

NEW HOLLAND COLONY TOWN
Amsterdam on Salmon Trout Growing.

THRIFTY SETTLERS FROM OLD COUNTRY IN NEW SECTION.

Amsterdam, Idaho, settled at present entirely by former residents of Holland, is one of the newest of Twin Falls county municipal townships, and is one of the best located in this portion of the state. The present population of the town is sixteen families, all of them brought in by the colonization work of the Holland Immigration company. These settlers have purchased land adjoining the town, and all of them are prepared to stay and build up the town. They are all thrifty and good citizens with a large amount of community loyalty, so that the future of Amsterdam should be assured.

BRAKEMAN IS KILLED

Fell From Car While Switching in the Nampa Yards.

Victor Bellow, a switchman in the employ of the Oregon Short Line at Nampa, was killed while switching in the yard at Nampa, Idaho, on Tuesday. It is believed that he either fell or was knocked from the top of a car, as his lifeless body was found lying on the ground a few minutes after he had been seen. The skull was crushed and death is believed to have been instantaneous. Bellow was 40 years of age and is survived by his wife, who lives on a small tract near this city, and also three children. He was a member of the Order of Railway Conductors and the Elks. His body will probably be taken to Cedar Rapids for burial.

BOXING CONTEST A DRAW.

Dane Falls to Get Decision Over Carpenter.

Friday evening's boxing contest drew a large crowd to the Dreamland, owing to the clever boxing made by the Fighting Dane in his previous work with the Salt Lake Kid. The gate receipts were all that could be expected and the crowd was enthusiastic, but the result was disappointing to many who believed that the Dane would have no trouble in showing his superiority. Owing to the decision as to rules the Dane was unable to make use of his terrific jabbing method and his opponent was able to get away from most of the short arm jab. The whole bout was decidedly fast, however. The Dane left Saturday night for Boise, where he went in training for the contest there.

CENTRAL IDAHO TRAINS.

Good Service Now Given from McCall to Camas Prairie.

Regular train service is now being given over the Central Idaho railroad from McCall to Camas Prairie, a new station just north of the McCall river. It was a very real disappointment to the railroad riders that they were not able to complete the laying of the track to the end, at Prairie City. The hard winter, however, made it impossible, and they have already been delayed by the failure of their bridge contractor. The two great bridges are in place now, however, and are carrying a lot of traffic.

CEREAL FACTORY

IS DISCUSSED

Advantages and Disadvantages of Food Manufacture.

L. L. BRECKENRIDGE SPEAKER AT COMMERCIAL CLUB LUNCHEON.

Lack of Railroad Facilities and High Price of Grains Against Present Activity.

The Commercial club luncheon Wednesday was attended by about thirty members who, after getting outside of a turkey dinner, listened to L. L. Breckenridge talk on the advantages and disadvantages of establishment of a cereal factory in Twin Falls. Mr. Breckenridge stated in brief that while the products were here and that the market in breakfast foods was always good, yet that several difficulties prevented the foreign manufacturer from competing. He acted as authority, a manufacturer of rolled oats with a large factory at Portland, Oregon, who in the course of conversation stated that it was a hard struggle to introduce a new food product. Fresh fruits, lack of territory tributary, and higher prices for the raw product, need for heavy advertising, made it difficult to compete in Idaho, a distant market. He stated that he had a two thousand-mile haul from the east, with cheaper rates, cheaper labor, and cheaper products.

CONGRESS MUST DECIDE

Supreme Court Hands Down Decision in Initiative and Referendum Case.

Washington, Feb. 19.—Only congress and not the supreme court of the United States may decide on the initiative and referendum of legislation in the states, so the court decided today. That tribunal held that the question of whether a state will maintain a republican form of government guaranteed by the federal constitution is not for the initiative and referendum, but a problem for congress and not a judicial one for the courts. The decision was based on the claim of the chief justice, William Howard Taft, that a tax imposed on the initiative and referendum method in Oregon was unconstitutional. The initiative and referendum provisions in Missouri, California, Arkansas, Colorado, South Dakota, Utah, Nevada, and Arizona, were all upheld by the court. An adverse decision would have affected the proposed legislation of that character in many other states.

THE PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN.
MR. LA FOLLETTE'S WITHDRAWAL.

