AMERICAN SEA PAINTERS

"Learn One Thing Every Day"

No. 1. WINSLOW HOMER, "CANNON ROCK."

Copyright, 1912, by The Associated Newspaper Schools, Inc.

Winslow Homer, one of the most original of the American painters of the sea, was also a striking character, a genius in his way. Even though he had a great success during his life, his pictures today have increased enormously in value. He was born in Boston, in 1836, and, disclosing a strong artistic bent, was apprenticed to a lithographer at an early age. When he was twenty-four he went to New York and entered the schools of the National Academy of Design. He did not work long there, however; for he had a living to make, and when the Civil war broke out he went to the front as a correspondent for Harper's Weekly. Though he sent back much matter, he also filled his sketch books with material for subsequent drawings, and one of these, "Prisoners from the Front," created a sensation when it was shown at the Academy exhibition. It represented a lot of Confederate prisoners, old men and young boys, clad in rags. It was a pathetic incident.

At first Homer's success was scant. He was abroad, spending sometime on the Cornish coast, where he was attracted by the sea, painting the fisher people with the ocean as a background. On his return to New York he took a studio, though he spent sometime in the Adirondacks every summer fishing and hunting, for he was a great lover of sport. Always, however, he made water color sketches of these scenes in his odd moments; but he found difficulty in selling them.

No. 2. PAUL DOUGHERTY, "THE INRUSH."

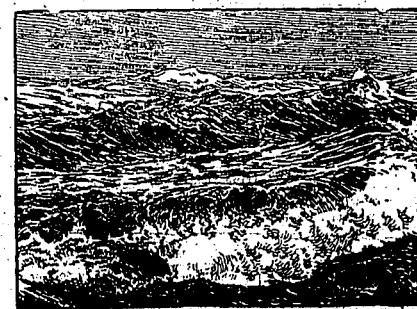

When Paul Dougherty was old enough to choose a profession, he unhesitatingly expressed the desire to become a painter. But he thought he ought to have a good solid foundation in an educational way; so he went to the Brooklyn Polytechnic, where he graduated at the early age of nineteen. He came, however, of an intellectual family, his father being one of the distinguished members of the Brooklyn bar, and his brother, Walter Hamphreys, an actor of international repute. Because his father wanted him to follow in his footsteps, Paul went to law and took his degree of LL.B. at the New York Law school, becoming a member of the bar. Having done all this by 1888, he went abroad to see the art galleries of Europe, and immediately began to work at painting.

He studied alone, traveled extensively for five years, returned home, and then opened a studio in New York. Before he was thirty years old he was made National Academician, and his pictures were instantly successful. One has to go back to Sir Thomas Lawrence, the great English artist, to find success at an equally early age. Although he began as a landscape painter, Dougherty soon turned his attention to marines, and by these he is better known. By these too he is represented in the various galleries at Pittsburg, Washington, the Metropolitan Museum of Art (New York), the Brooklyn Museum of Arts and Sciences, and elsewhere. He has many medals, both at home and abroad. The coast of Maine has furnished him with material, particularly the Island of Monhegan, just off Boothbay Harbor, where many of his most important pictures have been painted. He has also worked along the Cornish coast in England, at the painter's colony at Saint Ives, and is a member of many art organizations, as well as of the National Institute of Arts and Letters.

Tall and broad shouldered, Dougherty has enormous physical activity and energy, and is a constant worker. In New York he occupies a large studio apartment in one of the cooperative buildings, where he has a wealth of artistic things he has picked up over the world. He is a constant attendant at the many musical happenings that take place in the metropolis. His wife is a talented performer. His studio is a gathering place for musicians on Sunday afternoons. There throughout the winter may be found many persons well known in the musical and artistic world. At the first sign of spring, however, Dougherty is off for the sea, not to return until driven in by the winter's cold, and he always comes back with a mass of material for subsequent pictures.

No. 3. FREDERICK J. WAUGH, "The Roaring Forties."

Frederick J. Waugh comes of a well known artistic family. His mother was a portrait painter, his father was an artist of miniatures, and his sister, Ida Waugh, also an artist. He was born at Bordentown, New Jersey, the scene of some of the earliest manifestations of Colonial art. He was educated in the schools of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, in Philadelphia, and at the Académie Julian, Paris. After leaving the French schools Waugh settled down in England, where he became an illustrator for the London Graphic and other English weeklies, serving a long apprenticeship at picture making. During all his illustrative work he found time to make oil paintings of landscape scenes, and finally turned his attention to marine themes. These he has made his great successes. Finally he gave all his time to painting, and, returning to America, settled at Montclair, New Jersey.

