

A CHANGE IN PIONEER FIRM

Adams-Pilgrimage Lumber Company Dissolved.

WILL NO LONGER RETAIL LUMBER IN THIS CITY.

Twin Falls Saw and Door Factory Comes Into Existence With J. J. Pilgrimage as Owner.

The Adams-Pilgrimage Company owning and operating a planing mill and wholesaling and retailing lumber and building supplies was dissolved a short time ago and the Twin Falls Saw and Door company formed in its place, with John J. Pilgrimage as the sole owner. The new concern will devote its energies entirely to the operation of the factory and will make a specialty of high grade mill work, interior finish and sash and doors. Mr. Pilgrimage, who is one of the oldest of the pioneer lumbermen of the city, will give his entire time to the trade and will endeavor to give the best of service.

The mill has always been equipped for doing high grade work and will need few improvements to bring it up to the point of the best service and Mr. Pilgrimage has about accomplished this improvement to his satisfaction.

For several years the company which has just dissolved has been meeting with success prices and quality of work turned out in other cities and Mr. Pilgrimage will endeavor to keep all of the business in the city by promptness in service and the quality of the work done.

The retail and wholesale lumber business will be discontinued and Mr. Geo. H. Adams will take charge of the saw mill and timber property in Oregon.

HOME TALENT CONCERT.

Presbyterian Ladies Making Careful Preparation.

The concert which will be given under the auspices of the ladies of the Presbyterian church will be entirely a home talent affair in which all of the musicians of the city will be asked to take part. It is a tentative of denominational affiliation. Twin Falls has some exceptionally fine musicians and the promise concert should prove highly attractive to the public.

BRYAN THE GUEST OF CITY ADVISES NEW DATA COMMITTEE

Nebraskan Makes Political Speech to Large Audience Tuesday Afternoon.

Peerless Leader and Formulator of Platforms Pays Passing Respect to Roosevelt and Taft. Is Greeted With Enthusiasm.

LI SCHOEN OF COMMERCIAL CLUB BRINGS OUT NEW IDEA.

William Jennings Bryan the real brains of the Modern Democracy was received with great enthusiasm Tuesday afternoon during a very brief visit to this city during which time he delivered a political speech to a crowd of about six hundred in Collium hall. The local Democrats turned out en masse to greet the great orator and escorted him with the Twin Falls band leading the procession to the hall. Henry cheer continued for some time upon the appearance of Mr. Bryan upon the platform and his whole address elicited hearty applause. Immediately after the speech Mr. Bryan was taken by train over to Jerome where he delivered a short speech on his way to the capital city. The full address delivered in this city follows:

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: It is gratifying to be assured that I have no many friends here and it is especially pleasing to have so large a percentage of them in the audience. I have felt an attachment to this section of the United States because it made a very deep impression upon me by contrast. I was over this part of Idaho evening because forward I came again when it was a garden and I have used what I have found here to illustrate what was possible when the imagination is applied to the resources. I am only sorry that in coming I cannot stay with you longer and talk to you at length, but I know, I am a land owner in this neighborhood—I have a piece of land over about Jerome—and I am like the man in the Bible who had bought a piece of land and must go and see it; I want to get over there before dark for I have not seen it since the town was laid out and they tell me they have a town over there now as large as the town where I was born, which was a country seat, and about fifty years old. I can very easily imagine it is true when I see what has happened here in fact, you know we all have hopes for the future, we are connected with—and I am so nearly connected with Jerome—and when I see what Twin Falls has done, what won't Jerome do after a while?

I was told you were expecting a political speech, and I am perfectly willing to live up to expectations in that respect; there are a good many different kinds of speeches I make, and among them is the political speech, and that I am ready to make any time when people will listen. My only embarrassment now is that so many Republicans are making my speech that it is not as new as it used to be. If we Democrats could only put our ideas and keep the Republicans from stealing them we would run them out of business in a short time.

I never have been feeling quite so good as since yesterday morning. I felt this good feeling coming on for several days, and I knew it was destined to arrive on Monday. I knew that an announcement was going to be made, and I had intimations in advance of what it was going to be. I guessed it first when I saw people coming from Oyster Bay and saying that they were for Mr. Roosevelt—that was no indication; and then when he went to Columbus and made that speech, and when "The Outlook" discussed the third cup of coffee, I knew.

