FORMER TWIN FALLS MAN BUSY

Charles A. Krueger Making Good at Long Beach, Calif.

Contractor Charles A. Krueger of 112 Chestnut avenue, who is now completing residence contracts involving a goodly sum, has been commissioned to build Ray Norton's three-story frame apartment house on Neptune place and will begin work on that building in about two weeks. This structure will cost $31,500.

At 1057 Locust avenue Contractor Krueger is just finishing an especially handsome residence for George Rockhold, a retired farmer from Iowa, who, after having visited in this city for several seasons, decided to build and make Long Beach his permanent home. The new house, which is built on attractive Swiss chalet lines with shingles and shingle exterior and a white roof, contains the equivalent of ten rooms. It has hardwood floors throughout and includes every latest building feature from the complete dressing-room equipment, it is one of those particularly complete modern homes for which it would seem that the owner needs buy scarcely anything in the way of furniture other than chairs and a dining table. This house was turned over to the owner in five days.

The same contractor is completing a $2000 home at 209 Paloma avenue, on the corner of 10th and 11th streets. This home is now ready for plastering. As are the five modern houses built by Mr. Krueger on Macdonald avenue between Sixth and Seventh streets for Paul Strehlow and the Kingsland residence on American avenue, where extensive repair work has been done.

Though he has been in Long Beach but eight months, Charles A. Krueger, of 112 Chestnut avenue, has been highly successful in the contracting and building business here and has built a number of first-class houses.

He is thoroughly conversant with such work, having been engaged in it four years in Twin Falls, Idaho, before he has just been awarded contracts to build five cottages for Paul Strehlow at 634-636-638-640-642 Magnolia avenue. One of them will contain five rooms and will cost $2000. The others will be four-room houses, costing $1500 each.—Long Beach paper.

SPUD PRICES ARE GOING UP

Famous Kew Valley and Oklahoma Districts Report Potato Shortage.

Consumers in Kansas City this week paid $1.50 a bushel for new potatoes, an ascent of fifty cents for the same article several days ago. Dry weather throughout Kansas, Missouri, southern Idaho, and northern Utah, has produced a serious shortage of potatoes in the crop and a big shortage in the land.

Throughout the Kew Valley region, where 1000 cars were produced last year, the indications are that the crop will be less than half of that amount this season.

Not so far from Muskogee, Okla., is to the effect that potatoes advanced from 70c to 80c a bushel Monday throughout Arkansas river points.—Idaho Falls Register.

REFORM AND NOT COMPROMISE

Borah Sounds Warning to Party on Present Problems of the Nation

Cannot Hope for Successful Union by Ignoring Problems or by Compromising on Principles—Must Settle Issues, Then Unite

Jersey City, N. J., July 1.—Declaring that Republicans, instead of talking fusion and trying to forget something which it is the party's duty to remember, should tell the people what they propose to do with the great trust question, Senator Borah delivered a remarkable address at a meeting of New Jersey progressive Republicans last night. While expressing the hope that the Republican party would be able to dominate, regulate or destroy monopoly, he declared that if it could not do so the time would come when a party would arise which would be strong and brave enough to do justice to labor, to honest industry and legitimate business and which would destroy, regardless of consequences, the trust business. In closing his address Senator Borah said:

"I believe in agitation. It seems to me that the only way to advance in morals or government. From John D. Rockefeller crying in the wilderness to Sam Adams arousing the early patriots and Garfield and Phillips touching to life the sudden conscience of a slave weighted nation, it has all come from the hour of action. The hour of discussion may be postponed, but we have witnessed during the last several years a remarkable uprising against certain forms of wealth and privilege. We have said some wise things and some unwise things but as the whole it has been a tremendous moral evolution. The sole question now is are we prepared to put in substantial and practical and permanent force efficient and serviceable laws and institutions as a result of this agitation? With the great purpose of this movement, to wit, a fairer chance of the opportunities of life and a more equitable distribution of the obligations and burdens of government, most of us have been in full sympathy."

"Nevertheless, the time for a new couplet is here—the couplet of doing something and doing it now. We must be prepared to do it. To offer a remedy, we must enter the laboratory and out of these warring and elemental forces provide a practicable and effective remedy. The time has come when we must not feel too proud to associate with those common people of the intellect—fact."

"People Telling and Thinking. "Out yonder in the open field of industry the countless millions are toiling and thinking. Do not mislead them or misrepresent them. They are to be the chief children of the future. They are thoroughly in earnest. They are not playing the game of politics for the passing honors which come and fade as they go, but they are interested in those substantial and permanent principles of right and justice which will carry blessings to their children and to their children's children. They believe that it is fundamental principles and great concepts of justice and equity which must be put into effect, upward and upward step of the human family. They are neither willing to fear it, do and abandon it nor are they afraid to amend and adapt it to the economic and political conditions of the twentieth century. But they are not to be misled. They are not to be misled by the machinery of government now which the fathers did not provide for. They are certain that adaptation is needed. They know the evil and they feel that the hour of discussion should soon give way for the period of action. They are not to be misled by remedies, not narcotics and pain killers, but the elemental treatment which will get rid of the disease. There is nothing more my friends, there is nothing more certain than the fact that anything which injures legitimate business and discourages legitimate industry will affect labor, will affect the whole subject of the physical and moral well being of the community. But it is also true that there is nothing so demoralizing, so discouraging, so oppressive upon labor as the trust business—as business methods ranking with fraud and unfair dealing, with dishonesty and monopoly."

"We are now engaged in governing the tariff. After the present tariff bill passes, what then? The meat which we will buy will come from the trust. The sugar we will buy, according to the admissions of the trust, be even more completely under the control. They have frankly stated before a committee of congress that they are in favor of free sugar because of the advantage it will give them. Everything now controlled by monopoly will be controlled by monopoly. Not the law of supply and demand but another power will fix prices. There will be little consolation to the consumers to know that they have been turned over to the trust. The trust is an international trust rather than a domestic trust. Some people seem to think that even a change of government is desirable. I feel no such exultation at the change. It has been well said that you cannot overthrow the trusts by the use of nitric acid with cogwheel water."

