

PIONEER CITIZEN PASSES AWAY

A. J. Green, Prominent Rancher, Dies Suddenly.

END OF A LONG ILLNESS COMES
SUDDENLY IN NIGHT

Masons of City Hold Impressive Services and Conduct Remains to the Station.

After several months of suffering with varying improvements and relapses, Amos J. Green an old pioneer and highly respected member of the community passed away Sunday even-

[illegible]

Amos J. Green was born in Sandusky, N. Y., August 22, 1834, and was at the time of his death sixty-four years of age. Mr. Green's early life was spent in New York state and it was some time in 1890 when Mr. Green and his family moved to Deaver City, Neb. Here the deceased embarked in the jewelry business and for fifteen years was highly successful. During that time Mr. Green was closely identified with the political and civic life of the community, gaining friendships on all sides by his high sense of civic responsibility. For several years

Mr. Green was a member of the Nebraska Republican state central committee and after taking his residence in this county he maintained up to his death a strong interest in both state and national affairs.

— In January, 1905, Mr. Green came to Twin Falls and began the cultivation of his forty acre ranch setting the same out in orchard at a time when the fruit raising was an experiment. Every year saw new evidences of the good citizenship of the deceased and his family in the finely improved ranch which is today one of the most valuable on the tract.

At all times Mr. Green was identified with the uplift of the community, taking an active part in the work of the schools and in the moral betterment of the county. Part of his leisure time from the farm work was spent in the city of Twin Falls where he

In the early fall of last year Mr. Green became the victim of inflammatory rheumatism which necessitated a trip to the hot lakes in Oregon. After a short treatment Mr. Green returned home apparently relieved of his troublesome affliction only to find

THE MAIL ORDER MAN.

A mail order purveyor stepped into one of the hardware stores yesterday to purchase a saw. The price was $1.75. The purchaser stated that he could buy the same saw in Chicago for $1.25.

The merchant said he was out to please everybody and would meet the Chicago price. This put the merchant on splendid terms with the buyer and the $1.25 was planked down.

Now, said the merchant, give me 10 cents for the letter and postal order you sent to Chicago.

The customer thought that was rather little of the merchant, but to be fair, he dug up the dime.

Now, said the merchant, give me the 35 cents express, express from Chicago to Caldwell.

The buyer objected, but the merchant held him to it. The 35 cents was paid over.

Now, said the merchant, give me 10 cents for letting you see the saw, before you give up your money. This called for a discussion, but the merchant held out for his rights. The other fellow was dug up.

Here is a little item remarked the merchant, that you must square, and that is 2 cents more for a prorata expense that my taxes pay toward keeping up the road you travel when you come to town for other business. The buyer saw the point and gave him a stamp. Those who had witnessed the transaction had a hearty laugh in which the saw buyer tried to participate, saying, "Ah well wrap it up and let me go home."

The merchant deliberately hung the saw up and put the purchase money in his till.

What do you mean? asked the buyer. Let me have the saw. "Oh, no, no, no," replied the merchant. "I would take you two weeks to get it from Chicago and you will have to wait two weeks to get it from me. I believe in competing with these Chicago and New York houses."—Caldwell News.

MORE HAWLEY LEGAL GYMNASTICS.

On February 9th the governor held a conference with a number of seed dealers, the assistant attorney general and the state biologist. It was the unanimous opinion of those present that certain parts of the seed law, if enforced to the letter, would work great hardships on seed dealers and planters alike. It was, therefore, decided that a liberal interpretation should be put on the law so that the home seed can be marketed and so that the planter can get all seeds required by him.

