

SHOT DOWN BY AN ANGRY WOMAN

Barman Gets What is Coming to Him.

SHOOTING TOOK PLACE IN BURLY
WEDNESDAY MORNING.

Williams Well Known in Police Circles of This City in Past Jail Monday.

William Williams, alias Harry Howard, well-known to the sheriff's office and police of this city, was brought down from Burley Wednesday afternoon and taken to the Twin Falls hospital, suffering with a bullet wound through the lower right lung, the shot being inflicted by Margaret Worth, who had been living with and registering with her at the hotel at this city.

After being released from jail here Monday, Williams took the train for Burley, where the woman had gone, and he understood she made the remark that when he found her she would fix her, or words to that effect. On his arrival at Burley, he commenced a still hunt for the woman and was not able to run across her until four o'clock Wednesday morning, when he found her on the street of that city, remarking as he overtook her, "I have got you now." At this she drew a thirty-two revolver and shot him as above stated.

He was known in Burley as "Curly Williams," where he had been for the past three or four months, and was known as a bad man and a professional gambler.

The woman was arrested and is now in the county jail at Albion, where she will be held until the results of Williams' wounds are known. On inquiry at the hospital it was found that she made a good show of recovery.

While in this city, the couple put up at a local, rooming house, where they registered under the name of Williams. The woman was suspected of knowing something about the Placito postoffice robbery and Deputy Sheriff Harrison called on her to interrogate her. Williams objected and attempted to force Harrison from the room and in order to protect himself, the deputy was forced to strike the man over the head with the butt of his gun. Williams was then arrested and taken to jail and is now being held for retaining an officer.

A national figure to speak in Twin Falls, Idaho, Mrs. May Wood Simons, associate editor of the Chicago Daily Socialist, and contributor to the Technical Century Post, Chicago, Ill., St. Louis, Tuesday, Jan. 10th, 1912. Place to be announced later.

Perhaps no other lady in this country has the reputation for sincerity in the particular field that she has chosen for her abilities and activities than Mrs. May Wood Simons, the eminent writer, student, scholar, thinker and lecturer, and member of the oldest Greek letter society.

In her, we have a little, sweet, highly intellectual college graduate, a personage that is endowed with wonderful talent in the dramatic field, a winner of the Harris prize offered for the best composition on Economic Thought in the history of the United States from 1700 to 1810.

Many a Chautauqua has been only too glad to secure the services of May Wood Simons as the drawing card of the whole affair, and in one instance they paid all her expenses and a good staff salary to jump on the train from Grand, Kan., to Manitoba, Canada.

Her husband is the noted lecturer on History and Economics, and is also editor of the Century Socialist.

This little lady is highly talented and always her audience with logic and emotional passages in her eloquent way that stir the heart and gain the sympathy and compassion of the audience.

The women and young ladies of this county should turn out in mass to do justice to this remarkable woman fighter for their rights in the struggle for the higher achievements of the human family.

The admission at the door will be by green and red tickets of twenty-five cents and one dollar. The twenty-five cent tickets have the premiums of books or papers to that amount sent free to the holder of the same. Apply to the dollar ticket.

The lecture course has been a great success and is swelling the attendance at each meeting. Save your seats. Do not find any reason to fail to grant the Socialist credit for entertaining the public at a very high level.

This much good is being done from this feature of the work. Not only should those already interested be present to learn what to do and how to do it, but every man who has any care for the welfare of the rising generation should likewise arouse himself and take an interest in this work as it shall be presented during the campaign in the capital city.

HAY SHIPPED TO NEW YORK

One Hundred Cars Sent to That Place in the Past Two Weeks.

Last July the secretary of the Twin Falls Commercial club received a letter from C. S. Briggs of Fowler, Colorado. Mr. Briggs had been informed that there was some alfalfa hay for sale near Twin Falls and it was suggested that he should investigate and perhaps purchase some. Some correspondence ensued and a short time after Mr. Briggs came to Twin Falls. He found that there was some hay for sale here and began to make negotiations for the purchase of a large quantity. Unfortunately, he was taken ill with typhoid fever and was in the hospital several weeks. When he recovered, he began to renew negotiations with the farmers.

