Senate After Much Argument Passes Original Measure.

SENATE AFTER MUCH ARGUMENT PASSES ORIGINAL MEASURE.

NOTE ON ROLL CALL SHOWS BUT ONE NEGATIVE VOTE.

Bill Attacked Bitterly By Bonner Co. Senator As a High Man's Law—Democratic Minority Votes Solidly In Favor.

Late Monday afternoon after heated debate in which the Republicans generally opposed to the direct primary bill it was passed by a vote of 22-1, in which the Democrats, under the leadership of Frederick Washington county, voted for the measure. The Republicans were divided in favor of an amended bill. The final vote when it was discovered that the chances of amendment were slight owing to the defection of three of the Republican senators voted solidly for the measure. A caucus lasting only a few minutes at the Capitol building in the afternoon resulted in the drafting of a substitute which would cover the good points of the original bill and objectives for the substitute bill which was drawn up by Senator Sweeley. It was virtually agreed by the members of the caucus that the substitute bill which was drawn up by Senator Sweeley for rather than to be on the side of the party platform, and the spectacular return of Senator Devitt, (Dem.) led rather than in the direction of the Republicans who argued against the bill would have refused to vote for the measure as the measure as the vote of McDevitt was not needed in any case.

NO CHANCE IN A SERIOUS FIRE

Slight Blaze on Friday Shows Startling Condition.

WATER COMPANY GIVING TALK—PAYERS WORST OF SERVICE.

Pressure on Friday Morning Too Low To Reach Even Second Story of Majestic Pharmacy.

It usually takes a good bid and disallows five to awaken the placidity of the municipal mind, and Twin Falls can for this reason be regarded as the blaze which started from the floor in the Majestic Pharmacy was as easily extinguished last Friday morning. But the happy outcome of the fire cannot be in any way attributed to the service furnished by the Twin Falls Waterworks company. Had the blaze been an open one with a chance of gaining headway, nothing but a good water pressure would have saved it. It is high time that the business men bring pressure to bear upon the company which has never given the best of fire protection since he granted its charter in the early days of the townsite and on the other hand it has done enough in violation of its franchise to let any claim, to further consideration.

CONTENTION OVER WATER GATE

Settlers and Water Company Disagree As to Proper Gate.

At a meeting of the Twin Falls Canal Association and the Land & Water Company jointly, Saturday, February 13th, the question of the kind of measuring device came up for discussion. Fred Voigt, S. H. Hays and Mark Cook of the water company, and the board of the governing board of the canal association was out in full force. The contention arose out from the class of gate to be used in the water gate. The company claiming that the contract did not call for a gate within a half mile of the water gate. The water gate, the individual contractors made do call for a measuring device within a half mile of the water gate. The water gate, the individual contractors made do call for a measuring device within a half mile of the water gate.

Pack of Payette gave a lengthy speech on the fertile resources of the state. John Nugent presided at the meeting which was well attended by members of the club and legislature. FOR RAILROAD ENCOURAGEMENT

Oregon-Idaho Development Congress Ask for Creation of B. R. Districts.

A petition was presented to the tenth legislature Monday asking that body to pass a bill giving different communities and counties the right to form districts for the promotion of railroad building. The petition is the direct outcome of the recent session held in Boise for the development of both states interested. The bill asked for gives any group of citizens representative of county or municipal boundaries to become a railroad district for the purpose of voting bonds to build or aid in building railroads. The manner of setting off such district being similar to that used in road or school districts in this state. The aim of the congress is to set the bill before this session for action.

TO ABOLISH LAND BOARD

Senate Resolution Introduced For Providing Land Commissioner.

A resolution was presented to the senate yesterday afternoon by the judiciary committee, having as its object the abolition of the state board of land commissioners and the substitution in its place of a state land commissioner. The resolution provides that this matter be referred to the people of the state by submitting to the people the question of amending the constitution. Members of the committee are as one in the belief that the question should go to the electors. "The state stands to lose 1,000,000 acres of first choice lands," said a member of the judiciary committee through the inefficiency of the land board. We propose, if we can do so, the abolition of the land business on a sound business basis."