Should Not Forget.

"Now my friends, instead of talking amalgamation and fusion and of trying to forget something which it is our duty to remember, tell the people what we are going to do with this question. Are we prepared, have we the courage to say that we are going to dominate, regulate and control or destroy these powerful monopolies which are right now living in open defiance not only of the statutes but of the common sense and common decency? Have we the breadth and wisdom to lucidly that upon our banners, are we prepared to tell the question once and for all of whether or not this government can govern?—Are we as a people prepared to say that we will clear the mercantile market place of those monopolies which defy all rules of economy and all the statutes of men and fix the price of practically everything we consume? Shall we let the trusts rule in the fashion and with the thoroughness with which our forefathers dealt with another generation of oligarchy?"

"I do not know whether the will be so or not. I have faith that we will, but certainly some day when the crisis is sufficiently acute, if it be not now, to do justice to the people, there have been more thoroughly strengthened. It will not be strong enough now, there will come a party armed with a new and better faith in the strength and efficiency of our form of government and wise enough—strong enough and broad enough to have enough to do justice to labor, to honest industry and legitimate business and which will destroy regardless of consequences, the illegitimate business of the trust business."

"There is no doubt but that a party which will write out and fair laws giving to labor its due proportion of the wealth which it creates and enough to justify to labor, to honest industry and legitimate business and which will destroy regardless of consequences, the illegitimate business of the trust business."

AGENT GETS SET-BACK

Opinion of Supreme Court of Interest to Real Estate Agents.

Relations between real estate agents and principals is not a new one. In an opinion handed down by Justice Stewart of the supreme court yesterday, an opinion concurred in by all the justices on the bench. It was in the case of James A. Martin against Mary Wilson on appeal from Judge C. O. Steele, of the Fourth judicial district. The action was to recover commission as broker for the sale of property. In the district court the judgment was in favor of the plaintiff. In the supreme court the judgment was reversed and a new trial was granted. The law applying to all such cases is thus explained in the syllabus of the case.

To entitle a real estate agent to commission a contract of employment is necessary, and where employment is established, the commission is due. Where a contract is entered into by the owner of real estate and a proposed purchaser for the sale of the real estate, and the contract provides that the purchaser agree to buy the undivided one-half interest of three minor heirs, and the contract further provides that the principal merely give an option to purchase to the party proposed by such agent, and no sale is made, the agent is not entitled to a commission upon a sale of the real estate in consideration of the broker's furnishing a purchaser, is not satisfied that the furnishing of a purchaser who enters into a contract to purchase the land upon condition of the principal's giving an option to a guardian's sale, where the contract provides it shall be optional with the purchaser to buy or not, and such an option to purchase on the part of the proposed purchaser, and a commission cannot be recovered by the broker for such sale.—Statesman.

Contract made to pay a broker a certain commission upon a sale of real estate in consideration of the broker's furnishing a purchaser, is not satisfied that the furnishing of a purchaser who enters into a contract to purchase the land upon condition of the principal's giving an option to a guardian's sale, where the contract provides it shall be optional with the purchaser to buy or not, and such an option to purchase on the part of the proposed purchaser, and a commission cannot be recovered by the broker for such sale.—Statesman.

Ton of Coal Means More Coal Than Formerly.

The quantity of coal required to produce a ton of coke is much less than formerly. The average gain in 1912 compared with 10 years ago is probably at least 100 pounds. It is doubtful if in the earlier years the actual yield of coke in coke ovens was 60 per cent, whereas in 1912 it was 67 per cent, according to the United States Geological Survey. This gain is largely due to the increase in the production of by-product coke, in which the yield of coke from a ton of coal is very much higher than in making beehive coke.

In Illinois, Indiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, and Pennsylvania, where coke is made extensively in by-product plants, the yield varies from 62.5 per cent in Wisconsin to 81.5 per cent in Indiana, whereas in the states where beehive practice prevails the yield in 1912 varied from 59 per cent (in Georgia) to 65.5 per cent (in Pennsylvania).

The Child Moses Saved From Death.

Ex. 2:1-10.

Golden Text—Whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me. Matt. xviii:5.

(1) Verse 1—In nations or individuals would you say or not, and why, that the sense of gratitude for favors past, is over as keen as the sense of gratitude for favors to come?

(2) Verses 2-10—Was the fear which this new king had grounded upon true reasons, and if so what were they, or was it in his own mind only, and how would you account for it?

(3) What do history and present-day experience say about two or more distinct races forming one prosperous nation or otherwise? Great Britain, the United States, Canada, South Africa, etc.

(4) Verse 11-14—Show how this harshness was had statecraft, and worse morals.

(5) If Great Britain had treated the American colonies as she now treats Canada and her other colonies, would there have been any revolutionary war in America?

(6) Suppose this Pharaoh had continued to treat the Israelites with generosity, as his predecessor had done, what do you think that have probably had upon them in the matter of loyalty to Egypt? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

(7) What national rebellion can you recall where the laws and the administration of them have been just and equal?

(8) By which method, generosity or oppression can employers of labor get the most out of their employees? Give your reasons.

(9) On what law or theory do you account for the fact that the more the Israelites were oppressed the faster they multiplied and grew?

(10) Verse 22—What had Pharaoh commanded the midwives to do at the birth of every Israelite boy, and how did they obey?

(11) When Pharaoh could not get the midwives to murder all the baby boys what command did he then give?

(12) Chapter 1:1-10—Who were the parents of Moses?

(13) Verse 10—You say or not, and why, that this man and woman of the tribe of Levi were brought together in marriage by God in order that Moses might be born?

(14) Would you say or not, and why, that "all true marriages are made in heaven?"

(15) Give your reason for your opinion whether God rebuked Moses to be the deliverer of the Israelites before or after his birth.

(16) In what manner did they continue to hide the baby for three months, and why did they not try to continue to hide him?

(17) Did the mother of Moses neglect this method of putting him in the ark by the river plain the experiment to bring about what actually happened? Why?