The first two weeks in January, Mr. Briggs shipped 100 carloads of alfalfa hay to the American Hay Co. of New York and he has contracted for an additional 100 carloads which will be shipped to Kansas City just as soon as they can be loaded. This makes a grand total of 200 carloads which he has paid the farmers $21,000 in cash.

Mr. Briggs will leave for the Argentine Republic as soon as he finishes his business in the Twin Falls country, where he will buy hay for the American Hay Co. This firm is one of the largest dealers in hay in the United States and now that they have got the alfalfa hay from the Twin Falls country they will probably offer a market for Twin Falls hay for years to come.

NEXT WEEK AT THE ISIS.

The Pictorial Production of "Dante's Inferno."

"Dante's Inferno," the great motion picture production, pronounced by critics in all parts of the world as the greatest motion picture ever attempted, opens at the Isis theatre Monday night.

The picture is one of the greatest monuments of human genius, since its production in 1865, who has later reached the age of 70 years, when he became the inspiration of the picture. Dante was a boy of 12 when he wrote the poem. The children were always deeply interested in those poems, in which flowers and prayers formed a poem, and Dante was a boy of 12 when he wrote the poem. WATER RIGHT LEGAL TANGLE

Hollister Townsite Involved in Peculiar Suit.

PROMINENT RANCHERS CLAIM FLOW IS IMPAIRED.

Well, Water Piped to Hollister Is Basis of Suit Filed in the District Court.

A suit which will add perplexity to the water right already heavy burden was started in the district court of Twin Falls county the first of the week, when Attorneys Githrie and Larson filed restraining orders on the Twin Falls Salmon River Land & Water Company, the Hollister Townsite Company and of individuals involved. The suit was made by Jones Brothers, owning two flowing wells east of Hollister in the foothills, from which flow some 100 cfs. of water for several years watered three hundred and twenty acres of land.

The complaint alleges that the defendants after the water had been appropriated to the plaintiffs' dig wells close to the property line of the defendants and by tapping the same water from the land on which the wells are dug, that they cannot divert the water and still the same for delivery for domestic and culinary purposes to the townsite.

The question which will present a new phase to the courts is that while the defendants could possibly legally use water upon the land on which the wells are dug, that they cannot divert the water and still the same for delivery for domestic and culinary purposes to the townsite.

The plaintiffs claim that prior to the sinking of the wells below their property, which had a flow of 100 cfs. inches, and that after the wells had been sunk and the water diverted to the townsite, the flow had decreased over 10 inches.

SPUDS BY TRAIN LOADS.

2132 Cars From Southern Idaho—All Records Broken.

A solid trainload of Idaho potatoes from the Idaho Falls district passed through Pocatello today on its way to the market. The train contained approximately 800 carloads of spuds in the district to the north of the Gate City, yet to be moved. Many potato growers in that district, believing that the magnificent advertisement resulting from Idaho potato Day at a Chicago Exposition will boost the price of spuds, are holding back for a rising market.

According to officials of the Montana division of the Short Line, this year broke all records in the line of potato shipments. The line to the north of Pocatello this season has so far shipped a grand total of 2132 carloads of potatoes. This means close to a hundred trainloads. Last season the potato shipments out of the Idaho Falls district totaled 1700 from all the southern part of the state should not be on hand to hear the messages of the men who are to appear.

EVADING RESPONSIBILITY.

During the past month a number of people have been quietly circulating petitions among the taxpayers to allow the high school dances in the new high school gymnasium with proper control over the students by the school authorities, with some of the teachers in attendance at the dances to maintain order. A number of signatures were obtained for the proposition on the ground that the high school students were at present attending public dances, both boys and girls, without proper supervision on the part of the parents. In fact, very dark pictures were painted of the evil of the public dances for the young children. At first glance the proposition would seem to be a step in the right direction for those who dance. But close scrutiny of the actual workings of the plan convinces the Times that the school directors are confronted with a big problem, which should be met by the parents without regard to the high school. To throw the responsibility for moral questions upon the board is a clear evasion of the parental responsibility. It is not a matter for the school board or the superintendent to decide whether the child is subject to temptation outside of school hours or give them jurisdiction over the ethics which properly belong to the home. Nor is it just or right for the school to place its approval on dancing by sanctioning dances under its auspices when the matter of whether the child shall dance or not rests solely with the parents of the child.