We don't have to make any arguments ourselves at all. We have Mr. Taft as our authority that Mr. Taft has made such a poor president that he could not be re-nominated. And it does not matter how whether he is nominated or not; we have this indictment to use against him in the campaign if he is nominated. So that the dispassionate of Mr. Taft.

And we can go to Mr. Taft and get just about as strong a statement that Mr. Roosevelt ought not to be re-nominated either—and I have such confidence in the veracity of these two men that I cannot doubt that either one is true; so neither of these men ought to be nominated. When was the Democratic party ever re-nominated a president? We have been having all the fighting in our party. The Republican conventions would be an echo that Republicans came to our convention to find excitement—and they always found it. This year our convention is going to be a time affair, symphonic with the Republican convention, and I want a front seat in that convention to watch the fun.

What is the contest in the Republican party? It is between the progressive element and the standard element. My sympathy is with the progressives, always. I cannot sympathize with the standardists, because the standardist can find a permanent place, a place where he will be at home and feel at home, only in the grave; there is no place for a man who does not move in this moving world—and my sympathy is with the progressives. I am not of any party, the element that goes forward, take that element that is alive, that element that goes forward as fast as difficulties appear, that element out of any party and the party soon decays.

But, my friends, my sympathy for progressive Republicans does not blind me to the fact that there is no line upon which the progressive Republicans are now arrayed, where the Democrats have not been active before them. If Mr. Taft is re-nominated for the presidency, we have a great deal that we can say against his candidacy, and show why he should not be elected, and we can call as witnesses a very large percentage of the Republican party—and I think that I will have to defend Mr. Taft against some of the progressive Republicans. I think he has really done better—considering everything—than some of them give him credit for. I say "considering everything" and there is an awful amount to consider. Mr. Taft went in to that office under false pretenses; he went in as a dual character, and he could not stay so long. He was recommended to the east as a conservative, and to the west as a progressive. He knew which one it was, and he was a whiner—up! and down east they said "Sh-sh-sh!" He will put you to sleep. He was represented as being what no man can be—both a conservative and a progressive. The campaign was over I had had two men to run against instead of one, and that the air would be cleared when we knew which one it was. It was he could not be Mr. Roosevelt and be himself; and when he decided to be Mr. Taft, he decided to be a failure.

My friends, I believe Mr. Taft is not (Continued on Page 8).

J. A. Barrett Discusses Railroad Situation.

LI SCHOEN OF COMMERCIAL CLUB BRINGS OUT NEW IDEA.

Next Topic to be That of Cheap Power by Jos. H. Seaver of the Power Company.

J. A. Barrett, manager of the Standard company in this city was the principal speaker at the Commercial Club luncheon on Wednesday of this week, talking for his subject "Rail Road Possibilities for the Twin Falls Tract." Mr. Barrett took more time for his discussion than the previous speakers at the luncheon, but was well informed as to his subject as to railroad traffic attention. Mr. Barrett showed in brief how Twin Falls commended a strategic advantage as an actual center as a supply point, that such advantage would sooner or later bring railroads into the territory. In bringing out this knowledge Mr. Barrett did not of course any more than emphasize the advantages of Twin Falls. He knows full well, but he did bring out during his address a suggestion that should prove valuable. He stated that in railroad competition the amount of traffic was the information wanted by any railroad before entering or agreeing to enter any field. A committee of three men appointed by the Commercial Club whose sole duty would be to keep close watch of the amount of incoming and out going shipments, make accurate reports and also keep the railroads interested in the country and its development. Mr. Barrett stated that in his estimation such course would more quickly bring desired results in railroad activity than any other plan.

The topic for next Wednesday will be upon Twin Falls advantages of cheap power, which will be discussed by Jos. H. Seaver of the Great Shoshone Power company.

BEAT BOISE THE SLOGAN.

Basket Ball Game For Championship Will Be Warm.

Go? Well, I should say so. You, my friend, are due to fight to the phone and call up your wife and tell her not to make any arrangements for you to go to the basketball game for the state championship and that you want her to go along. I know that she will be delighted and you could possibly spend an evening to better advantage.

For some reason or other our local basketball players are not receiving the support of the town-people that they should have. Over nine-tenths of the spectators at games are from Boise. They are thereby taking the towns-people some what in the minority. If the local five have been a losing one there might be some excuse for lack of support, but having defeated every team played and even bringing home to Twin Falls the championship of southern Idaho, it is the opinion of the local five that the state championship, surely merits more loyalty and better support than the one from Boise. The local five have a record it behooves all to be present for the team needs you to encourage them thru the game, your money because the expense to bring the western champions will be considerable more than usual. This is the first time in the history of the local five that they have the right to compete for the state championship, surely merits more loyalty and better support than the one from Boise. Is Again Convicted of Selling Liquor Contrary to Law.

