AMERICAN NOVELISTS

No. 1. HENRY JAMES

"Learn One Thing Every Day"

Copyright, 1913, by The Associated Newspaper School, Inc.

A number of years ago Henry James was at work on a volume of short stories. "And when will it be ready?" he was asked.

"Oh, I never know," he said. "I work by my moods."

That sentence gives the keynote to the character of the great novelist himself and of his writings. He writes carefully, easily, and neatly.

Born in New York City on April 15, 1843, Henry James spent most of his boyhood in Europe. His father was Henry James, the theologian, writer, and from him the novelist derived his dramatic, picturesque English. His brother, the psychologist and philosopher, who died in 1910.

Henry James entered Harvard Law School in 1860; but found out soon that he cared more for literature than for law. His first short story was published in 1865, and many stories and sketches quickly followed this.

In 1869 he has made his home in England, being in London, or Rome in Sussex, for the most part. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, and in 1911 received the degree of D. L. D. from Harvard.

A LIVE QUESTION.

Is Idaho's governor a governor for the whole state or just merely for Boise? It would appear from the recent activity of Governor Haines in attempting to get President Bush into Boise on the occasion of the latter's visit to this city that the question was certainly answered. Twin Falls does not relish the interference of the Boise people in the attempt of this section to interfere in the Western Pacific. Boise had not played fair and Governor Haines in allowing his name to go on the many letters and telegrams sent to President Bush during his trip here and his visit has lost thousands of votes in Twin Falls county, in the governor for Twin Falls and the other sections of the state when Boise's interests are at stake? A good plain answer to this question from the governor will be appreciated. The sending of Major Reed, an appointive state officer, to this city to further the invitation of a visit to Boise looks like using state influence to help Boise. What about it? His flowery talk about developing Southern Idaho looks like a poor excuse for injudicious hitting into Twin Falls' little game.

In the first place Boise men saw Mr. Bush in San Francisco and sent their case before him and urged a visit. He refused. He was invited to visit Twin Falls and accepted. The only thing for Governor Haines and the Boise boosters was to keep off and not attempt to hurt Twin Falls' chances of interesting the Western Pacific. At least Governor Haines as governor of this state, should have taken the above stand. Boise's selfishness in hitting into the same here will do much to cut off from this city a great deal of business trade which that city has enjoyed with this city, and rightfully so. Any man save a Boise enthusiast would do a little bit of work on the railroad situation, and then boost for the Twin Falls route. In the first place, the route from Winnemucca to Boise is 284 miles, with miles of unproductive barren desert to be traversed to take it into a comparatively small country with fixed tonnage and an old settled country with little future. Against this is a distance of 125 miles into the Twin Falls section through a copper camp that will add more tonnage than the whole Boise valley; into the Twin Falls country just developing but already with a greater tonnage than the Boise valley and the future showing more than a doubtful amount. Hell-roads don't care for state capitals. There is no sentiment in the proposition. Tonnage versus mileage and cost of operation are the deciding factors. Reason would place the Twin Falls route first. Another feature of the situation ignored by Boise to her own detriment is the chance of getting a line through from this direction at a saving of twenty miles over the Boise-Winnemucca line with the tonnage of the two valleys. To tap Twin Falls via Winnemucca-Boise would add 165 miles to the 284. Railroads do not build round-about routes for the sake of saving Boise's prestige as the big city of the state. By coming in with this city and handling the Twin-Falls-Boise line through to Boise they are helping a feasible proposition and building up friendly relations between the two cities. Are the Boise people big enough to see the point?

CAN WE ASSIMILATE THE JAPANESE?

The mind of the Japanese question in America seems to center on whether or not the Orientals can be assimilated here. While our press have been discussing this with serious concern, some of the leading men in Japan have expressed their views on the same point. They appear to see clearly the difficulties of the situation, but think they can be overcome. American people, when asked by the American Peace Society of Japan to go to the United States to help settle the California imbroglio in an amicable way, issued a statement explaining why he could not comply with the request. The veteran statesman thinks that the California question is not so simple that his trip to America could settle it, because it involves, in his opinion, the fundamental question of the assimilability or unassimilability of his countrymen. He says in effect:

"There are two things which we must do in order to solve the Japanese question in California. First, we must strive to improve the moral and intellectual qualities of the Japanese; and secondly, we must appeal to the sense of justice of all the leading nations. "The anti-Japanese agitation in America owes its origin to racial prejudice, and the prejudice against our people comes from the assumption, not altogether unfounded, that the Japanese can not assimilate with foreign races. In respect of intellectual or moral we can not regard ourselves as superior to Europeans and Americans. If we want to be treated on equal terms with other civilized peoples, we must first try to outdo Europeans and Americans by increasing our store of knowledge, raising our standard of morals, and enriching our national treasury. Then the foreigners' prejudice against us will give place to admiration."