(18) Verses 5-6—Would you say, and why, that Pharaoh's daughter's sympathy for the child was purely natural or that she was directly influenced by God? What makes the latter theory probable?

(19) Verse 7—What was the name of this sister, who acted her part so skillfully, and why would you say or not that she was inspired by God?

(20) Is it an error or not that all the details of a man's life are ordained by God? Any?

LISTENING TO THE CHIMES

Message of the Centuries Conveyed to Those Who Have Minds Attuned to Hear.

Sitting in the village churchyard, while the children play with flowers upon the sodded grass, and the slow gossip saunter past the gate and the evening sunshine breaks in through the golden shower of the laburnums, and rustle peacefully on the worn headstones, the chiming of the bells trembles through the air like speech of living voices. What histories of human life have they not witnessed up in that gray tower among the ivy! What fear and passion, what grief and passion and awful sin, hushed down in whispers of dark tradition, have they not rung in and out at baptism and wedding and funeral! What mysteries are sealed under those tombstones, but mysterious to them! How they have chimed for every one that is buried round, and mixed with their thoughts, and wandered with them through other lands, and come to them in dreams, dying children have heard! They call to heaven; have lingered sweetly in the arms of happy brides; lonely fathers have wept with them for the dead; they have softened the prodigal's heart in a far country, have rung like the voice of peace through the din of battle; they have startled the wicked thought and palsied the wicked hand, and there they peal still, out of the past into the present, over the dead and over the living. It is only a peal of bells, and we have heard them a thousand times, and nobody thinks of them; but yet all this, and a great deal more is in them.—William F. Stevenson.

SETTLED STATUS OF POET

Douglas Jerrold's Verdict Will Be Indorsed by Many Who Have Tried to Read Browning.

The writings of Robert Browning, which are in great favor among an aesthetic folk, but continue to be caviler to the general public, probably received their keenest criticism from Douglas Jerrold last of century ago. Jerrold was recovering from a violent illness when a copy of Browning's "Sordello" fell into the hands of the convalescent. He began to read, but not a complete idea could he get from that mystic production. The thought then struck him that he had lost his reason during his illness. Filled with agony, a perspiration burst from his brow. At that moment his wife opened the door. "Read this, my dear," he cried out, thrusting the volume into her hands. After several attempts to make any sense out of it, as Jerrold related, she returned it, saying, "Boswell the gibberish! I don't understand a word of it!" "Thank heaven," exclaimed Jerrold, "then I am not an idiot after all!"

Japanese Embalming.
In the olden days in Japan the master embalmer was successful in securing to posterity a perfectly extraordinary amount of preservation in the bodies on which he operated. The Japan Chronicle draws attention to a case of this nature which has recently come to light in Kobe. The operation of laying out a public grave there included the removal of some graves of the Aoyama family. Two graves were opened belonging to old daimyo who were buried about 200 years ago. The graves consisted of stone cells with large coffins of wood, containing inner coffins of earthenware. On the spaces between the cell walls and the wooden coffins being opened those present were much surprised to see that the bodies were in a state of perfect preservation, having all the appearance of wax figures. The old Amagasaki lord lay in the old Hokei freshness. Several valuable personal belongings were found in the graves, including two long swords, women's hair ornaments, boxes for pocket inkstones, gold family seals, writing brushes, etc.—London Globe.

Kit Carson, Boys' Hero.
A notable boy's hero of the last generation not entirely forgotten yet was Christopher Carson, popularly known as Kit Carson, who was born in Kentucky—December 24, 1803, removed to Missouri while a child and became a famous hunter, trapper, scout and Indian fighter. Col. John C. Fremont used him as a guide in his explorations and later he was very serviceable to the government in making treaties with the Indians. During the Civil war he rendered great service to the Union in New Mexico, Colorado and the Indian territory, and was brevetted brigadier general in 1867. He visited Washington with a deputation of Indians, and afterward made a tour of the states with them. He died in Colorado May 23, 1868.

STREET CLEANING LONG AGO

Franklin's Autobiography Tells How He Promoted the First Contract Job in Philadelphia.

Recently at one of the luncheons of the City Club of Philadelphia there was read an extract from the autobiography of Benjamin Franklin which was said to describe the first instance of street cleaning by contract in Philadelphia. The incident is interesting also, however, as illustrating citizen co-operation in its original simplicity.

"One day," Franklin wrote, "I found a poor Indian man, who was willing to undertake keeping the pavement clean by sweeping it twice a week, carrying off the dirt from before all the neighbors' doors, for the sum of three pence per month, to be paid by each house. I then wrote and printed a paper setting forth the advantages to the neighborhood that might be obtained by this small expense. I sent one of these papers to each house, and in a day or two went around to see who would subscribe an agreement to pay these six pence; it was unanimously signed, and for a time well executed. This raised a general desire to have all the streets paved, and made the people more willing to subscribe to a tax for that purpose."—The Survey.

ALL HIS ORGANS TRANSPOSED

Autopsy on Laborer's Body, at New York, Showed Remarkable State of Affairs.

An autopsy performed recently upon the body of Michael Manning, a laborer of thirty years, who died of pneumonia in Bellevue hospital, disclosed what Dr. Cyrus W. Field of the hospital's pathological department said was an unusually complete case of situs inversus, relates the New York Sun.

The heart was on the right side instead of on the left; the appendix was also on the right side, the appendix was on the left side, the great stomach was out of place and the lungs had two lobes each.

More than one hundred doctors, professors and medical students were present at the autopsy. So far as the doctors could judge, Manning had suffered no inconvenience through the transposition of his organs.

LAMB QUIT TAKING SNUFF

Throw Box Away on Hampstead Heath, but Was Searching for It Next Morning.

Hampstead Heath may yet contain a precious relic of Charles Lamb. "One summer's evening," writes Hens, "I was walking on Hampstead Heath with Charles Lamb, and we had talked ourselves into a state of contentment of our slavery to the habit of snuff taking, and with the firm resolution of never again taking a single pinch we threw our snuffboxes away from the hill on which we stood, far among the furze and brambles below, and went home in triumph; I began to be very miserable, was wretched all night; in the morning I was walking on the same hill; I saw Charles Lamb below, searching among the bushes; he looked up laughing, and saying, 'What, you are come to look for your snuffbox too!'"