District court convened Monday morning after a recess of a week. The first case taken up was that of W. F. Burgoyne who had been convicted against him for selling liquor contrary to law.

A jury was quickly secured and the case was heard and was somewhat interesting while it lasted. The case was given to the jury Monday evening and the jury returned their verdict in a verdict of guilty on all seven counts. Burgoyne was then convicted of the same charge and is now out on bail pending a decision of the supreme court. Last Saturday he had a hearing before Judge W. J. SOME GOOD ROAD POINTERS.

Suggestions to Supervisors on the Care of Highways.

SIMPLE, BUT USEFUL, DON'TS.

Expert Tells How to Keep a Road in Good Condition and Avoid Trouble. Don't Be Satisfied, He Says, With Anything but the Best.

Excellent advice on the care and construction of roads is contained in the following set of suggestions to road supervisors, which were compiled by Robert A. Meeker, state supervisor of roads in New Jersey:

Don't leave grass and weeds on the shoulders and in the gutters.
Don't dig the mud out of the gutters and throw it upon the road.
Don't leave dirt in piles on the road.
Don't throw grass and weeds upon the road surface.

Don't dump stone or gravel on an old road without first preparing the surface, to receive it, because you thereby cause willful waste and wear.
Don't place new material on the road without leveling and shaping it so that the grade and cross section of the road will be unchanged.

Don't expect travel to spread and roll the new material. One-half of the money spent is wasted by this method.

Don't put new material on an old hard road surface before picking or loosening the old covering. It is good for the quarryman and gravel owner, but bad for the taxpayer and road user.

THE DIFFERENCE.

[Both these roads are in the same state. One is well taken care of, the other neglected.]

Don't try to do work without proper tools.

Don't leave your scraper in the shed. Don't forget to use your sprinkling wagon.

Don't let your steam roller lie idle. Don't think any old tools are good enough for road work.

Don't use dull picks, broken shovels, dull scraper blades or broken and lousy steam rollers.

Don't waste your rainy days. Don't let water stand on your road.

Don't try to repair a road in dry weather without a liberal use of water. Don't allow culverts or pipes to become choked up.

Don't allow the outlets of underdrains to become stopped up. Don't let water get under a road.

Don't let ruts form. Don't let the road lose its original cross section.

Don't let the shoulders get higher than the center of the road.

Don't fall to when your bills at every opportunity; no better place for the mud, grass and weeds taken off the road than on the sides of high embankments.

Don't use guard rails if you can get dirt to widen your road.

Don't bury a stone road under mud. Don't crown your road so high that no one will travel on the sides.

Don't forget that the entire width of the road is intended for use.

Don't expect a road to take care of itself.

Don't fall to locate all good, foreign material lying on or near the road.

Don't let experienced men go simply to give some one a job.

Don't lose sight of the fact that road repairing is a trade and must be learned.

Don't guess at the amount of material required. Measure and know.

Don't depend on some one else to tell you what the condition of your roads is.

Don't fail to visit every road under your care at least once a week.

Don't be sure to use any good material that may be offered unless the same has been proved bad.

Don't think there is nothing more to be learned about road building.

Don't forget that nobody knows it all.

Don't think because you do not hear the comments that your work is not being praised or criticized, as the case may be.

Don't look down on your work. Don't lose sight of the fact that good roads are one of the greatest factors in the development of any country.

Don't be satisfied with anything but the best.

EXPERIMENT WITH A SAND AND OIL ROAD.

One Highway at Falmouth, Mass., Standing Traffic Well.

Macadam roads have now found their way into many localities where there is little or no stone. This scarcity of stone and the resulting high cost of macadam would naturally suggest the question, Is there local material available that is suitable for the construction of a highway that will withstand modern traffic? This question seems to be answered, at least in localities where sand is plentiful by the construction of the sand oil road.

During the summer of 1910 a road was constructed in Falmouth, Mass., and at present its wearing qualities are attracting much attention. The road is the main thoroughfare connecting Falmouth with lower Cape Cod and carries a heavy traffic during the summer months. It is located in a sandy stretch, where the scarcity of stone and the distance from a railroad would have made a macadam road very costly. While the entire length of this sand oil road cannot be termed a success, still a certain portion shows that sand mixed with a suitable binder will afford a surfacing that will withstand modern traffic and do away with the dust nuisance.

