked out the tiny hunter of her skin.

"Did you misunderstand the color of the sudden change of fortune in your own family's concerns? Answer me, Agatha, once for all. But you need not answer, after all. I know you have never understood me."

"I misunderstood nothing," she said.

"You are quite right."

"Then what are you going to do?"

"Do?" she said in slow surprise.

"What am I to do, Howard?"

"You have said that you loved me."

"Then—"

"I said the truth, I think."

"Well?"

"How long are you going to keep me at arm's length?" he asked violently.

"That lies with you," she said, smiling. She looked at him for a moment; then, resting her hands on her hips, she began to pace the floor, to and fro, and at every turn she raised her head to look at him. All the strange grace of her became insolent provocation, her pale eyes, clear, limpid, harboring no illusions, haunted with the mockery of wisdom, challenged and checked him.

"Howard," she said, "why should I be the fool you want me to be because I love you? Why should I be even if I wished to be? You desire an understanding? Well! You have it. I love you. I never misunderstood you from the first. I could not afford to. You know what I am. You know what you arouse in me."

Slim, pale, depraved in all but body, she stood, eying him a moment, the very incarnation of vicious perversity.

"You know what you arouse in me," she repeated. "But you don't count on it."

"You have encouraged—permitted me to count—"

"He sneered choked him, or was it the haunting vision of her eyes that committed him to silence?

"I don't know," she said mutely, "what it is in you that I am so mad

Agatha Callithness knew how, when or where—had become suspicious of Agatha and herself; with Major Belveher, who had deserted him before he could sacrifice the major and whom he now hated and feared; for having stumbled over suspicious allusion to Mrs. Mortimer's. He had to deal with Sylvia herself and with Seward—reckon with Seward's knowledge of matters which it were best that Sylvia should not know. But first of all and most important of all he had to deal with Beverly Plank. And he was going to do it in a manner that Plank could not have foreseen. He was going to stop Plank where he stood, and to do this he was deliberately using his knowledge of the man and paying Plank the compliment of counting on his sense of honor to defeat him.

For he had suddenly found the opportunity to defend himself. He discovered the joint in Plank's old fashioned armor, the armor of the old paladins, who placed a woman's honor before all else in the world. Now, through his cunning, Mortimer could menace Plank with a threat to involve him and Lella in a vile publicity. Plank must sign the check and face with Lella an action for damages and divorce.

First of all he went to the Lenox club and dressed. Then he dined sparingly and alone. The motor car was waiting when he came out ready to run down to the great Hotel Corona, whether the Japanese steward had coc-about whether it is your brutality, or the utter corruption of you that holds me, or your wicked eyes of a woman, or the fascination of the mask you turn on the world and the secret visage, naked in the eyes, that you reserve for me. But I love you—in my fashion. Count on that, Howard, for that is all you can surely count on. And now, at last, you know."

As he stood there it came to him slowly that deep within him he had always known this; that he had never really counted on anything else, though he had throttled his doubts by covering her throat with diamonds. Her strangeness, her peltier, her acquiescence, the delicate hint of depravity in her, the subtle response to all that was worst in him had attracted him, only to learn, little by little, that the tint of corruption was only a faint infecting others, not her; that the promise of evil was only a promise; that he had to deal with a young body, but an old intelligence, and a mind so old that at moments her fixed gaze almost appalled him with its indolent clairvoyance.

Long since he knew, too, that in all the world he could never again find such a man for him. This had unadmitted even to himself, always remained a hidden secret within this secret man, an unacknowledged, withdrawn reserve in case of the failure which even in his mind he did not know in his mind corrupted soul that his quest was doomed to fail.

And now he had no more need of secrets from himself. Now, turning his gaze toward her, he looked upon all with which he had chosen to deceive himself. And there was nothing left for self-deception.

"It is I marry you," he said calmly, "at least I know what I am getting."

"I will marry you, Howard, I've got to marry somebody pretty soon. You or Captain Voucher."

For an instant a vicious light flashed in his narrowing eyes. She saw it and shook her head with weary cynicism.