The above notice has been published in a number of papers of the state who have so far failed to see the funny side of the matter on the part of Governor Hawley, the stickler for strict interpretation of the laws of the state on the full cash value plan. The whole state was thrown into turmoil and a large amount of damage done to the sections of the state in advance, advertising by the afore-said planter for the full cash value plan irrespective of expediency. Full text of the law then was almost religion to the astute governor. Now on top of the Macbeth attempt at political job holding in which the governor was decidedly not a stickler for strict interpretation; on top of his sworn duty to enforce the laws which caused him so much trouble in the matter of the cash value plan comes now our governor with the recommendation of a very liberal interpretation of the pure seed law, because it may work a hardship on some dealers and some ranchers. There is nothing in his mind of liberal interpretation in regard to one law that works a hardship on all. Does the governor believe in class legislation? Does he really contort his mental equipment to make wrong right or is the governor merely playing at politics? We will leave our readers to make up their mind. Any man of big purpose and determination may be right or wrong and be accorded respect for his moral courage, but a fluctuation of purpose and averseness to play to the grandstand never did take with the American people very long. Will Hawley be able to get away with a number of untenable positions and keep his prestige with the voters?

Mr. Roosevelt's Columbus address, delivered before the Ohio Constitutional Convention practically as it appeared in full in The Outlook last week, has since been the foremost subject of debate in the press and of discussion among individuals. It is a healthy political symptom that serious constitutional questions and bold proposals for "forward movement" should be held upon the whole people as they have not for years past. Both the dignified audience of delegates engaged in the task of re-making a State's fundamental law, and the advocate of democratic ideals who at request set forth principles to be followed in promoting justice, alike regarded the occasion as of far more than personal or, in the temporary sense, political importance. The address was followed by the boners with the utmost interest for an hour and a half, and it was a common remark that the many women housewives who came to listen in their attention as the men, despite the theory that such topics are the initiative and referendum are supposedly in a non-fertile field. The frequent interjection by Mr. Roosevelt of colloquially phrased sentences which emphasized and illustrated his points made the address more palatable and less formal than it had been merely read. Thus he charged the delegates, "Don't you get so fastidious with your work that you think no one can improve on it," and when, apropos of "timid legislation," he said that the fundock was a good gun in 1776, but this in 1912, he added, "But even when the gun is good, if the man doesn't know how to use it, I could beat him over the head with a stick." An interjected phrase or two in the paragraphs about the recall made it clearer to the hearers that Mr. Roosevelt's "recall of decisions" simply means that the people who made the Constitution should in the last resort have the right to do through it; and that as to judges who place technical rules above justice or refuse to right injustice, there should be some prompt, sure method of reform other than cumbersome impeachment—preferably perhaps the Massachusetts "plan" of recall through the Legislature, or, more drastic means are needed, then whatever will best serve. And the hearers understood absolutely the nature of purpose in such rip-shod sentences as "I am an emphatic believer in Constitutionalism," "I believe in the short ballot," "I believe in direct nominations by the people," "I believe in pure Democracy," and understood also that all were included in the sentence, "Human rights are supreme over all other rights." Naturally, the address, while it was not primarily written as a personal platform, was taken as such, although it did not contain many National topics on which Mr. Roosevelt holds profound convictions, because to take their up then and there would have been totally out of place. The general belief that Mr. Roosevelt was on the spot of stating that his position as even to the growing demand that he should be his party's candidate for the Presidency added zest and intensity to the interest in his Columbus speech. So also did the fact that it was his first address on a general public question for over a year. His personal position at Columbus was cordial in the utmost degree; a crowd welcomed him as the station; another great assembly waited two hours in the great rotunda outside the House of Representatives in hopes of a short address, and cheered him to the echo; wherever he went at Cleveland and at smaller places—the fundling scenes of enthusiasm, the spontaneous and spontaneous ovations, the spontaneous and spontaneous ovations. No one who talked with either voters or politicians in Ohio could doubt for a moment the eagerness or extent of the desire for leadership that can hold together the element of the party which wants to put action against lethargy, human justice against technical subtleties, the equal opportunity of every man against special interests. What the country at large thinks of the new ground—so far as there was new ground—in this address The Outlook will report next week. The principles involved will be discussed from week to week in this journal both by Mr. Roosevelt under his signature and by The Outlook's own editorialists.—The Outlook.

HANSEN NOTES.

