U. S. Supreme Court Gives Decision on Railway Rates.

THE MOST IMPORTANT DECISION HANDLED DOWN FOR YEARS.

~~Cases from Missouri, Arkansas, Oregon, Kentucky and West Virginia~~

Washington, June 10.—Lawyers who gathered today in the supreme court to listen to an expected application of the principles laid down by Justice Hughes in the Minnesota rate cases to the rate cases from Missouri, Arkansas, Kentucky, Oregon and West Virginia, were of the opinion that ratemaking both in the states and before the federal government had been reduced to a much more accurate basis. All sorts of opinions prevailed as to where the victory rested in the Minnesota decisions. The prospect of congress taking charge of state rates

The attempt of the railroads to establish the cost of reproducing their property now as an equivalent to their "fair value" on which they were entitled to earn rates was regarded as doomed. The federal court in Minnesota adopted that basis. Justice for hypothetical multipliers in fixing "fair values" of railroad property and that the railroads ought to be paid that the railroads ought to be satisfied if "a fair average market price was given their land. It would allow the railroads the benefit of the gener-

Regulation of railroad rates is regarded as more complex by the findings of the court, in the opinion of the officials of the interstate commerce commission. The holding of the supreme court that the interstate commerce act is unconstitutional, therefore to fix interstate rates, but that the act is constitutional to regulate rates, even though these rates affect interstate rates, may be valid unless shown to be confiscatory. It is pointed out that the line of demarcation drawn by the commission between intrastate and interstate rates is not clearly delineated. Commission officials believe the result of the court's decision will

SECY BRYAN IN CALIFORNIA.

Views Allen Land Bill Drafted by Attorney General Webb.

Sacramento.—The possibility of an answer to Pharaoh's question of controversy by means of a new bill drawn in strict conformity with the treaty between Japan and the United States, which might confront the third secret conference of Secretary of State Bryan with Governor Johnson and the California legislature which was called for 8:30 o'clock.

Attorney General U. S. Webb drafted the suggestion of the suggestion of Governor Johnson and a copy was immediately placed in the hands of Secretary Bryan. The term "intelligence" was used in the bill as declared by Secretary Bryan to be odious to the Japanese, is not included and the Progressive Republicans leaders are confident that they have arrived at a solution of the problem that will resolve the intensionment of President Wilson and the national administration.

Secretary Bryan admitted he had seen the new draft of the proposed bill, but does not have any comment upon it except before the conference.

The principal features of the new bill are as follows:

1. All aliens eligible to citizenship may acquire and hold land in the same manner as citizens of the United States.

2. All other aliens may acquire and hold land in the same manner and to the extent and for the purposes prescribed by any treaty now existing between the government of the United States and the nation to which such alien is a citizen or subject.

3. Corporations composed of aliens other than those that are eligible to citizenship may acquire and hold land only according to the terms of existing treaties.

4. Present holdings of aliens regardless of their rights to citizenship are protected.

5. The state specifically reserves its sovereign right to enact any and all laws relating to the acquisition or holding of real property by aliens.

Attorney General Webb is drafting the act, worked upon the theory that there could be no objection to writing into the California statute the specific limitations of the Japanese treaty of 1911. Under the terms of this treaty, Japanese subjects are prohibited from acquiring land for residential purposes, factories, manufactures and shops, according to Mr. Webb. Another clause permits Japanese subjects to lease land for residential and commercial purposes.

These are the only stipulations made and it is the belief of the attorney general that the rights of Japanese subjects to land in the United States are thereby secured.

Cannot Hold Agricultural Land.—Under his construction of the treaty no land can be owned or leased by a Japanese for agricultural purposes except that which is already owned, or for any other purpose except those set forth in the agreement between the nations.

Explaining the wording of the substitute bill, Mr. Webb said:

"The treaty between the United States and Japan, which was signed at the time the treaty was framed, Japan asked for all the rights as to ownership of land in California that that nation desired under her subjects and that the treaty is now stands represents all that Japan asked and all that the United States was willing to grant."

"This does not draw the line upon aliens who are inadmissible to citizenship. Those words are not used, gives not only to Japan, but to every nation whose subjects are inadmissible to citizenship under the laws of the United States the right to acquire a private property in California under the treaties between the United States and such nations as are."

Several of the Progressive Republicans leaders in the legislature who saw the bill this evening expressed the hope that it would meet with the approval of the Senate.

It is generally believed that the new act would accomplish the state said to be desired by the people of the state, namely, to secure protection by Japanese subjects in the leasing lands and ranches.

PROCLAMATION ISSUED.

Forbidding Importation of Diseased Animals.

As a result of the two days' meeting of the state livestock sanitary board with W. H. Phillips and Fred W. Gooding present, Governor Haines issued two proclamations Saturday, one against the importation into the state of horses affected with certain diseases, and the other against the importation of a horse affected with certain diseases. These proclamations are in line with the cattle proclamation issued at the opening of the year.

It was also given out by President O'Connell that the manufacture of horse cholera serum at the University of Idaho under the appropriation of $300 made by the last legislature had not proved successful up to this time, but that serum was being shipped in from the east and would be furnished at a low price to the state.

Against Hogs. Whereas, it is my duty under the laws of Idaho, upon recommendation of the state veterinary surgeon, to issue a proclamation prohibiting the importation into this state of animals affected with or exposed to any dangerous, contagious or communicable disease; and

Whereas, the state veterinary surgeon has recommended the issuance of a quarantine proclamation forbidding the importation of horses into this state under certain restrictions;

Therefore, I, John M. Haines, governor of Idaho, upon such recommendation, and owing to the fact that I feel reasonably well satisfied that hog cholera among hogs is prevalent to a relatively large degree in all the states of this country, in the Dominion of Canada, and in all foreign countries;

And, owing to the fact that I feel reasonably well satisfied that hog cholera among hogs is prevalent to a relatively large degree in all the states of this country, in the Dominion of Canada, and in all foreign countries;

This proclamation shall be in force from date to December 31, 1913.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the state of Idaho, at the city of Boise, the capital of said state, this 3d day of May, one thousand, nine hundred and thirteen.

