

$100 in Premiums To Our Patrons

In order to stimulate the interest in dairying in this section, we have decided to offer $100 in cash, to be divided into four premiums of $50.00, $25.00, $15.00 and $10.00, to the four patrons of our creamery who shall keep a daily record of the weights and take periodical samples to be tested for the butter fat production of their herds of cows and who shall show the four highest herd yields per cow in their dairies for the period from

October 1, 1913 to June 1, 1914

The award to be made June 15, 1914. The cream to be delivered to our driver or agent, or to our creamery in Twin Falls, and all weights, samples and tests of milk made under our direction or supervision, and subject to a check by us on the cream as delivered.

We will a little later submit rules to govern this contest, which we shall endeavor to make fair to all. No results shall be published other than those winning premiums, and the general average of all herds, except that any contestant shall have the privilege of publishing the production of any individual cow in his herd. It is worth your while to know just what your cows are doing, both as individuals and as a herd. Let us help you hunt out your star-brothers.

NOISELESS HOUSE IS SOUGHT

America Expected to Lead the World in This as in So Many Other Things.

Anticrank shutters, rubber-coated shoes, soft rugs, cultivated modulation, suppression of all emotional excitement and restraint upon children in the leash of a perpetual "hush" are some of the features of the noiseless home that is recommended by the new organization for the suppression of the sources of American noise. It is recommended by this society that builders use the noiseless method of construction of houses so that rattled hammers shall not be a source of noise features in all edifices. A soft, unobtrusive silence in every home is recommended for the relief of the nervousness and tension that the modern hurly-burly conduct of homes is said to have upon those growing up in them. In addition to all other devices for the noiseless home has been recommended the antirattle appliances, in the form of a halter to strap around the snoring organs of those thus afflicted, so that they will be prevented from their somnolent pastime.

The noiseless home, says the Bulletin of America, is said to be the coming necessity, and upon this is contingent the suppression of unnecessary noises on the streets. The time is coming, of course, it must come, when the activities of life will be conducted so noiselessly as the use of a battery of noiseless rifles in warfare.

Tobacco-Supports Kavall.

A historian, writing less than fifty years ago, speaks of Kavalla, the Neapolis or Neapolis of Macedonia, as "a small Turkish village." When I visited it in the early days of 1912, says a writer in the Christian Herald, I found it a thriving city, the capital of a principality, and a beautiful report in Macedonia, beautifully situated around the little bay that forms its harbor, while on one side is a great citadel crowned with a Turkish fortress.

The narrow streets are cleaner than most Turkish cities can boast, and there are really fine and imposing buildings. These are mostly tobacco warehouses, or belong to tobacco magnates, who are at present being given the credit for the present prosperity of this rising town, which is the great tobacco port and manufacturing center of Macedonia.

The chief ruins, which date back to Paul's time, are the remains of a huge Roman aqueduct, whose magnificent arches until two years before my visit had brought water to the modern city.

Not Brain Taxing.

"Myrtle Reed," said a Chicago member of the Illinois Women's Press association, "found few things that measured up to her high standard. She was especially down on the magazine. One day, I remember, 'The woman journalist' smiled. 'I remember meeting her just after she had recovered from an illness. She told me she had worked all through her illness. She said that, on his first visit, the doctor had declared: 'Now, remember, no brain work!' 'But, doctor,' she had remonstrated, 'I have a contract with a magazine to turn out three magazine love stories this week. Must I break it?' 'Oh, no,' said the doctor. 'Oh, no, you needn't break it.'"—Los Angeles Times.

Qualifications for Success.

One secret of the life successful in any quarter is perseverance. "The story of genius even, so far as it can be told, is the story of persistent industry in the face of obstacles." Perseverance is the statesman's thought, the warrior's sword, the inventor's secret, the scholar's open sesame." Robert N. Hoar, four qualifications for success in life are: (1) a definite object in view; (2) a determination not to be defeated; (3) the capacity for exercising continual self-denial; and (4) a certain belief in one's own powers. George William Gurnie expressed an evident truth when he said "An engine of one cat power running all the time is more effective than one of forty horsepower standing still."—Christian Science Monitor.

