Governor Hawley again paid his respects to the press in his statement of reasons for vetoing appropriation for publishing digest of state laws. His sole reason is the claim that the law requiring the publishing of the session laws in the newspapers was in the nature of graft perpetrated by the press. In other words in order to stop a graft on the part of the venal press a just law is to be declared null and void by our distinguished attorney for enforcement of law (on the cash value man.) Governor Hawley's pliancy in evading one law and sticking for another places him in the same class with other politicians and casts considerable doubt upon his sincerity in cutting-out graft. His real reason may possibly be a deep seated purpose to hand-the-press-which-is-principally Republican-a knockout blow in criticism of his own conduct. His double backslanted evasion of the law regarding Macbeth and Shawhan appointments (clear evasion of the law to further the end of the democracy) should make the gentleman rather chary of yelling graft or anything else at the press. The digest of the laws should be published for the information of the citizen and as much as the state should bear the burden of expense in furnishing for one-half the cost the leather bound copies of the session laws to the lawyers. If the governor is on the trail of graft let him go the whole route and cut the whole thing out. The method of publishing the session laws through the newspapers is not perfect, nor do the newspapers men claim perfection for it. But if the dear governor has any objection to the law and has any suggestions for its betterment he should advance them instead of making the law useless by curtailing the appropriation. It looks suspiciously like a neat political revenge on the newspapers. Which revenge is also heaped upon the editors of both parties who are entitled to know what laws are enacted each session as well as the lawyers who are carefully provided for by the governor at the same time he is crying graft.

THE NEWSPAPER AND STATE INSTITUTIONS.

The newspapers of Idaho are children to the state in the matter of free advertising. Every educational institution in the state has its publicity bureau which has for its aim the boosting of the normal, college or university through the newspapers without expense to that institution. It has been working so successfully that every paper in the state has contributed at a safe estimate at least five dollars worth of space in each school every year and the amount wanted is increasing every year. Some of the copy is worth while as news matter to the community in which the newspaper circulates, but more often it is not. The copy which is sent out to some fifty newspapers is mimeographed to save the institution expense and often comes to the newspaper poorly inked and printed that it cannot be deciphered by any one but an expert Chinese linguist. The state schools intimate that the newspapers owe a duty to the educational interest of the state which compensate them for the using of column upon column of spurious news. There are always two sides to a case and the Times would like to present the side of the newspaper to the readers and to the state institutions. In the first place the schools and universities are supported entirely by the state from funds raised by taxation as a part of the state appropriation. Every community is taxed for the support regardless of the benefit received and in each case the newspaper pays its share of the taxes. It is in this respect doing no more of course than any other taxpayer toward such support. Should it do any more? If any other citizen or company or corporation sells supplies or labors for the institution, pay is expected and the schools expect to pay. Just what argument can the state institutions advance for asking the newspapers to donate space in the papers which is the same to them as the labor to the laborer or the supplies to the merchant? The Times can see no reason why the newspapers should be expected to do any more than the other taxpayer and if the matter printed is valuable to the schools as publicity then it should be paid for at the same basis as the other public printing.

REDUCING FRICTION IN BUSINESS.

The world is dissatisfied with wasteful methods of settling disputes. There is much dissatisfaction, and just dissatisfaction, with the administration of justice in the courts. When all has been said and done, the litigant never gets complete justice. He must pay his lawyer's bill; he must attend in court with his witness; and the decision in the litigation, even when he is successful, rarely succeeds in settling him right or in making him wiser. This is especially true of the class of litigation known as "commercial lawsuits." Much of this litigation turns upon honest differences of opinion, or honest differences of recollection, or honest differences of fact.

In the whole world of business the tendency is towards economy. How can I save in the cost of production? How can I save in the cost of distribution? These are the things the business man asks himself when he is either manufacturing, jobbing, or selling. In short, the effort to reduce economy of energy, and thus a reduction in cost. In doing this the business man is rendering a service to the whole country as well as to his own business.

For a long time the business men of the country have failed to turn their attention to the administration of their own business in the law courts. They have failed to apply the same methods and principles of economy in the handling of their litigation that they apply in the handling of their own business. They have, however, at last awakened to a realization that the disposition of mercantile disputes is just as much a part of the business of the large-minded business man as is the matter of advertising, production or distribution.