Veterinarian V. C. White issued the following rules relating to contagious diseases among cattle, horses and hogs:

Cattle. Rule 1. All cattle reacting to a tuberculin test made by the state or assistant state veterinarian, must be destroyed and buried, or buried six feet in the ground and covered with quicklime or other material that it is impossible for them to escape.

Rule 2. The stable and stalls in which tubercular cattle are kept must be thoroughly disinfected with a disinfectant solution; such as creolin, carbolic, whitewash, etc., before healthy animals are placed in such barn or stalls.

Rule 3. When requested by owner to do so, the state veterinarian or his assistant shall inspect or test cattle to determine their health.

The actual hotel and traveling expenses of the state veterinarian or his assistant shall be paid by the owner of the cattle examined. This office advises that all dairy cattle should be brought subject to the tuberculin test.

Horses. Rule 1. All horses and mules reacting to a Mallein test within the state of Idaho when tested by the state veterinarian or one of his assistants shall be immediately destroyed and buried six feet in the ground and covered with kerosene or quicklime.

Rule 2. The stable and stalls in which glandered animals have been confined must be thoroughly disinfected with a solution of creolin, carbolic acid, whitewash, etc., before a healthy animal is placed in such stall or stall.

Rule 3. When requested by owner to do so, the state veterinarian or one of his assistants shall inspect or test horses or mules in order to determine their health.

The actual hotel and traveling expenses of state veterinarian or his assistants, together with the sum of $5 per day for each horse or mule, shall be paid by the owner of the horse or mule examined.

Hogs. Rule 1. When an outbreak of hog cholera is reported, the owner must notify the state veterinarian or his assistants.

Rule 2. All persons, excepting owners, duly authorized attendants, or health officers, are forbidden to enter any inclosure where diseased hogs are kept on quarantined premises.

Rule 3. Hogs must not be removed from any quarantined premises without the permission of state veterinarian.

Rule 4. No hogs, excepting those quarantined and their offspring, shall be allowed upon any quarantined premises until quarantine has been officially raised.

Rule 5. The period of quarantine shall extend for a period of six months unless sooner raised by state veterinarian.

Rule 6. Hogs shipped from county or district in the state of Idaho where hog cholera is known to exist, intended for immediate slaughter shall be treated the same as those imported into the state.

Rule 7. All dogs in a township where hog cholera exists must be confined to owner's premises. This must be the strictly adhered to.

Rule 8. Carcasses of hogs, dead from hog cholera, must be buried to the top of the ground.

Rule 9. Any person convicted of the violation of the above proclamations, rules and regulations shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punished as in such cases provided by law.

VISITED BAD LANDS.

Deputy Sheriff Home from the Lost
Springs Country.

Yesterday Deputy Sheriff George Crane returned home from trip over to the bad lands northwest of American Falls, the country that is to be explored by a party of local sportsmen. The deputy, with Theodore Swanson and Lib. Hunt, spent several days in the lares in search of missing horses, a great deal of speculation is hereafter being the rule within the past few months. Several other officers from Bonneville and other counties had also made excursions into that neck of the universe, and while a good many stray horses were seen, the rendezvous of known bands of horse wranglers remains undiscovered. Deputy Crane tells of an interesting trip, and says that his party ran onto the lava basin which has been notorious as a coral for stolen stock for some time. It is a lava blowout, and the entrance is closed by a barred wire gate. The horses, after being driven in, cannot possibly escape. It was in this enclosure that the officers humped into two brown bears, one of them being of formidable proportions, and thought they emptied their guns at the brutes, failed to bring either of them down, and the bear escaped into the lodge. They were not over-anxious to secure the bear, as there was no means of packing one out.

They also came onto the camp of Sam Cottrell, a character who has figured in the courts. Another man was with him, and they had six or seven saddle horses and a fine outfit of their own. The officers were given a good reception and asked to make camp with the two individuals. The country is described as a wild and rough section that is very difficult to get into, and an extra supply of water must be carried over much of the territory. From a point they used a glass, through which they figured out the meadow in which is supposed to be located the famous lost spring in the meadow they also noted a cool bunch of horses, but being short of water, could not make the trip. They had expected to meet some of the Potomac party on their way to the meadows country.

The region is infested with horse thieves, and many miles and miles may be found if one gets the clue to the right trail for going in and out. Sheriff Mulliner of Bonneville, Tom LeFleur and others have recently been well into the interior, but returned empty-handed. —Potomac Tribune.

COMMISSION TO BEGIN WORK.

No Quarters Secured for the Public Utilities Commission.

D. W. Stanrod, banker and jurist of Potomac, and member of the new public utilities commission of this state, arrived here today to make his future home in Boise and to prepare to assume the new duties that he has been called upon to perform. Mr. Stanrod is often spoken of as the probable chairman of the new commission. The law officers operative on May 8 and at the present time the commission is puzzled to locate headquarters that will be satisfactory.

A conference was held this morning between John A. Blomquist, also a member of the commission, Mr. Stanrod and State Treasurer O. V. Allen, with a view of arriving at some conclusion as to the permanent headquarters of the commission. It will be necessary for the commission to take headquarters outside of either of the old state capital buildings, for there is no room available in them. Just where these quarters will be located had not been definitely decided upon today. It is very probable that they will be selected in one of the larger business buildings in the downtown section.

Members of the commission are very anxious to have their headquarters in the new state capital building and are now urging that they be placed there but State Treasurer Allen, who is custodian of the building and grounds, is apparently unable to accommodate them. He has been puzzled for some time over the question of locating the commission and has been unable to solve it as yet. Today he notified the commissioners of this fact.

The necessary furniture for the commission has been ordered by the capital building commission and will arrive here shortly. In the meantime the commission will attempt to find quarters outside of the capital which means that the rental will have to be paid from the public utilities commission fund, a fact that the commissioners do not like. —Capital News.

HIGHWAY BONDS UNSOLD.

Difficulties Ahead for the Newly Created Highway Commission.

With $200,000 available when a bond issue to that amount is disposed of on or about May 1 and an annual revenue of approximately $75,000 derived from licensed automobiles which will be exempt from taxation when Idaho's new highway law goes into effect, the highway commission of this state will have a large fund on hand with which to map out and start improvements on a model state highway plan. This state will also have the advantage of the law section of the University of Idaho.