By so doing the school is placing the child in antagonism to the parental control, for with the persistency of every child the word of the instructors or the influence goes a long way and the sanctioning of dancing will work a hardship on the parent of the child who according to law is made responsible for the child's conduct until maturity is reached. In fact that law holds the parent responsible for every act of the child, whether in school or out and does not delegate to the school authorities any control whatsoever outside of school hours. If dancing was a part of the curriculum of the school, then the school authorities should have full charge, but with the matter of dancing a moral question with the parent and the home, the Times fails to see any reason why the dancing should even be considered in the high school building, where it brings a moral question of the same into question. Within the last decade a great agitation was brought up regarding the holding of religious exercises by the public schools and while only a minority opposed such exercises, the matter was dropped out of respect for the religious scruples of that minority. The question of dancing is in the same line—a question for the home, not the school—a question for the parent, not the school board. A moral question outside of the educational questions over which the school authorities have control.

Another question of square dealing with the taxpayers enters into the argument. The new high school building has already cost more money than was anticipated. A large amount of this expense was incurred by the building of gymnasium and auditorium at a time when space for the essential class-rooms was demanded. Twenty-five thousand dollars spent in two non-essentials, would have constructed much more class room. Say the taxpayers voted the home issue in full faith that the schools needed the bond issue, although the non-essential, due to location, was constructed before the essential and needed class rooms. Yet there was considerable question in the minds of many who voted that bond issue and it is certain that if the thought had entered the minds of the parents who voted for that issue, of the high school being converted into a temptation to their young, the bond issue would not have carried. It is not the purpose of the Times to enter into discussion of the evils of dancing, because it is a matter for the parents to decide. It believes that if dancing is right that it is the manifest duty of those parents believing in dancing to care for their own children and not throw the responsibility on the school authorities, no matter how willing the school board may be to assume such duty. If they want their children to dance, well and good, but let them see to it that it is done under their own guidance. Let them hire a hall, secure chaperones and pay for the same, and not ask the taxpayers to provide teachers, policemen and lights and heat for the fun at the expense of every taxpayer. Let them assume the responsibility as parents for the children of their own household, and not interfere with the efforts of their neighbors to bring up their children according to their own ideas.

Another question enters into the matter regarding moral welfare of the boys and girls of the city. When the matter was brought to the attention of the Times the use of the gymnasium was asked for on the grounds that moral conditions of the public dance were extremely bad for the children. Statements were made that the girls of the best families were going to public dances unaccompanied by the parents and the opening of the high school would do away with this danger. When closely pressed as to who the bands were who would be picked from the burning, it developed that it would be only high school pupils. As everyone familiar with conditions in the city knows, such distinction would not serve as a reform for the boys and girls of the taxpayers of the independent school district. At present there are boys out of school who are going with high school pupils, and girls who have graduated who are still affiliated with the high school crowd. To throw the bars would be put up, shutting them out of the association which they now have. It offers nothing for those boys and girls but the public dance, and does not solve the problem. On the other hand, to merely throw open the high school gymnasium to a small and select crowd is in the nature of a distinction which would not settle well with the taxpayers whose children, equally dear to them, would be excluded from the greatly moral uplift promised by the high school dances. It would develop obnoxious snobbery on the part of a little bunch of children who were fortunate enough to attend the dances and effectively shut out even high school pupils from participating in the social events of the school by reason of parental objection to dancing. For these reasons the Times believes that the high school affair will be given to any privileged class.

If the high school gymnasium is to be thrown open to dances it should be for the benefit of every child of the taxpayer in the school district. This, however, is impossible, according to the plan of those advocating dancing and for that reason also, the use of any part of the school building should not be given to any privileged class. The whole situation settles to the fact that if children are to be allowed to dance it is up to the parents to safeguard the dancing and not shift responsibility to the school district or to any civic organization. If the girl under sixteen or seventeen has to go to dances it is the duty of the parent to go with her and see that the proprieties are fully observed. The placing of one or several patronesses in the hall room doesn't guarantee to the mother what can occur in the interval of leaving home and returning. It does nothing more than act as a stimulus to many to show their independence of patronesses and do things which they would not do if placed on their honor. The Times does not believe that allowing dancing in the high school building will curtail attendance at other public dances, but only add one more night of relaxation from study for those who are fascinated by the lure of the dance. It means by adding the sanction of school authorities to the questionable pursuit that many new devotees will be added. There can be only one method of coping with the matter, the final authority—the parent. There can be no good reason for the use of the gymnasium for dancing except to provide for the amusement of a favored few at the expense, morally and financially, of the many.