1809--The Lincoln Centenary--1909

Lincoln as a Story Teller

By James A. Edgerton

Portrait First--Lincoln, Taught Less on, Gave Mental Medicine and Spread Sunshine by Means of Stories

SOME poet says it goes like this--"The once I marked that when the people assembled him he got rid of it by writing a poem. If I believed this of some poet, I might have more cheerily for them. The methods of men to assuage grief are as variable as their temperaments. Some take to play, some to play, some to pray, some to philosophize, some to meditate, and that one comes to the end of his wits."

Abraham Lincoln's way was to tell stories. "I do not mean mean stories," said most of these methods, possibly than all of them. He told stories.

Mr. Lincoln once expressed this idea in an important congressional act that called for his attention. The president began some innocent story, just by way of saying "Good morning." Thereupon the congressman pulled himself up. "Mr. President," he said, "I did not come here this morning to hear stories. It is too serious a time."

The smile faded from the president's face. Lincoln was ever gentle, truly a gentle man. Dividing that word divides it. But for this quality he would have fomented the interview with the bore then and there. As it was, he asked him quietly to sit down. "I respect you as an earnest, sincere man," he said to the congressman. "You cannot be more mistaken than I have been constantly since the beginning of the war, and I say to you now that were it not for this occasional vent I should like."

The president had another object in giving way to the anecdotal habit. Everybody else did it, or tried to, and he was no exception, but he wanted to be like other people. Telling stories was a national distraction. Lincoln noticed this, and he only did it better than others. He raised it into an art.

It was his pastime. He did not drink or play cards. As for automobiling, amusements and buying luxuries, these diversions had not been invented, at least under these names. If they had been, Lincoln would not have had anything to do with them. They are the pastimes of the rich, and he was always poor. He had no vices, with the possible exception of talking politics. So his sport was telling stories. It beguiled his own hours and made other people happy. It was his method of teaching lessons, giving mental medicine and spreading sunshine.

The beauty of a Lincoln narrative is that it invariably has a point. In this it does not resemble all latter day humor. A collection of individuals one day visited the White House, and one story rather familiar and asked the president to tell a story. Lincoln turned his back on the follow and quietly remarked to the rest of the group that he never told stories just for the sake of telling stories. Through out his life, whatever the reports might be, he had always told stories to illustrate a truth or enforce an argument.

Lincoln often put more into a story or into a set phrase than some men put into a sermon-sermon. Indeed, than some authors put into a book. For example, when one editor made a great outcry against the administration without adding any facts to back it up, Mr. Lincoln was reminded of a story. A man traveling through Kansas on horseback was overtaken by a terrific thunderstorm. To make matters worse, night came on, there was no horse nearby in miles, and the traveler lost his way. As the storm grew more violent, he was dismounted and led his horse, stumbling along in the mud, the rain and the increasing dim of the horizon. He felt the blackness of darkness except for intermittent flashes of lightning, and the traveler became terrified by the fact he could not find the road. Suddenly a tremendous thunder crash brought him to his knees in his frightened prayer: "O Lord, if it's all the same to you, give me a little more light and a little less noise."

A farmer once came to the president with the complaint that the soldiers had stolen his horse and he wanted the government to pay him at once. Lincoln replied that if he attended to each case like this he would have enough work for twenty presidents. This recalled a steamboat pilot story. In one portion of his journey this pilot had to travel the long through most perilous stretches of rapids. One day while navigating these rapids, the boat was full of water he felt a tug at his vest. "They, mister," piped a small boy, "stop your boat a minute. You lost my apple overboard."