Idaho's state highway commission will be in the hands of some of the most experienced highway builders, as well as good road experts and enthusiasts in the northwest. Governor John M. Halsey recently named the commission in Theodore Turner of Potomac, mayor of that city, as the result of a recent election held there; Professor Little, head of the engineering department of the University of Idaho; State Engineer King, qualified as a good road expert; Miles Cannon of Weiser, endorsed by the Idaho Society of Engineers, and Secretary of State W. L. Gifford. State Engineer King and Secretary of State Gifford are ex-officio members of the commission, the secretary of state being its secretary. None of the members of the commission receive compensation for their services. They are, however, allowed their actual traveling and other incidental expenses.

For many years good roads advocates in Idaho have been clamoring for legislation to that effect. The Idaho Society of Engineers backed a measure seeking to create a state highway commission which for two years would have authority to work out a complete state highway system. The autists favored two other bills that went before the same legislature and which placed the burden of maintaining highways as well as their construction on automobile owners. They were successful. The good roads advocates before the legislature managed to strike a harmonious conclusion by which amendments were accepted to one of the automobile bills by which virtually all of the state engineer's bill was incorporated together with the main features of the second automobile bill. As a result Idaho now has the benefit of a law moulded from three strong measures and the financial means by which to build permanent good roads.

Prison labor on public highways where the construction work comes under the jurisdiction of the state commission, is one of the strongest features of Idaho's new law. It is highly commended upon mainly for the reason that in the past and at the present time two-thirds of the 250 prisoners confined in the state penitentiary do nothing at all but idle the days away. With the permission of the prison commission, upon application from the highway commission, these convicts can and will be used in good roads work over the state. Only those prisoners who can be trusted will be worked but it is estimated that at least 150 of them can be divided into gangs and properly as well as safely worked in building roads. For their labor they will receive 50 cents a day from the highway commission fund and this money will go towards the support of the families outside of prison walls. —Capital News.

When Missouri Was Spanish.

After Great Britain had recognized the independence of the United States, Spain feared that the new nation would attempt to seize the Spanish province of Louisiana. Accordingly instructions were issued to the commanders at St. Genevieve, St. Louis and other settlements to "be on the lookout for all sorts of information and advice which he may obtain in regard to the movements of the United States and give information to the lieutenant governor and his government whenever a suitable opportunity affords."

DUTCH MASTERPIECES

"Learn One Thing Every Day"

No. 1. "THE NIGHT WATCH" BY REMBRANDT

Copyright, 1913, by The Associated Newspaper School, Inc.

When Rembrandt painted the most famous of all his works, the picture commonly known as "The Night Watch," which hangs in the Royal Museum at Amsterdam, it caused him a vast amount of trouble. There are upward of a score of portraits in the big canvas, and each man contributed the same amount to pay for it. Naturally each wanted to be quite as prominent as his fellows, and those who were shown in the background made a tremendous row because the artist dared to group his figures with the thought of art composition, rather than of their importance.

Really it is not a night scene at all. Sir Joshua Reynolds is responsible for this mistaken view, being deceived by Rembrandt's originality in handling light and shade. It shows the gathering of the civic guard of Amsterdam at the sound of the drum calling them to practice.

Rembrandt was one of the few masters of painting who had an opportunity to be extravagant. He spent lavishly, and gave away money with equal indifference. He paid outrageous prices for pictures when he should have paid his debts. Like most great geniuses of art, he died poor and neglected.

His real name was Rembrandt Harmenoon van Rijn, and he was born at Leyden in 1607, the son of a wool-mill.

He was his own teacher. In his early days in Leyden, Rembrandt painted and etched the people about him, seeking character and the picturesque, whether he found it in distinguished folk or in beggars and cripples. His constant need for money as a mother as a model. He painted between fifty and sixty portraits of himself; not from vanity, but to master every form of expression, to learn how to represent the human face from within.

His methods were original during his whole career. Sometimes he would take the handle of the brush and drop ink over the fresh paint to give the touch he wanted for the hair to the beard. Sometimes he would scoop up thick layers of paint with the palette knife and stick them on the canvas. Rembrandt developed slowly; but at twenty-five he painted the wonderful "Lesson in Anatomy," in which he shows the anatomist Tulp and his seven associates, life size.

He was then recognized as the foremost portrait painter of Amsterdam.

When he was twenty-seven Rembrandt married a rich and beautiful fair-haired Friesian girl named Saskia. For eight years his wife was the center of Rembrandt's life and art, and her face appears on many of his canvases. These were happy years for Rembrandt. He entertained lavishly, but in spite of many distractions he worked with great energy. No fewer than 700 of his paintings and etchings have been catalogued.

After the death of his wife evil days came. When he was forty-nine years old everything that Rembrandt owned was sold to meet his debts. He was turned out of his largest sum without friends, with little more than the clothes on his back. He whom the world has called the "King of Shad-ows" entered into the gloom of poverty. But still he worked until he died at the age of sixty-two, alone and neglected.

"The Glider," painted in 1640, was sold in Paris in 1802 for $1,000. In 1898 it was sold to M. H. Havemeyer for $20,000. B. A. A. Widener paid $500,000 for "The Mill," because he believed it to be a Rembrandt, although "some" authorities doubt its authenticity. Recently C. F. Frick of New York paid $250,000 for Rembrandt's "The Merchant."

No. 2. "THE LAUGHING CAVALIER," By Frans Hals

"The Laughing Cavalier" is the most famous and best liked of the paintings of Frans Hals. And the Cavalier himself is familiar to all in glance, in manner, in bearing. No one can resist the bold challenge of those mischievous eyes, the full, life-loving lip, the smile with wonderful conceit in himself and a chortle of the world in general. It is altogether a marvelous study of expression. In 1855 Sir Richard Wallace gave $10,000 for the portrait. The Haarlem collector, who had owned it, paid $400 for it. It was sold at a sale, probably be in the hundred thousands.

For truth of character Frans Hals was the greatest painter that ever lived; but if look his work an intently long time to discover it. He lived long and twenty years after his death one of his great portraits brought only $125 at a sale. He was an aristocrat by birth and disreputable by choice. Members of his family were burgomasters, treasurers, and aldermen of Haarlem for nearly three hundred years. Frans and his brother Dirk were frequenters of the lowest taverns, and when "about all" we know of him from the time he was born in 1580 until he was married at the age of thirty-one.