IDAHO AND THE COW

By D. R. Hubbard, President of the Idaho State Dairy Association.

Idaho and the cow is a subject that has engaged the most thoughtful consideration by the few devoted friends of both for a number of years. These have given expression to their interests by organizing the Idaho State Dairy Association, promoting extensive work by the University among the practical farmers of the state, by giving publicity to dairymen in other states of the excellent opportunities in Idaho for dairying, by interesting men both at home and in other states in raising pure bred dairy cattle and by giving of splendid hope has overspread our intermountain prairies, and the cow is coming into her own.

To begin at the beginning, the dairyman, the cow, the feed, and the market are the essentials of successful dairying. These are the four links, none of which may be weak or lacking, and all must be of equal strength. The man may be a woman or a woman the better half of a man. The instinct must be there, big hearted, broad minded, yet with love of detail that almost amounts to crankiness, a devotion to the cow that prompts the most thoughtful care for her comfort. He will watch the buildings and stables and always know the health line between temperature and ventilation. He will know the nutritive value of the feed, which will include a knowledge of the nutrients, their availability and palatability. He will know the moods and habits of each cow, and treat her accordingly. He will know and milk the $100 cow only. He will know the difference between the $200 cow and the $100 cow.

The cow. The dairy cow is an artificial creature, wholly man made. Holland, the Channel Islands, Switzerland and Denmark are entitled to great credit for the study and production of dairy breeds. The agricultural universities of the American states are utilizing the work of these older communities for the benefit of our people. The data being developed by our scientific men and given to the American dairymen has value far and away beyond the popular estimate of its worth. The American breeder is learning to select cows with our scientific men, and feeding along lines of the best light obtainable. Indeed the best thought of our land is engaged in developing the dairy cow and with this thought is abundant financial resources. We need not send away to get the best there is in either of the dairy breeds.

For several years the writer has been advocating a method whereby a state registry may be established and our best cows receive recognition. The purpose is to base registration of females solely in performance at the milking. The minimum to be one pound of butter per day, or 300 pounds a year. No cow to be registered until she can demonstrate at the pastures. She is entitled to the papers. Males to be registered only after the dam and both grand dams show the minimum of one pound of butter per day, or 300 pounds of butter within a year. This requirement as to males should be established for all dairy breeds. The performance of the dam and the grand dam should be a part of the certificate of registration.

This work could be supervised and authorized by the faculty of the State University through its extension department, expense to be borne in part by the owners of cows, in part by the state.

The feed. One of the most eminent authorities on feeds in the United States places the relative value of grain and alfalfa at 10 and 1 respectively. 2,200 pounds of a long ton of alfalfa is equal to 2000 lbs. of a short ton of grain. In conversation with a practical dairymen in Portland not long since he said he was feeding alfalfa meal in preference to bran at the rate of one pound of alfalfa meal to five pounds of bran. He said that clover hay raised and cured in the arid west equal to or superior to alfalfa as a single ration. With corn and alfalfa and a suitable concentrate we have a very superior ration for a dairy cow and a very cheap one for a beef cow. The alfalfa pasture or pasture of mixed grasses and either alfalfa or white clover properly irrigated are good eight to ten months in the year. How great loss comes to our dairymen from overgrazing. One should not attempt to carry over two cows to the acre and in many instances three to two acres should be the limit.

The market in Idaho for dairy products is first class in a general way. The prices to the consumer are invariably adequate. The agency through which the producer is reached is of a deplorably inefficient nature. It costs 7c to 10c to get a pound of butter brought to the consumer there is something wrong. There should be an intelligent investigation and a positive remedy devised whereby our dairymen may be protected against the excessive charge, and irresponsible outfits who run alfalfa and then fail with milk checks unpaid. There should be a law requiring any company or firm to give a bond for the payment of milk checks before a company or firm can start in the business of buying milk or cream from the farmers.

The demand for dairy products in southern Idaho is far beyond our home production and the medium through which the producer reaches the consumer is one of our greatest drawbacks. Let us all pull together to remedy these things sanely and wisely. It is our duty and our need.