Hansen, Ida, Mar. 4, 1912. Mr. Elmer Reese who has been feeding sheep on the Starkey McCoy ranch sold twelve hundred lambs to a Los Angeles buyer, and loaded them from this place Monday, Messrs. Welch and Reese went to look after them.

Mrs. Lou Severns was a business visitor at the court last Monday. Miss Mary Claborn is spending the week with Mrs. E. P. Hinton, in the absence of Mr. Hinton who is serving on the jury in Twin Falls.

Messrs. Bruce and Roy Gordon of Murtaugh were business callers here one day last week. The Habes Ladies Aid society are planning to give an Easter bazaar at the church Friday, April 5th.

Charles Brown of Kimberly drove a nice bunch of seventy hogs through town one day this week. He had purchased them from R. J. Neely and was taking them to his Kimberly ranch to fatten for market.

Miss Etta McEwen who has been attending school at Vancouver, has been obliged to return home on account of her eyes not being strong enough to allow her to finish her school year.

Leon Redhead was a business visitor here the latter part of the week. Dr. Thompson the optician was in this vicinity looking after his patients Thursday. He expects to devote one day every six weeks to his business here.

Miss Gertrude Walton returned Thursday evening from a pleasant four months visit in Montana. Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Underwood were business visitors at the county seat Tuesday.

Spencer Edwards spent Thursday night at the Redhead ranch near Holliester, and attended the dance at the latter place.

Mrs. M. B. Provost and little daughter returned Monday evening from Free Water, Oregon, where they have been visiting relatives the past month. All were much benefited by their stay there.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Griffith and children spent Sunday visiting friends in Kimberly.

Sampson Bros. shipped eight carloads of fine cattle to the Portland market Monday. Willis Sampson and Herman Thome accompanied them.

Mr. Blazel is here from the east to spend the summer with his cousin the Link brothers.

Mr. Gentry and his family are occupying the H. Lacourse ranch this year.

The committee for the young people's class party to be given in the near future, and the Easter program committee met at the Hale home Wednesday night.

Miss Amy Keith left Tuesday for an extended visit with relatives in Pendleton, Oregon. Her many friends here hope that her health will be greatly benefited by her stay.

Friday at the home of W. Ernest Smith was the scene of a merry gathering. About thirty-five were in attendance at the dance again there. It featured a very rich and plentiful of sandwiches, pickles, cake and coffee was served. All report a very enjoyable time.

Miss Eva Walton spent the week with her brother Ben and his wife in Harley, going on the special and attending the basketball game played there Saturday afternoon.

Roy Williams unloaded the new Sandwich hay baler recently purchased by him at this station Friday.

Miss Mary Reed of Kimberly spent from Friday night until Sunday night at the Vandepool home.

Despite the condition of the roads, the amount of hauled hay being hauled into Hansen is enormous. One day sixty-five loads were weighed at the elevator by Mr. Laycock, and several days there have been sixty, but all this is occasionally stopped short by a shortage of cars.

Wells Lacourse is "hot" at R. W. Newby's lunch room now, and is said to be very efficient.

H. Lacourse hauled alfalfa hay from his place here to his Salmon river ranch a couple of days this week.

Quite a number from here went to Twin Falls Tuesday and heard the political speech made by William Jennings Bryan. All consider that they were well repaid for their trip.

E. H. Butler and a number of his associates in Portland last Friday.

Cleveland Brothers finished building hay at the McCoy ranch and moved their haler to E. P. Cozzens, where they will be entertained for a while.

H. A. Smith hauled seven car loads of cattle from here billed to Portland, Friday. Bernard Stricker and Walter Bruce accompanied them.

MAINTAINING GOOD ROADS.

Various Methods Depend Upon Local Conditions.

COST IS A BIG FACTOR.

The Ideal Highway of Today Must Be Smooth, Durable, Dustless and Cheap.

Says James Owen, Essex County, New Jersey, Expert.