Up to the time he was thirty-three there is nothing to show that Frans Hals produced anything worthy of attention; but he evidently worked to develop his enormous capacity for catching an expression on the instant brought him many patrons. It was just about that time that the great demand for huge group portraits had set in, and Hals profited by it. He agreed to give those who contracted the largest sum toward the group the important places in the composition, which rivalry increased many times the prices he would otherwise have received, and also freed him from subsequent complaint. They were jovial folk, those men of Frans Hals' time, and he loved to paint them as they were.

He had a season of real prosperity, and might have become rich; but when he was forty-one he was over-looked by his drinking, and that was something that Frans could not endure. He loved the tavern better than the studio; but his mastery over the brush enabled him to produce a vast amount of work in a very short time. He liked better, however, to paint the jolly toppers and the fisherwives than the rich gurglers. The time came when he "swapped" his many pupils, making them draw and paint subjects for which he paid them little or nothing, which he sold at fair prices to meet his weekly tavern bills.

From the time he was thirty-three until he was fifty he lived in Haarlem. His love of the tavern increased. He grew poorer and poorer; but continued to paint. His love of bright colors seemed to disappear entirely; until finally he was painting in gray and brown. He was a man in almost jet black. Some say it was because he could not afford to buy colors. When he was seventy years old a baker, who not only gave him bread but lent him money as well, appealed to the courts to compel Hals to pay his debts. The painter's house was seized and the contents sold to the highest bidder. One of the greatest painters of the world was obliged to appeal to the municipal council in order to live. It gave him fuel and food and an annuity of $50, which he received until he died.

In each issue of The Times three different human interest stories will appear. You can get a beautiful reproduction of the above picture, with five others, equally attractive, 2 1/2 inches in size, with this week's "Monitor." In "The Monitor," a well-known authority covers the subject of the pictures and stories of the week. Readers of The Times and "The Monitor" will know a lot of history, science, and travel, and own exquisite pictures. On sale at the same price, "The Monitor" Book Store, Times, Ten Cents. Write today to The Times for booklet explaining The Associated Newspaper School plan.

holes at the end from which the water is excluded, larger than the end at the ditch, thus anything which finds its way into the tube, finds no resistance, and passes on through.

To manufacture these tubes, Governor Gooding designed a series of connected molds, in collapsible form, which, when assembled, are ready to receive the concrete, and the rubber forcing wires. This is poured in and when the cement is set, the forms are taken down. When hardened, the tubes are ready for use. They ripen in the ground, and become as hard as stone.

Sold at a small price, they offer the cheapest means for scientific irrigation.

J. W. Robinson was in the city from Buhl Wednesday evening, thinking of moving his stock of merchandise from the west and city to Twin Falls if he can find a suitable location.

George Coats, district water commissioner, was in the city on the track for several days this week on business in connection with his office. Mr. Coats lives in "Bellevue on the Wood River."

The Twin Falls public library is being moved from the basement of the Sir Charles house to the McCollum building on Shoshone street. The move was made necessary by county officials needing the room in the county building.

A profusion of roses formed the floral decorations at the pretty luncheon given by Mrs. C. F. Parsons at her home on Fourth avenue, north, to the members of the "Thimble Club." Covers were laid for Madames Perrine, Wise, Hill, McLean, Milroy, Spafford and Parsons.

Mrs. Oliver Harwell was hostess to a few friends on Monday afternoon at a delightful five hundred party. Mrs. P. T. Koneley and Miss Barbara McShane were awarded the score prizes. Places were arranged for Madames Banks, Gates, Koneley, Slifer, Lovell, Parsons, Gerhard, Wise and Misses Paul McShane and Barbara McShane.

Dr. and Mrs. Scott and George Barrington and wife, on their trip to Twin Falls on Thursday of last week in the former's Red, returning Sunday. They took in the sights at Shoshone Falls, and while there lost a kodak over the high cliff just below the falls. In order to get it Dr. Scott went down on a rope and climbed back safely. He says he does not care to repeat the performance, however. —Rupert Pioneer.

Complimentary to Mrs. Fred W. Gooding, and Mrs. Novinger of Shoshone and Mrs. Stone and Miss Griffith of Seattle, all of whom are sisters who were the guests of Mrs. B. Williams at the Hotel Perrine the first of the week, Mrs. Morgan Heap entertained at a delightfully informal luncheon yesterday noon at her home. Red roses were used artistically in the adorning of the table and rooms. Covers were laid for the guests of honor and Mrs. W. H. Orensen, Mrs. Harold Dodd, Mrs. E. B. Williams and Miss Lesley Williams.

That Feeling of Security

Have you noticed the decreasing number of records attained by swimmers?

That is largely because a recent improvement known as the A.C. Loop makes it possible for us to adjust the A.C. Loop to fit your nose so that they positively cannot fall off or blow off under any ordinary circumstances.

Going after the flies was just one activity that makes our state today. I am willing to assert, the finest sample of a pure food state in the country.

There were some fine, large times made by our milk supply back in the source. Not a drop of milk is sold in Idaho now that is not bottled right in the dairy where it is produced. We do not allow bottling anywhere except at the dairy. If we find bottles of milk with sediment in them we don't have to analyze the milk. We just seal it and send it for pig feed or destroy it.

"He praised the courts for helping Idaho produce milk instead of the nominal fines which he blamed for causing much of the backwardness of pure food progress in this state. It was these nominal fines, in the past, he said, which gave Idaho her chance to force ahead into her present flyless pure food supremacy."

Turpentine Poisoning

In many localities, especially in logged-off lands where pine trees have been plentiful, animals are liable to get a form of turpentine poisoning. When first turned out in pasture in the spring, both horses and cattle will fill up on pine cones or young shoots. There are especially numerous to pregnant animals, causing abortion.

The symptoms are similar to colic. There is abdominal pain, loss of appetite, a dull look in the eyes, with frequent attempts at urination. The usual home treatment is large doses of "alter," which makes the condition worse by further irritating the kidneys. The urine becomes dark and sometimes bloody, and the hind quarters are very sore. In severe cases, horses heavy with foal may abort and die from blood poison. Cows may also abort, but have greater powers of resistance. The milk is scanty, and the udder becomes congested and hardened, later dwindling in size.