This recalls the time that the president turned on one committee of high-browed knockers who came to complain of the way he was running the government. After listening to them in patience he said:

Gentlemen, suppose all the property you were worth was in kind and you had put it into the hands of Lincoln to carry across the Niagara river on a rope, would you make the cable or keep showing at him? "Blondin, stand up a little straighter!" "Blondin, stoop a little more!" "Go a little faster!" "Lean a little more to the north!" "Lean a little more to the south!" "No, you want to hold your breath as well as your tongue and keep your hands on until he was safe over. The government is carrying an enormous weight, and your treasure in his hands; it is doing the very best it can to do it, but keep silence, and it will get you safe across."

After complimenting a young attorney one day on his recent victory of language Mr. Lincoln told the boy a story:

My young friend's gift of words has one serious drawback, which you gentlemen have witnessed this case. It interrupts the action of your mind. It keeps your brain out of it. It prevents you from seeing the end of the matter. I had a three foot boiler and a two foot wheel, and every time it whirled it did not stop.

Every collection of Lincoln stories must contain a number familiar to the reader, as they have all been published to the ends of the earth. Though they are not nearly so good, however, because they are Lincoln's. Apropos of nothing in particular or of nothing that can be recalled, Mr. Lincoln told this tale of the Massachusetts politician who was visiting the colonists up there considerably the first one of the nation's making. He was there at that time behind a reason of fasting and health, but he was there to do a business meeting. All they did was to talk. "First, resolved. That the earth and the fullness thereof belong to God. Second, That our God gave the earth to his saints. "Third, That we are the saints." "Fourth, They want and stew every redskin in sight."

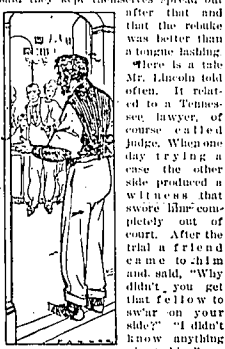

A visitor at the White House one day complimented the president on the fact that he had no vices, so he rather drank up-sunked. Lincoln showed at the end of the matter that he was about him none of the matter than that by retorting:

That is a doubtful compliment. I remember the night I was in a stagecoach in Illinois, and a man sitting by me offered me a cigar. I told him I had no vices. He said nothing, but insisted for something and then growled out, "It's my experience that folks who take no vices have generally less fun than we."

Not infrequently if the president had a rebuke to give he sugar coated it with a story. When it was felt that the life was being run down by the servants and a guard were stationed in the White House and were supposed to keep moving about in different parts of the house. Contrary to this, one night they were all congregated in the dining room when Lincoln came in quietly in his stocking feet. The servants looked clean, and the president told a story.

"Do you know what I like?" he said. "When no one answered, he resumed:

A little friend found forty-three eggs one day. He put them under one hen. When he had told his mother she had done she asked him, "She can't cover them all," said the lady's mother. "I don't know," said the boy. "I don't want to see how far the crowd spread here."

The coachman who told the story said they kept themselves spread out the fact that he had no vices, so he rather drank up-sunked. Lincoln showed at the end of the matter that he was about him none of the matter than that by retorting:

That is a doubtful compliment. I remember the night I was in a stagecoach in Illinois, and a man sitting by me offered me a cigar. I told him I had no vices. He said nothing, but insisted for something and then growled out, "It's my experience that folks who take no vices have generally less fun than we."

After the emancipation proclamation there was doubt expressed of the colored troops that had been enlisted. But they acquitted themselves in a manner to call forth general praise. Shortly afterward Lincoln was with General Grant when there was a review of the troops, the black fellows among the rest. The president told Grant that at such a time it was well to be a little color blind.

I think, general, that we can say of the colored boys what a country fellow who was an old time abolitionist said when he went to a theater in Chicago and heard Forrest play Othello. He was not in it, he supposed, and said he was that the theater was backed up for the purpose. After the play was over the abolitionists invited him to extend the invitation to know what he thought of the actors, and he said, "Well, laying all that aside, I think you and I can say that I may have for the race draped if I don't think the colored fellow held his own with any of 'em."