"No, not that. It could not attract me even with you. It is really vulgar—that announcement. Nobody calls me a man. There is a depravity in marrying you that makes all lesser virtues stale as virtues."

He said nothing. She looked at him, fully amused; then, in a matter of minutes and paced the floor again.

"Shall I see you tomorrow?" he demanded.

"If you wish, Captain Voucher can come down on the same train with me. I'll see him admit if you like."

"Is he preparing for a declaration?" sneered Quarrier.

"I think so," she said simply.

"Well, if he comes tonight after I'm gone, you will find a final word from me. Do you understand?" he repeated, with repressed violence.

"No, Howard. Are you going to propose to me tomorrow?"

"For all know tomorrow," he retorted angrily. "I tell you to wait. I've a right to that much consideration anyway."

"Very well, Howard," she said, recognizing in him the cowardice which she had always suspected to be there. She bade him good night. He touched her hand, but made no offer to kiss her. She laughed a little to herself, watching him stride toward the elevator.

She turned leisurely, her slim hand balanced lightly on her narrow hips, and strolled into the second dressing room, where Mrs. Vandenberg sat silently indulging in that particular species of solitude known as "The Idol's Delight."

"Well," inquired Mrs. Vandenberg, looking up at the tall, pale girl who was chaperoning so carefully during their sojourn in town. "What did Howard Quarrier want?"

"He knows, I think, but he hasn't yet informed me."

"I'll tell you one thing, Agatha," said Mrs. Vandenberg, gathering up the packs for a new shuffle. "Grace Ferratt doesn't fancy Howard's attention to you, and she's beginning to get so. When you go back to Shotover you'd better let him alone."

"I'm not going back to Shotover," said Agatha.

"What?"

"No, I don't think so. However, I'll let you know tomorrow. It all depends—but I don't expect to." She turned as her maid tapped on the door. "Oh, Captain Voucher. Are you at home to him?" flitting the pasteboard on to the table among the scattered cards.

"Yes," said Mrs. Vandenberg aggressively, "unless you expect him to flop down on his knees tonight. Do you?"

"I don't tonight. Perhaps tomorrow. I don't know. I can't tell yet. And to her maid she nodded that they were at home to Captain Voucher.

Quarrier had met Miss Lee, just as he was leaving the hotel lobby. They exchanged the careful salutations of men who had no use for one another. On the Englishman's clean cut face a deeper hue settled as he passed; on Quarrier's not a trace emotion, but when he entered his motor he sat bolt upright, stiff backed and stiff necked, his long gray gloved fingers moving restlessly over his pointed beard.

The night was magnificent. Myriads of summer stars spangled the heavens. Plank, driving his big motor northward through the night, Lella Mortimer beside him, twice mistook the glimmer of a firefly for the distant lamp of a motor, which amused Lella, and her clear young laughter floated back to the ears of Sylvia and Seward

The foot ball game scheduled for today has been changed to a snow ball fight to conform to the weather conditions.

The Times asks the indulgence of its readers because of the paper which it is obliged to present this week, due to the celebration of Thanksgiving day by the whole Times force.

The result of the short-lived contest filed against Mr. Sweeney by some of the Democrats has only served to show that when it comes to throwing stones the Democracy should first make a bomb-proof before starting action.

The chances are that Admiral Sperry at present longs to be in dark-sail Russia where a rigid press censorship is established, rather than in the American navy, with thousands of newspapers thumping him for his refusal to allow the jackies to land at the Philippine Islands.

The amount of building in progress in this city at present, points strongly to one of the best years in the history of the place. When good building weather comes next spring, nearly a half million dollars worth of business houses will be erected, owing to the failure of the property owners in the future of the tract and this city.

United States Attorney Bonaparte has made another move in the attempt to force the Standard Oil trust to pay the $29,000,000 fine by taking the consent of its jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals on writ of certiorari. He is making a strong effort to prove that the court had no jurisdiction because of constitutional grounds.

The North Side News, published at Jerome, Idaho, appeared last week for the first time as one of the Times' exchanges and has certainly a very attractive appearance from the mechanical point, and is ably edited, Mr. Nims, the editor and publisher, is an old newspaper man, and is starting out to give the residents of the North Side tract a paper that any town should be proud to support.