Owing to the snow drifts our mail service is broken for the week, the carrier being compelled to come in on horse back.

There will be a shadow play at Excelsior school house next Saturday night, January 13th. Girls are requested to bring basket lunches. A brief program will be rendered. Everyone invited.

Many sheepmen from Idaho, Idaho and Soda Springs are bringing their sheep down here for winter feeding. The Walker Bros. of Oakley, have moved their sheep to Solter Creek.

A bunch of 100 cowboys started out several days ago to look for cattle that might be snowed in in the mountains. The cowboy's lot is not always an easy one. The bunch has not yet returned.

CASTLEFORD NEWS.

Castleford, Ida., Jan. 8, 1912.

This is the coldest snap yet. How it makes the farmers laugh and the sheepmen frown.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwards were shopping in Lihl, Saturday.

Mr. Geo. Shulten has been quite sick for the last few days, but is better now.

The trappers have been doing a lively business on the Snake river. A number of lynx have been caught, and coyotes are getting scarce.

A number of the young people from Castleford attended the New Year dance at the Lowe school house Saturday night. The ladies of this town are going to make the year count.

Mr. Southworth and Mr. Wale are both erecting large sheep sheds for the accommodation of their large bands of sheep.

Clifford Flynn and Fred Seifert have been breaking range horses the past week. It is hard to tell whether the battle, the boys or the horses.

On January 14th the people of Castleford attended the New Year's society at 8 p. m. Let everyone come out and assist.

Miss Violet Flynn was accompanied home from Lihl by the Messrs. Ruth and Leah Donnak. Ernest Prichard, Wilbur Charlton and Bert Swartz. The young people went hunting and sleigh riding, but no murder was done, the rabbit was not afraid.

A large crowd from this place attended the literary society at the Darwin school house last Friday evening.

The literary program rendered was especially interesting. A program of literary nature was given by the students of the Darwin school.

The question for debate, "Which is more valuable, the horse or the cow," was ably discussed. The society has only been organized a few weeks, but old and young take an active part, which makes it interesting and instructive.

SWINE BREEDERS MEET.

Session Friday Full of Interest to Stockmen of Tract.

The first annual convention of the Idaho State Swine Breeders' association was held in the high school auditorium at Twin Falls, January 4, in connection with the State Dairy convention. This organization was formed at the Inter-mountain fair at Boise this fall, and it was decided at that time that their first convention should be held in Twin Falls. Although the organization is still in its infancy, its first meeting was a decided success and there will be a few, at least, of the Twin Falls country here that will be better fed and cared for as a result of this meeting.

A. E. Gibson, editor of the Gen State Herald, of Caldwell, who has participated in the organization of every agricultural association in the state, said this was one of the most successful meetings of any that he had ever attended at the first session.

The meeting was opened Friday morning, January 4, at 10 o'clock with a few remarks by Robert W. Sutherland, secretary of the commercial club, who then "permitted" Mr. L. I. Breckenridge to deliver the address of welcome as follows:

I am very glad to see our secretary and he was permitting me to do this, and I shall not worry you very long by this permission.

I am certainly very glad to welcome to Twin Falls a great many people from the western part of the state. It shows a combined interest that rings true of the spirit of co-operation, and I am glad to see that there is no sectionalism shown in Idaho. I think something that this is one thing that interferes with the progress of the country.

Gentlemen who are with us from the western part of the state have put me to the test at the hog raising industry that we have, and we expect a great deal from them. I think they will again that we welcome.

One of the old negro who was from the west of the state have put me to the test at the hog raising industry that we have, and we expect a great deal from them. I think they will again that we welcome.

DISCUSSION BY D. R. HUBBARD.

In behalf of the swine breeders of western Idaho, anyway, and I think in behalf of the swine breeders of this state, we can really respond to the hearty welcome of Mr. Breckenridge. We came here to co-operate with you in the study of things that pertain to successful swine raising. We do not come to strut about as instructors and teachers; we come simply to talk to you about the things that we know. The man who says he knows all about the hog business in Idaho is the man I don't want to see participate in this meeting.

So, if you are here with convictions, without knowledge, you come in a better attitude and you will make more money than the man who claims to know it all.