A motion was made that estimates and specifications be prepared by the city engineer for paving all of Main Avenue and Shoshone street. An application for telephone franchise from the Idaho Independent Telephone company was taken up and laid on the table for future action. Owing to the many complaints made the council instructed Clerk Taylor to look into the water supply and determine that the pledges of better service made to the council has winter be kept, and in case of non-compliance the council would grant another franchise. BARTENDER IN TROUBLE.

Thomas Flynn Arrested In Shoshone Monday Morning. The constable of L. S. Fruit, proprietor of the Palace Saloon, Shoshone, Idaho, was arrested for drunkenness at the saloon of Thomas Flynn on the night of Saturday night last. Flynn was held until Monday evening, when Sheriff J. J. Taylor brought him to Twin Falls for trial. Flynn with the other party was attempting to reach Shoshone, where he could take the train before the saloon was opened for business Monday, the money having been taken between Saturday night and Monday.

Will Take Over Project.

It has been reported that the Twin Falls Development Co. is to take over the Lost River Irrigation Co.'s project. We all hope so. For it is this company that has done the best work. Should it do so the most fertile valley abounding in opportunities in the west would be under the control of one man. Hereafter the great desert has been the values of land here a secret, but since the coming of the canal eight years ago hundreds of acres have been taken up and land values are on the rise. Fruit and grain and hay and potatoes do not grow here, but the soil should not be worth something? If the big reservoir and canal come through we can cultivate 10,000 acres more, and the water will come from the Lost River Co.—Lost River Co. to Halley News-Miner.

SHORT HAIR WINS.

Spokane's Contention for Lower Rate Upheld by Commission. Washington, March 2.—Railroad rates involved in the famous case of Spokane, Idaho, against the Northern Pacific and other railroads were today held by the interstate commerce commission to be reasonable. The decision favors the contention of Spokane. The case has been under consideration for about a month. The commission has been endeavoring to settle the intricate points involved, but until a few days ago it was not possible. The unanimous opinion of the commission was prepared by Commissioner Prouty. It is pointed out that the rates on all commodities to the Pacific coast move out of Spokane, and that the rates on the Missouri river to Seattle are the same, while rates from the same points to Spokane usually are considerably higher than to Seattle, and they increase as the points of origin the farther east. As illustrated by the case of Chicago, the commission referred to 22 articles. The decision held that the commission can fix the rates only on the articles enumerated. The rate in rates ordered is horizontal and amounts in some instances to 30 percent in other cases to only 6 or 7 percent. Rates Attacked. No. 11.—The rates attacked are class rates from St. Paul to Chicago on certain commodities rates upon 24 enumerated articles. Class rates are established from St. Paul to Spokane and from Chicago to Spokane, and those now in effect and class rates from Chicago to Spokane are made higher than the rates from St. Paul by certain arbitrary amounts. No. 12.—In case of all commodities except five, the present rates from Chicago to Spokane are made 10 percent above those from St. Paul. Neither class nor commodity rates are made 10 percent above those from Chicago. The order will be made effective May 1.—Statesman.

Suggestive Questions on the Sunday School Lesson by Rev. Dr. Linscott.

March 20, 1909.

Philip and the Ethiopian—Act VIII: 26-40.

Golden Text—Ye search the Scriptures because ye think that in them ye have eternal life; and these are they which bear witness of me.—John 5:39.

Verse 26—When God directs us by circumstances or by a friend, or by an angel, is it just as much from God as though He spoke to us direct?

I do not know whether this angel was a devout man, or woman, or a mental picture, or a dream, or a spirit; but he, she or it, convinced Philip, that God wanted him to go south; now how did Philip know that the impulse to go south was of God? and how may we know under similar circumstances?

May any person who is pleading doubt with God, safely trust "the inward voice," to direct us to outward circumstances?

Verses 27, 28—Philip found that he had not come on a fool's errand; now is it not invariably so, that results of tomorrow, always justify the faith of today?

Seeing this Ethiopian was a man of exalted position, in a foreign country, what was the significance of Philip being sent to him?