"Oh, no," said I, taking a pinch out of my tin in my waistcoat pocket. "I went for a halfpenny worth to the first shop that was open."—London Chronicle.

Those "Iron Dollars."
"I have always felt that we of the middle west have about the best of everything in the United States," a Missouri man who is in New York City, said. "But I am willing to admit now that we play the part of the 'gent' in the currency deal."

"You will never know the significance of the term 'iron dollars' until you have carried the big wheels around in your pocket," he continued. "And you will doubtless never carry the cumbersome coin as long as the good-natured western brother consents to deal with that part of the currency. In the two months that I have been in New York, I haven't had my hands on an 'iron dollar' and I'm not homesick for the sight of one. When I return I am going to try to carry enough paper to last me until I come back again."

Slipped Up on the Sleuth.
A Cincinnati reporter, acting independently of the men working for other papers, resolved to have an account of the proceedings of a council and the Indian territory, and was admitted. By collusion with the janitor he climbed to a spot that was not without its dangers and was dusty beyond description. There he took out a notepad for a shorthand report. The meeting came to order and the first thing the chairman did was to move a reconsideration and admit the reporters. This was carried and they all feigned to be in to take their places in comfortable positions.

Elixir of Life for Steel.
For mankind, as yet, the elixir of life remains undiscovered; but for steel it has been found. The element vanadium, when added in certain proportions, gives to steel the combined properties of increased tensile strength, higher elastic limit and greater ductility. Strength, toughness, elasticity, united with freedom from crystallization—these are the life-giving properties which vanadium imparts to steel, properties which raise its endurance to meet the burdens which are daily increasing upon it.

CHILDREN ARE REAL POETS

Descriptions of Ordinary Things Show Imaginative Fancy That Does Not Survive the Years.

Children are born with a taste for knowledge. They want to know, and they want to know the right things. They ask questions, and are not easily satisfied. They are fond of imitating what they see around them. They are highly imaginative. They clothe their ideas in concrete forms. There was a time when they were regarded as immature adults; we have learned that the main aim of a teacher must be to give the right tone to the feelings—goodness in the abstract is of little avail; the imagination must be stirred.

We are accustomed to believe that there is little reflection on the part of children and yet one cannot but see now and again glimmers of thought which suggest a hidden mental power working almost unconsciously. The little girl who "gathered sunlight in her hands and put it on her face" knew something of the effects of heat. And how full of thought are some of the sayings of children! It was Punch, we believe, who depicted Tommy, after he had been severely corrected, as exclaiming: "I think I'll go back to heaven, where I was born from." And what a fund of suggestion was conveyed by the little girl who, on hearing a running tap, said that "the water was coughing!"

The poetry of life is frequently seen in childhood. We have this illustrated in the description of butterflies as "panes flying." "A star is a singer from God's great star" has a wealth of unconscious meaning. But perhaps the finest approach to poetry was made by a tiny tot who defined dew as "the grass crying." Oh, auntie! said the little girl, "I've just seen a poncil walking." The nurse, who had grown out of fairyland, explained that it was only an ordinary worm.

LETTUCE WHILE YOU WAIT

Dinner Guests May See It Grow on the Table for Their Delight.

When at a dinner in Rome a tourist was served with strawberries, still growing on the parent vine, in a room men eating pot which was concealed by a snash of wide ribbon, who thought this was the last word with regard to serving food at the dinner table. It remains, however, for a New York tourist to work what seems like a miracle. He claims to be able to grow lettuce while you wait—crisp lettuce for dinner to eat with your broiled spring chicken.

When asked to reveal his secret he said: "I take a handful of lettuce seeds that have been shaken over night in alcohol and I plant them in a box containing three inches of loam and quicklime. I water this well, and in ten minutes the seeds burst. In twenty minutes two tiny leaves push through the earth. The leaves grow and multiply. In an hour they are as big as dollfins. Then you may pluck and eat them. They are delicious—fairly salad. Sometimes when I give a dinner party I have one of these little prepared lettuce beds in the center of the table. The guests see the lettuce grow and when the time comes for the salad course there is their salad blooming before them all ready for them to pluck."

Considering what marvels in the way of cooking are accomplished with the chafing dish and decorated alcohol stoves, and scientific marvels like this, we may reasonably expect to see the lamb driven in alive, slaughtered, and cooked before our very eyes.

OBSERVE MONTH OF RAMIDAN

Period That Is Considered Most Holy by the Followers of the Prophet Mohammed.

It is the holy month of Ramadan in Constantinople. By reason of the declaration in the Koran that the number of the months is twelve (lunar months), as it was ordained by Allah, in the course of thirty-three years, Ramadan makes the entire circuit of the seasons. It was on the 15th of the holy month of Ramadan that the first chapter of the Koran was delivered to men. On that day the sultan goes to the "Chamber of the Sacred Mantle." This mantle was worn by the prophet and on this day it and other relics of the prophet are brought out to public view. Other relics are banners which once hung before the tent of his favorite wife Aysah, and the prophet's sword, and a halo, potent in strength than the hair of Samson, and inviolates all who may touch it; a tooth which Mohammed had knocked from his jaw when struck by a stone from a sling in battle; a chunk of time with a footprint in it made by the prophet when he sprang from it to the back of his magic steed, Al Borak, "the lightning." It was upon this animal that Mohammed visited Jerusalem and the seven heavens from which he obtained important and exclusive information.

Sat Style in Presents.
An elderly lady, herself an artist and a great lover of children, set the fashion in Munich of making dolls like living children. She would wash the peasants that came to Munich from the provinces in Bavaria and copy the costumes as well as the faces of the children. The lifelike figures attracted the attention of the empress of Germany three years ago, and she made Christmas presents of them to the children of the royal household. Factories now all over the world eagerly await new models of peasant life and dress from the studio in Munich.