In discussing the good roads problem in such an extensive country as this one, with its varying climate, topography, materials to be used and habits of the people, it would be hard for any one individual to cover the ground, as of necessity each man's environment and experience are limited. Yet the aggregate of such experiences will be of value to all.

To properly consider the subject in its entirety it may be wise to indulge in a classification of the people, the pavements and the pay. The traveling people may be divided into urban, suburban and rural. It may be confidently stated that the requirements of the pavements differ in character practically in accordance with this classification except that there may be a certain overlapping due to special conditions. This covers two bases.

The ability to pay varies apportionally with climate, topography and energy of the community.

Now enters into consideration the elements of the vehicles of today, which are two, self propelled and horse drawn. Both of these may be divided into fast and slow moving, the heavy wagon and light buggy, the motor truck and automobile, these last being still other items—like iron disc of the wagon, the rubber tire of the buggy, the corrugated tire of the motor truck and the pneumatic tire of the automobile. All these factors enter in weight and speed, and their effect on the surface of the pavement is of vital importance.

Another point which has not yet arisen is the effect of different climates on the three vehicles. So the owners of such vehicles have been so busy trying to get something smooth to ride upon that they have been content to pay their bills for new tires and new wheels unreligiously, yet in the future it will be an important economic factor.

There is still another factor which today is the most important in road construction—viz, the suppression of dust.

Taking all the factors outlined heretofore, the problem is to furnish a road that is smooth, durable, dustless and cheap, and that problem is today facing the civilized world. With the use of such standard pavements as wood block, granite block, Macadam, sandstone, brick, asphalt and the tar compounds and with proper care in the selection and manufacture of material and a conscientious disposal of it in place, in most cases a smooth, dustless pavement will be secured. However, this point is one for purely local consideration and cannot be generalized upon.

We now come to the maintenance problem in which the maintenance department sooner or later takes an interest. The asphalt and tar preparations are a smooth, durable and serviceable road and are desirable for residential sections and in many cities are universal. Their maintenance is carried on in different municipalities in different ways, some owning their own repair plant, others contracting the repairs and still others neglecting them altogether. It is safe to say, however, that after five years' use of these pavements the item of repairs begins to be a factor, although the writer has one asphalt pavement which has been in use for nearly ten years without repairs or apparent necessity for them.

I wish to allude to the flagrant problem in road construction, and it is this: we will note the varying channels from which money comes. Taking my own state as an example, these are as follows:

City Street Paving—A part, say about 80 per cent on property, balance on the city at large. Maintenance a city charge.

Suburban Towns—Streets mandaminized sixteen feet wide. A general tax; extra width, local maintenance, no rate.

Rural Towns—Mostly developed by either state roads or county roads.

County Roads—Main arterial highways paid for on bond issue of the county, maintained by the county. County road repair system abandoned when state roads came into use.

State Roads—State pays 33 per cent, county 66 per cent, town 10 per cent. Maintained by the county with contributions from the state of automobile money, say 20 per cent.

With such varied methods of payment for original construction it is to be noted that the maintenance cost is defrayed by either the county or municipality, with the addition of a small amount from automobile taxes. Now enters the important part of the whole question of road and street maintenance and that is the ability and willingness to pay.

As to ability, that is a condition hard to gain. As to willingness that can be overcome by education. To properly educate a community to higher ideals and standards, it is the ideal of the superintendent that be crystallized on a permanent basis and then set before them.

CARE OF ROADSIDES IS AN IMPORTANT FACTOR.

Remove All Rubbish to Make Highway Attractive.

No matter how smooth and well constructed the traveled road may be, if the roadsides are not cared for the highway as a whole will not give a good impression. All rubbish should be removed, the excavations should be filled and embankments should be planted with grass wherever it will grow. Carefully brush should be cut and grubbed out. Sometimes, however, the brush and small trees it suitably trimmed add to the attractiveness of the roadside.