Verse 29—When Philip saw this man's chariot, looming up in the distance, perhaps after days or weeks of waiting, with more or less doubt; he got the impression that this was his opportunity; now from whom did he get the impression?

With what sort of a voice did the Holy Spirit speak to Philip?

If we should learn that the Holy Spirit used the circumstances, and Philip's reasoning processes, his hope and his fears, as God's voice, would that be as really the voice of the Holy Spirit, as if words were spoken by God out of the clouds?

Is it always safe for us to do as the Holy Spirit tells us, as in this case?

Verse 30—Was the Ethiopian a devout man?

If a man devoutly searches the Scriptures, is he sure to find God?

If a man devoutly searches the book of nature, with a desire to obey her laws, is he sure to find God?

Verses 31-33—Where in the Bible is the passage which the Ethiopian was reading?

Is it always necessary, that someone should explain the Scriptures to us?

Can we understand the Scriptures or get the full import of any fact, without the aid of the Holy Spirit?

Why could not, or why did not, the Holy Spirit explain this Scripture to the Ethiopian direct?

As a matter of fact, was not the Holy Spirit guiding the Ethiopian as much as he was Philip?

Was Isaiah conscious when he wrote these "servings" the same as a well-favored, or did he think that he was describing some other person or persons?

Did not the prophets, as other inspired men, often write more wisely than they knew?

Verses 35-38—Did this Ethiopian need "savouring" the same as a well-favored, or did he, as a devout child of God, simply recognize Jesus as the son of God, and was then baptized in His name?

Verses 39, 40—Was Philip, so to speak, "sprited" away, or did he leave in a natural manner?

INTER-COUNTY FREE BRIDGE.

Commissioners of Lincoln and Twin Falls Asked to Purchase Tax-Relief.

Miller, Idaho, March 3, 1905.

A petition has been circulated among the citizens of the east end of Twin Falls county petitioning the county commissioners to purchase the bridge across Snake river at this place, which is a burden to both the North Side settlers and the residents of the east end of the county. The petitioners are willing to cross the bridge to get their hay, grain and in fact everything, and feel while the whole county is benefited that Twin Falls county should go in with Lincoln county, which is willing, and buy the bridge and make it free. The purchase price is so small that the taxes would be less than 1-20 of a per cent of the taxation, and it is hoped that our commissioners will join the commissioners of Lincoln county and buy it. The people of this end of the county as a matter of justice, feel that they are entitled to benefit that Twin Falls county since it has been established.

Worth Five Men's Work

THAT IS WHAT THE

HENDRICKS GRUBBER

IMPROVED HENDRICKS GRUBBER

HENDRICKS ALL STEEL GRUBBER

Will Do With Ease

The Hendricks Grubber is the best on the market today. Our many years' experience in the field with other machines has put us in the lead. We guarantee the Hendricks Grubber in any and all kinds of sage brush. It makes no difference how thick or how large or how difficult it is for the horses to get through, the Hendricks Grubbers do the work. Every owner of a Hendricks machine is more than satisfied. We have never had a single word of complaint from any purchaser of our machine.

The Hendricks Grubbers with six horses, will clear six or seven acres per day in any kind of sage brush, and cut it out cleanly. The all steel machine at the price is equal to two ordinary machines.

We have manufactured the Grubbers from original designs in this section until the same of perfection has been reached in the machines now placed on the market. The cut of the first machine shows the solidity of the parts and it is a matter of pride with the maker that not a single purchaser has been dissatisfied with the work of the Grubbers.

The working principles of the machine are simple and strong, so that there is little chance of even an inexperienced man having trouble. The knives are placed so as to cut below the soil surface, thus taking on the tougher sage brush roots and leaving the land ready for plowing.

The primary election bill will become a law this week when Governor Brady does his part toward the keeping of a party plodder. The law in the eyes of most of the legislature is a poor excuse and almost any of its parts are heavily criticized when it is put into operation.

favorable to another candidate and get the voter to promise him the second choice. By a bit of quiet work the politician can secure more second choices than any one man can get first, and in event of failure of the preferred man getting a sufficient vote can walk off with the plums.