How Men Judge Dress.

In discussing the problem of what a woman should wear, if she desires to please a man, Emily Post says, in the current number of Dress that outline and color, most especially outline, are to be considered. Whether the lace is real and the embroidery by hand he has no idea, she declares. If women dressed for men, they would spend about a tenth of what they now do. Certain things must appeal to the sense of touch and beauty of cut—a man is very appreciative of cut—especially of nice finish, good lines, good colors, but when it comes to this, year's fashion for ladies is to be the flood—he does not know a thing.

Progress.

All our institutions, thoughts, sentiments and methods are slowly changing with the advancement of civilization. As time passes, the progressive individuals and nations lay aside one error and superstition after another. Feudalism, chattel slavery, divine right of kings, titles of nobility and military honors have become antiquated relics of the past. Our science is daily growing more complete, religion more liberal, inventions more perfect, trade and industry more expansive and our social and political life more more general, education more popular and government more democratic.—Colorado Springs Gazette.

WITH WHISTLER AT WORK

Great Artist Had His Own Method of Producing Masterpieces Which the World Prizes.

The studio was surprisingly different from the room he previously used in Lindsay way, and entirely unlike the studios usually occupied by other artists. I remember a long, not very lofty room, very light, with a high ceiling, and a large easel beside his model at one end, and at the other, near the table which he used as a palette, an old Georgian looking glass, so arranged that he could see his canvas and model reflected in it. The man who used such a mirror (as he did countless) will know that it is most merciless of critics. I marvelled then at his extraordinary activity, as he worked, and he was not a man to look at both painting and model from his point of view at the extreme end of the long studio. He always used brushes of large size, with very long handles, three feet in length, and held them from the end with his arms stretched to their full extent. Each touch was laid on with great firmness, and his physical strength enabled him to do work that would tire a man, while the distance at which he stood from the canvas allowed him to have the whole of a large picture in sight and so judge the correct drawing of each touch.—Way's "Memories of a Visitor."

Final Self-Sacrifice.

Asking that a sentence of three years in jail imposed upon his father be imposed upon him and that his own sentence of two years in jail be reversed to his father, a young man broke down in the Criminal court in Baltimore, Md., one recent morning and went bitterly. The judge, who had been asked to grant the request, and the judge seemed much relieved when given the chance to exchange sentences with his father, giving the older man the benefit of one year. They were arrested some time ago on charges of obtaining money through bogus checks passed upon tobaccoists and confectioners. Several days ago they were convicted. Touched by the loyalty of his partner in crime, the judge asked that the original sentence be adhered to, but the judge carried out the reversal.

Woman's Fair Foot?

The mother of a family was grieving over the size of her daughters' feet, for, indeed, the children were so small that she seemed to have departed with the tiny rosy mouth once necessary to feminine perfection. The little foot with the arched instep was a source of grief. One of the romantic of "fair ladies" grace, yet the short, narrow feet and low buckled shoes of this season have revealed very clearly its practical extinction. Do shoe-makers still seek "twos" except for children? Evidently the "two" is growing rare, and girls take "fives," "sixes" and "sevens" without blushing. As women are bigger, their feet must be bigger, and it is in the future they are to be equal to men in everything else, one supposes the size of their boots will have to be included. If woman's fairy foot becomes a myth, as her stature was so much higher than man's, what is to happen to the poets? Perhaps they also will presently be history, since nobody reads poetry nowadays.

Age of the Gambler.

The eighteenth century was the age of the great gamblers. On February 6, 1772, there was a debate in the house of commons on the 39 article, and it was noticed that Fox spoke very indifferently. Horace Walpole suggests an explanation: "He had sat up playing at hazard at Almack's from Tuesday evening, the 4th, till 5 in the morning of Wednesday the 5th. An hour before he had recovered £12,000 which he had lost; and by dinner, which was at 5 o'clock, he had ended losing £11,000. On the Thursday he spoke in the absence of the 5th. At dinner at 11:30 at night, from there to White's, when he drank till 7 the next morning; thence to Almack's, where he was £8,000, and between 3 and 4 in the afternoon he set out for Newmarket.—London Chronicle.