The great speech of Senator Borah on the readjustment of conditions in the Republican party is one of the strongest blows at the present policy of that party ever given since the time Lincoln took up the cudgel for reform against the doughty Douglas and the old party ideas which the latter represented. Senator Borah does not see anything in a compromise that merely patches up a truce and still leaves the old and the new ideas at variance. Either one is right and the other wrong and until such question is settled there can be no union of the two branches of the party.

The Times does not know just how far the plans for the Industrial fair and Old-Fall Carnival have come forward with the various committees and makes the following suggestion with the hope that it will meet with approval. Last year Twin Falls was in very bad with the visitors on the Fourth of July over the charging of admission to the various attractions and the farmers generally made the bowl of letting them in here to skin them. That impression is a bad one to get started against a city which has the reputation for being open-handed with its visitors. For this reason the Times believes that every attraction for the fair this fall, aviation meet and everything possible, should be free to the public. While the ultimate cost to the business men will be larger it will result in better feeling towards the city with a corresponding increase in the business which comes to this city. It is a short-sighted policy to overlook the pleasant relations which should exist between the merchants and the consumers of this tract.

The Fourth of July today in Twin Falls will mean probably less this year as far as the patriotic lesson to the young is concerned than at any other similar occasion. The usual bustle of the city will be stifled and there will be nothing to cause the young children to remember the day and nothing to take the older generation out of the usual workaday routine and rate. The Times believes that Twin Falls makes a serious mistake in not celebrating every year with both the fun-making events and the more serious forms to instill veneration for the flag and the nation. Besides this there is another thing for the business men to consider and that is the keeping of home money in circulation at this time of the year. Business will be dull and money will be scarce until the harvest. Even at the best, conditions will not be ideal, but with the celebration cut off and the people of this city scattered about the country at least five to fifteen thousand dollars will be spent elsewhere and taken out of circulation at a time when it will be the most keenly needed with another similar sum.

JAPANESE PRESS ON CALIFORNIA.

California's legislative movement against aliens has aroused a storm in Tokyo. The Japanese proudly refuse to be classed with red Indians and Chinese, declare the native press. At a mass meeting held at the capital, the rage of the people was given full vent. "The old war songs of the Samurai were sung and amid frantic acclamation. In the newspapers plans for the seizing of the Philippines and the islands of Hawaii are being broached, and editor Miyaki, of the Japan Times (Tokyo), in addressing a mass meeting of 2,000 people declared that America should leave off sending peace apostles to Japan when she is in need of help of all such teachers as she can get. Meanwhile the foreign office at Tokyo maintains an imperturbable silence and the press is thundering at its doors and demanding prompt and vigorous action. Sedition before have the Japanese people been so deeply stirred as at this present moment. Their protest against the segregation of the Japanese school children in San Francisco was vigorous enough, but compared with the indignation which they are evincing at the anti-Japanese land bills in the California legislature that protest of 1906 was a tame affair. Their protest against Secretary Knox's proposal for the neutralization of the Manchurian railways was not without a tone of humor, for they felt confident that the proposal would be ignored by European powers. In the present case, they speak in a voice of despair, and their resentment is coupled with intense bitterness. There is indeed something ominous in their demonstration against these anti-Japanese bills. What most impresses one is the perfect unanimity in which all politicians, publicists, financial leaders, merchants, and newspapers are co-operating with one another in the present protest against California. For once party lines are entirely ignored and rivalry among the newspapers is forgotten.

This unrestrained outburst of feeling on the part of the Japanese is not difficult to account for, when we remember that only half a year ago the delegates of the Panama Pacific exposition went over to the other side of the water and assured the Japanese that the people of California entertained no such attitude toward them. They were warmly received and friendly feeling towards them, and that Japan's cooperation in the proposed exposition would greatly strengthen the bond between her and California. Japan readily responded to the appeal and took immediate steps for the appropriation of a large sum for the exposition. Now comes the legislature of California introducing a flood of bills which are at bottom aimed at curbing the rights of Japanese in that state. This bewildered the Japanese, and the bewilderment soon changed into indignation. "True," says the San Francisco Japanese daily, the Shimbun, "these bills employ the phrase 'aliens not eligible to citizenship' instead of the direct term 'Japanese,' but such indirect are even more humiliating to the Japanese than a direct discrimination. In fact, for they presuppose that the Japanese are so mentally deficient that they can not see the real motive of such legislation." Turning to the other side of the Pacific we find even the ever diplomatic Kominin (Tokyo), an official organ, casting aspersions on the Japanese and denouncing the act of California as barbarous and inhuman. To quote this journal:

"When Russia maltreated the Jews within her own dominions the United States was fit to intervene in an official manner. What has this humanitarian nation to say about the persecution to which the Japanese in one of its states are constantly subjected?"

Other Tokyo journals, including the Jiji, the Asahi, and the Nichi-nichi, voice the same opinion, while the Osaka Mainichi takes occasion to attack what it considers the inefficient, thorough diplomacy of the Japanese foreign office, saying:

"If the American nation does not push over the situation more actively, no one can tell what will be its outcome. Wise visitors from America tell us that this anti-Japanese agitation was started and is kept alive only by those politicians who would rather carry favor with the ignorant masses than consider the true welfare of the nation. Be it so. But how long are we to bear the disgrace and humiliation which seem to grow worse year after year?"

our foreign office does not even strive to uphold our national dignity?"