But while the bill is declared to be a rich man's bill and to have many defects, yet in his intention it is a step nearer the goal of political freedom and is merely a stepping stone to a better bill in two or four years, as result of the present defective measure.

at summer, Tuesday morning, February 23, 1909, at the age of forty-one years. Mrs. Alfred had been suffering with pneumonia the last week, but the attack came on so suddenly that she had been heart failure. She leaves a husband and one daughter, Hazel, in Buhl, and several brothers in Iowa and Idaho to mourn her loss.

Mrs. Alfred was one of the most active members of the Union Ladies Aid society, the Ladies Guild and the W. C. T. U., she being president of the last named society. To say that the loss of this lady is very keenly felt by all is speaking very lightly, for she was always a lender in everything that she thought to be noble, good and true; she was constantly working and planning for the good of others and was a true friend to all who knew her.

1809—The Lincoln Centenary—1909 Lincoln as President

"Now He Belongs to the Ages"—Child of Democracy and Its Preserver, Freeing the Slaves

By James A. Edgerlon
Copyright, 1909, by the American Press Association

NOW he belongs to the ages," said Secretary Stanton immediately after President Lincoln breathed his last. Of one or two souls a century such a thing can truthfully be said. The ages are so merciless or so forgetful in forgetting that it takes a very large man, a human mountain peak, to be seen by all countries and all things. Was Lincoln such a mountain peak? We are too close to him even to say, but everything would point him a place among earth's immortals. Men love liberators because they love liberty. They love mercy and truth, even though they do not practice them, and follow the other. Most men believe in democracy, and all men will do so before the end of another century. All human beings admire usefulness at least in other people. Lincoln was a liberator, just as he was an embodiment of mercy and truth, democracy and usefulness. He had that kindly simplicity which makes universal appeal. His motto was true at every point. Even his faults were so far from the petty and the mean and were so human that they made us love him. Above all, he rendered high respect to the race. He died for man. All of these things are of the quality that endures. From my own viewpoint there is no American who looks more that will endure him to the heart of the world in all lands and times than Abraham Lincoln. Love entitles all else, and his love for humanity was so large it is not wondered at that humanity's love is large for him. We get what we give. As we do to others, so we reap by them.

Abraham Lincoln truly "belongs to the ages." His crowning fame through the forty and more years that have passed since Secretary Stanton uttered the sentence confirms its truth. The universal celebration of the centenary of Lincoln's birth is but an earnest of like celebrations that are to come. His whole life was a continuation of the success of democracy. He was its child and its preserver. Democracy is the greatest force in this world, and one so intimately linked with it must share its immortality.

Just as Lincoln belongs to the ages so do his acts as president belong to history. With history we will leave them. This series of articles is not an attempt at history, not even an effort at biography. After all the histories of that time have been written and all the biographies of his chief figure either attempt would be presumptuous. The only hope of the writer is to find Lincoln's soul and picture it to the world in a readable way at the essentials of the man, the fundamental things that differentiate him from all other characters in history. A mere recital of his acts or his public papers could not serve this purpose even if the public did not already know them by heart. Here and there, however, is a vital and salient thing which gives a clew to his character. Such is the struggle he went through in arriving at the determination to issue the emancipation proclamation. Such is his high statesmanship in the Mason and Silldell affair. Such is the mercy he showed to condemned soldiers. Such is the serene manner in which he conducted the canvass for a second term. Such are the Gettysburg speech and the second inaugural. In all these things the man's mind worked true, and its processes, for the most part, are perfectly clear. There is one other illuminative and characteristic thing—many more, in fact, but outstanding distinctly the manner of making up his cabinet. All these things he did in his own way. They are Lincolnian.

"The act he has been most lauded for, of course, and doubtless will be most lauded for in future is the emancipation proclamation. I join not at all sure that this is a good estimate. I am not certain but that Lincoln was right in regarding the saving of the Union as the paramount thing, compared with which the liberation of the negro was subsidiary and only to be considered so far as it contributed to the other. That this was President Lincoln's own attitude and belief he made plain over and over again.