All trees which are ornamental or which have value as shade trees should be preserved and protected unless they grow so close together as to make a dense shade. In hot, dry climates particularly and indeed in most places trees are a considerable factor in reducing the cost of maintenance since they lessen the evaporation of the moisture from the pavement. In exposed places, where the sweep of the wind would be otherwise unbroken, they serve to prevent in a measure the blowing away of the binder from the road surface. Unfortunately in such places it is often difficult to make trees grow. Care in the selection of the kinds of trees best suited to the locality is important.

IMPROVE HIGHWAY SYSTEM.

Minnesota Legislature Passes Bill Providing For State Roads Plan.

Planned, built and kept in repair under supervision of expert engineers employed by the state highway commission, the roads designated as state roads in five years will, it is claimed, give Minnesota the best system of highways in the entire country.

When the bill was passed at the last session of the legislature, it provided for a constitutional amendment levying a quarter mill tax for the building, repair and improvement of the roads and for the better share equally with the county the expense of all state roads. Any public thoroughfare can be designated as a state road, but after being so designated it henceforth must be improved, changed and repaired under the supervision of the state engineers. The building up of a good roads system rests with the improvement of the dirt roads of the state and not in the construction of macadamized highways.

These roads may be improved by cutting down the hills, removing the stumps, clearing out the ditches, rounding, grading, surfacing and dragging after every rain so that they will serve as a new pavement which the highways will be used and at a lesser expense than the special roads.

GOOD ROADS REMINDERS.

Good roads never grow—they are made.

Take a few minutes' time and drain that mudhole. It's as much as you can do to get it in shape. Yes, but that doesn't drain the mudhole!

Spare the time to climb out a few of those stones from the track into the ditch. Every time you see a stone there you fairly get your teeth with vexation. The remedy is yours to apply. M. Coverdell.

MINNESOTA HAS A GOOD PLAN

Bill Provides That Owners, State and County Share Road Expense.

The Minnesota state highway commission has taken favorable action toward building several trunk highways, connecting Duluth with Minneapolis, St. Vincent, Manitoba and other points. The road from Duluth to St. Vincent will in time be extended to Winnipeg by the Canadian government. With the road to St. Vincent it will furnish a route with a road many hundreds of miles long on which automobile travel may be enjoyed under the most favorable circumstances.

Of what material these roads will be built, whether of macadam, brick or gravel, has not yet been decided, but the fact that residents of the counties in both the country and small towns are willing to bear their share of the expense of construction and maintenance was brought before the commission by a young senator to the petition presented.

The roads will be built under the Ellwell bill, which provides that the state shall own one-half of the expense of the road in ten annual installments, the county one-quarter and the owners of the benefited property one-quarter.

A Seven Mile Stone Highway. There are probably few cities in southern California engaged in a more extensive campaign of road improvements than Riverside. Work now under way and for which proceedings have been begun amounts to approximately thirty city blocks, or several miles of highway, to be constructed of rock roadbed with oiled macadam surface.

Old Road's Success. Because a superior grade of oil was used on thoroughfares by the city of Milwaukee, Wis., last year no additional street oil may have to be purchased by the city.

The amount of 50,000 gallons was purchased and 6,000 gallons remaining may be sufficient to meet all requirements this year.

A Hunt For Will

By JOEL R. WITHE

Hearing that there would be a sale of furniture at the house of the owner of which I had heard, and that among the things were some old pieces, I determined to go. This was because I had for such things and I could afford to possess. It was poor. I went to the sale, not to buy any of the articles, but to see what was going on. Among those present was a man who was watching the proceedings with very different from the others. He attracted me so far that I followed him. It seemed as if he was waiting and waiting for some particular thing to come. It came at last. It was a hundred years old rosewood and handsome. I pulled forward where all the eyes were turned.

Some one made a beginning. The girl I have mentioned bid twenty-two. Another bid twenty-five followed. A number of others followed. I seemed to want the desk, and I ran up to a hundred dollars, where the girl ceased to bid. I cannot for the look of disappointment, almost of despair, with which she gave up her effort to possess it. Why it was so desirable to her I could only conjecture. She did not appear to be a person who could afford luxuries, so I concluded that between her and the desk there must be some association. Perhaps it had belonged to one near and dear to her.

