city among the many friends of John Gray, a prominent businessman of Portland, Ore., who was shot and killed last night by a desperado on the Nevada line, it which Gray is alleged to have done the shooting. Late last night, a telephone call came to the sheriff's office to come to Devils Creek to aid a man who was shot. The sheriff immediately went, but were met at Rogerson with the news that the victim was dead. Later Sheriff Vanaunderlin was advised that the victim was a well known aviator for him and was ready to swim himself up. The sheriff and Coroner Crouse left for the morning for the scene of the tragedy.

Outside of the above report little can be learned of the matter, the victim being a well known aviator, John Scott, another well-known rancher of the Three Creeks section. Gray is said to have been in the area of the town to help the many of the other

"Twin Falls county and in fact every dry county in the state of Idaho is now dry in every respect. The railroad and railroad companies have notified their agents that no more liquor of any kind or description will be handled by them for shipment to dry territory. The new law which went into effect last week is the cause of the new orders issued by the companies."

There is on exhibition in the window of the Twin Falls Hardware company three pieces of furniture made by the manual training department of the Twin Falls high school. The recent decision of the state supreme court, making the county treasurer the official tax collector, goes far toward straightening out a legal tangle in many counties. On the other hand, it makes a new problem for the county commissioners and the treasurer. With a salary fixed for the treasurer personally, there is, however, no provision for his deputies. The task of collecting the taxes calls for a large force in the office during such work for about four months of the year, while the rest of the year such force would be idle. In the assessor's office the same thing is true with several months of hard work requiring a large clerical force. It is almost out of the question to get competent help for such frequent work, so that the problem which confronts the commissioners will be to harmonize the work of the two offices and not duplicate the large force in the two. By combining the two offices the work which is left over on the assessor's office can be done for both and thus save the taxpayers.

The question of urging a longer closed season for trout is one that is being agitated by the local anglers, owing to the often delayed spawning period. For the past two or three years the followers of Isaac Walton in this county have noticed that most of the roes have been full of spawn in all periods of development clear to the end of the month of May. The number of fish thus caught has robbed the trout streams here of thousands of fry every year, with the result that the streams are not being replenished as rapidly as they are fished out. The same conditions hold for other parts of the state and the fishing of this state will eventually ruin out, unless the sportsmen get together and take some action. The Times fully believes that instead of one month closed season now, a law should be advocated that the months of March, April and May should be closed in order that the streams may become stocked. Such a law would not work a hardship on any angler, due to the fact that the trout do not readily take the fly during any of the above months and fishing is not really a pleasure until the trout streams lose their icy temperature.

THE ISSUE BETWEEN JAPAN AND CALIFORNIA.

Why should the ownership of a few farms in California cause grave concern to the governments of Tokyo and Washington, and awaken rumors of war in the press of two friendly nations? While mass-meetings in Japan shout for war with the United States, the venerable Count Okuma declares that "such the influence of Christianity" leading to prevent such an economic and President Wilson, reports to the unprejudiced course of sending his Secretary of State to Sacramento to "counsel and cooperate" with the members of the California Legislature, many are wondering why there is so much international excitement over a matter affecting directly only a few farmers. California explains that "while autonomy and the American standard of living are at stake, and the Japanese reply that 'the issue is one of discrimination, and reflects upon our national honor, and its importance is, therefore, not to be measured by the number of our countrymen materially affected.'"

Spoken as a dispassionate observer, the London Times, discards the "Indiana mystery" and "Indiana" in evidence in both sides by saying that "the Japanese consider the immigration dispute to be merely a symbol of the whole question of their future status in the world," while "the action of the California Legislature only represents one phase of the rising alarm in the United States at the growth of foreign populations not akin in spirit and tradition to the original founders of the American nation." Further:

"On a solid mass of ten million, negroes there has been superimposed a dense layer of backward peoples from Southern and Eastern Europe, and the white races in the Western States have an additional dread of competition from Asia by folk who can underlive the white man."

"Japan, on the other hand, though cherishing no impossible dreams, is gaining a foothold on the American Continent, and is keenly resentful of implications of racial inferiority. It is the humiliation which wounds her, and the proud and sensitive nation which has newly won a place in the world feels acutely that her sacrifices and struggles have not yet achieved for her all the recognition which she deserves to be her due."