Left Record of Good Deeds.

One of the nineteenth century women who was considered a radical in her time was Amalie Sieveking, a native of Hamburg, born of a wealthy and cultured family. She taught just because she loved to teach, and wrote two books, called "Commentaries on the Bible," which provoked great distrust of her from conservative circles. When an epidemic of cholera broke out in Hamburg she offered to serve in the pest hospital, and thereafter her life was identified with social and humanitarian work. She had advanced ideas about housing, about ameliorating the condition of the poor, and about hospital service, all of which were reflected in the philanthropic work that she carried on until her death in 1859.

His Teacher.

A household much given to music comprised three daughters who played the piano well and slowly. At the regular Sunday afternoon concert a music-loving retiring man was present, and after the daughters had galloped for a while he was asked to play. He chose one of two compositions, and to show the feeling of the pianist rather than the resources of technique. When he had wheeled around on the stool one of the young women said conventionally: "You play just as I told you to play." With a modesty that was almost painful he answered: "My first teacher was the Abbe Liszt."

SALLY'S LOSS, LONDON'S GAIN

How Maid Servant Lost Husband and Wealth, and City Became Possessed of Fine Heiress.

That bequests to individuals and to public benevolences are frequently the result of a mere whim or of caprice, has no better illustration, perhaps, than the case of Thomas Guy, who built and endowed the great Guy's hospital of London, at a cost of £238,292 nearly two hundred years ago. Guy had a maid servant of strictly frugal habits, who made his house her careful study. He resolved to make her his wife. The necessary preparations were made for the wedding; and among other many little repairs were ordered by Mr. Guy in and about his house. The latter included the laying of a new pavement opposite the street door. So it happened that Sally, the bride-elect, observed a piece of pavement beyond her master's house that required mending, and of her own accord she gave orders to the workmen to do this. This was done in the absence of Mr. Guy, who on seeing more work done than had been ordered was informed that the additional work had been done by the mistress's orders. Thereupon Guy told Sally she had forgotten her position, and added: "If you take upon yourself to order matters contrary to my instructions before we are married, what will you do after? I renounce my matrimonial intentions toward you." So Sally lost a rich and generous husband and London gained a noble institution for her poor.

Set Your Burden Down.

Following is an extract from a letter written in Farm and Household: "An aged, weary-looking woman, with a heavy basket upon her arm, entered the train at one of the way stations. Carrying her burden with some difficulty down the steps, she found an empty seat of which she took possession. Instead of placing her burden upon the floor or upon the seat beside her, she continued to hold it, shuffling her weight now and then from one knee to the other. A young man across the aisle watched her for some time in silence, but at last when he could stand it no longer he reached over and touched the woman upon the arm. 'Maiden,' he said, 'if you will set your burden down the train will carry both it and you.' How much of human nature there is in this little incident! Some people never try to 'ease the burden' which circumstance has decreed shall be theirs. They insist on carrying it even when they might temporarily lay it down and ease their backs."

The Folks From Maine.

The governor of Maine was at the school and was telling the pupils what the people of different states were called. "Now," he said, "the people from Indiana are called Hoosiers; the people from North Carolina are called Tar Heels; the people from Michigan are called Michiganders. Now, what little boy or girl can tell me what the people of Maine are called?" "I know," said a little girl. "Well, what are we called?" asked the governor. "Mainiacs,"—Norwich Virginian-Pilot.

PARISIAN SAGE FOR THE HAIR

If your hair is too dry—brilliant—colorless—thin—stringy—or falling out—use Parisian Sage—now—at once. It stops itching scalp, cleanses the hair of dust and excessive oil, removes dandruff with one application, and makes the hair doubly beautiful—soft—lustrous—abundant. Try a 50c bottle to-day. It will not only save your hair and make it grow, but give it the beauty you desire. Skeels-Wiley Drug Co.

THE WIFE IN ART

"Learn One Thing Every Day"

No. 4. SASKIA VAN ULENBERG, by REMBRANDT

Copyright, 1913, by The Associated Newspaper School, Inc.