The surfacing is a mixture of sand and asphaltic oil, and while the method of construction was the same throughout, various kinds of oil were used with different results. Where the lighter oils were used it took a longer time for the road to become hard, and in some places the surface was never hard during the heat of the day. But where the thicker and more viscous binder was used the surface became hard and firm and could be opened to traffic in about six hours.

The road was graded so for ordinary macadam, and the sandy subgrade was hardened with about three inches of clay loam, after which it was shaped and rolled and was then ready for the sand oil mixture.

The work was performed by a contractor. It was found necessary in order to obtain the best results to heat both the sand and the oil. The contractor's plant was composed of six ovens used for heating sand, four 100 gallon kettles for heating the oil, a two horse roller and the ordinary hand tools.

Many ways for mixing the sand and oil were tried, but it was finally decided that the following was the quickest and gave the best results: A bottomless measuring box that would hold fifteen cubic feet was placed on the platform, and while one man continually shoveled in sand from the front of the oven another dipped oil from an oil carrier. Two men, one at each end of the box, constantly raised the sand and oil. After about fifteen cubic feet of sand and ten gallons of oil were mixed the box was lifted and the whole mass was turned with shovels until each particle of sand was coated with oil and the mixture was black.

The road is now one year old, and the maintenance cost of the successful portion has not exceeded that of a new macadam road. A sample taken from this part of the road shows that a hard crust has formed on the outer surface. The rest of the sample shows that the binder is still adhesive and has not become brittle.

The success of this part of the road shows that if sand is mixed with a proper binder it will make a surfacing that is cheap, durable and dustless, and will probably become the most popular road surface in sandy districts, where a scarcity of stone and the distance from freight depots would prevent successful macadamizing.

SAND AND CLAY ROADS BEST.

Florida Authorities Impressed With Low Cost and Excellent Condition.

There is a rapidly growing sentiment among the road builders of Jacksonville, Fla., to have high ways constructed of sand and clay material. Many who are able to speak authoritatively on the subject believe that no better roads, cost and traffic conditions considered, can be found than these built of this material.

The state engineer of North Carolina is said to have stated that the best highways of that state were the sand and clay roads.

Members of the special board of trade committee recently made a trip through the counties of Orange, Lake and Marion in Florida and were greatly impressed with the sand and clay roads, besides being amazed at the practicality, cheapness and ease with which they can be repaired.

COST OF BAD ROADS:

If you will figure what poor roads cost you every year you will see that the necessity of improvement and you will be surprised to see how easily the improvement can be made.

Her Advice

By SARAH J. TUCKER

Two farms lay side by side, the one belonging to old Charney, the other to young Peterson. Peterson had inherited his farm with a debt on it and had no money with which to stock or work it. The season for planting was coming on, and Charney was looking out for hands. Peterson told him that if he would hire him for the whole season he would work for him. To this Charney agreed.

One morning in April Albert Peterson was plowing in Charney's field. The trees were just taking on that delicate shade of pale green which is so beautiful while the air was balmy with the first warm breeze coming up from the south. Albert rested his horses, tied the reins to the plow handle and, leaning against a fence, looked out upon the pleasant prospect. At intervals came a few notes from a bird on a pale of birds building a nest in a treetop. It was music to Albert, who loved the country and hated the city. He was thinking about the letter and how he should miss the former for farming had not paid his father nor did he see how it could pay him. So he expected in the fall to go to town and try for a position in some store or manufactory. Suddenly he felt a pair of hands clasp his eyes. They were not hard and coarse, but soft and fine. They must be a woman's.

"Guess who I am?"

"No guessing is required. Your voice gives you away. You are Ethel Charney."

The clasp was loosened. He turned and on the other side of the fence saw a girl of nineteen.

"You look as if you had lost your best friend," she said. "What's the matter?"

"Oh, I was thinking how lovely the country is, and I've got to leave it in the fall for the city. I have no money to work my farm, and I don't propose to work for other people. Besides, farming doesn't pay."

"Do you know why it doesn't pay?"

"No; do you?"

"I've been reading in a farmer's journal that it could be made to pay, if practiced scientifically. They say a few acres worked on scientific principles is far better than a great many worked in the old fashioned, blundering way. Why don't you go to some of those colleges where they teach new methods and learn how they do it?"