The two events of last week of special interest in the re-nomination campaign were the withdrawal of Senator La Follette and the collapse of the Hayden resolution, nominally directed against the so-called "third term" idea, but practically intended to be an obstruction to the popular movement for the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt. At the annual dinner of the Periodical Publishers' Association, Senator La Follette made a speech of two hours' duration, which, in length, in temper, and in ambiguity clearly showed that the great pressure of the last two or three months has brought him into such a state of nervous tension that it is impossible for him to go on for the present with the exhausting activities of the campaign. His indisposition is not a serious one, and will undoubtedly be only temporary; but it is sufficient to remove him from the list of present presidential possibilities. His friends and managers have practically announced his withdrawal. Mr. La Follette has devoted himself for many years with unflagging energy to the cause of popular government as opposed to special privilege, and the country owes him a debt of gratitude not only for his concrete achievements in the state of Wisconsin, but for the undaunted courage which he has shown in fighting injustice wherever he has been. It is fighting does not make friends; it presupposes enemies; and Mr. La Follette has his share of them. Whatever may be his political future, he is well entitled to the satisfaction of knowing that the enemies of the rights of democracy have regarded him as one of their most dangerous and influential opponents.—The Outlook.

That Theodore Roosevelt is very much in evidence in Republican politics has been demonstrated this past week when a number of prominent politicians all over the country have deserted La Follette's standard for that of the big-rifle leader. Among these are Clifford H. Meritt, Governor Johnson of California. In spite of the manifestations of Roosevelt strength, not a break has come in the long silence maintained by Roosevelt. Planchet's defection from the La Follette ranks is regarded as evidence of Roosevelt's intention to accept the nomination if it is tendered him, owing to Planchet's great friendship for the former president. But from the La Follette headquarters there comes not a hint that the Wisconsin man is intending to pull out for the chief of the progressives. Taft politicians seem to fear the Roosevelt silence more than they fear his active antagonism, and many attempts have been made to draw the "doubtful colonel" out of his shell. Roosevelt, despite the claims of the La Follette men and the Democrats who fear him is not a dead one nor a dead horse with the cover. His horse is true, lost some strength and some confidence of the people, but most of it was lost through his endorsement of Taft as his successor, not through any falterings of his own. Roosevelt's name can still conjure up a lot of enthusiasm in the west and south, and as long as he does not actually and completely deny his third term aspirations his boom will continue to grow. To the thoughtful person Roosevelt's tactics show a strong indication that it is not the nomination that Roosevelt is after, but the naming of Taft's successor. With every day that he keeps silence is rolling up a bit closer with which he can command a larger influence in the coming convention. Each day will see much of the insurgent and progressive strength leaving the other anti-Taft candidates and lining up for Roosevelt on the supposition that he will accept the nomination. When the time is ripe and when the other candidates are out of the running, Roosevelt will or will attempt to do just what he did four years ago: dictate the Republican nomination in the Chicago convention. Roosevelt, through his influence as an editorial writer for The Outlook, can be seen to disapprove of Taft. With each issue of that periodical can be traced an undercurrent of criticism and dissatisfaction with the results of the administration. There seems to be no sign to assure that the insurgent strength will ever be for Taft, nor that Roosevelt will again align with the regular unless his candidate is made the nominee.

THE PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN: THIRD TERM FEARS.

The resolution introduced into the house of representatives by Mr. Hayden of Texas, can hardly be said to represent a fear of the dangers of a third term in general, but rather a fear of the growing interest in the possible nomination of Mr. Roosevelt, which it would be an affection for The Outlook, in spite of its relations with Mr. Roosevelt, to ignore. The nominal purpose of Mr. Hayden's resolution was to put Congress on record as opposed to a third term. Following the precedent set by Congress in the time of the Grant campaign of 1876, Mr. Hayden appears to have been under the impression that the Democratic majority in Congress would have no hesitancy in passing the fear bill. He is reported to have openly declared that his resolution was aimed at the "Roosevelt movement." The resolution itself was not voted upon, but a proposal to consider it on the floor of the house was defeated by a vote of 90 to 51, which permanently pigeonholed it. The objection of the house to the resolution was based, not on the ground that the majority are in favor of a third term for American presidents, but on the ground that they believed the passage of the resolution would be a virtual admission on the part of the Democratic party that Mr. Roosevelt, if nominated, would be almost impossible to beat. This was the view, not only of Democrats, but also of Republicans. Mr. Mann, the leader of the Republican minority in the house, declared, for example, that while he was for President Taft for re-nomination, a direct vote upon the resolution, whether it was for the resolution or against it, would have been construed as favorable to Mr. Roosevelt. Mr. James, the influential Democratic senator-elect from Kentucky, has stated that he opposed the resolution for the following reasons:

"The country would say the Democratic party, through its national representatives in the congress of the United States, had shown that they were afraid of Roosevelt by the passage of this resolution. Of course I am against a third term in a presidential office, whether for Roosevelt or any other person. But the Hayden resolution does not in fact strike the Roosevelt case, though it was evidently intended to do so, because it says that Washington and other presidents of the United States, in retiring from the presidential office after their second term, established a custom that has become, by universal concurrence, a part of our republican system of government, and that a departure from this time-honored custom would be unwise, inappropriate, and fraught with peril to our free institutions. Roosevelt could very well answer that he retired after the second term, and that four years intervened between it and the one he now seeks."—The Outlook.