The Twin Falls Poultry association have, during the past two weeks, been attempting to interest the business men in promoting a poultry exhibit. There is no question but what such an exhibit would be a good thing for the tract, and it should have the hearty support of the business men. A large number of ranchers have this year added a lot of special bred fowls to their pens and the exhibit next year should be worth while.

The attempted assassination of Francis Heney in San Francisco, and the later suicide of the would-be assassin, seems to have been the heeded stimulus to awaken the graft-burdened city to the point where successful prosecution of the criminals will be demanded. The indications are that when Rust's fate rests again with the jury that he will be made to suffer for the share he has had in the spoils and also in the shame of this city.

A great many men in a new country make their religion from the creed of "boast, don't knock." Such a creed is well enough as far as it goes, but like the majority of followers of any creed or sect, the boosters are inconsistent at times, and fall back on the hammer for accomplishing a selfish purpose. There are certain interests in this city, that claim to be apostles and even of higher rank in the boosters' sect, than only boost when there is something to be for them, and the rest of the time they are lined up with the much quoted "navil chorus." Every interest that does not center about their particular boosters' battiwick, is hammered and pounded unmercifully and with a steady inconsistency. Such a policy can only result in the inevitable rebound, and the special interests bound given credit for his rightful place with the aforesaid "navil chorus."

Owing to malicious reports circulated about this tract to the effect that this paper is controlled by the Land & Water company, it seems necessary to state that out of a total of five hundred shares of the Times Printing & Publishing Company, Ltd., the undersigned has in his possession 461, and the other 39 shares are owned by three men who are in no way connected with the water company. The policy of the paper will not be changed, and will always be nearly as the editor sees the truth, he toward a square deal for every man, regardless of personal gain.

WILBUR S. HILL, Editor and Manager.

THE PRESIDENT, MR. STILLMAN AND THE OUTLOOK.

The false report in circulation by some of the president's enemies that in his association with The Outlook he had connected himself with a journal controlled by the Standard Oil company has elicited from him the following statement:

The president has not the slightest concern with the question as to who are the stockholders of The Outlook. His concern is with the general policy of the paper, which is and has been consistently admirable in every respect. The president will be responsible only for what he himself writes; and his probable attitude must be judged by his action in the past. Whether Mr. James Stillman is connected with the Standard Oil company we do not know. The facts concerning his connection with The Outlook are as follows: About forty years ago Lyman Abbott became associated with Henry Ward Beecher in the editorship of The Christian Union. When, some eight or ten years later, Mr. Beecher's inclinations led him to retire, an endeavor was made by Dr. Abbott to purchase the paper. Among those who aided him financially in this effort were Mr. Lawson Valentine and Mr. James Stillman, both of whom were neighbors and warm personal friends. They believed in him and in his plan of making a journal of national influence. They not only aided him in buying the paper which is now The Outlook, but also in the struggle that was necessary to put the paper on its feet. Mr. Valentine, who has since died, was much more largely interested than Mr. Stillman; but neither of them ever sought to exercise the slightest control over the editorial policy, which for thirty years has been and still is absolutely determined and controlled by Dr. Abbott. Mr. Stillman has never, it so happens, even attended a stockholders' meeting, either in person or by proxy. He owns less than ten per cent of the stock of The Outlook; the other ninety per cent being owned by those who are actively engaged in editing and publishing the paper. When Mr. Stillman put the money which is now represented by his stock at Dr. Abbott's service, he simply performed a generous act for a personal friend, for which Mr. Abbott takes this, the first public occasion that has ever offered, to express his grateful and appreciative acknowledgment. Apart from this contribution to his financial needs in the beginning, Mr. Stillman's only act of participation in the management of the paper was his cordial co-operation with the other stockholders by a surrender of a part of his stock to make it possible for some of the active workers in the office to become stockholders. If the act of unprincipled rumor-venders has given either Mr. Stillman or the president any annoyance, The Outlook sincerely regrets the fact. That it enables The Outlook to express a sense of indebtedness to two men—Lawson Valentine and James Stillman—who made the creation of The Outlook possible, but who have never been known to the public in connection with it, is a matter of genuine satisfaction.