The treatment is mostly prevention. If you suspect this disorder call your local veterinarian at once, as delay in proper treatment makes recovery more doubtful. It is possible to get skilled assistance, give to a horse several doses of castor oil, and to a cow several doses of turpentine.

Follow with several quarts of linseed oil, the idea being to prevent inflammation of the stomach and bowels. Strong liniments, nitro or salicylate should not be given. A pound of Epsom salts can also be used. If convulsions are present, give one ounce of chloral hydrate in a pint of glycerine and water, half of each. Be careful and do not pour fluid down the windpipe. The above treatment applies also to a cow, but on account of her first stomach holding over thirty gallons, and becoming paralyzed, treatment is more difficult. Smaller animals require from one-fourth to one-eighth the dose given horses.

Branches in a tree which are claimed should watch out for this disorder, as several valuable animals may become affected at once, for troubles never appear along singly and usually the best stock die.

E. T. BAKER, Veterinarian,
Idaho Experiment Station.

Beautifying the Home Grounds. Attractive grounds add more than any other feature toward beautifying the home, be it in the country or in the city. No farm or city home can afford to be without a few trees and shrubs around the house. It seems strange indeed with all our natural advantages that ornamental planting is not more observed by those who wish to make life in the country worth while. Money expended in this direction is well invested, not only from the fact of its creating pleasant surroundings, but because the beautifying of a place enhances its value and renders it salable often at a handsome profit. Then again on the other hand, money cannot, buy the satisfaction that one derives from watching the growth and development of ornamental vegetation.

Among the beautiful hardy shrubs that require little attention I wish to enumerate a few that should be planted more extensively in our state. These plants are easily obtainable and not expensive. The Albion or Rose of Sharon flowers freely with us during late summer when few other shrubs are in bloom. It has beautiful white, pink and purple double flowers. The Azaleas are very gorgeous and range in color from intense crimson to lemon yellow. They are covered with bloom in early spring before their leaves appear. Deutzias have masses of snow-white flowers and are early bloomers. Spruce flowers profusely during early spring. They produce a profusion of white flowers. Forsythia or Golden Ball has graceful drooping flowers.

Of the many beautiful climbing vines that grace our porches and arbors there is nothing better than the Vitis which can be had in purple, lavender and white. The immense drooping racemes of bloom are truly a grand sight. The Climbing Rose, the Clematis, English Ivy, Virginia Creeper all grow to the greatest perfection. Remember that before you get ready to plant sketch out your grounds, locate all buildings, drives, walks and plantings.

Cow's Milk for Infants

It has been shown by chemists that milk from different families of animals differ much in composition; that milk from animals of the same family vary much less; and that milk from animals of the same strain or breeding vary least.

As milk is produced for the nourishment of the young it is reasonable to suppose that the milk of any animal is the best food for its young, and with but few exceptions this has been found to be true. The milk of some Jersey cows proves to be too rich for their calves. Probably such a condition exists with many other natural composition of the milk has been changed by selection and breeding.

The average composition of human milk and also that of animals belonging to different families of milk-giving animals is given in the following table:

Proteins (Caneola Fat, Milk, Min'r'l and Albumen)	sugar, matter (ash)
Human .....	2.28 3.78 6.21 0.31
Cow .....	2.20 3.90 5.10 0.79
Goat .....	4.46 0.76 4.46 0.76
Ewe .....	5.52 6.88 4.91 0.89
Mare .....	1.59 1.21 5.67 0.35
Dog .....	7.10 12.80 3.50 1.30
Sheep .....	5.50 5.00 10.50 2.00 2.50
Sw .....	5.90 6.90 3.80 1.10
Elephant .....	3.10 19.60 8.80 0.70
Reindeer .....	10.40 10.40 2.50 1.50

As an example of the variation in composition of milk from animals belonging to the same family the following table of the composition from eight hundred cows is given:

Proteins (Caneola Fat, Milk, Min'r'l and Albumen) sugar, matter (ash)

Minimum .....	2.07 1.67 2.11 0.35
Maximum .....	4.40 6.47 6.12 1.21

The composition of human milk differs but about the same extent as cow's milk but, of course, it overages a little lower in all the compounds excepting milk fat.

The variation in the composition of the milk of two breeds of dairy cows is shown in the following table:

Proteins (Caneola Fat, Milk, Min'r'l and Albumen) sugar, matter (ash)

Holsteins .....	3.28 3.51 4.59 .54
Jersey .....	3.96 4.78 4.85 .76

Doctors recognize the fact that cow's milk, especially that from Jerseys, is not suitable for young infants, and a comparison between Jersey milk and human milk as to composition, indicates the reason. It is too rich. It is full of food compounds excepting milk sugar. Holstein milk comes much nearer being of the right composition. It is full of food compounds excepting milk sugar. Holstein milk comes much nearer being of the right composition. It is full of food compounds excepting milk sugar.

Experience has shown that young animals fed on milk that is too weak are stunted and those fed on milk that is too strong are subject to indigestion. So it is quite important that milk for infants and young animals have the right composition.

By referring to the tables it will be found that the milk of all animals is lified, excepting the mare, has greater strength than human milk, and usually cannot be used as a substitute food without modification.

Cow's milk is sometimes used as a substitute food for lambs, puppies, and young pigs, but the table indicates that it is as weak for these animals, and experience indicates that cow's milk is quite certain to produce a stunted growth when fed to these animals.

The fats of milk require the most attention in the preparation of milk for infants, for it is fats are present in greater proportion than food for these four per cent the digestion of casein is interfered with. Milk testing four per cent of fat or less has almost the same per cent of casein as fat; thus, testing more than four per cent fat usually has from a fraction to one per cent less casein. Then a fat test being careful to secure a representative sample, furnishes most of the knowledge necessary in the preparation of milk for infant feeding.

University of Idaho.

Hog cholera can be eradicated. It will need the combined work of every hog raiser in an infected district. We need to think that yellow fever and malaria were diseases natural to certain regions and that as long as climate and man, and these diseases in these localities would be there to claim their victims. Uncle Sam wiped them out of the Panama Canal zone so effectively that they are not to be seen there now. One most ill-reputed region became a health resort. It is not impossible to eradicate a disease when once we know its nature, and have a way for its prevention. It becomes just a matter of education on the part of those who must know about it. One refractory individual, or one unscrupulous enough to shirk his share of the duty, can prevent the end of hog cholera.