Almost immediately Waugh took a prominent place as a painter of the ocean, spending considerable of the summer on the coast of Maine. His pictures have found their way to many museums at home and abroad. At the Metropolitan Museum of Art he is represented with "The Roaring Forties," an enormous canvas of mid-ocean, while in the National Gallery, Washington, and the Brooklyn Museum of Arts and Sciences he has work of almost equal significance. In England he is represented in the galleries at Liverpool and Bristol, and also in the Museum of Natal, South Africa.

Painting the ocean in great activity, with a sense of enormous power and movement, Waugh obtains a highly dramatic, not to say tragic, quality which few men secure. With much mechanical skill and inventiveness, he finds time in his odd moments to fashion various things with tools, and to give no little attention to the playing of musical instruments, making some of them himself. He has also made a study of small arms, and has a notable collection of those of various epochs and styles. Indeed, he is an authority on the subject.

Although Waugh's recognition has come largely through his marine pictures, he is a competent painter of the figure and landscape, as well as a decorative artist of no small ability. The Philadelphia Art Club has one of his important landscapes in its permanent collection. Two years ago his painting of "The Holy Grail" was one of the successes of the National Academy exhibition; while in 1910 his picture called "Buccaners" obtained the Thomas B. Clarke prize. It represents a ship at sea, her decks crowded with fighters in quaint costumes, slashing and cutting with swords, or firing pistols. Faithful in customs and costumes, full of the liveliest action, seriously composed, and well carried out.

In all parts of the county farmers are distributing with lavish hand water over the roads, until it ceases to have any novelty to the people using the roads. In several instances both teams and autos have been stuck in the mud-holes until mired out. And still the flooding continues. There is a stringent law against allowing irrigation water to run in the roads and most ranchers know of such law.
It should not be necessary to arrest some of the offenders, but that is exactly what will happen if the nuisance is not abated soon.

The failure of the Kuhn banks and the varied interests in which they have spent millions is regrettable in view of the fact that they have helped the west during the past three years more than any other concern by the confidence with which they have invested in western resources. They have gone ahead at a time irrigation securities were a drug on the market and can be said to have really changed sentiment regarding irrigation as a sound investment. It is regrettable in view of the fact that construction work on the power plants will not be possible under a receivership. The sympathy of the towns at this time is with the Kuhn's regardless of the shortcomings which they may have had in some of their projects. The fact remains that they have been a distinct benefit to this state and to this county in the money which has helped to keep things moving. Western irrigation has received a setback that will not be outlived for a number of years owing to the failure coming so shortly after the down-fall of so many irrigation schemes.

There is considerable complaint on the part of automobile owners over the failure of drivers of slower vehicles to observe road rules incorporated in the recent road laws. Many teamsters fail to turn out to give the autos half the road and thus force the machines into the ditch. Not a few machines have thus narrowly avoided accidents which could have been avoided by a little common sense and courtesy on the part of both. According to the new road law the driver of a slower vehicle must allow the faster to pass by, pulling to the right side of the road. The faster vehicle must, when desiring to pass, bring him twice to indicate desire to get by. The drivers of the slower vehicles are warned that according to the new law there is a penalty attached to their failure to allow faster vehicles to get by with as little trouble as possible. Most drivers of teams are carefully observing the above rule, but there are a few exceptions who seem to take pleasure in making trouble for automobiles and passing vehicles. If such people were arrested it would probably cost them from twenty to thirty dollars, whereas the observance of road-country will cost but little.

THE BIG QUESTION IN THE CURRENCY BILL.

The money power, we have been told pretty often of late, is trying to grab control of the government, but on publication of the new currency bill, a great cry goes up from the bankers that just the opposite peril is imminent. Instead of our politics becoming the plaything of the banks, the banks are to become the toys of politics. Mr. Intervenor, the money-trust hunter, approves the bill and so does Mr. Bryan, who is glad it is written from the standpoint of the people, rather than the standpoint of "the financiers," and adds that the only two classes who can object are "those who dispute the right of the people to use money through their government the money which the people need, and those who, distrusting the representatives chosen by the people to guard the public welfare, would deny the government officials control over the issuance of emergency notes." But a number of papers have no hesitation in coming right out and saying that they do distrust "the representatives chosen by the people to guard the public welfare." In fact, they call them "politicians," and frankly aver that they are not to be trusted with the financial control of the United States.