Rembrandt van Rijn and Saskia van Ulenburg were married in 1634. Saskia, the daughter of a rather wealthy burgomaster who had died some years before, had been living with one another of her sisters; for they were all married except herself.

and much of his money buying jewels and gold ornaments and rich dresses of every description to adorn her. Up to the time of his marriage Rembrandt had been studious and morose, not caring for society or for ordinary pleasures. He was born on the out-skirts of Leyden in 1607. His father, a scholar, was hardly able to give the boy the education which is usually needed to become skilful in art. However, Rembrandt did study under Van Swanenburgh, who taught him to draw, paint, and make etchings. He set up a studio in the mill, where he painted portraits after portrait of his mother, a sister, and himself. The artist liked better than anything to paint a well known face over and over again, by new lights and with new expressions.

After his first success, "Lesson in Anatomy," Rembrandt moved his studio to an old school house in Amsterdam. His work became popular. The people of Holland fairly begged for etchings, and soon he was foremost among painters. Yet he paid little attention to anyone but Saskia; and his studiousness offended patrons and made enemies of those who should have been his friends.

Once when she was in Amsterdam a relative, who was posing for a portrait, took her to Rembrandt's studio, where she met the artist. He must have been an odd figure in those days, awkward and shy, doing everything in his own queer way. Saskia returned again and again, making a deep impression on the artist. She posed for him several times. Once she was a queen, another time she was a flower girl. Rembrandt centered his whole thought and energy upon her, and he had just passed the first breathless spell of success they were soon able to marry.

Saskia thought only of her husband's happiness. He in turn was so deeply in love with her that he spent most of his leisure hours painting her portrait.

No. 5. MARIA RUTHVEN, by VAN DYCK

Anthony Van Dyck's marriage might be called one of convenience. He married Maria Ruthven because King Charles I., of England, wishing him to settle down, decided on a wife for him. The court painter was a spendthrift. He loved company and entertainment was handsome, refined, well dressed, and, all things considered, a thorough gentleman. He attracted to his society the greatest of English nobility. Gossip had him in love with so many of the court ladies that the king, fearing his painter was getting into serious difficulties, determined once for all to save him by a marriage with a Scottish beauty in the queen's retinue.

Van Dyck offered no objection. The lady, Maria Ruthven, was young and very beautiful. Although she brought no dowry except that given by royal generosity, she was considered a very good match for the artist, who came of burgher stock. Maria's family was related to the Stuarts, but had been for a long time in disgrace. Van Dyck's only claim to distinction was his art.

His father, a well-to-do merchant in Antwerp, where Van Dyck was born, died when he was only a child. He was left to follow up the art of painting. To boy for several years a pupil of Rubens, whom he made a little famous by his success in portrait painting. Some of his pictures were better than Rubens'. A few years in Italy gave Van Dyck a still higher position among artists. Some said he was the best portrait painter in Europe.

Yet in spite of his skill Van Dyck was disliked by most painters. They lounged around the taverns in ragged clothes, put on boisterous manners, and made fun of any kind of refinement. To this behavior he was entirely opposed. They called him the "Cavalier Painter" because he drew only the noble side of life, and ignored what was low or common. One could hardly have been found who was better fitted by nature to live and paint among the light-hearted courtiers of Charles I. He welcomed an offer from England, and left Antwerp to make his home there. He was forty years old.

When he married Maria Ruthven he painted some portraits of her; but not many, for his death was near at hand.

A journey to Paris, in the hope of receiving important commissions there, failed in its object and brought on a severe attack of the disease from which he had been suffering for years. The painter returned to England. King Charles I. ordered a physician three hundred pounds if he could save Van Dyck's life; but to no purpose. He died the second year after his marriage. Ruthven spoke of her as a "noble, glorious creature." Later the artist painted a picture to go with the poem, and his model was Elizabeth Siddal.

No. 6. ELIZABETH ELEANOR SIDDAL, by DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI

One day when Rossetti was painting in his studio, Doreville, a fellow artist, rushed in and exclaimed that he had found the ideal woman. She was working in a milliner's shop, he said; but she was a wonderful girl of stately dignity, with blue-green eyes and copper tinted hair. This girl was Elizabeth Siddal, and from that time on she was the model for Rossetti's mystical dreams in color. She later became his wife.