Hog cholera serum will certainly prevent the disease if it does not cure, and its constant application and steady extension into all the infected districts will mean the eradication of hog cholera. Of course, disinfection of the hands in hand with the serum, so as to destroy the fecal for now epidemics.

In parts of the United States an effort is on foot to obtain the co-operation of every individual in a district, and while cholera out of that district once for all. This effort will be followed by extending the work into other districts until eventually the whole state is covered—until all the states are covered, and hog cholera becomes a disease living only in memory. It can be done. It will be done. The experiment station will help and others will help the co-operation.

Hog cholera, according to a recent government report, cost the United States six and one-half millions of hogs in 1912. The receipts of hogs in the western markets are a million less so far this year, than they were last.

There is hog cholera in Idaho, and now is the time to eradicate it. Let there be concerted action in one county at a time and let's have every hog in that county vaccinated against hog cholera. From this the work will proceed until the state veterinarian can say with pride that there is not one case of cholera in this state, nor will there be so long as our farmers satisfy the system of keeping no hogs but immunes.

Best Time of the Year to Get the Flies.

The flies live over winter. They are the sluggish ones seen early in the spring. The females are ready to lay eggs and are seeking stored stable manure. In a few days each female that passed the winter will be represented by two hundred fifty to four hundred eggs. Thus the winter continues to multiply for the rest of the summer. Thoroughly spraying the manure with kerosene will kill the eggs of young maggots, but will spoil the manure for fertilizer. Spray ing the manure with Paris Green water (a tablespoon to a bucket of water) will poison the maggots. The best way is to haul the manure to the open fields once each week, and spread it out where it can dry. The drying kills the maggots.

Flies will breed in outhouses and garbage. These should be closed fly-tight or frequently sprinkled with chloride of lime, freshly slacked lime or kerosene. One fly killed today will equal the killing of several hundred thousand next August. If clyde price is no incentive for action, the general health ought to demand that each person take a hand in this fly fight.

The Sugar and Acid Content of Irrigated and Non-irrigated Strawberries and Raspberries.

Of the several compounds which make up the ripe fruit sugar, acids and pectins are most potent in determining taste. In Idaho the small fruits are grown extensively in both the irrigated and the non-irrigated sections, and in some instances at least reach the same markets. Expression is frequently given to an apparently widespread belief that irrigated berries in comparison with non-irrigated ones are flat in taste and perhaps less resistant to the several agencies which accomplish decay. A large number of analyses of irrigated and non-irrigated fruits have been made recently at the Idaho Experiment Station. The strawberries and raspberries as indicated below:

Strawberries—Average for irrigated Hood River: Water, 87.03 per cent; sugar, 4.46 per cent; acid, .95 per cent. For non-irrigated Hood River: Water, 84.34 per cent; sugar, 6.34 per cent; acid, .24 per cent. Average for miscellaneous irrigated varieties (one analysis each of Brandenburg, Cardinal, Cheasapeake, Willamette, Downing, Great Washington, Magoon, Miller, Morning Star, Nick Omer and Warfield): Water, 89.20 per cent; sugar, 4.13 per cent; acid, .64 per cent. For miscellaneous non-irrigated varieties (one analysis each of Aroma, Havanna, Minidoka, Mark, Carson, Sharon, Hilde, Sample, Sena, Dor Dunlap and William Bolt): Water, 85.44 per cent; sugar, 6.02 per cent; acid, .82 per cent.

Raspberries—Average for irrigated black: Water, 78.30 per cent; sugar, 7.59 per cent; acid, .61 per cent. For non-irrigated black: Water, 75.62 per cent; sugar, 7.49 per cent; acid, .86 per cent. Average for irrigated red: Water, 88.52 per cent; sugar, 7.21 per cent; acid, .38 per cent. For non-irrigated red: Water, 83.80 per cent; sugar, 5.70 per cent; acid, 1.06 per cent. For miscellaneous irrigated varieties (one analysis only): Water, 81.43 per cent; sugar, 8.16 per cent; acid, .69 per cent. Non-irrigated white (one analysis only): Water, 85.65 per cent; sugar, 8.55 per cent; acid, 1.16.

From these results it would seem that there is a decided difference between our irrigated and our non-irrigated strawberries in sugar content and a distinct but relatively smaller difference between them in acid content. As the irrigated berries which were analyzed almost invariably contained the great percentage of water, there appears to be very good reason for the criticism noted above in so far as it applies to strawberries. It is not so apparent that the same criticism is justly applicable in raspberries, for as indicated by the results of analysis, the sugar content of the irrigated black and the irrigated white berries was practically identical with that of the non-irrigated and appreciably greater in the case of red ones. A more decided difference in acid content is apparent, the irrigated berries as a rule contain the smaller amount. J. S. JONES, Station Chemist.

Potato Diseases

I have recently returned from a trip through certain parts of Idaho, and I have found in various parts two potato diseases that almost receive attention at this time. These are the Fusarium dry rot and potato scab. In view of the fact that both of these diseases may spread rapidly and in time may become very serious troubles, it is necessary for potato growers to practice certain methods of culture that will hold the diseases in check.

Both of these diseases will cause great financial loss to the grower, and it is to be eradicated them. Both are caused by parasitic fungous organisms living at the expense of the potato tuber. They are plant beings much as the potato, but they cannot make their own food. They have numerous minute reproductive bodies that cannot be seen without a microscope. These bodies, called spores, may live three or four years in the soil. Consequently when a field becomes infested with the disease, considerable time is required to rid the field of it.

Identification.—Scab: The grower recognizes readily the rather circular, which are characteristic of scab. Dry Rot: This is strictly a disease of the tuber during storage. The organism causing the disease enters the tuber only through broken places in the skin. It continues slowly into the tuber, leaving behind decayed tissue which is dry or powdery. Sometimes other kinds of organisms will enter the decayed portion giving it a wet appearance. These wet rots sometimes have a foul odor, due to the presence of bacteria. In badly infested tubers, the skin becomes shriveled and discolored.