Sending Mr. Bryan to Sacramento,

In the opinion of many editors, is practically a confession that the proposed legislation threatens to subvert all with Japan. The President's position is regarded as peculiarly embarrassing, because on the one hand, as head of the Federal Government, he is responsible for the treaty rights of Japanese subjects in this country, while, on the other hand, he has no constitutional right to prevent the California Legislature from acting as it pleases in the matter. In a telegram addressed to Governor Johnson, he says: "With the utmost reluctance" to "the people, the Governor, and the Legislature of California," he is "invited to discrimination" which "will inevitably draw in question the treaty obligations of the United States." The assertion that popular feeling in California is strongly in favor of excluding the Japanese from land ownership seems to get some color from the fact that on April 15 the Assembly passed a drastic Alien Land Ownership Bill by a vote of 40 to 17. None of the lawmakers are quoted as saying that if no such law is finally passed by this legislature the people themselves will resort to the initiative to bring about the result they desire. "The people of California have become impatient of diplomacy and world politics, and are no longer to be denied in their imperative demand," says State Senator W. S. Hildreth, author of one of the bills in question, who adds that the Alien Land Law went to the people it would pass by a vote of 3 to 1. The two big propositions involved, says Senator Hildreth, are those:

"First—Have we the right to enact such legislation? If we have not, then the act would be automatically nullified by the Constitution and existing treaty rights.

"Second—in this a demand by the whole people of California? The latest and most conclusive answer to that is the overwhelming vote by which the Alien Land Law passed the Assembly."

The proposed legislation, according to the same authority, represents "the real deterioration of American citizenship of the West Coast to prevent the encroachment of a race problem and to maintain their own economic standards." And in a public statement Governor Johnson points out that other states—Arizona, Washington, Illinois, Minnesota, Missouri, Kentucky, Oklahoma, Texas, and even the District of Columbia—have enacted laws prohibiting the ownership of land by persons ineligible for citizenship, without any international disturbance ensuing. He says:

"California is unable to understand why an act admittedly within the jurisdiction of the California Legislature, like the passage of an alien land bill, creates tumult, confusion, and criticism, and why this local act of undoubted right becomes an international question. Of course, the California Legislature would not attempt to contravene any treaty of the nation, nor to do more than has been done by the Federal Government itself and many other states. To say that California must do less, or be subjected to harsh criticism and the charge of disrupting friendly relations with foreign Powers, is to deny to California what has been freely conceded to every other State in the Union and what has never been questioned with any other State.

"Our Legislature is now considering an alien land bill in general language and not discriminatory. If terms are used which are claimed to be 'discriminatory,' those very terms long since were made so by many enactments and by the laws of the nation itself. Bready speaking, many States have endeavored to prevent the ownership of land by those ineligible to citizenship. The power to pass such laws is conceded, but limited, by upon the exercise of this power by a great sovereign State, a remarkable and inexplicable outcry is heard all over the land and in other lands as well."

"We of California ask therefore: Should California be singled out for attack when it is exercising the same right that has been exercised by so many States and by the United States itself?

Japan, until 1910, had an absolute law against alien ownership, and in effect has it yet. What the United States Government has done, what has been done by many States of the Union, what has been done by Japan, all of which admittedly has been done in pursuance of unquestioned power and undoubted right—is now attempted to be done by the State of California, and no reason can logically exist for jealousy for sundering friendly relations with any Power, for fear of offense and threats by any nation."

play agents of their choice, to lease land for residential and commercial purposes, and generally to do anything incident to or necessary for trade upon the same terms as native citizens or subjects, submitting themselves to the laws and regulations there established."

Since Article VI of the Constitution of the United States declares that "treaties made under the authority of the United States shall be the supreme law of the land . . . anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding," the question here seems to be one of interpretation. Nothing in the Japanese treaty of 1911, says a writer in the New York Evening Post, seems directly to forbid the enactment by any State of laws prohibiting alien ownership of farms, or limiting the expressly permitted leases of land to the purposes of residence and commerce, excluding those of agriculture; or curtailing the duration of the leases declared to be permissible. "Whether the terms 'commerce,' 'manufactories,' and 'shops' will be held by the courts to include any of the activities of agriculture is a question for the future," he adds.

The census of 1910 showed that there were then 41,356 Japanese in California, in a total population of 2,377,540. Washington and Oregon brought the number in the Pacific Coast States up to 57,703. According to many authorities the number has not appreciably increased since that time, because Japan has put a check on her coolie emigration to this country. According to Mr. Kiyoshi Kawahara, a Japanese writer living in this country, the facts and figures in the case by no means justify the alarmist note sounded by certain Californians.