DOUBLE VOTES FOR ONE WEEK

Extra Inducement Offered to Enterprising Young Ladies on the Times' Big Christmas Contest.

(Owing to the repeated requests of a number of the candidates in the Christmas Prize Contest now being conducted by The Times, double votes will be given on all subscriptions turned in during this week, November 26th to December 2nd, just one week, offer to close at 8 p. m. on December 3rd.)

So many candidates have promises of subscriptions that it is deemed advisable to offer double votes on all subscriptions. This will give the candidates who have been lagging somewhat and those who have entered the race a few weeks later a chance to catch up with the leaders of the other districts. If any candidate will this week not only do as well as usual, but will do her best, she will make it warm for every competitor in the race.

To the one to make to contest more exciting by polling a big vote this coming week.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Up until now you possibly have been intending to help some candidate; possibly you have been waiting for contestants to ask you for your votes, or you have given your promise; if so, this week is the time to get them in. Do not wait until next week, expecting something better in the way of vote getting, for it is positively stated that nothing better will be given than the double votes. Help come one now, for a little encouragement may be just what is needed.

If you say "No" to a candidate, they may take this as a refusal on every body's part and stop trying for the prizes; or, on the other hand, by each word of encouragement, you give them a few votes, or even a year or two of votes, they will start out with renewed energy, and in this way you will be the means of giving some lady the beautiful Tryber piano, which is valued at $350.00.

VOTES PILING UP.

Votes are coming into the office fast and furious every day and if you are not sending in votes you had better look to your laurels or you will find yourself out of the race when the final count is made.

NOV IS THE TIME TO JOIN NOW IS THE DEAD ONE.

Help some of your lady friends win a valuable prize, a subscription is worth more to her now than a barrel of consolation later on. Do not wait until the contest is over and then tell some lady that if you had known that a year's subscription would have helped her to win the prizes you certainly would have given her your subscription. Do it now and have the satisfaction of knowing that you have at least done your part for your friend.

CONTESTANTS.

The contest has developed into a good-natured tug-of-war and before the close it will have reached fever heat. To date there has not been any one candidate who led the lead for more than a few days at a time, and it is not at all surprising to see some lady drop down in the list just into first or second position. Do not think that because you have thousands of votes to your credit at the present time that you have a surefire on any of the prizes, and will not have to hustle as hard from now on. That is the greatest mistake you ever made. You must remember that all the time that you are not trying for one of the prizes, some one of the other contestants is trying harder than ever, piling up more votes and continually overcoming your lead.

Do you realize that you have only a few short weeks until the close of the contest in which to redeem yourselves. If your standings are not as high as you would like to have them, the time is brief and it behooves each and every Herbert Seebeck of Logan, Utah, arrived in town the first of this week to visit with his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Seebeck, for four or five weeks.

Sam Crisman of the Idaho Real Estate and Produce company, left for Salt Lake City, Utah, yesterday to be gone for a few days on a pleasure trip. He expects to return Sunday.

A. D. Stafford, of Cheney, Wash., is in town this week looking after his farming interests. Mr. Stafford is the owner of several fine farms on the tract, and is well-pleased with the financial showing the farms have made this season.

Rev. Father Bauman will let the contract in the near future for the erection of a new rectory near the Catholic church. Work on the structure will be pushed and they hope to have it ready for occupancy by the first of the year.

The second floor of the Hill block has been rented to Mrs. Houston of this city, who will furnish the same and use them for a rooming house. The lease will cater to the best class of people and will furnish the rooms in a neat and comfortable manner.

John B. White, who has been connected with C. A. McMaster in the real estate business, has sold his interest and the business will be continued with J. D. Beauman. Nick Smith and Will Lytle as the members. Mr. White has not as yet decided as to his future business.

G. W. Reels had quite an exciting time with a swarm of bees last Sunday while extracting the honey from a hive. The bees objected to being robbed of their winter food and proceeded to make Mr. Reels very angry. This was going around the first of the week with a badly swollen face. He said that he came out first in the encounter and succeeded in getting the honey.