They object, in short, to the proposed absolute federal control of the regional reserve banks by a board consisting of the secretary of the treasury, the secretary of agriculture, the controller of the currency, and four other members to be appointed by the president. The only specific requirement, we are told, is that "at least one of the members of this board shall have banking experience" and adverse opinion of the bill suggests that such a plan for the structure of the federal reserve board "makes possible, if it does not actually provide, for political control of the most concentrated form." Even the Democratic press seem to hesitate to endorse this feature of the bill unreservedly.

That the long-headed cry against having the government in the banking business, "in view of the deplorable intermeddling of successive national administrations with the money market," is wholly disregarded by President Wilson's endorsement of the currency bill is the assertion of the New York Herald (Ind.), which maintains that the present measure puts not at stake the government, but the president himself. "Into absolute control of all the country's machinery of banking and currency," it says. "The Herald adds:

"It is a joke on those who objected to the concentration of authority involved in a central bank—this proposal to make the central reserve bank consist of three governing federal officials appointed by the president and four other members, all to be chosen by him with the advice and consent of the senate. The president, moreover, is to control six of the nine directors of every one of the twelve regional reserve associations. And the central board—all of his appointments—may ... require any one of these banks to relinquish the paper of another, regulate the issue of treasury notes to them, and put any of them into the hands of a receiver. This is surely some centralization."

Recalling that the country properly refused to tolerate the Aldrich commission's proposal of a central bank or reserve association, under purely private control, because such an organization "would inevitably becoming Wall Street's Gikilgaur," the New York Times Democrat (Ind. Dem.) says that it is of equal importance to make sure that the federal reserve board and bank system "shall not become the happy hunting-ground of politicians and their henchmen." That is what we have in the present measure, believes the New York Sun (Ind.), which pictures the federal reserve board as "predominantly political" and as having a power vested in it which is "unbelievably autocratic." No central bank in the world, says The Sun, has as great authority and "all the possibilities of a political instrument suggested by the Aldrich plan are inherent in the reserve board provisions." The Sun is particular to point out that "the regional reserve idea is a good one," calling it "an evolution of the clearing-house" that suits the country's customs and requirements, but it is opposed to the proposal "to subordinate these regional banks in every way to the autocracy of a political board at Washington, the board in turn being subject to every kind of sectional pressure and amenable to sectional clamor unless its members should be possessed of infinite wisdom, unwavering patriotism, be thoroughly disinterested, and have a world-embracing knowledge of the business and banking situation. Without continuing the analysis, it is evident that the bill as published offers the most menacing possibilities of political controversy which could easily issue in a presidential contest for the control of the federal banking system."

Speculation along these lines leads the New York Press (Prog.) to say that the bill "to all intents and purposes makes the president of the United States the president of the federal national banks of the country," and presupposes possible presidents, including Mr. Wilson, Mr. Bryan, Cooxey, and Mrs. Pankhurst—"the evolution of the voting right." The Press remarks:

"Nobody ever dreamed Cooxey was a banker. Nobody ever dreamed Mr.
Bryan was a banker. And nobody would ever dream Mrs. Pankhurst could be a banker. But here is a measure that could, in effect—that could so far as consequences from consequences—charge any one of them happening to be president of the United States with the vastest banking responsibilities that could possibly be placed together. That sort of thing, humorous in the mere thought of it, so far surpasses a joke in the possible exercise of it that it is pregnant with national tragedy."

That governments do not make good bankers is shown by history and experience, declares the New York Times (Ind. Dem.), which inquires whether "the disastrous consequences of political control over these matters" have been so soon forgotten, and says that a student of his country's history like the president must recall the struggle made forty years ago to force the payment of government bonds in silver at the option of the treasury. Has he forgotten, The Times asks, the opposition of congress to the resumption of specie payments, or the effort to commit us to a policy of "the free, unlimited collapse of silver at a fixed ratio with gold?"

But heated partisanship in a subject requiring cool and impartial discussion is deplored by the San Francisco Chronicle (Ind.), which says that "the abstract of the bill seems to show that it is based on principles which will almost inevitably make the discussion political," while the Providence Journal presumes that the bill "may be satisfying to Mr. Bryan or 'Placate the prejudices of Mr. Henry, of Texas,' but it imposes on its sponsors 'the task to reverse the lesson of European experience and, to an extent, of our own.'"

To those that tremble at the possibility of the bill becoming law, the Philadelphia Press (Rep.) offers as a reminder that it must run "the gamut of committees, caucuses, and the conflicting opinions of members in both houses of congress," and if passed at all, the final "may differ radically from that in which it is now presented."