In the city of New York for more than a century has existed a body of men most truly representative of the commercial spirit and high business integrity of the community. This body is the Chamber of Commerce. About a year ago it turned its attention to the problem of applying more enlightened methods to the disposition of commercial disputes through judicial methods. After reviewing the history of its own efforts from 1764 down to the present time, it came to the conclusion that there must be in the settlement of commercial disputes some method by which there must be in the settlement of all disputes the impartial outside third party with authority to make a final decision. They found in the statutes of the state the provision by which the action of such third parties could be made a part of the judicial procedure of the state.

Three fundamental conceptions furnished the foundation for the system they constructed: First, impartiality; second, promptness; third, justice. The order in which these are stated is not the order of their importance, but the order in which they receive consideration by the business man.

Recognizing that there must always be a large number of commercial disputes that cannot possibly be disposed of except in the courts, these business men undertook to provide a method that would relieve the courts of law of such litigation as should never go into the courts at all—litigation in which the amounts involved do not justify protracted delay or expensive procedure; such litigation as can best be determined by men familiar with the problems involved; such litigation as involves the determination of issues of fact wherein both the parties are desirous of ascertaining the truth. These business men, with the search and intuition of wise statesmen, did not seek to overthrow the present judicial system, nor to make unjust criticism of its administration, but to aid and assist it by providing an easy channel for the disposition of such disputes as should not take up the time of the courts.

Is the question a question of the construction of a contract? Is the question one of the customs of trade; are the goods of the quality called for by the contract; what is the damage sustained by the failure to make the delivery on time? Such questions as these the law submits to jurors who, chosen by the accident of the occasion, rarely are equipped with the special knowledge and training necessary to dispose of the issue.

The very simple method of submitting such questions to arbitration is described in a pamphlet issued by the Chamber of Commerce. Briefly stated, this plan provides a "List of Official Arbitrators," selected by the Chamber from men representative in their particular lines, ready and willing to act as arbitrators in such disputes as may be referred to them. Any business man, whether a resident of the country or not, having a dispute with another, may submit this dispute to such an arbitrator, and the parties to the dispute can themselves choose the arbitrator. If they cannot agree upon one, they may select two, who will choose the third. They must sign a written agreement finally to abide by the decision of these arbitrators; and when the decision is made under the provisions of the statutes of the state of New York, it may be made the basis of a judgment of the supreme court of the state. The parties appear before the arbitrator (or arbitrators) and submit the facts without waste of time and without lengthy hearings, and the arbitrators, being trained in the subject-matter of the dispute, reach the point at issue promptly.

The plan recognizes the necessity for impartial investigation that shall be the basis of a judgment. It recognizes the necessity for the existence of the judicial tribunal. The wise men in charge of the movement, however, believe that the method now provided through the courts of law is in many instances wasteful, extravagant, and tedious. The chairman of the committee on arbitration, in speaking of the plan, said: "We are simply a group of business men trying to apply our business skill and business experience to develop economy in the administration of justice. We have all of us had painful experiences in the handling of our disputes in the courts, and, while we recognize the efficiency of the judicial method of disposition of litigation, we feel that with a little effort we can save much. We believe that in attempting a solution of this problem we shall be reducing the friction between business men and make for a better and more wholesome business spirit, and we also believe that we are rendering a service to the state. We are eliminating waste in the administration of justice, as we have learned of our business."

Here is a model for other cities, and an example in the field of business differences of what will more and more be done with industrial disputes, and in the end also in international disputes. The Outlook.

LABELING THE PUBLIC LANDS.

United States Geological Survey Undertaking Extensive Work.

The land-classification board of the United States Geological Survey is undertaking a survey of the public lands of the United States. The board is composed of a chairman and a general advisory committee. The chairman is made up of the chiefs of branches, divisions of the survey, and the general advisory committee is made up of the chiefs of the divisions of the survey. The board is charged with the duty of classifying the public lands of the United States into different classes, and of determining the value of the lands in each class. The board is also charged with the duty of determining the policy of the survey in the disposal of the public lands.

problems related thereto. The number of these subordinate boards may be increased or diminished from time to time as the exigencies of the work require. At present there are subordinate boards that deal with the classification of coal, oil and gas, phosphate, and metalliferous deposits and with irrigation and power matters.

The fundamental purpose for which the board and sub-boards were created is to carry out the mandate of the organic act of the geological survey, in which it is charged primarily with the classification of the public lands. This work of classification involves many questions as to procedure in public lands matters, partly incidental to the classifications and partly the result of states recently enacted, in the administration of which certain responsibilities devolve upon the survey, either directly or in co-operation with other bureaus in the interior department.