"I never thought of that," said Albert meditatively. But presently he added:

"To obtain money to pay my expenses while studying I'd have to sell my farm, and when I got it all learned I wouldn't have a farm to work."

There was a short silence, which the girl broke.

"Suppose you get the education and leave the rest to—well, to your own endeavors afterward. You'll be supplied with a capital better than a farm. For a farm is no use if you don't know how to make it pay."

"Well, Miss Longhead, what else do you recommend?"

"After I'd get the education it seems to me I would take a position for awhile in the service of some of those men in the city who handle farm produce. I don't see much use of learning how to get good crops if you don't know how to get paying prices for them."

Albert looked at her in surprise.

"Where did you pick up all that?" he asked.

"I read a great deal. There's a lot in our country papers now we need not to get. Then I think about what I read. It has shown me that our old-fashioned ways of farming are passing out."

"Farming is going to be like manufacturing. It is manufacturing in a sense. We mix chemicals with the ground and manufacture crops. The manufacturers of goods know as much about the business of selling as of making them. Why shouldn't it be the same with the farmer?"

Albert gazed at this slender girl and said:

"Whoever would think that a young woman, who couldn't guide this plow once across the field, would stand there telling me strong man, what to do? I'll not only go to college in the fall, but I'll write at once for bulletins announcing their courses of study and all that and nights when I'm not at work I'll be making my preparations."

Five years from that time Albert Peterson returned from his college and his business training. He stopped at the Charney farm and, seeing a young woman directing some field hands preparing the soil for planting, said:

"I'll give you some points on that." And he proceeded to lecture them for half an hour while they listened eagerly.

"Is that you, Bert?" asked the woman.

"Yes, I've finished what you advised one spring morning five years ago."

"Well, I'm glad to see you. Come into the house."

While Peterson had been preparing himself for a life work time had been passing on the Charney farm. Old Charney had died and left his property to his daughter. She had the farm, Peterson the knowledge. So they made a match, and today a small part of the Charney farm is letting far more than the whole paid under the old system of farming. The owners look forward to the day when they will work out all their land and make a small fortune every year.

ATTENTION S. S. TEACHERS.

International Press Bible Question Club.

Rev. Dr. Lincoln's Suggestive Questions on the International S. S. Lesson.

A BIBLE STUDY COURSE.
A New Standard Bible Study Course, suitable for use in Sunday schools, and important enough for philosophers; permanently adapted to intermediate and adult Bible classes.

THE CONDITIONS.
The conditions of this course are: (1) Read the International S. S. Lesson, and the Suggestive Questions, before the lesson for the following week. (2) Cut the coupon out of the lesson paper, in which these questions are published, each week the reading is done certifying to the fact. (3) During the 52 weeks' period answer in writing any five questions you may select from the weekly questions that are indicated to be answered in writing. (4) Deliver to the office of the local press within one week after the close of the 52 weeks' period all the coupons that the student has, together with the five written answers. Students may obtain help in answering the written questions.

THE PRIZES.
The prizes will be awarded to those who deliver to the local newspaper office the greatest number of coupons. The ties to be broken by an impartial committee of three persons. There will be two hundred prizes given away during the year, divided among four classes: fifty prizes to each, a class being composed of the newspapers which take up this Bible Study Course during any quarterly period. Only one paper in a town is permitted to publish three questions. The fifty prizes are composed of five large gold gold medals, with the appropriate inscription, the first five contestants; five Teachers' Bibles, price $5.00 each; to the next five contestants; and the book, "The Study of the Bible," price $1.00 each, to the next thirty-five contestants.

A DIPLOMA TO ALL.
In addition to these prizes, every student completing the course will be awarded a beautiful three-color diploma, suitable for framing, whether he wins any other prize or not.

A FASCINATING STUDY.
S. S. Teachers are urged to make an actual test of these questions in their classes. They demonstrate the superiority of the Socratic over every other method of teaching. Your thinking is not done for you, but your own and your scholars' thoughts are stimulated; vast fields are opened up to your class. These are not mere supplementary questions. These questions will make your class attend regularly, sit up, think, and learn.

OF AND YOUR CLASS.
As a S. S. Teacher you should take up this course and give every student a number of your class to do so. It will be an unrepeatable benefit to you and your scholars. It is easily done; week will do it with an hour or two, during the time to write the five answers. It cost nothing except for the usual newspaper on one week, in which the questions are published.