T. M. Callahan of Longmont, Colo., president of the chain of Golden State stores that extend from Colorado to the coast, accompanied by John Hood of Pocatello, were in the city the first of this week on business over the business of the store in this place. Mr. Callahan expressed himself as being well pleased with the volume of business being done here in this city. This was his first visit to Twin Falls, and the tract, and he was greatly surprised by the wonderful development that has taken place in the four years. The gentlemen departed for their homes yesterday evening.

One of the most enjoyable events of the season was a waffle party given Tuesday evening by Miss Edith Young and Miss Mary Gouley at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Young to the young people of the Presbyterian church. The first part of the evening was spent in a spirited contest in which the ladies and gentlemen paired their wits in an attempt to solve the puzzles set before them. Later in the evening the kitchen was invaded by the young people and the culinary skill of the waffle makers was put to the test. Waffles. John Lisber proved an admirable chef and was given a life-long diploma as waffle expert by the crowd.

contestant to get in, and do her best in the matter of securing votes and subscriptions.

sweeping in a great circle up to the steps of the inn.

Now all about them from the brilliant light emanating from the great multi broke out like an uproarious welcome after the swift silence of their journey. The stir of jolly people keen for pleasure, the clatter of crockery, the commingled notes of waltz, of guests, of handsome couples, vendors and scores of motor cars wheeling and turning through the blinding glare of their own headlights.

Somewhere a symphony orchestra, full of dital crescendo and thrabbling suspense, of enraptured, furnished resonant accompaniment to the joyous clamor. The scent of fountain spray and flowers wafted in the air.

"I didn't know you had telephoned for a table," said Sward as a head waiter came up smiling and bowing to Plank.

"I couldn't in the new excitement of things I clean forgot it. What a man you are to think of other people!"

Plank reddened again, muttering something evasive, and went forward with Lella.

Sylvia, moving lightly beside Sward, who was walking slowly, but contentedly, without crutches, whispered to him, "I never really liked Mr. Plank before I understood his attitude toward you."

"He is a man, every inch," said Sward simply.

"I think that generally includes what men of your sort demand, doesn't it?" she asked.

"Men of my sort sometimes demand in others what they themselves are lacking in," said Sward, laughing.

"Look, look at this jolly crowd! Sylvia, at all those tables. It seems an age since I have done anything of the sort. I feel like a boy of eighteen—the same funny, quickening fascination in me toward everything gay and bright and alive!" He looked around at her, laughing. "As for you," he said, "you look about sixteen. You certainly are the most beautiful thing this beautiful world ever saw."

"Schoolboy courtship!" she mocked him, lingering as he nipped his way through the crowded throng.

"Plank!" as they retired and seated themselves, "Mr. Sward has just admitted that he uses crutches only because they are ornamental. Lella, isn't this air delicious? All sorts of people, too, aren't they, Mr. Plank? Such curious looking women, some of them—quite pretty, too, in a certain way. Are you hungry, St—Mr. Sward?"

"Are you, St—Mr. Sward?" mimicked Lella, who had done nothing of the kind.

"I am," said Sward, laughing at Sylvia's significant color and noting Plank's direct gaze as the waiter led Lella's slender steamed glass, and "waiting but impatient," he said coolly as the waiter approached him. But, though his voice was easy enough, a dull patch of color came out under the cheek bones.

"That is all I care for either," said Sylvia, with elaborate carelessness.

Plank and Lella immediately began to make conversation. Sward's eyes bent on the glass of mineral water at his elbow, looked up in silence at Sylvia's question.

There was something in her face he did not quite comprehend. She made as though to speak, looked at him, hesitated, her lovely face eloquent under the lamp.

"And they ways shall be my ways," said Sylvia, you must not deny yourself just because P—

"Let me, it is the happiest thing I have ever done for myself," he said.

"But I don't wish it."

"Ah, but I do!" she said, the low, excited laughter scarcely fluttering her lips. "Listen, I never before in all my life gave up anything for your sake only that one time—the night I did."

"I wasn't let you?" he treated. "It is none to me."