I had been sitting in a small way and had $200 in bank. I determined to bid as high as what I thought the desk would bring. In fact, I wished to sell it again and offered $110. My bids were raised till I finally offered $200, when the others dropped out and I secured the desk.

Turning to the girl who had been so interested in it, I told her that I didn't need it and if at any time she wished to possess it and had the means to pay for it I would be happy to sell it to her for what I had paid. In reply to this she said that she would not bid but would make a thorough examination of the desk for something she thought might be concealed in it. I gave her the address to which it would be taken and told her that she might call the next afternoon.

As soon as I got the desk, I opened every drawer, searched every pigeon-hole, rummaged my hand in every receptacle it possessed, but had evidently been thoroughly cleaned out, for I could not find a scrap of paper. The next afternoon the girl came, and as soon as I showed her the desk she began to press her fingers on every part of it.

"Oh," I said, "you are looking for a secret drawer?"

"I am."

At this I joined my efforts to hers, but without avail. I not only searched every inch of the desk, but I rummaged, tapping continuously for half an hour. Nothing came of it. Then I invited the girl to tell me what she was looking for. She said that the house and furniture were hers, but her mother, brother, who had died childless, she had always lived here and had once said to her, "I'll be you some day." He had died without a will. There were a great many heir-lawful heirs, she said, and she, not being a blood relative, would get nothing. She was not strong and could not very well earn a living by working like other girls. In fact, she had tried to do so, but had been obliged to stop. Her uncle had once shown her this desk and told her that he kept in it his most important papers. It had not occurred to her that he meant her to take note of what he said till after his death, when no will was found.

"I would have knocked the desk to pieces, but could not afford to lose the money I had put into it, and the girl had no means of her own to pay for it, she went away very much disappointed. I took her name and address and told her that I would do some more hunting—and if anything was discovered would let her know of it. But this was simply to break her disappointment, for we had made a thorough search.

A month passed, during which I thought a good deal of the matter and tried to locate a space capable of holding a secret drawer. I could not tell with certainty without taking the desk apart. My taste for old furniture led me to read any book I could find on the subject, and in one of these, I saw it stated that some secret drawers in desks made during the eighteenth century had been of metal instead of wood.

Then an idea occurred to me. Among my odds and ends was a pocket compass. I took it to the desk and held it near where a drawer would likely be at all. I had not gone very far before I got a deflection of the needle. Moving it, about near this point, I at last found a place where there was the greatest deflection. With my knife I ripped off a strip of veneering and uncovered a round button the size of the tip of my finger. Out popped a steel drawer about ten inches long, but not over an inch square. There was a rolled paper in it, which I removed and found to be a will. Scanning it, I saw that the entire estate bequeathed by it was to be given to the girl, and that the address I had. There is a sequel to this story, but the subject matter of that is a lot of fun.

Mrs. Reeves gave a party Wednesday afternoon in honor of the fifth birthday of her son, Herbert. In accordance with the day an appetizing 5 o'clock dinner was served the little ones. The table was prettily decorated, the color scheme of green and white, being heartily carried out and laid in the center of the table was a large birthday cake decorated with five green and white candles. Various games were enjoyed by the little ones during the afternoon and at about a merry time. Those present were: Herbert and Virgil Woodard, Mildred Myers, Herbert and Edna Reeves, and Evelyn May White, who each gave the young man a nice birthday token.

The decision in the ten-round boxing contest in the Buhl open house Thursday evening between Jack Kibbourn, of Oakley, and Thos. Parks, a well known wrestler, was given in the favor of the former man in the second round. The first thirty seconds of the first round was fast and furious, the boys meeting in the center of the ring and indulging in an exchange of sledgehammer blows with odds about even. After a little skirmishing both went down in a scuffle, Kibbourn being the first to crush his feet, struck fairly a couple of light taps before the latter was prepared to meet the attack and the first round had proved too much for him, and to say the least, his finish was sudden. The preliminary was pronounced good, more so than the main feature. Davis and Shultz fought a hotly contested bout with honors about even, which was followed by Gus Winters and Roy Miller, but neither were in proper condition and the last round was amusing for its slowness. The bout was plainly Winters', Chas. Childs, as referee, proved a good judge as he thoroughly understands the game and was quick to see every movement. The evening exhibition was managed by Chas. Childs in a capable manner, as it can well be said that there was never a more orderly crowd of its size ever gathered in the city.