While the press are thus launching vituperation, some of the political and financial leaders are equally active. Mr. Nakano, president of the Tokyo Chamber of Commerce, publishes an open letter in the leading newspapers, urging that in the event of the enactment of the anti-Japanese bills the Japanese chambers of commerce should see to it that no exhibition is sent to the Panama Pacific exposition. He asserts that while the Japanese government can not reasonably cancel the promise it has given the exposition, the people are under no obligation to send an exhibit to San Francisco, should California persist in persecuting the Japanese. The Tokyo Asahi goes a step farther and declares that even the government need not be bound by its promise when the state which is undertaking the exhibition is in breach of faith. Count Okuma, the "Grand Old Man of Wagon," states that even a Democratic cabinet, which stands for state's rights, can not permit a state legislature to act in disregard of the treaty obligations which Washington is bound to respect. The Kominin-to (Nationalist Party) has passed a resolution urging the cancellation of the pledge which the government has given the exposition. The Seikoku (Constitutionalist Party), the party in alliance with the present ministry, has also adopted a similar resolution. Baron Shibusawa, perhaps the most public-spirited man of wealth in Japan, has organized a society called Nichi-bei Doshikai (Japanese-American Association), whose object is to solve the Japanese question in California peacefully and without involving the dignity of either Japan or America. The society consists of well-known business men, financiers, publicists, and journalists. Amid the storm of protest and clamor the government at Tokyo maintains an ominous silence, but cautiously intimates that the problem will be dealt with in a manner which will not be disappointing to the people. COKE BREAKS RECORD

Production in 1912 Greatest in History of Industry.

The coke industry in the United States has now reached, in good years, the $10,000,000 mark, and increased there is a steadily growing increase in the proportion of coke made in by-product and retort ovens, whereby the valuable by-products of gas, tar, ammonia, etc., are saved to the value of tens of millions of dollars annually. Whereas coke in lump form is a cheap, fashioned by-product, coke ovens all these valuable by-products are entirely wasted.

In 1912 the total production of coke, according to Edward W. Rogers, of the United States Geological Survey, was 4,915,835 short tons, valued at $11,523,326, an increase of $2,352,415 from 1911. In 1912 the production of by-product coke increased 5,471,000 tons or 18 per cent, while that of the retort coke increased 3,200,441 tons, or 48 per cent. Although larger than in 1911 the output of by-product coke in 1912 did not reach the record figure for 1910, whereas the production of by-product coke in 1912 was by far the largest in any one year.

The following table shows both the general increase in coke production in the United States and the increase in by-product coke production, by which the by-product industry is overtaking the retort production.

Production of by-product coke, compared with that of retort coke, 1905-1912, in short tons:

Year	Product	Beckhoe	Total
1892		12,550	9,477,580
1901		1,179,000	20,615,283
1907		5,007,899	35,171,565
1908		1,812,292	26,023,048
1909		6,254,141	32,060,121
1910		7,128,731	34,750,076
1911		7,817,815	37,055,459
1912		11,048,489	42,916,834

The progress in the construction of retort or by-product ovens as shown in the following figures has been the significant feature of the coke-making industry during the last few years. The number of retort ovens in operation increased from 4,524 in 1911 to 5,641 in 1912, a gain of 117, whereas the total number of all ovens decreased from 102,875 to 102,004, indicating that there were 2,236 fewer beehive ovens in existence in 1912 than in 1911. Some new ovens of the beehive type were built in 1912, but the number abandoned exceeded the new ones by 1,769. There were nearly 1,000 new retort ovens under construction at the close of the year, and contracts had been made for the construction of a number of additional plants. The retort process, made in retort-oven construction in the last two or three years and the activity engaged in new work, under way or in contemplation are carrying forward rapidly the revolution in coke making which was noted in one of the earlier survey reports as inevitable. This revolution consists not only in the gradual substitution of retort ovens for the waste of beehive type, but in the shifting of the coke-making industry from the vicinity of the mines to the centers of manufacture and population, where the cases may be utilized and the other by-products profitably disposed of.

"THE PRIDE OF THE SOUTH"

A Magnificent Picture Masterpiece.

So Says Louis Reeves Harrison, the Expert Reviewer of the Moving Picture World. Regarding Two real Bronchos—Rides to Sublime Heights in a Dramatic Offering and presents the Sensation War Scenes.

A GREAT 4TH OF JULY FEATURE.

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

In this beautiful play, Director Iger raises his curtain at a critical period of his story, where separate lines have merged with a result that interest is strongly enlisted from the beginning, and it is held throughout a running fire of battle scenes straight to the artistic conclusion.

"The Pride of the South" is one of those stories so dependent on character-acting that it could be of small account without it. Colonel Mosby, widowed father of a pretty daughter named Diana, has such an unreasonable estimate of his own superiority and is so overbearing in his treatment of others that he well represents that much wanted pride of the South that has been so much the cause of the high-tension, stern and unforgiving; he is a man of courage and splendid spirit, ready to fight to the bitter end for "The South" to which he is passionately devoted. His distinctive qualities are enforced with great skill and we know what to expect from him when he receives information from General Lee that war is declared, together with orders to join his regiment, and he finds that Diana has become engaged to a young Northern officer. The latter becomes an object of utter detestation in the eyes of Mosby, nor will the old man yield to his daughter's prayer. He is an irreconcilable. The young people are surrounded to see each other, but love finds a way. The tide of war sweeps over Colonel Mosby's own plantation, and Diana is united in marriage to the man upon whom his daughter and her husband in each other's arms and attempts to take the lives of both.

So bitter, so implacable is the old man, so wild and extravagant his devotion to the cause, that this hate is transferred to his rebellious daughter, and Diana is driven from the house with orders never to return. In the fearful scenes of carnage that follow, both men fall desperately wounded and the Northern husband dies within sight of his wife's home. She finds his body, and a pitiful scene unfolds, for her, she is dragged away by an old negro man and given shelter in one of the shanties. Henceforth, her only home is the shanty, and she is alone.

Mosby recovers from his wounds and losing one arm, but his wounded pride is not to be cured after the war is over. He is to be moved by the conditions of his body servant in his daughter's behalf, so Diana lives on in the shanty with the negro mammy. There, she meets the mother of one of the beautiful little girls, and the child grows up with the pickaninnies for playmates.

Little Diana is bound to meet her grandfather in the course of time, and when she does so she becomes the object of sympathetic interest. She clashes with her before her identity is revealed. A little barefooted girl of great beauty, a wild rose, she hovers his every step and says on the steps of his house with two little cones. The tiny blackie run when the stern old man comes to drive them away with uplifted stick, but the white child stands her ground and defies him to do his worst. The fighting blood of the race boils in her veins at the idea that God's little ones may not play where they list, and she gives the stony-hearted old man a piece of her mind with a spirit and courage that penetrates his heart before her identity is revealed. He makes inquiries about the little grandchild. Finding that she has left her school, he picks them up and carries them to where she is playing in the field. He gradually wins her confidence and induces her to return to the house.