"The freeing of the chattel-slaves was a great act. The freeing of wage slaves would be greater. But was not it not the preservation of the republic, which is the vessel of all kinds of liberty for this land and for the whole race, great than either? America has given God is giving to the world a new idea in government: Her mission is to bring liberty and democracy to all nations and to all slaves. This she will do, not by force, but by example and precedent. Is not her salvation for this work and for other great work in the future more important than the freeing of a few million black slaves?"

It is impossible, however, to separate the two things. The destruction of slavery was necessary to the preservation of the republic. Lincoln himself pointed this out when he said the "nawas gone to the 'dive' institution." Lincoln was hedged about by cautious counselors. Even so, it was no precedent for emancipation long before it was given out, being held back at the advice of Seward. Above all else, Lincoln was on the ground and knew what was needed. It is hardly fair to judge him at this distance.

Here is sober truth, however. Up to the time the emancipation proclamation went into effect the Union victories had been few and slight. Within eight months the great victories and twin successes at Vicksburg and Gettysburg, which decided the fate of the war. After all, the invisible moral forces rule the world.

The hour of equalizing struggles through which President Lincoln passed in the early days of the war, in the death of his little son, in the misunderstandings and abuse from the abolitionists and others on his own side of the struggle, and his own near conflict in arriving at a determination to liberate the slaves, made the first years of the war a veritable Golgotha. That his long contemplated emancipation act, as seen in the four-hour arrival was shown by interludes with various clouds. It is suggested that the defects had his private grief had much to do with forcing him to take this step. It is suggested that the willingness of sorrow that leads us to many promised lands.

When emancipation came the fears of the timid concerning its disastrous effects on the war were not, as it were, seen to be groundless. Events went on as before. But on the 4th of July following came the events which wrote this latest decree of freedom into the world. The war was over. The war dragged on after Gettysburg, but it was only a shell. Its spirit, which was breathed into it by the Confederacy's hope, died in that field.

The articles on Lincoln and Seward in the Mason and Silldell affair was statesmanship in the highest degree. It won the golden opinions not only of Englishmen, but of all Europeans. It was a resume of the peace of universal states, not of that world having the highest courage. The frank admission of the wrong done and the real principle involved, that of the right of search, which we ourselves had denied, made the act unique in its plainness, a shining example for other lands to follow.

Lincoln's manner of conducting his campaign for a second term consisted in making no special appeal to the masses. He knew Secretary Chase was a candid date and yet did not resent it, nor would he ask for Chase's resignation. There is no doubt that Lincoln wanted the re-election of re-election and re-election. There is no question that there were times when he felt doubtful of the outcome, though usually hooded up by a serene faith. Yet he did this or nothing for himself and let his enemies consider him unchecked. That he won out shows once more that the invisible moral forces have more to do with running this world than they get credit for.

After all, however, the best part of Lincoln rests on such sentiments as are shown in his Gettysburg speech, his second inaugural address, with its "charity for all and malice toward none." In his prayers for military prisoners and his large heartedness revealed in a thousand different ways.

His tenderness for the weak, his sympathy for distress, his patience and uncomplaining endurance, his lack of concern for others—all these things having been so, there was nothing but mercy for the conquered. The spirit of the Gettysburg address is democracy; that of the second inaugural is love.

One of the war president's most marked characteristics was lack of bitterness, spite or animosity. The largeness of his nature was shown by the selection of his cabinet. In this were placed the rival candidates for the presidency in the brief space of a few days. Two of these men thought they would run the president. They were never rebuked for thinking so, but gradually awakened from their trance on discovering that they were not to be so. It was a sympathetic way, as any man in the history of running himself.

Seward was big enough to see that a few months what he wrote that the peace was not there. Lincoln and poor Chase never did discuss it until run over by the second term hand wagon.