Dante Gabriel Rossetti was born in England in 1828, the son of an Italian refugee. His parents lived simply, almost in poverty, but with refinement and the fostering of art and poetry in their children. The mother believed that one good picture on a plain wall was more beautiful than many worthless decorations. Rossetti used this simplicity in his paintings. He and a number of other artists formed the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood. This group of painters took a love of simplicity as its motto, and believed in using simplicity in everything.

Becoming an artist of great genius, Rossetti was a poet. He and his sister Christina were the leaders in the Pre-Raphaelite movement in poetry. Before he was sixteen he wrote "The Blessed Damozel," a poem that expressed his ideal in womanhood. Elizabeth Siddal proved to be his ideal woman. Rossetti spoke of her as a "noble, glorious creature." Later the artist painted a picture to go with the poem, and his model was Elizabeth Siddal.

When Rossetti first asked her to pose for him, the ideal beauty thought that he wanted her for fashion plates. She little thought that she was to be made the object of a great artist's love.

Her death plunged Rossetti into lifelong misery, almost insanity. Up to the moment of his own death in 1882 he never ceased to grieve for her. "Her eyes were deeper than the depth of waters still'd at even."

PAID TRIBUTE TO LAUGHTER

Men of Intellect and Renown Join In Testimony to the Value of Jollity in Life.

The value of a good-natured laugh may be rated low by some people; but many writers have attested its worth in no measured terms.

It is not surprising that Charles Lamb should have said, "A laugh is worth a hundred groans in any man's life," but from the lips of the somber Carlyle one is scarcely prepared to hear, "No man who has once heartily and wholly laughed can be altogether or irretrievably bad."

It was Douglas Jerrold who boldly stated that "What was talked of as the golden chain of Jove was nothing more than a succession of laughs, a chromatic scale of merriment reaching from earth to Olympus."

"I am persuaded," wrote Laurence Sterne, "that every time a man smiles but much more so when he laughs—it does something to his fragment of life."

Some of Napoleon's Monuments.

When Napoleon was at St. Helena a companion asked him on May 18, 1821, "What is the greatest monument the emperor reared, but in full view. Here they are: The splendid harbor of Antwerp, that of Flushing, the docks and Allee of Dunkirk, of Havre, of Nice, the gigantic harbor of Cherbougue; the harbor works of Venice; the great roads from Antwerp to Amsterdam, from Mainz to Metz, from Bordeaux to Bayonne; the bridge of the suspension of Mont Cenis, of Mont Genevre, of the Corniche, that give four openings through the Alps. The roads from the Pyrenees to the Alps, from Parma to Spezia, from Savona to Piedmont; the bridge of Jona, Astoria, of Seville; the canal from the Rhine to the Rhine; the canal that joins the Scheldt and the Somme."

And so he goes on, recounting the splendid of waterways and roads as his lasting monuments.

Waterways and roads wouldn't be bad for the present generation to leave to its successors.

Need Not Be Drudgery.

Young American women would do well to heed the words of a recent lecturer on household economy, who said that housework need not necessarily be drudgery. She says it is not drudgery, once its technique is mastered, any more than dancing or piano playing or acting or singing or disagreeable tasks, once the girl has mastered the basic principles of each of those arts. Housekeeping is relatively simple when one knows how. The difficulty is that few take the trouble to learn how. If the same intelligence and persistence are used as are employed in mastering any of the other accomplishments, after the learning period is over, the practice is comparatively easy. There is a period of drudgery in acquiring any art, no matter what it is, and no one can expect to master housekeeping or music either who is not willing to submit to the necessary period of drudgery. But ease comes with knowing how and disposing of the duties in a clear-headed, systematic, scientific manner.—Exchange

Keep Your Individuality.

There is a time when a man or woman for a woman in minding her own business and letting man do the same, comes from our confused and rather stupid notion of the meaning of equality.

The busy woman has always taken it for granted that man is happier than woman. It is an assumption which is at least debatable.

The man who praises the works of the Creator as all wise not infrequently treats his argument for carrying on the race as if it were unfit to be spoken of in polite society.