DAILY SERVICE TO BE RESUMED

O. S. L. Completes With Wishes of Shippers on Yellowstone Branch.

"Business is improving and we now find we can increase the service." This is the statement made to the public utilities commission by E. C. Mannon, assistant general manager of the Oregon Short Line, with headquarters in Salt Lake in announcing that commencing Monday of next week daily freight service will be resumed by the railroad on the Yellowstone division of the Short Line from Idaho Falls to Aktion, and on to the Salt Lake-Dutte division between Pocatello and Idaho Springs. The change will satisfy the wishes of the shippers in that territory, who complained to the commission against the abolishment of the daily freight service and the substitution of a tri-weekly by the Short Line management.

JARBIDGE NEWS NOTES

Reports Show That Mines Are Looking Well.

The force at the Bluster mine have finished timbering, catching up the heavy ground and cleaning up generally, and the entire workings are now in excellent shape. The work of developing is again proceeding and few mines respond so favorably and so quickly to systematic development. At a point in the vein, 200 feet south of the main crosscut tunnel the drift was run on what was supposed to be the footwall. It was broken into here and there and opened up that averaged $20 per ton across three feet. An assay from a sample across 12 inches gave returns of $31 per ton.

Forty feet, further to the south another crosscut was run into the supposed footwall and again ore was disclosed. No assays were taken here, but panning indicate ore of commercial grade. In cleaning up at the bottom of the vein the boys took out some of the finest specimens ever found in the Bluster. Gold is plainly visible all through the rock, and as this is the deepest working in the mine—300 feet below the surface—it is especially gratifying.

There is 4201 feet of development on the Bluster, as follows: Crosscut tunnels to top vein, 578 feet; drift and crosscut on the vein, 1908 feet; shafts, 170 feet; winzes, 110 feet; raises, 170 feet. This work blocks out 50,000 tons of ore averaging $15 a ton—a total of $750,000. In doing all of this above and purchasing water rights, timber claims, etc., the company has disposed of only 20,000 shares of its 800,000 shares of treasury stock.

John A. Jess, superintendent of Bluster, Palmer, of Chicago, has not yet returned to work, but Alex. Urdahl, his foreman, has had a force carrying up tools and supplies to the Alpha, preparatory to resuming work on that property. Some very fine specimens, with lots of visible gold, which were picked up on the dump of the Alphas, were shown on the street yesterday.

No word has been received locally as to the progress of Mr. Jess's negotiations for the Bluster mine, but it is said that an attorney of Gooding, is endeavoring to have the case re-opened and the judgment set aside. He says that if this is done the owners of the property will start work at once.

At the Flaxie, the management decided to continue the drift from the 35-foot point in the winze instead of sinking deeper as was first contemplated. This drift is now out 30 feet and the values in the main body of the vein are better, if anything. The values are more evenly distributed, instead of being rich and low grade streaks.

Messrs. Marth and Rowland, leasing on the Little Devils, are making good progress on the crosscut tunnel. In the next 12 to 15 feet they expect to cut the vein from which they sacked $200 ore in the upper workings.

In the drift on the vein from the lower tunnel in the Luckey, a small streak of high-grade, evidently the continuation of the streak found in the tunnel 125 feet above has been picked up. Beautiful specimens come from this, but a bigger body of less rich ore is what is being sought for, and expected soon.

Good reports continue to come from the Crater section. On the True Flaxie the tunnel being run under contract for a block of treasury stock by Wm. Franks and Al George, is now in 40 feet and there is good looking ore in the face.

A little work on the Stormy group, owned by Attorney Edwin W. Caine, of Elko, and Wm. Franks, has proven very encouraging. The vein has been opened up in two places where it crops out and a good body of ore exposed. The ore is a white sugar quartz, looks very similar to that of the Flaxie, and panning indicate average values per ton. -Nevada State Herald.

Mrs. M. G. Ripley and sister from Twin Falls, came up last Friday, to attend the recital.

Ray Brown was down from Twin Falls Tuesday looking after his ranch interests south of town.

Two much rain last week greatly interfered with harvesting of the first cutting of hay. Never mind, there are three more crops just as large yet to come.

J. E. Wood and family left Monday evening for their new home in Walla Walla. The best wishes of Filer friends follow them to their new home.

The Snelsons, who have been visiting relatives in Colorado the past month returned home Monday, after having had a most enjoyable time.

Old "Mike," the water spaniel who ever since the McClellans moved to Filer has been a familiar figure at the pharmacy, died Monday. Old Mike was known to everybody and will be missed of his favorite humans.