THE START.
The local paper will run the questions for 13 weeks as a preliminary campaign to give time for all to get ready, and the reading course starts on the fourteenth week. See that your scholars get the local paper, which contains the questions, and publish them every Sunday with the prizes and the great value of this Bible Question Course. Stick to them and you will succeed.

THE SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS.
These questions are running in over a thousand newspapers. They are enthusiastically endorsed by Pastors, Superintendents, Presidents of Universities, Bishops, Presidents of the International S. S. Association, the Chairman of the Lesson Committee, and by thousands of pleased Teachers of Adult and Intermediate Classes. Get your local paper in which they are running. Organize your class to join the local club. Do it now.

ENCOURAGE THE LOCAL PAPER.
Tell the publisher what good he is doing in publishing these Questions. Do it frequently. The service costs him money, so let him see how the good people appreciate what he is doing for the community. Men and children will be anxious for his approval. Let him see that it pays in increased circulation to cater to the S. S. Classes. You can get every man, woman and child to take the paper, thus helping the publisher a little, your class and yourself more, and the community still more. If the service is appreciated it will be continued indefinitely, otherwise it will be dropped.

YOUR QUESTIONS ANSWERED.
If you would like to have answered any particular question each week or any week from "The Suggestive Questions" on the Sunday School Lesson by Rev. Dr. Lincoln, send in your request to this office, giving the date of the lesson and the number of the question which you wish answered. You may select any question except the one indicated that it may be answered in writing by the members of the club. Dr. Lincoln will answer the questions either in these columns or by mail through this office. Do not forget to send your request to these "Suggestive Questions" are to you. Send your letters to the Question Editor of the Times.

A PROFESSIONAL PARADOX.
The study of science is not necessarily all gray; it may have its rosy patches. It is said that a learned professor of Heidelberg forbade his students the repetition of a certain experiment.
"But," they protested, "it has always been successful."
"Nevertheless," he said, "its position among experiments is absolutely untenable from an intellectual point of view."
"But," they asked, "the thing may answer very well in practice," said the professor, "but it is not sound in theory."—Youth's Companion.

QUEER MARINE ANIMAL.

The "Portuguese Man-of-war" is a Variable Fairy Ship.

The "Portuguese man-of-war" is held to be one of the most beautiful of all the so-called pelagic animals and is a veritable fairy ship, with sail that can be hoisted or lowered at will, and can throw out a dredge or haul it in—in short, one of the most attractive of all marine animals and at the same time one of the most dangerous.

This little animal has been called a "humbly-bug" and it certainly looks like an attractive exterior in an organism that is capable of overpowering a foe of a thousand times its size. In fact, the physalia stands in the same relation to many other marine animals of its size as a well-fitted torpedo submarine boat would to an old ship of battle of the Constitution class.

One of the most curious features of the "Portuguese man-of-war" is its habit of swimming on its side, an unfortunate habit in this case, because it is so close to the surface that it is almost impossible to see it unless it is seen from above. It is in about seven feet of water, and the contact immediately gave the swimmer such a shock that he almost lost the power of motion and sank.

As he struck bottom with his feet he pushed up and partially recovered himself sufficiently at least to call for help. Some laborers at work near by sprang into the water and carried him ashore. By that time he could breathe only with extreme difficulty, this being the most serious symptom. The purple mass was scraped from the skin with a sharp knife, but it seemed to have sunk into the flesh. For six or seven months afterward he could hardly have passed for a tattooed man, the entire middle and lower portion of his body being covered with the most painful scars. —Harper's.

WHITE WINGED PEACE.

A Great Scheme for Averting War in the Future.

Writing on the dilemma of putting an end to war, F. P. Dunne says in the Metropolitan.

It is an interesting theory that it is not too much to ask that youth should be taught youth to war. "It is youth itself which runs on the beach and picks the unwarlike, unwarlike. It can be taught that this is so. The courage of youth is pure fearlessness. The young are not afraid of death. They regard it as something that cannot possibly happen to them. They appreciate it in the abstract, but they do not for it. Hence we propose to our fellow peace commissioners this plan for averting wars in future.

In nearly every country there is a number of young men who are not educated or uneducated. It is in the neighborhood of forty years. Now, why, in the interests of peace, would it be well to make a minimum age limit thirty? Suppose we say that on the first call only men thirty could be drafted, and on the second only men over fifty, and on the third only men over forty, and no man under forty could be permitted to fight.