Because of an admirable selection of types and because of fine characterization, the scenes that follow between the honorable old grandfather and his grandchild are very affecting. I do not know the name of the man who impersonated Col. Mosby in this photograph, but he was a man who performed his role to perfection, so I must impersonally compliment them by their own personality, quite as much as by the training given them, they stimulated interest to the highest point.

He yields at last and goes to the shanty where Diana lives in fever and delirium. She saves him from a certain death, but he is so weak and weary of him, she no longer cares to live with him. She leaves him in the hands of the few bright moments she knew in the arms of the Northern officer she loved. Realizing that her position as a woman has been made indeed, Col. Mosby breaks down at her bedside, to which he has been induced to come by his plucky grandchild's own heart. She breaks in one of the most affecting scenes ever thrown on the screen. Not only is the mother of the child beautiful, but the atmosphere is clean, wholesome and far superior to the ordinary run of photodramas.

The camera also is a wonder, and constitutes the picture program. Watkinson and Lucas, the vaudeville team, present refined comedy, and the program you will not miss—Adv.

Colorado Produces Nearly 11 Million Tons in 1912.

Colorado is the most important coal producing state in the Mississippi river and ranks seventh among all the states. The coal mined in 1912 was 10,977,824 short tons, an increase of 829,411 tons over 1911, according to E.

W. Parker, of the United States Geological Survey. The value increased from $14,747,761 to $16,345,236. This increased production may be attributed to the bountiful crops and general prosperity throughout the state, which naturally created an improved condition in the coal trade, particularly in the last four months of the year. There was much complaint of deficiencies in labor and car supplies.

The coal mining industry of Colorado shortly after the outbreak of the troubles in 1912, an output of practically 11,000,000 tons being won without a strike or suspension, so far as records show. The United States Bureau of Mines reports a total of 95 deaths from accidents in the coal mines of Colorado in 1912, an increase of 4 over 1911.

In quality the coals of Colorado range from subbituminous ("black lignite"), in the Denver region, through various grades of bituminous, including the high-grade coking coal of the Trinidad and Glenwood Springs fields, to true anthracite, in the Crested Butte and Yampa fields. Some of the coal beds of Colorado attain enormous thickness. This is especially true in the Trinidad Springs field, some of the beds in the Northern Park field are also said to be of great thickness. The total area underlain by coal in Colorado is estimated at 17,520 square miles, and about 60 per cent of that entire area is believed to contain coal that is workable under present conditions. The state contains areas embracing over 4,000 square miles about which little is known, but nearly 2,000 acres of coal, and nearly 2,000 acres of coal in which the coal lies under heavy cover and is therefore not workable at present.

In point of production the most important area is the Trinidad field, underlying considerable portions of Huerfano and Las Animas counties, which is the source of the coal known as New Mexico as the Raton field is also the most important producer in that state. The coal of this field is a high-grade coking coal, probably the best of that grade in the Rocky mountain states.

W. Parker, of the United States Geological Survey. The value increased from $14,747,761 to $16,345,236. This increased production may be attributed to the bountiful crops and general prosperity throughout the state, which naturally created an improved condition in the coal trade, particularly in the last four months of the year. There was much complaint of deficiencies in labor and car supplies.

MAKERS OF AMERICAN HUMOR

"Learn One Thing Every Day"

No. 4. JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS

Copyright, 1912, by The Associated Newspaper School, Inc.

It does not often happen that a man attacked aham and fraud with the weapons of wit and causticity and have done lasting good. Stories like "Uncle Remus," "Nabby and Orpheus," "Kever" served the Northern cause in the Civil War and in the same time afforded rest and relaxation to Alabamians. Harris, who wrote in 1880 a book entitled "Uncle Remus: His Songs and His Sayings," knowing it to be an important contribution to the records of negro-American folklore, but the reading public cared little for the accuracy in these portrayals of the American negro type, in comparison to their delight in the humor and charm of the stories themselves.

Our great American humorists writers in the past have done a varied service to literature and to the social structure of our nation. Some have-

No. 5. FRANK R. STOCKTON

A generation ago our mothers and fathers were asking whether it was the lady or the tiger. The question was illustrated and dramatized, cartooned and parodied. All this excitement arose from a single short story written by a quiet, unassuming man, who had already begun to win attention as a story teller. "The Lady or the Tiger?" left its hearers in a terrible dilemma. A simple choice that faced him would either leave him face to face with a beautiful young lady or place him absolutely at the mercy of a devouring tiger—and there the story stopped. It was a practical joke that found a permanent place in American literature.

It is said that at a dinner once given to Frank R. Stockton, when the dessert was placed before the hostess, the amused guests saw two blocks of ice-cream; one modeled as a lady, and the other as a tiger. There was tense silence when Stockton was asked which he would have, and he gravely replied, "A little of both, please."

Frank R. Stockton was born in Philadelphia on April 5, 1834, and died in Washington, D. C., April 20, 1902. He attended Philadelphia public schools, and his first vocation was that of wood engraver and designer. He made many illustrations for magazines that afterward scotch his contributions as an author. His first employment was on a Philadelphia morning paper, and while he supported himself as an engraver he was constantly contributing short articles to his own and other papers. In 1872 he gave up designing to join the staff of New York Health and Home. A year later he went over to Scribner's Monthly (now the Century Magazine), and in a very short time was made assistant editor of a new magazine for children that was then being established—the St. Nicholas Magazine. This position he filled until 1890.