RAILS OVER RAILROAD.

Oregon Short Line Takes Up Its Option on Idaho Southern.

Reliable information has been given by the Pioneer Record to the effect that the Oregon Short Line has taken the option which it has been holding for some time past on what is known as the Idaho Southern railway. This line operates now between Goodland and Jerome on the north side of the Snake river and between Millar and Valley on the south side. The brilliant survey of this line extends through to a point in Nevada. The same time the Oregon Short Line has held an option on the line now in operation and the projected developments and controlling that the price asked was too high. Late developments of the interests which are being in power stations along the Snake river and buying up electric lines in Boise and west, has caused them to get busy and the deal has been closed. Representatives of the O. S. L. are now busy going over the details of the Idaho Southern, according to the Pioneer Record, and another which price it is to be taken over. What effect this latest move will have upon the future building of the various projected lines of the state is, of course, probable, but it is more than likely that the O. S. L. will continue its policy to hold the territory as much as possible. —Rupert Pioneer Record.

WANDERER RETURNS.

After an Absence of More Than Two Years.

John R. Baldwin who unaccountably disappeared about two years ago from Twin Falls, where he owned a large amount of property, arrived in Twin Falls Sunday evening from Jerome. When Mr. Baldwin could not be located his friends at Bull rock took steps to have his property interests, which have been done in a most creditable manner. On Monday Mr. Baldwin took steps to have his property restored to him and under this effect was secured in the private court. Mr. Baldwin assigns ill health as the reason for his departure. He has been in Portland most of the time. He is now fully recovered his health and looks a great deal better than when he left. He expresses himself as being satisfied and very grateful for the manner in which his interests had been looked after by his friend Chas. McManis, who was appointed guardian. —Bull Herald.

WATER MAY BE STORED.

State Engineer's Report on Twin Falls Dam.

In making his report on the Carey Act project in Idaho, State Engineer Robinson has to say concerning the Twin Falls project, located in Cassia county: "During the past year active construction work has been progressing on this work along all lines. The canal system has reached a stage where the installation of structures and some finishing touches are all that is required. This being a storage project, the construction of an earth dam on Goose creek has been progressing during the past season. Work, however, was discontinued on account of weather conditions about December 1, at which time the concrete gate tower was completed and the dam left in such a condition that approximately 10,000 acre feet of water may be stored during the season of 1912. Work has been resumed on the construction of this project." —Bull Herald.

MOUNTAIN VIEW NOTES.

A little daughter arrived February 25th to make her home in Twin Falls with Mr. and Mrs. Cullerton. A nephew of Mr. Polzen has rented the Shaden place. He and his family are visiting Mr. Polzen at present. Mr. Polzen has rented 120 acres of sage brush land three miles east of his place and will run the two places this year. Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hagen and family took dinner with Mrs. Hedin on Sunday.

The Gamble Bros., Clarence Padgett and Charlie Brothers are hauling hay and hauling when the weather and roads will permit.

Myra Chamberlain visited Miss Ethel King in Twin Falls Sunday. It is reported that the ladies in the Gowan and Stepp neighborhood have organized a club. Here's happiness to them. May they find it a means of away with the "rural isolation" we hear so much about.

guards of the visitors at this stage of the game sent Boise another score. Miss Castello throwing a basket with seemingly perfect ease. Twin Falls, 7; Boise, 3. It was Boise's turn to score so it seemed for Miss Dencke soon retaliated and threw her first and only field goal of the game. Twin Falls, 7; Boise, 3. Miss Castello again showed her class to the team by throwing another basket from the field making the score Twin Falls, 9; Boise, 3. Scarcely had the cheering died down before Miss Yates again scored for her team. Twin Falls, 9; Boise, 7. The locals were not to be discouraged by the visitors' success. They again took one more step toward the championship and scored a field goal just before the whistle ended the half. Score at the end of the first half Twin Falls, 11; Boise, 7.