The board's activities have during the last year or more been largely increased by certain co-operative agreements with the general land office by virtue of which the commissioner requests information on the mineral or power value of lands for which a patent is asked, either before or after examination by special agents. The office of Indian Affairs likewise refers to the geological survey lands listed for patent, and lands which it is proposed to eliminate from the reservations and throw open for settlement. In order that the mineral or non-mineral character or the power value of the lands affected may be determined, proposed subdivisions from national forests are likewise referred for report as to mineral character and power value, and all Carey Act lands are submitted to the geological survey for a statement as to the sufficiency of the water supply and the adequacy of the proposed plan of irrigation before the lands are approved for reclamation.

COAL LAND CLASSIFIED.

Work of United States Geological Survey in 1911 in Public Land States.

The area appraised as coal land by the United States Geological Survey during the fiscal year 1911 was 7,821,508 acres. The area classified as non-coal land was 2,285,416 acres, greater than that so classified in 1910. On the other hand, the average price fixed per acre and the total appraised value are notably less for 1911 than for 1910. The difference is due to a concentration of work in the lignite and low-grade subbituminous fields of eastern Montana and Wyoming, where the appraised values under the regulations are the minimum fixed by law.

The charge has been made that the classification policy of the geological survey has been harmful to the coal industry of the west by placing prohibitive prices on the public coal lands. The fact that the coal production of the Rocky Mountain States in 1910 showed an increase of 14.7 per cent over the production of 1909 indicates that the western coal industry has not been seriously injured. It is a further significant fact that the sale of coal lands during the four fiscal years since the adoption of the survey's classification policy has been 12 1/2 per cent greater than during the four preceding years, while the increase in receipts from the sales has been 26 per cent. (From annual report of Director of United States Geological Survey.)

ARE YOU USING

Electric Light?

Good household lighting can be afforded by every family of moderate means. The average monthly bill for residence lighting in this city under the $1.00 minimum is approximately $1.80 per month, and in small houses approximately $1.35 per month.

For an average price of $1.80 per month is sold absolutely the best, the cleanest, the most convenient and safest lighting in the world.

This is a dull month for the electrical contractors. The are willing to make prices lower than ordinary. A considerable saving in labor can be effected if with a large number of contracts they can proceed from house to house. To parties occupying their own houses which require wiring an additional inducement is being made by the Great Shoshone and Twin Falls Water Power Company. For further information in regard to this, inquire at the office.

If you are a renter you will find that most landlords will wire their houses if their tenants really want electric light. Wired houses secure good tenants.

HANSEN HAPPINGS.

Hansen, Ida, Feb. 5, 1912. Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Stenour of Murrah, were entertained at the Severn's home Saturday night and Sunday. They were here attending the Sunday school convention.

Mrs. H. Gurnett of Buhi, visited a few days recently with her daughter, Mrs. R. W. Gager.

Mrs. M. Stenour and Maude Atkin of Rock Creek, Miss Myrtle Hull and Messrs. Leon Redhead and Dan Smith, were hospitably entertained at dinner Sunday by Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Redhead.

Miss Gertrude Walton and sister, Mrs. W. E. Stone, of Buhi, visited last Saturday night to spend some time in Montana.

The ten cent lunch at Mrs. Vanderpool's was well attended despite the bad roads.

Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Gager and family ate Sunday dinner at E. P. Hinton's.

Rev. John K. MacGillivray and Rev. Nebr, both of Twin Falls, spent Saturday night at the Elms Laycock home.

Five of Hansen's young ladies gave a leap year dance in Hamilton hall last Friday night. There was about eighty present, some coming from Twin Falls, Rock Creek and Kimberly. At midnight a nice lunch consisting of sandwiches, pickles, olives, cake and coffee was served and was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. It was a very successful affair and everyone reports a delightful time. The young men all agree that the girls, though somewhat bashful, took their part very well, but the girls are not so sure about it.

Leon Redhead was a Rock Creek visitor—Thursday.

Mr. Bacon has bought W. E. Calkins' hay and has about three thousand sheep there feeding.

E. S. Nall arrived here Tuesday morning from Quinn, S. D., with his carload of stock, farm implements and household goods. His wife and little daughter, Delilah, came the following day. They intend to make their home here, and we are glad to welcome them to our number. Mr. Nall is a nephew of Mrs. Vanderpool.

Miss Maude Atkin spent Saturday night at the Lacourse home. She was here attending the Sunday school convention, being the delegate from the Pleasant Valley Sunday school.