"You must let me! Am I to be on friendly terms with—with your mortal enemy?" She was still smiling, but she gave her sensitive mouth quivered suddenly.

He sat silent, considering her, his restless fingers playing with his glass in which the harmless bubbles were breaking.

"I drink to your health, Stephen," she said under her breath.

"I drink to your happiness," he said, and—

"and to your fortune and to all that you desire from the gods!" She raised her glass in the starlight, looking over it into his eyes.

"All I desire from fortune?" he repeated significantly.

"No, almost all!"

"No, all," he demanded.

But she only raised the glass to her lips, still looking at him as she drank.

TO ADJUDICATE WATER RIGHTS.

Canal Association Endeavoring to Ascertain Priority.

At a meeting of the Governing Board of the Twin Falls Canal Association, it was decided necessary, upon the best legal advice obtainable, to procure a decree from the courts showing the relative rights of the several parties to land on the original Twin Falls tract. This is necessary in order to secure the rights in case of any future dispute arising as to the prior right of the South Side Twin Falls tract over the surrounding tracts which have found their way to the banks of Snake River, or in case any of the surrounding tracts show a disposition to encroach upon the right of settlers upon the lands of the South Side Twin Falls tract.

Every owner of land on this tract, which includes the original aggregation of 30,000 acres on the North Side, is invited to join as a plaintiff in this suit to be brought, and if he so joins, the expense of maintaining it, if he fails to join as a plaintiff, he will be made a defendant in the case, making it necessary for him to secure legal help at a considerable expense.

The secretary of the Canal Association will be in his office over the Commercial Building in Twin Falls every Saturday from 9:00 A. M. to 5:00 P. M., and will receive the names of all those desiring to be made plaintiff and answer any questions to those desiring information.

The secretary has also been instructed by the governing board to call upon as many of the land owners as possible for him to see and give them an opportunity to become plaintiffs in the case.

Messrs. Stockinger & Bowen are the attorneys for the association and will conduct the case. They, as well as the secretary, are anxious to have much thought and study, consider an early action of the courts most important, and it is necessary in order that the decree be of benefit to any particular piece of land that the owner of that land shall signify his intention to join in the suit, so that the whole tract cannot be treated as a body, and the fact that your neighbor has a decree does not put your land in the same predicament as if you were not a plaintiff in the suit, so it is important to you that you are not overlooked.

More business men are coming to Dulh to locate every day in the week. You wonder why? Because the people who are here and know what a great place Dulh and the surrounding country is, are so overjoyed that they cannot keep from writing to tell their friends of the wonderful country.

Through Claude Oliver and H. E. Lucas of this place, we now have another business lawyer.

This making three lawyers for Dulh. Mr. O. Clark Stone of Echo, Oregon, is the attorney, who through the urgent letters of the former named gentlemen, has declined to locate here.

Mr. Stone secured his training in Michigan. In 1893 was admitted to the bar of that state, having there followed his profession for eight years.

He then came west, and during the last ten years has practiced in Arizona, Nevada and Oregon. Until late he has been practicing in Klamath Falls, Oregon.

Mr. Stone being very enthusiastic over the country, says that he believes greater opportunities await the girls under thirteen years of age were auctioned off to the proud little gentlemen bidders, who were happy with the thought that for once they could fill up on pie.

After the caps were all sold, the ladies were requested to put on their caps, and the gentleman wearing the cap to match each lady's marched around to find his partner for the "big pie feast."

Notwithstanding the amount of pie they consumed, Bobby Hayes and Agout Taylor are still looking healthy. Never before did we realize that there were so many pie faces; $17.00 worth were sold. Hooley for the basket ball girls!

A new real estate firm has been organized under the name of the Dun-Land company. The members of the new firm—Thos. T. Davis, Hugh G. Taylor and Harry Runyon, are, as you all know, great boosters.

We are confident that they will do their share towards boosting the west end. They have opened their offices on Main street, and are ready to do business. Success to the new firm!

was held in the Episcopal church on Friday by the members of the Saint Elizabeth Guild, proving to be a great success, the ladies having cleared a very nice sum.