At the end of time both teams came back Twin with the purpose in view to hold their own. Boise to make enough scores to win. Miss Castello, however, for Boise was taken out of guard and shifted to center while Miss Castello was sent in to fill the guard position made vacant by the change. It seemed that the change was for the better—Miss Castello—captain—almost immediately made a basket from the field. Twin Falls, 11; Boise, 9. A foul at this time cost the locals an answer. Miss Yates' attempt from the foul line was successful. Twin Falls, 11; Boise, 10. This score was not to remain long thus Miss Castello raising the hopes of the rooters by making another basket. Twin Falls, 13; Boise, 10. No doubt it was Boise's turn to score again and Miss Yates made what proved to be the last score for the visitors. Twin Falls, 13; Boise, 12. Harder, faster playing on the part of both teams now became apparent, the locals to keep Boise from again scoring, the visitors to play with. With but a few minutes to play the Twin strengthened to hold on to the game by making what proved to be the last score of the contest when Miss Castello made the last of six field goals obtained by her sole effort.

For the visitors Miss Yates proved to be the star and for her is credited with four of Boise's scores. Too much can not be said of the sterling work of our local guards. Miss McMaster altho she was not as successful in throwing baskets as her playing partner, however, serves much credit for the great team work she displayed throughout the whole game. However to Miss Cameron, at center, we must give the palm. She was easily the star of the game and her wonderfully fast and clean playing was the chief factor in the bringing of the state championship to Twin Falls.

Referee Vincent proved to be a revelation in his squareness and impartiality and no dissatisfaction or complaint by either team was entered against his decisions. The crowd's behavior was clean and gave the referee a helping hand.

In summing up all it is only remains to be said, "Here's to the team that brought home to Twin Falls the basketball championship of the state of

An exceptionally large attendance is expected at the noonday luncheon of the Commercial club this week. The luncheon is itself will be radically different from preceding ones, as the food will all be the product of a Twin Falls tract farm. A good, old-fashioned meal will be served, and the Commercial club members may prepare for a hearty meal. The different foods will be furnished by Jas. A. Waters.

The address of the day will also be of particular interest. It will be on the "Price of Power" by J. H. Soaver, general manager of the Great Shoshone & Twin Falls Water Power company, and he is expected to give some valuable information and data as to why the Twin Falls country offers exceptional opportunities for manufacturing industries as far as power is concerned. The luncheon will be served at 12 o'clock and the speaker may begin at 12:30 and get through by 1. As the capacity of the dining hall is limited, tickets should be procured in advance.

SALMON RIVER SETTLERS MEET

Elect Officers and Adopt Important Resolutions.

The Salmon River Settlers' association held a very interesting meeting in this city Saturday afternoon. A large number of settlers were present and considerable business transacted. The following board of directors were elected for the ensuing year: W. A. Moomaw, A. E. Caldwell, Fred Berger, W. J. Trueblood and W. H. Craven, who will meet next Friday at one o'clock and organize.

The following resolutions were adopted at the meeting: That the secretary be instructed to notify the Salmon River Land and Water company that the members of this association refuse to make any payments, interest or maintenance, until water shall have been delivered in irrigation season. It was the sense of the meeting that the association shall not take an aggressive attitude against the company in regard to entering suit or otherwise but that they shall stand out on the above resolutions adopted. Joseph Day of the Millner segregation was present and called the attention of the association to the importance of joining the Water Users Association of Southern Idaho and it was decided to join the association. This association of the settlers on Carey Act projects in Southern Idaho and has a large and growing membership.

The town of Hollister was designated as the place to hold the next mass meeting of the settlers the date to be set at a later period.