Mrs. W. E. Hubbard and little sons, the younger of whom is quite sick, left Thursday morning for King Hill, Idaho. Some of the ambitious ladies cleaned the church Thursday, and the men finished painting the outside of it, for all of which the community gives them a vote of thanks.

Baby Clarence Lacourse has been quite ill the past week—but is much better at this writing.

Miss Maude Atkin spent the latter part of the week at the Vanderpool home.

Mr. and Mrs. Laycock entertained Dr. Rogers of Buhi and Rev. Nebr of Twin Falls at supper Sunday evening. Mr. Edmer Reese of Goldburg is feeding sixteen hundred sheep on the Sturgeon McCoy ranch, preparatory to shipping them east.

Sunday Miss Edna Tilly of Kimberly, had the misfortune to lose her hand-bag, containing several valuable pieces of jewelry and some money, on the road between Hansen and Kimberly. She would be very grateful for any information regarding it.

The Sunday school convention held at the E. C. Calkins' home was very well attended. Rev. Nebr gave a very interesting address on the "Intermediate Stage" in the life of a Christian. Rev. Nebr delivered a short sermon on "The Teacher," during the morning session. After a very nice dinner the meeting opened by Dr. Rogers reviewing the Sunday school lesson, then Rev. MacGillivray gave an outline of "The Bible." W. E. Calkins sang a solo. Rev. Nebr delivered a short sermon, and Mrs. Stenour, district superintendent of the elementary department, on "Consecration and Classification," after which Rev. Hardin dismissed the congregation. It was a very successful and helpful convention.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Edwards and family returned today from an eight week's pleasure trip. They had a very pleasant time, and their friends and neighbors are very glad to welcome them home.

Hansen has a shortage of cars, and ballet has an abundance in town ready to be unloaded as soon as cars are received.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Calkins and family attended a special Sunday night service at the Pleasant Valley school house.

It is reported that one of our Hansen young men, Ben Walton, is married. This comes as quite a surprise to his friends here.

Not alone in quantity can your grocery money be made to go further. You can save both in quantity AND quality at this store.

Quantity ALONE does not make a bargain. Quality is as necessary as quantity in a bargain. For instance, a pound of cheap coffee is far dearer than a pound of moderate priced coffee. For a pound of bad coffee will not brew so many cups as a pound of good coffee.

So with most groceries. All our goods are bargains both in quantity AND quality. Your grocery money buys more here than in any other store in town.

IDAHO-WASHINGTON BOUNDARY

Resurvey Made by United States Geological Survey.
The boundary line between the states of Idaho and Washington was originally surveyed in 1873 by R. A. Rogers, under contract with the general land office. As the markings of this survey had become largely obliterated, and the country in the neighborhood rapidly settled, congress in 1898 authorized a resurvey of the boundary and resurveyed at this time, and appropriated $25,000 for the purpose. The resurveying was done by the United States Geological Survey, and the report of the survey was published by the survey as Bulletin 466, by R. H. Marshall, chief geographer. The report contains an extensive description of the field notes of the original surveyor, Mr. Rogers, whose account of the difficulties and hardships encountered in the resurveying at this time, when much of the country traversed is a well-settled and highly prosperous country, in contrast to the trials related by Mr. Rogers, Mr. Marshall remarks:
"With a knowledge of the country traversed, as it is today, one can but marvel at the persistence and hardihood of that party of men who did not falter and who, in the face of the most difficult conditions, compelled their retreat. At their northernmost point they were nearly 90 miles from Spokane bridge, the nearest white settlement—on miles of mountains, windfall forests, thickets, with zero weather, and snow. In the resurveying at this time, a few of these difficulties were encountered."
The Idaho-Washington boundary line runs through rugged agricultural and stock country, where work was easy, and also through heavily timbered mountains, where continuous chopping was necessary for a few days. The boundary north from Newport to the Canadian line is described as excessively rugged.
Most of the wooden boundary points of the original survey had disappeared, though in setting the new points their stumps were often cut back to build a post of wrought iron were set at every mile point, and every 5 miles, as closely as the topography would allow, 800-pound granite pillars were set with the words "Idaho" and "Washington" chiseled on their respective sides. The report contains a description of each post and a statement as to what was found remaining of the original survey. The report contains a topographic map and data for which were obtained in the resurvey, showing all the natural topographic features and the features of man for a width of about three-fourths of a mile on either side of the boundary line. The report also contains a statement of the various streams, railroads, and wagon roads and passes through the towns of Newport and Farmington.