The hog, like corn, is a creature subject to its environment, surrounding conditions, in which it is placed, and it has been demonstrated that with proper care and conditions it will adjust itself to almost any environment. Corn is a tropical plant, and the hog is a tropical animal. The corn plant cannot be started in Idaho from seed raised in Missouri, Arkansas or Texas and succeed. You may get some results from Iowa seed, but you can get better results from Minnesota seed because the Iowa seed is more adapted to Idaho than the Iowa corn. It has adjusted itself to its environment and is more hardy and a better resistant of the cold nights than that of the southern states. Now, the hog, as we know, is raised mostly in a corn country, where it is fed on corn from the time it is old enough to eat until it is ready for the butcher. That has resulted in an adjustment of digestive apparatus to a certain kind of food. This means it has reduced the size and capacity of its intestinal apparatus and we have to change that and feed along with the corn, and adjust this digestive apparatus to feed foods and local conditions. You will be pleased to see the results. Take for instance the young animal. You have heard if you are going to develop that calf for a milk cow you should keep her on corn feed, not on rich feed. If I could make a dairy heifer from your herd I will take the most put-bellied one I can find because I know that calf has developed a digestive capacity. In fact, you will spend a dairy calf to let it run with the cow. This is the reason that you raise your hogs largely on pasture as the dairy cow develops the digestive apparatus. The successful prize fighter spends months and even years in training for a battle. So it is with the young animal. You have heard people say that you take hogs off alfalfa pasture and you never have anything feed out like they did. Why? Because they fed out. They were prepared for it. These are problems for all of us to discuss and the man who discovers things by actual experience is the man who is most welcome to come here and discuss them. If you cannot say ten words, we want you to say them because there may be more in these ten words than in a whole hour's talking. We want this experience to get into the press so that those who have been unable to attend these meetings will have a chance to learn of them. For my part, I began studying hogs way back in '75, and am still studying them and still learning.

Something new about them. I have in my mind a certain kind of hog for dairy cow, a certain kind of hog for bacon, a certain kind of hog for lard, etc. So the farmer should study and acquaint himself with the animals on the farm, but first of all you have to have in your mind a picture of the hog for which you are striving. I believe Mr. Royston, president of this association would rather see a hog in his mind than a hog in his hand. I tell you in all Idaho there are lots of hog yards I would rather be in than in some crowd of young people.

We have to know what constitutes a good hog, then we have to know what feeds may be profitably fed in this country. It doesn't make any difference what kind of hogs you can raise on corn if you don't know how to feed them.

Nutrition means the power to change feed into the things you want; it is the power of the horse to change oats and hay into speed and pull; it is the power of the cow to change her feed into milk. The subject of nutrition is an interesting and important study. I believe the time will come when it will be cheaper to put pork from Twin Falls than it is to ship it from Chicago.

I have no doubt about it. Just as soon as our ways are completed we can send our products down to Portland, down through the canal and across. Shipping by water is very much cheaper than by rail and then meat products ship easily. They will keep.

What we want to find out is what to feed, when to feed and how much to feed. Then we want to enter with the railroads and the people of Portland and let them know we want the benefit of the trade. This is the object of this meeting. We had a preliminary meeting at the state fair and decided that we should hold our first meeting here in connection with the dairy convention. I believe the membership was fixed at $2. We would like to have you join in this investigation. We want facts and the publication of these facts and the publication of these facts and the publication of these facts.

After Mr. Hubbard's address a short business meeting was held and the meeting adjourned till 1:00 p. m. The afternoon meeting was called to order by President Royston, who introduced as the first speaker, Mr. H. L. Felt of Emmett, Idaho.

Mr. Felt gave an interesting address on "The Care and Feeding of Swine."

He said that some people thought that if they went out two or three times a day and threw out a little grain to the hogs and drew the trough with water that was about all there was to the feeding of the hog. But before he had finished his talk he had convinced them that at least that the subject of feeding and caring for the hog was that required a great deal of studying in order to get the best results. He thinks that growing pigs, even though they are running on pasture, should have a little grain as soon as they are a month old. The quicker you can get the hog to weigh 200 pounds the more profit you will get out of him one year with another. It is his theory. That his address had been well taken by his hearers was shown by the numerous questions that were put to him at the close of his address.