Let long, long wars continue. The first call would be answered by a storm of doctor's certificates, the second by the prompt suspension of all banks, and on the third call a body of resolute patriots who had long been suspicious that death rendered them spiritually would proceed at once to the palace or White House or ministry of foreign affairs and touch the king, president or minister who proposed this outrage on civilization.

Napoleon on Shakespeare.
Napoleon had a very poor opinion of Shakespeare's plays. According to Tolstaidon, in his "Bismarck and Chancellors," Napoleon said one day: "Shakespeare is a forgotten man; the English for 200 years until Voltaire took it into his head to write him up to please his English friends, and ever since people have gone about repeating that Shakespeare was the greatest author that ever lived. I have read him, and there is nothing in him that approaches Corneille or Racine. His plays are not worth reading."

Too Late!
"Do you know who my grandfather was? Have you ascertained anything in regard to her pedigree? Those are things you ought to know about the woman you are to make your wife."
"Oh, hush my grandfather!"
"My boy, that's just what they did do."—Youth's Companion.

He Didn't Understand.
"Then you don't want no cranberries?"
"No, I've changed my mind. I see your cat is asleep in these cranberries."
"That's all right, mum; I ain't mind waiting the cat up."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The National Tree Co. China. The tung, or wood oil tree, is worthily named the national tree of China. It is stately in appearance, with smooth green bark and wide-spreading branches, affording a fine shade. It bears a fruit resembling a shellbark hickory nut, but as large as a small orange. Each nut contains three triangular seeds similar to small Brazil nuts. The oil is pressed from these seeds and the refuse is used as a fertilizer. The oil is used principally for polishing woodwork and dressing leather. Considerable quantities are exported.

The wood of the tung tree is used for making musical instruments, the boxes and the "trunkwork" of small houses. It is believed that this tree might flourish in warmer parts of the United States.—Scientific American.

POWER FOR GOODING.

Beaver River Company Will Soon Have Line in Readiness for Power.

The engineers Monday completed the survey of the line from the Malad Canyon plant of the Beaver River Power company to Gooding, Idaho, are on the ground, wire is at hand ready for stringing, and men are at work digging the line to run the line to Gooding.

Within a very short time, says Mr. E. P. Bacon, of the company, who was in Gooding Tuesday, the company will be ready to market its current to the patrons of the city.

Mr. Bacon came to Gooding to look over a number of sites for the transmission line, and a selection will be made within the next week, so that work upon the new building may be begun at once. Mr. Bacon also met with members of city council and manager hall of the telephone company, to canvass matter of stringing the service wires in the city.

The company will enter Gooding at the west end of Fourth Avenue, and will run its poles up the street, and thereon. On that street alone poles will be set, the other poles going into the alley of the city, branching off from the main line.

The line from the plant to Gooding will be just 11 miles long, a very short distance for the transmission of current. The pole line will cross Gooding, from the south of which an air line to the plant is run.

In crossing the Butte, the Beaver River Company places power for pumping purposes at the disposal of those ranchmen who desire to transfer their land now above the gravity ditch. It is estimated that there is about 2,000 acres of highly desirable land on the Butte above the ditch—the best fruit land in all irrigated Idaho. All that needs is water, and this will be available now to those who desire to irrigate their land.

The importance of this to Gooding can not be overestimated, for the soil on the Butte is unusually deep and rich, the soil drainage and the air drainage are both superior, and the land especially adapted to fruit growing.—Gooding Herald.

honest, well-meaning man; but I believe he looks at society from the wrong standpoint. His environment, his history, his education, have kept him from understanding the interests of the common man. He has never had to struggle; and he has never been among those who had to struggle. And it is because he does not know the common people of this country that he is afraid to trust the government in their hands. If he could get down among these people—people with honesty, strength and courage to make the great blowout at the time, he would take their advice in public questions, and not the advice of Wall Street financiers.