This leaves all still rather in suspense as to Count Okuma's real views on the question of assimilation. But Professor Uchida, of Keio University, gives a more definite opinion in the popular Tokyo monthly, the Taiyo, edited by himself. By assimilation the professor, of course, means moral, mental and political assimilation. Considered from that point of view, the Japanese, he thinks, are assimilable, and he reasons thus:

"A race or people which does not spiritually assimilate with other races inevitably lacks capacity for progress and stability. Both Americans and the Japanese have attained their present prosperity by dint of their remarkable power of assimilation. Japan, however, has suffered from the effects of the long seclusion maintained under the Shogunate regime. It has put the Japanese out of the race in the universal progress of the world, bred narrow provincialism and prejudice, and deprived her of opportunities of establishing colonies of her own. In the future her task should be to develop in the bosoms of her people broad cosmopolitanism, thus enabling them more easily to assimilate other civilizations and making them more tolerant toward those peoples whom they regard as inferior or backward."

"At the same time, it must be admitted that the Japanese are possessed of essential qualities which enable them to assimilate foreign civilizations. What I contend is that such qualities should be more fully developed. Western critics who are inclined to believe in the assimilability of the Japanese turn to Lincoln. I learn as one great authority whose interpretation of Japan confirms their views. Yet the thoughtful and scientific investigators, both foreign and native, more and more disagree with them. With all his poetic intuition, Lincoln failed to see Japan and the Japanese without glamour. His description of the Japanese inevitably creates with the Western reader, and for that matter with the Japanese reader, an impression that the inhabitants of Nippon are endowed with traits and ideals so radically different from those of other peoples that they will never understand, or be understood by, the West. I learn they are immortal as a master of English prose, but not as an interpreter of Japan."

"The common argument in America against the Japanese is that they are an inferior race, that their civilization is one that they will never become attached to an adopted country. This contention is not well founded. It is simply an ad priori argument. True, the nature of the political organization of America differs from that of Japan, but the spirit of loyal allegiance is the same. A patriotic Japanese, when made an American citizen, will prove as loyal and faithful to his adopted country as any other naturalized citizen. In the past, the Japanese showed traits that favored the opposite conclusion. It is because they have been discriminated against, and also because they have been in America for a comparatively short period."—Literary Digest.

CLODBURST DESTROYS GRADE

Torrent of Water Eight Feet Deep Washes Out All Remnants of Grade.

Dubu Independent Highway District is "out" $1000 as the result of a cloudburst Friday afternoon in the Castleford district, which washed out 200 feet of the Castleford grade on the side of the canyon. After viewing the damage, the highway commissioners, Messrs. Hicks, Forbes, and Jackson, estimate that the repairing the grade will cost at the very least $1000.

The grade going down to the Castleford crossing, from the east side follows the natural course of a very narrow canyon. On one side of the grade is a small gulch, and the water of about 5000 acres. In this instance the gulch was not large enough to carry the flood waters and the grade was inundated to the depth of several feet.

O. P. Calhoun, of Blue Gulch, who flooded the washout from the west side of the canyon, states that the flood was at least eight feet deep over the grade. Haulers weighing tons were washed either down the grade or left lying in the roadway.

Although $1000 will probably repair the damage, the work may be obliterated in another storm at any time—Dubu Herald.

YOUNG GIRL SUICIDE

Sixteen-Year-Old Girl of Albion Takes Lysol.

Nellie, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chet Parke, of Albion, committed suicide Sunday morning about 8 o'clock by drinking Lysol. The sixteen-year-old girl was apparently rational and in good health, and the only reason that can be given for her rash act was that she had been earlier in the morning reproached by her parents for something she had done.

The poison, after she had taken it, acted quickly and it was only seven minutes until she was dead. Coroner Gallagher was called from Burley and upon examination of members of the family and Logan Haines, a friend of the girl's, pronounced it a case of suicide. She was a bright girl and well liked by her friends, who are shocked to learn of her tragic death. The bereaved family have the sympathy of all. Funeral services were held at the Albion Methodist church, Rev. S. E. Yaggy having charge of the service, Monday afternoon. Interment was made in the Albion cemetery—Burley Advocate.

GREAT TWIN FALLS CROPS

Max Mayfield Brings Back 'Glowing Reports From That Section.'

"Among the most wonderful crops I ever saw or heard of," is the way Max Mayfield describes them in the Twin Falls and Hagerman sections, from which he has just returned. The model farm of Mr. MacWaters on the North Side was a revelation. Not only in the fine line of production of thoroughbred stock does it evince scientific work, says Mr. Mayfield. The farms around Jerome and Wendell are raising bumper crops this year. The same is true of the South Side. D. W. Kennedy & Sons will ship 60 carloads of pea seed from that section this fall.

"This land indicates the immensity of agriculture in that part of the state," said Mr. Mayfield. The fruit crop at Hagerman will be heavy this year, he said, although it has not sufficiently developed to estimate it on a commercial basis—Statesman.