A woman is very prone to look on marriage as a merger of personalities, but there can be no great union where an individuality permits itself to be ruled. The notion that a woman's happiness depends upon the man—that he must "make her happy"—is a basic untruth.—Houston Post.

Ownership of the Air.

The question of the proprietorship of the air has been raised by an action brought against M. Maurice Farman, the airman, by farmers whose lands surround his aerodrome at Buc, France. They complain of the disturbance caused by the too frequent passage of aeroplanes over their land, claim heavy compensation, and ask for the prohibition of flying at a height less than 660 feet. Other aeronautical manufacturers have associated themselves with M. Farman in defending the suit, which has been set down for hearing next month.

Fire Without Flame.

An English engineer named Bode has invented a way to have fire without flame. His apparatus consists of a porous plate or mass of fire-retarding fragments, within which he mixes inflammable gas and air in the right proportions.

When the gas is first turned on and lighted, it burns as a flame on the surface of the plate. When the air is turned on the flame disappears, but the heat increases. A temperature of 2,300 degrees is claimed.

Just what use of this invention can be made is yet a question.

THE switchboard operator who answers your telephone call has a mission in life—her mission is to serve you.

She has at her finger tips the most modern telephone equipment in the world. Quickness, accuracy and courtesy are her essential qualifications.

Frequently she is called upon to act quickly in emergencies when courage and presence of mind are required.

It is as essential to good telephone service that each Bell Telephone operator should be healthy and happy as it is that every part of the equipment of that great intercommunicating system should be in good working order.

In the Bell system, 70,000 operators make connections which furnish clear tracks for 26,000,000 telephone talks each day.

Japanese Boys the Healthier.
Boys appear to be slightly healthier than girls in Japan, but the girls have better weight. According to official reports covering medical inspection of nearly 2,000,000 children in the public elementary schools, 47.7 per cent of the boys had stronger constitutions, 47.4 per cent medium, and 4.9 per cent weak. Of the girls, 42.7 per cent had strong constitutions, 51.3 per cent medium, and 6.1 per cent weak.

Never Sells His Horse.
It is the proud boast of Senator Martine of New Jersey that in all the years he has been farming he has never sold a horse. When a horse gets too old to work he repairs it in all ways and lets it just stand around the pasture until it dies.

An Outrage.
"What's Mrs. Wormb about the government for now?"
"Seems they wouldn't let her send a gallon of ice cream by parcel post."

Hand Work.
Doctor: I must finish all this work. Post-May I not write some verses? Doctor: Oh, certainly—when you're intelligible.

On all of Your Printed Matter. It represents Good Workmanship, Good Wages, and Good Conditions.

In the Tuesday editorial the TIMES referred to the outstanding warrants of the Independent school district, which prove to have been issued in excess of the funds available. There is no question about the fact that the warrants represent actual expenditure of money for school purposes and are held by people who took them in good faith. Every one of the warrants should by all means be redeemed by the school district, which has had the use of the money. The good name of the school district requires that they be redeemed.

The condition of affairs in Mexico remains unchanged, with Ambassador Lind merely waiting the final decision of the mighty Huerta. In the meantime President Wilson is holding his message on the situation to congress, but has intimated that there will be no backing down from the demand just made. A refusal by Huerta will mean armed intervention on the part of this country or practically a declaration of war on the part of the United States, which has waited a long time for that little war ridden country to create order out of chaotic anarchy. Huerta, who seems to be the natural leader of affairs, has evidently hoped for aid from Japan and in giving his first defiant message was buoyed up by the hope, only to have it shattered when the powers, including Japan, endorsed the demands of this country.

MEXICO'S DESIRE FOR PEACE WITH US.