Economic Importance.—There are estimates on record in Nebraska where the loss from dry rot alone has been put as high as twenty to sixty per cent of the stored crop. In certain parts of California the financial loss from potato scab has been estimated as high as seventy-five per cent. These are extreme cases, but they are not the only ones of the kind on record where scab and dry rot have become an epidemic.

Methods of Control.—1. Use only land free from the disease organisms. It is usually best to grow only one potato crop in a four-year rotation.

2. Use only seed tubers free from the disease.

3. Tubers affected with scab and perfectly sound ones taken from a lot where dry rot is present may be treated as follows:

(a) Formalin Solution Treatment.—Use one pint of 10 per cent formalin to 30 gallons of water. Suspend the tubers in the solution for two hours.

No. 1. CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS

Copyright, 1913, by The Associated Newspaper School, Inc.

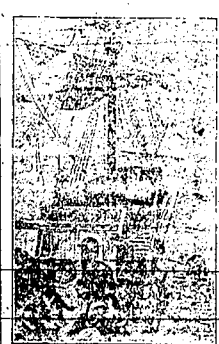

On a certain day in February, 1492, there rode along the narrow path of the foot of Mount Etna, a few miles from Granada in Spain, a man with his head bowed low over his breast. The little mule he was riding stumbled along wearily. Suddenly he heard him to the noise of swiftly galloping hoofs. But he did not raise his head. Just when the agile horseman drew alongside at last and slowed down, the rider of the mule looked up to see who it was. There followed a hurried conversation. A few words, and then the man on the mule, the eyes beaming, his face alight with hope and pride, and his hand, erect, turned quickly his jaded beast, and, together with the man on horseback who had followed him, rode back the way he had come.

The man on the mule was Christopher Columbus, and the one who caught up to him was messenger sent by King Ferdinand of Spain to tell him that at last, after seven long years of weary waiting and pleading of his cause, his requests were to be granted. He was to be made commander of an expedition that was to attempt to discover a new and shorter

No. 2. THE CABOTS

Although it was Columbus who discovered the land of the western hemisphere, North America was really discovered by the Cabots, John and his son Sebastian. And it is interesting to note that, while all three of these men were Italians, their great discoveries were made under the flags of foreign countries. Columbus, who never knew that he had found a new land, but believed always that he had reached Asia, served the king of Spain. The Cabots were in the employ of English merchants.

Therant Cabot, or John Cabot as he is called, was a man of the same town as Columbus, being born in Genoa in 1450. Most people think that Columbus was the only man of his time to believe that the earth was round; but there were many others.

No. 3. VASCO NUNEZ BALBOA

All alone on a high peak in Panama a man stood gazing westward with glittering eyes. Spellbound he stood, thrilled by the wonderful sight spread out before him—a wilderness of forest, cut through with silvery streams, and bounded by the watery horizon. There before him lay the ocean, since named the Pacific for the sight of which he had labored and fought so many days and nights. Sparkling like a million precious stones beneath the blue of the sun, the vast expanse of boundless sea spread out farther than the eyes could reach.

With eagle eyes.

Darien. Balboa couldn't get along with Enciso, and he set out to explore the country, discovering the Pacific, which he called the "Mar del Sur," meaning "sea of the South."
 Later he was enticed back to the colony and tried on the charge of treason. After a short trial, which ended in his conviction, Balboa and four of his companions were executed. This was in 1517. Balboa protested his innocence and loyalty to the last, but in vain.

The interesting history of the great work accomplished by B. F. Bush, which appears on the front page of this issue in relation to his rehabilitation of the Gould railroad will be of interest reading to the people of this section who are somewhat doubtful of the Western Pacific's building into this city. There has been for the past four years and up to the present time repeated rumors of the gradual approach of the "Western Pacific" toward a receivership, owing to losses in operation. The brief sketch of the new president of the Gould system has accomplished will lay away to rest much of the doubt and hesitating among the people here who are looking for a new railroad. According to the sketch from the Kansas City Star the road is gradually emerging to one of the big paying transcontinental railroads of which the Western Pacific is but a short link. At any rate, it will help to boost the railroad aspirations of this section to know that the contemplated extensions are a possibility without financial curtailment.

The rate decision made by the Federal Supreme Court in the case of the state of Minnesota against the Hill roads and the Minneapolis, and St. Louis railways, which gives the states a right to adjust and fix rates of interstate carriers, throws open the whole situation with regard to railroad control. Four years ago Minnesota through its railroad commission and the state legislature made a strong fight to control the railways doing business within the state. Commissioners, lowering unjust rates in some instances, were made and a two-cent fare bill passed the legislature and became a law. The railroad began their fight against it on the grounds that the rate orders were confiscatory and that the state had no jurisdiction on anything but interstate business. The case went up to the federal district judge, Sanborn by name, who stated unhesitatingly by ruling for the railroads, declaring the two-cent fare bill unconstitutional. The higher court reversed him and declares that the state can fix rates that are reasonable and just. The ruling does set a fixed procedure for the state in the carrying capacity of the railroad must be the basis of decision as the right and wrong of railroad rates. The decision now throws open the whole situation inasmuch as the roads have been formerly under the ruling of the commerce commission and the Commerce Court. Now the railroads will not know where to look for the right jurisdiction and where the state commission and the interstate degree the railroad will be up in the air. Well, so far as the result is in setting the market and dumping railroad securities in a manner to indicate that the question is a most vital one with the railroads.

A CHINO-JAPANESE FLIRTATION:
The anti-oriental activities in California seem not unlikely to bring about a closer understanding between Japan and China. Already such Tokyo journals as the Yomiuri have begun to talk about the organization of an anti-American league among Oriental nations. On the Chinese side, sentiment in favor of an alliance with Japan is also manifest. Dr. Sun Yat-sen, during his recent visit to Japan, delivered at a gathering of Chinese residents in Nagasaki a speech in which he came out squarely for a "China-Japanese alliance." "It was the Manchus," he said, "who stood in the way of China-Japanese friendship, but now that the old regime is gone we should have no difficulty in realizing what ought to have been realized long ago." It is significant, too, that the arrival of Dr. Sun in Japan, the Chinese Government asked Dr. Hirai, of the Railway Bureau of Japan, and Dr. Ariga, one of the foremost scholars of jurisprudence, to come to Peking as advisers to the Department of Communications and the Department of Judicial Affairs, respectively. Upon his return to Shanghai from Tokyo, Dr. Sun stated to the chief mission in Japan was to find out the real attitude of the Japanese Government and people toward China. He further said:

"When I returned to China two years ago, after an exile of twenty years, I found to my great surprise that my fellow countrymen entertained intense suspicion and even hatred toward Japan. They thought that Japan, hand in glove with the European Powers, was contemplating the partition of China. I could not believe it. To ascertain the real situation, I went over to Japan and there met and talked with men of all classes and of all shades of opinion. To my great satisfaction I discovered that the Japanese desire to befriend us is deep-seated and sincere."