And, suppose, on the other hand, it is Mr. Roosevelt who is selected to lead the Republican party. Do you think the Democratic party is going to go out of business if Mr. Roosevelt is nominated? Not at all. Because if he is a candidate, we will simply be able to take his platform and show that every good plank in it is taken from the Democratic platform. He made the best speech of his life at Columbus, Ohio, because he took the arguments from the Democratic platform. He said in that speech he was in favor of electing senators by the people. When did he first say it? A year ago last summer—and twenty years ago a Democratic congress, of which I had the honor to be a member, passed a resolution in favor of the election of senators by the people. A man cannot plead to a great deal of credit on the fact that he comes in nineteen years after the fact began, just in time to throw up his hat and say "I am with you" at the last. Now he claims credit for helping the regulation of railroads. We can point to the fact that we demanded it in three national platforms before he ever began, and the further fact that when he did begin he got more support from the Democratic party than the Republican party. When did he commence to believe in the initiative and referendum? Why, in Nebraska we put that plank in our platform fifteen years ago last summer, and as late as four years ago Mr. Roosevelt sent Mr. Taft all the way to Oklahoma to tell the people of Oklahoma that they ought to delay statehood until they could get a constitution that would leave out the initiative and referendum. I am glad he is converted. I am glad when any one is converted; but if he is going to ask the support of the people on the basis of reforms, I am glad to ask him why he did not recognize reforms when we made the fight for them? I have gone as far as any democrat has ever gone in commending each individual thing that Mr. Roosevelt did that I thought was right, and I repeat more than most republicans do that he is as progressive as he is; but I cannot forget that the democrats were more progressive, and progressive earlier when I look back and see that we had not only to fight without him, but fight against him. It reminds me of the colored man in the summer time: The sun was shining down on him, and he was required to wipe the perspiration from his face, and he looked up at the sun and said, "What was you in December when we needed you?"

My friends, I have not time to make a speech to you. If I had I would like to show you how reforms have grown and grown around the world; but not any individual should be credited for these reforms. Think sometimes the progressive republicans give Mr. Roosevelt more credit than he deserves, although he has done considerable work, and I am not reflecting on Mr. Roosevelt when I say this, as a matter of fact, I think the individual's part is not so very much. One man alone is not a reformer; it is only when he cooperates with a large number of others. And if I had time I would like to show you that this great movement of which we are part is no little movement; it is an international movement. There is a great revolution sweeping around the world, and it is carrying the world forward more rapidly than it has ever gone before, and it is a revolution in all directions everywhere. We find that education increases with leisure and education; we find the percentage of illiterates decreases. That is progress. We find the moral standards being raised everywhere; we find people considering questions more and more from the moral than from the physical standpoint. That is progress. And you will find it in the United States and all around the world, and you will find the democratic ideas spreading. They had a Donna elected in Russia; that was a great democratic step in itself; and neither Mr. Roosevelt nor myself can claim any credit for that happening. And down in Persia, didn't they adopt a constitution with progressive ideas—didn't they do that? Over in Turkey they have adopted a constitution and representative body—and we were not there to tell them what to do. And over in China 400,000,000 people, long prone beneath the heel of despotism, rose in their might and proclaimed a republic, and they did, and did well—and Mr. Roosevelt and I were busy elsewhere. Not only that, but over in Great Britain didn't you read of that controversy between the House of Lords and the House of Commons—didn't you read of that day that enough of the lords absented themselves to allow the resolution to pass? Didn't you read that the House of Commons, did you read of that day that enough of the lords absented themselves to allow the resolution to pass? Didn't you read that the House of Commons, did you read of that day that enough of the lords absented themselves to allow the resolution to pass? Didn't you read that the House of Commons, did you read of that day that enough of the lords absented themselves to allow the resolution to pass?

Now, my friends, we are going to have a great time this summer—a time as you never saw. Get ready for it. And you republicans, decide which one you are going to nominate—Taft or Roosevelt—and get in earliest about it, just as direct you did not know. Whichever one you defeat, we will defeat the other one. We democrats get in the fight; we have some progressive democrats and some who are not, and I am hoping the progressives of the Democratic party will sound a retreat. I believe it is no time for us to look for a leader who is blind in manner and gets back behind the hindmost soldier while he tries to make his voice heard. We want a progressive to lead us. We have one hundred democrats who are fit to be president; and I can prove by Mr. Roosevelt that we know a thousand more fit to be president than Mr. Taft is. With a progressive democrat in whom the people can trust, and a platform that the people can understand, I believe the people will entrust our party with power. We have been in power—the republicans have been in power—but we have been in power. The republicans have drawn the salary and our party has moulded public opinion, and will from now on, and I think as a matter of common justice we ought to be given a chance to draw salary for one term while we put in operation democratic principles.

You should know there is something wrong and have it attended to at once if your eyes blur in using them and letters or objects become dim and hazy, or you become nervous, or your head aches from the use of your eyes.