While the fire-eaters of Mexico breathe threatenings and slaughter against the United States, equally incensed at Washington's non-recognition of the Huerta government and at the contemptuous editorial utterances and cartoons of the American newspapers, a much more moderate tone prevails throughout the higher section of the Spanish-American press of Mexico City. Mr. Calero, ex-ambassador, counsels "a prudent and patriotic pride" on the part of Mexicans toward the United States, and the Pals (City of Mexico), an able but somewhat volcanic organ, depreciates the risk this country would run in staking its independence in a futile contest with an adversary of overwhelming power, hence we read:

"Mexico ought not to provoke war with the United States, simply because we should be compromising our nationality as a free people. . . .
"A war with the United States is not a matter to be settled in a burst of popular feeling, for our independence is at stake; and if, owing to overconfidence on the point of honor, an attack be made upon Americans, war will come, intervention will be a fact, and we shall have to lament then the horrors of a war, fiercer and more bitter than any other, only because we did not know how to be calm and prudent and because we gave loose rein to an unreflecting patriotic sentiment."

A spark from the prairie-fire of popular indignation in Mexico may set the conflagration of war raging with thoughtless and inconsequent fury. The Franco-Prussian War with all its awful consequences should be a warning to us, declares the Diario del Hogar, and it adds:

"Irascibility, lack of reflection in sentiments, sympathies, or aversions, loud and angry voices, may pass in the multitude, but not in the directing classes, and certainly not in the press, which ought to be an element of order, and never to forget its high and weighty role. This is what we ask, and expect from all our colleagues."
While claiming that the United States has no excuse for its failure to recognize the Huerta government as it recognized that of Porfirio Diaz in 1877, The Mexican Herald speaks very practically and to the point as follows:

"It is now no time for fine-spun scruples. Mexico is like a house on fire, and prompt action is necessary. We are all of us, theoretically at least, in favor of strictly constitutional government, but looking at things as they really are, no sensible man will say that a strict adherence to the constitution is practicable. The prospect of a fair presidential election in existing circumstances, or even, as the case may be, by the last of October, is decidedly dubious."

"The crying need of Mexico is a firm and progressive administration of affairs, in order that honest and well-disposed citizens may attend to their business, and that all those who have suffered by the civil war may undertake the restoration of their shattered fortunes. And the only hope of the realization of this modest program lies in backing up the existing federal administration."

Americans in Mexico should not be treated as enemies, but as guests of the Mexican people, argues the Nación, and declares, and puts forth the plan of hospitality toward the Americans, although "citizens of a hostile nation." The right way to treat foreigners acted in Mexico is thus outlined:

"Our guests from the North ought now more than ever to receive at our hands the respect and consideration which they expect in a cultured nation. Anything done or said to the contrary, any outbreak of impudence or false patriotism, would be neither judicious nor patriotic, much less Christian."

The United States can not but regard us with aversion and disgust, declares the Independiente, if we allow popular feeling against that country to burst out into excesses of various sorts, ending in conflict and the bloodshed of necessary repression. It proceeds:

"We shall cease to be considered as a overwhelmed by our own misfortunes, a prey to conflicting political interests, and shall be regarded as an enemy whose traditional antipathy, formerly dormant, becomes changed into an attitude of active aggression."
"And this is the grave, the horrible danger of the present moment. We are almost on the threshold of a war with the colossus of the North, a war in which Mexican heroism might make brilliant pages, but which would entail unheard-of sacrifices in lives and property, the paralysis of all vital sources of wealth, and consequences of incalculable moment."

Mexico knows that the ruling classes in the United States are not looking for war and annexation, and should preserve its self-control and equanimity as the best measure for safety, declares the Tribuna, which adds:

"We are firmly convinced that the immense majority of the American people are opposed to war with our country, and we are reluctant to believe that President Wilson and his cabinet desire it. The only persons that preach it are some yellow newspapers, two or three shady politicians, and some Southern filibusters. Let us not give occasion for such a war by ill-advised acts. Let us maintain our dignified and serene attitude, the attitude which patriotism requires of us."

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS

On the Sunday School Lesson by Rev. Dr. Prescott for the International Press Club Question Class.

Ang., 31, 1912. (Copyright, 1912, by Rev. T. S. Lincoln, Scott, D. D.)

Israel at Mount Sinai. Ex. xix; Heb. xii:18-24.

Golden Text.—Let his grace whereby we may offer service well pleasing to God, with reverence and awe. Heb. xii:28.

(1) Verses 1-2.—How had the children of Israel spent the three months since they left Egypt and what experiences had they passed through?

(2) Verses 3-4.—Is God more accessible or not, and why, from one place than he is from another?