"Japan, thought entering into world competition much later than China, has gained a deeper and wider knowledge of international affairs as well as of modern science and art. A commercial alliance with such an alert nation would be a signal advantage to us. It is my intention to tour

China and propagate the gospel of China-Japanese friendship.

"As for a political alliance with Japan, it is possible and advisable; but at this moment I do not care to say anything definite about it."

In spite of the guarded expression of Dr. Sun, however, the Shanghai correspondent of the Asahi thinks that he really recommended to President Yuan Shih-kai the ultimate formation of a China-Japanese alliance, both political and economic.

As if echoing Dr. Sun's sentiments, Mr. Ka, editor of the Peking Jihao (Tien-tsin, China), contributes an article to the popular Tokyo monthly, the Shin Koron, advocating a bond of friendship between China and Japan. The Chung-kuo Jihao (Shanghai) also publishes an editorial asserting that a China-Japanese alliance would be even more desirable for Japan than for China. It argues:

"As long as China remains weak and impotent, Japan's position will be in constant danger. An invigorated, resuscitated China means the strengthening of Japan's position as a world power. The outcome of the war with Russia gives us an apt illustration. Japan was victorious, to be sure, but she failed to drive Russia from Manchuria, neither could she obtain an indemnity from Russia, which left her depleted treasury un replenished. Had China only been powerful enough to throw her influence on the Japanese side of the scale, the result of the war would have been different."

The Jihao, an influential financial organ in Tokyo, views the utterances of Dr. Sun and the Chinese editors with justification, saying that they are exactly the views long held by the leading men of Japan. This journal is responsible for the information that a China-Japanese society has been organized in Peking to promote friendly feeling between the two nations; and that the Japanese and Chinese newspaper editors in Manchuria have recently held a conference at Kirin, which resulted in the formation of a "China-Japanese" press association, whose object is to remove mutual misunderstandings between Japan and China with regard to the Manchurian question.

But these rosy views with regard to China and Japan are not shared by Professor Katsumi Ukita, of Waseda university. The professor is a man of learning in a very wide sense and teaches history and sociology in the faculty of the university. He is a brilliant and sagacious Count Okuma, whose ideas of statesmanship we may be warranted in believing he shares. Professor Ukita has studied at Yale and is well acquainted with the principles of our Republic. Writing on "The Future of China" in the Japan Magazine (Tokyo), he declares that "China is to the Orient what Turkey is to the Near East." "The solution of the Chinese problem is a much more difficult problem than the problem of Turkey." "China, at present, can not, with herself, 'offer sovereignty' in any sense only," with Russia, England, and Japan hemming her in. Before Japan will ever recognize the Chinese Republic, Tokyo will have to wait until Peking shows true mettle. The article concludes with the following threat to manage Chinese affairs if China is too weak to do so:

"At the present time, Japan, with the rest of the world, is anxiously awaiting the outcome of China's efforts to attain stable government. If Yuan Shih-kai fails, then there will be nothing for it but to let the Powers take a hand, and see what can be done for China. As to results, Japan is particularly concerned with having no alien Power in possession of Manchuria. She has fought two wars to keep alien Powers away from her borders, and her annexation of Korea to insure this safeguard is now an accomplished fact. Indeed, Japan must hesitate to recognize the Republic of China until she has a proper guaranty to this effect. One thing is certain, either China must be in a position to defend Manchuria against invasion or she must be content to permit Japan to do it."—Literary Digest.

MUST FILE SCHEDULES

Utility Companies Exempting Common Carriers Must Show Rates, Etc.

Public utilities corporations in this state other than those classified as common carriers, must file with the public utility commission of Idaho, schedules showing all rates, tolls, rentals, charges, etc., within such time and in the form as the commission will require. The rules and regulations governing these filings are now being prepared by the commission and will be issued to all public utilities other than common carriers, following the taking of a census of the utilities. The county auditors of the respective counties in the state have been requested by the commission to prepare a census of all utilities in their counties.

Under the California law, it was stated at the public utilities hearing today, provision is made for a vote that can be taken in the respective districts or counties by the people to designate what public utilities within those districts and counties can come under the jurisdiction of the public utilities commission. That action of the Idaho law governing the filing of these schedules is evidently identical with that of the California law, with the exception that it does not provide for such a vote being taken but gives the commission full power to act and to promulgate the rules and regulations now being done. The governing clause, as found in the new law, and by virtue of which the present commission is now acting in calling for the schedule is known as "supervision," of section 13 and is as follows:

"Under such rules and regulations as the commission may prescribe, every public utility other than a common carrier shall file with the commission within such time and in such form as the commission may designate, and shall print and keep open to public inspection schedules showing all rates, tolls, rentals, charges and classifications collected or enforced, or to be collected or enforced, together with all rules, regulations, contracts, privileges and facilities which in any manner affect or relate to rates, tolls, rentals, classifications or service. The rates, tolls, rentals and charges shown on such schedules when filed by a public utility as to which the commission by this act requires the power to fix any rates, tolls, rentals or charges, shall not, within any portion of the territory as to which the commission acquires as to such public utility such power, exceed the rates, tolls, rentals or charges shown on such schedules."

when filed by any public utility as to any territory as in which the commission does not by this act acquire as to such public utility such power, shall not exceed the rates, tolls, rentals and charges in effect at the time the commission acquires as to such territory and as to such public utility, the power to fix rates, tolls, rentals or charges. Nothing in this section contained shall prevent the commission from approving or fixing the rates, tolls, rentals or charges, from time to time, in excess or less than those shown by said schedules."—Capital News.