Mr. E. G. Bennett, secretary and treasurer of the association, gave an interesting talk on "The Hog for the Idaho Farmer." He spoke of the two different types of swine—the bacon hog and the lard hog. He told in an interesting and instructive manner the different breeds that belonged to each type and the characteristics of each.

The subject of feeding was again taken up by President J. M. Royston and discussed fully. He said he had been raised in a corn country and had been connected with the hog raising industry the greater part of his life and he had raised better hogs in Idaho without corn than he had in the corn country. Our alfalfa gives us a decided advantage over the eastern hog raiser because we can feed almost any kind of grain with alfalfa and have a pretty well balanced ration. Mr. Royston cautioned against changing suddenly from one feed to another, especially when hogs are on fall feed. It is likely to cause sickness. As to the feeding value of barley, wheat or corn, he thinks there is very little difference. The one that is the cheapest is the one that should be fed. He told of his experience in feeding cantaloupes which was a success in every way as the hogs liked them and did well on them.

Thomas Woods gave a short talk on different things connected with the hog industry, based on actual experience. He also displayed some fine examples of corn raised on his farm as an additional evidence of what can be done on Twin Falls country soil if properly handled.

Short informal talks were given by A. E. Gibson of Caldwell, D. G. Sutherland, field editor of the Rural Spirit, and C. A. McAllister of Portland. A paper on "Swine Improvement on the Idaho Farm" was read by Mr. E. V. Ellington, after which the meeting was adjourned and a swine judging contest was held at Hubbard's barn. The judges' decision in this contest has not yet been announced. The dairy cow judging contest, the day before the judges decided as follows: Students' contest—F. L. Danner, first; C. Parrott, second. Farmers' contest—Mr. Elva Chandler, first; J. F. Mann, first, second.

The executive committee of the Swine Breeders' Association, was announced as follows: J. M. Royston, president; H. L. Felt, vice president; E. G. Bennett, secretary and treasurer; D. R. Hubbard and E. V. Ellington.

Resolution were passed endorsing Mr. Lively as director of livestock exhibit in the Panama-Pacific exposition in 1915.

APPLE GROWING IN INFANCY.

Growing Apples in the Twin Falls Country.

(By J. A. Waters.)

The outlook for growing apples in the Twin Falls country is most promising and I believe this particular section will take a leading place as an apple growing country. I base my remarks on my observations of seven years spent in Yakima, Wash., as well as my acquaintance with orchards in other places. The orchards here are all young, none being over six years old, and the majority two and three years old. These young orchards are well cared for, and give every promise of making good.

The most popular apple here is the Jonathan, fully fifty per cent of the trees being of that variety. This is a medium variety, and the McIntosh, Red, Gano, Rome Beauty, N. W. Greening, Winesap, Arkansas Black, York Imperial. Many other varieties do well under the conditions here as shown by the splendid results already achieved.

There are now perhaps 15,000 to 20,000 acres of apples planted on this tract, and the industry is only started. There is room here for thousands of more, and the apple orchards will be the money makers. Water apples are the most profitable crop, because of the fact that they go on the market at a time when apples have been exhausted, the game season is closed and other fruits are scarce and high priced. The months of January, February and March are the best months to sell apples, as the price is better, and yet they are cheaper to the consumer than almost any other food.

The orchardists should learn that the trees need plenty of cultivation and but little water. The mistake of using too much water is made in a great many cases, simply because the water is plentiful. I have seen several orchards here that have but one yearling a season, and the trees are five years old and they have done the best of any in the country.

When the orchardist learns the proper method of raising the apple tree, he will know the secret of successful apple growing.

Care should be taken in forming the head of the young tree, that is, the starting of the first set of limbs so they will not split down in after years. As there is a tendency for the tree to lean toward the east (from the wind) it should always be planted leaning westward, and each year the soil as far as the roots on the west, must be loosened and the tree tramped on the opposite side and leaned more to the west. This will eventually make them straight.

The Horticultural society organized here last spring has a vast amount of work before it and it can do a great deal of good. The orchardists must become posted in regard to thinning, packing, and grading, and when they learn to market their apples in first class shape they will get the top prices and their apples will always be in demand.

This fact should teach her critics something---perhaps teach them that the fixed habit of intelligent buying, based upon a persistent study of the ads, is a form of "extravagance" that should prevail in every home in the land!