Max Pink was up from Twin Falls Tuesday getting his business settled up arising from the Hutch Adkins ditching failure, straightened out.

Max bought in the ice and ice house. He has still more troubles, but he hopes to get the business all settled in due time.

When you read of the terrible heat and the suffering of the people in the east be thankful that you live in a climate where the weather is so delightful that to think of visiting other places is the least of your thoughts.

Truly this is a favored section, and if you live here and are prospering you cannot help but be happy.

Our old friend Jack Sommers in homelike and home for the big Cottonwood hills in old Nebraska county, Nebraska. And so in course of time his caravan of a "four horse team" will soon be seen returning to the home he left behind.

It takes the grease out of a man to gather three and four tons of alfalfa off an acre of irrigated land, and men who have been used to gathering prairie hay with a table fork off from the nose of Nebraska hills soon weary of the job.

Jack couldn't stand the grief and so he is going back with his voice full of sob and his heart full of aches. Goodbye, Jack, it takes a game man to stand up under the burden of toil, and we have no kick on the man who seeks a climate where the work is light, even though the return be small.

Sheriff Vanaunderlin was in town Tuesday.

Elmer E. Hagg was at the county seat Monday.

C. B. Channel of Twin Falls, was in town Tuesday.

I. S. Lambing was transacting business in Kimberly Monday.

J. E. Blakely was paying taxes Monday at Twin Falls.

A Missoula editor suggests that it may be that the circus takes a lot of money out of town, but look at the mail order houses—they don't even give a parade.

Gay H. Shearer and R. A. Reynolds have bought the ice business and will continue to serve the patrons with "Silvers" on the wagon during the season.

Joe V. Hawk, field agent of the Children's Home Finding Society of Boise, delivered a lecture last Sunday.

BARYTES PRODUCTION, 1912.

The production of crude barytes in the United States in 1912, according to figures compiled by J. M. Hill, of the United States Geological Survey, was 27,478 short tons, valued at $153,313.

Compared with the production of the preceding year this was a decrease of 967 tons in quantity but an increase of $30,621 in value, the average price per ton reported to the bureau in 1912 being $4.09, compared with $3.19 for 1911.

At the close of 1912 there were 6,262 short tons of crude barytes unused at the mines. There were also 29,855 tons of barytes imported, having a value of $70,216, and $376,017 worth of barium salts, including artificial barium carbonate and black flint.

The greater part of the barytes produced in the United States is used as a pigment in the manufacture of white paint. It is also used in the manufacture of rubber, wall paper, asbestos cement, and poker chips and in tanning leather.

A use of barytes reported from Italy is in the manufacture of porcelain. The Chinese receives a covering in the form of a thick, heavy crust of the finely ground material which has the property of affording just sufficient protection from radiation.

THREE CONVICTS MAKE GETAWAY

Transties on Sanitarium Work Near Natopia Escape.

Three convicts who have been working on the state sanitarium buildings near the city, escaped from the construction camp some time last night and as yet no trace of their whereabouts has been found. Warden Scott of the state penitentiary, was notified of the escape early this morning and came down on the first train with the penitentiary blood hounds. The dogs picked up the trail near the sanitarium building and followed it to the railroad yards where the convicts were last seen. It is believed the convicts left the city by train. Taking the blood hounds with him, Warden Scott went to Mountain Home where he hopes to pick up the trail or get some clue that will lead to the apprehension of the convicts. The escaped convicts were taken from the penitentiary at Boise and had been working on the sanitarium building near here for some weeks. They are regarded as dangerous for good behavior at the penitentiary and were considered as being among the most dependable prisoners to put on outside work—Nampa Leader.

GOD OF LUCK ON JOB

Engine Derailed in a Remarkable Way.

The god of luck favored the hundred or more passengers and trainmen of No. 6, the westbound express, which derailed in Pocatello shortly after 10 o'clock this morning. While creeping into the station, the right front wheel of the engine struck on the engine mat, off at the rear end of the hot box, and the axle broke, letting the pilot derailed on the rail and stalling the train. Had the accident occurred two minutes earlier, while the train was speeding toward Pocatello on the double track between here and McAdams, the engine would have gone into the ditch, off the main track, and lives would undoubtedly have been lost. As it was, the engine came to a stop, and the trainmen, who were on the engine, a trailblazer from its usual stopping place. The engine was 912 with Engineer H. A. Datsman in the cab. It halted the hot box while speeding down the Portneuf canyon, but felt confident he could bring the big engine into Pocatello. The accident was a most remarkable one, and was attended by remarkable luck—Pocatello Tribune.