(3) What is the meaning of the statement, "And Moses went up unto God?"

(4) When we pray or make requests or ask questions of God should we or not expect such a clear answer from him as Moses here received? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

(5) Verses 5-6.—Are God's promises conditional or unconditional? Why?

(6) What is the substance of God's promises for time and eternity today to his obedient children?

(7) Verses 7-8.—If these people when their hearts were stirred with penitence promised God to be true to Him, but afterward were not true, would God bless them at the time of making the promises as they had subsequently fulfilled their vows?

(8) When a sinner turns to God in good faith is he always at the time accepted regardless of what the sinner's subsequent life may be?

(9) Verses 9-11.—How does God come to the people in those days and what is the necessary preparation for us to meet him?

(10) How do the people now recognize when God has spoken to a man who says he has a message from God?

(11) Is it possible today for God to work effectually through a church whose members are living in known sin? Why?

(12) Verses 12-15.—Why did God make it a capital offense if any of the people should attempt to touch this mountain?

(13) What did it mean then, and what does it mean now, for the people to "sanctify" themselves?

(14) Verses 16-25.—If you have been on a high mountain, or can imagine what it feels like to be there during severest thunder and lightning, then describe the feelings of awe which the Israelites likely experienced at Sinai.

(15) What would likely be the religious effect of these awe-inspiring phenomena?

(16) Are religious resolutions formed under exciting influences liable to be lasting or not, and why?

(17) Are all God's spiritual blessings or revelations for every Christian, or are some of them for the select few in this case?

(18) Heb. xii:18-21.—What scene does the writer here depict?

(19) What would you say is the difference between God's grace to the faintest at Sinai, and His appeal to us now?

(20) Verses 22-23.—What are the ultimate spiritual joys or consolations at the present of every devout man when he comes to God?

(21) We properly cultivate our sense of God's presence, should we also cultivate the sense of the presence of this "innumerable company of angels"? Why?

(22) Verse 24.—What is the significance of coming to "Jesus, the mediator of the new covenant?"

Lesson for Sunday, Sept. 2, 1913. The Ten Commandments.—I. Ex. xii:1-11.

Legal Point of View.
First Lawyer.—I was looking over my boy's geometry lesson last night.

I was quite interested in that proposition, that the three angles of a triangle are equal to two right angles.

Second Lawyer.—That isn't very complicated.

First Lawyer.—No, but I was trying to think what a man could do if he had the other side of the case.

Ford

Left-hand drive? It's as old as the Ford—which was built to meet American, not European, conditions. And it is just one of the many devices by which Ford has led—while others followed. One model? Lightweight? There too, Ford leads.

Think that these prices mean—for the car that has stood the tests: Runabout $525; Touring Car $600; Town Car $800—f. o. b. Detroit, with all equipment. Get catalog and all particulars from Western Auto Co., Twin Falls, Idaho.

Five Hundred New Subscribers Wanted in Next Three Months

In order to bring in subscription money during the slack season and to place the name of every resident in the county on our already large list, we will for the next three months offer the

TWICE-A-WEEK TWIN FALLS TIMES

To New Subscribers for One Year for

$1.00

This Offer Will Absolutely Close October 31

We want your name on our list and are going to give you the agent's commission. The result is you save one dollar on your year's subscription by sending or bringing in your name to us. It costs us no more for the reason that a solicitor would cost us that dollar. You get a live eight-page paper twice a week covering the best of the county, state and national news. You get a paper with an established policy of standing for the best interests of the whole people. Don't overlook this offer.

FOR THE OLD SUBSCRIBER

For the old subscribers who have stood by the Times through thick and thin in its seven years' existence, we have an equally attractive offer. Every old subscriber paying up to date and a year in advance, will have the choice of the following propositions.

You can have the advance year at one dollar or you can have the choice of a splendid wall map of this state, revised right up to date, or a pair of self sharpening scissors.

If you take the latter offers you pay $1.50 instead of the dollar.

Remember, this offer is only for three months and we have no intention of making one dollar the permanent price of the Times. October 31st is the last day and if you come in November first or any other day after that time you will pay two dollars.