Aside from certain famous novels,

No. 6. MARK TWAIN (SAMUEL LANGHORNE CLEMENS)

If all of us realized our boyhood dreams, the world would be overcrowded with pirates, treasure hunters and keepers of candy shops. One man who realized his boyhood ambition was our greatest American humorist, Mark Twain. His boyhood was spent in a little Mississippi river town before the war, when river commerce was in its glory, and the Mississippi called war "Mississippi river" very little below the angels in the eyes of the little boys. To be a pilot was the golden dream of small Sam Clemens. After working in a local printing office, and then as an expert compositor in St. Louis, New York, and other cities, he came back in 1861 to realize that early dream and be a pilot. The Civil war stopped his piloting, and after a brief service on the Confederate side he went to Nevada with his brother, who had been appointed territorial secretary. There he began the journalistic work that led to his later career as a writer, and Mark Twain, as everyone knows, was a pen name taken from the terminology of river steamboating. But everyone does not know that Clemens was the second writer to make use of it. It was first used by Captain Isaiah Sellers of the New Orleans Pictorial.

such as "Huckleberry Finn," which first brought Stockton into prominence in 1879, and "The Captain's Boy," of Mrs. Leckie and Mrs. Alphonse, this author is at his best in his stories for children. His humor is not less, and his lively American than that of Josh Billings and Artemus Ward and others of the slapstick school, and yet his style is simple and quiet. He deals in an extravagant absurdity of plot. It is as though his whole story was a joke on the reader. One seems to see the man's own gentle, delightful personality behind the stories he has written. His death is so recent that it is hard to say how permanent a place "The Lady or the Tiger" will occupy in the literature of the future. His name is almost as well known in England and Australia as in America, and his novels have been translated into many foreign tongues.

Just as Mark Twain easily ranks superior to any other American humorist writer, so does he seem to have exceeded them all in the variety of his experiences and the extent of his wanderings into the odd corners of our country. When in Nevada he became a reporter and staff writer, it was there that he first learned the power of expression. For a time he wrote "The Innocents," a humorous story of a gold mining district. In San Francisco he tried his hand at journalism again, and took a trip to Sandwich Islands, which he wrote up for a local paper. From 1879 to 1871 he was editor of a prominent Buffalo daily.

An experience that undoubtedly had great effect upon Mark Twain's personal character, bringing his friends in great number who until that time had known him simply as a humorous writer of considerable ability, was the failure of his business. In 1881 he became owner, with others, of a publishing house. The business failed ten years later with large liabilities. Mark Twain accepted responsibility for these debts, toured the world in a triumphant lecture tour, and paid them entire.

It is hard for us of the present day critics, living still in the memory of Mark Twain's delightful personality, with his earthy provoking after-dinner speeches still ringing in our ears, to say just how he will be measured, as a humorist or as a serious writer; he has written so much of both kinds—all good.

In each issue of The Times three different human interest stories will appear. You can get a beautiful facsimile reproduction of the above picture, with five others, equally attractive, in a single copy of the Times' weekly "Mentor." In "The Mentor" a well-known authority covers the subject of the pictures and stories of the week. Write today to The Times for booklet explaining The Associated Newspaper School plan.

ROAD-MAKERS NOW AT WORK

125 Miles of Road to be Built and Carrot for on the Hichfield Trail.

Commissioner Phelps has been driving all this week with Engineer Hornum, to point out what the board had intended to have done, and to get acquainted with conditions. Mr. Hornum is pretty well satisfied by this time what he will need in the way of equipment.

It is expected that the big fill on the road north of town will be one of the first sections to be covered. The old fill, which occupied one-half of the road, and left a gully, the old borrow pit, for the other half, is to be abandoned for carrying water, and the road is to be graded back into reasonable condition. It has been an eye-opening snow blockade in winter and a mud-hole in summer, and was a bad neighbor at all times.

The road north of town for several miles is to be worked into condition, it being one of the main traveled roads leading into town. Also, the new 1/2 mile east of town is to be given some immediate attention, and the one west of town to the Picher corner will be graded later. The road along the railroad track between here and the southwest corner of the Picher lands. The upper road, while it is a little longer than the one along the railroad, is clean and dry the whole year, and is considered much better than the old road. The new road will follow the railroad for two or three miles southwest, past the McNulty and Richardson and thought-out places.

The district will probably buy one or two big road graders, to be operated by horse power, but no engines or other expensive machinery. They will use stone wherever possible, and that will be over most of the district. There is about 125 miles of road in the district, but not nearly all of it will be worked this season. There is a considerable mileage that is laid out, out of the section lines, and will be worked later. The new roads to substitute this the new roads will be laid out on the line, and can be worked without present interruption. The ground is very dry, so that Engineer Hornum says, there will probably be a good many roasts for the highway commissioner before the season is ended—until the newly graded roads are settled and worked smooth after the fall rains and the winter snows. Without good roads, it will be impossible to make smooth, perfect roads, no matter how much they are worked. It will be a ridiculous matter to keep the roads in good condition next year, after they have been graded and properly drained. But during the year they are building, one may expect some dusty and rough traveling.—Hichfield Recorder.

SAN DIEGO TO VOTE BONDS

City Will Put Up a Million More for Exposition.

Washington, July 2.—While the tariff and the currency are the absorbing topics in Washington, out in San Diego the people are wildly interested in the voting of bonds for nearly a million dollars to provide funds to complete their exposition, which will celebrate the completion of the Panama canal, and which will be held throughout the year 1915.

The fact is, the exposition fairly ran away with the promoters and the demands of the various states and foreign nations for space to make exhibits swamped President D. C. Collier. He told the directors that it would never do to refuse to "make good," so it was agreed to put it up to the people of San Diego, who already had subscribed over a million dollars and voted another million in bonds. They talk very loosely in millions when it comes to an international exposition.

The government is greatly interested in the San Diego exposition and its interest is extending to San Diego, the city with grit, which is expanding so fast they have to take a census every year to keep track of its growth. The secretary of the navy is going to San Diego next month to see what is needed in the way of harbor improvements for the navy, which has been maintaining a base there for some time past for the "midway" torpedo flotilla. A great white Mission City embowered in verdure and flowers, with fountains, lakes and statuary, is what the exposition will be, and so many novel features have been provided for that it promises to outrank in real interest any previous exposition that has ever been held.
