An organization with full power to control the local markets and to push carload sales in the non-fruit growing districts is something that the local men will have to plan another year if the fruit crop is to bring the returns to the growers which it should. The joining with the Northwest fruit growers was probably a move in the right direction, but the Times believes that sooner or later the great Twin Falls country with rapidly increasing orchards, will have to stand as a unit and boost its own market. The larger organization will sooner or later go on the rocks from the jealousy engendered by the rivalry between the various fruit growing sections of the large territory which it attempts to aid. Twin Falls fruit with rare size and coloring will always command a ready market once it is introduced to the consumer, but the boosting of the product will have to come from the growers more closely interested and not from a large and unwieldy group of rival producers. It has been proven time and time again that there is no chance of fixing prices on a perishable commodity like fruit and that the supply and demand part of the equation is the governor of prices. Twin Falls country embracing the three tracts is really an empire in itself, with enough products to easily employ its own sales agents and its own organization. The Times believes that this idea will prevail at no distant day.

DAYTON'S UNIQUE CHARTER.

Deciding by a vote of two-to-one, on August 12, in favor of what has been described as "the most advanced charter ever adopted by an American city," the citizens of Dayton are said to set an example that will be watched with interest by her sister cities in Ohio and in other states. Taking effect January 1, 1914, the charter, according to press accounts, provides for the short non-partisan ballot, a legislative commission, and a city manager, and the claim is made for it that it combines "the best features of the old commission plan" with the improvement of the manager idea. The commission, whose presiding officer has the title of mayor, consists of five members, and its functions are purely legislative. One of these is to employ "a trained city manager," to whom is entrusted the administration of the city's business, with the exception of the courts and schools. Thus there is no diffusion of responsibility, we are advised, "an- seen-in" the straight commission plan, where each commissioner is in active charge of a department. To complete the balance of power, the people are given the right of initiative, referendum, protest, and recall. That a city of the size and importance of Dayton should be willing to adopt the city-manager plan of government strikes the Chicago Record-Herald as "an interesting and significant development." It mentions Sumner, N. C., with 10,000 population, and one or two smaller places as being the only towns trying this system, and says of Dayton's new moves:

"It illustrates the spread of the gospel of efficiency and local non-partisanship. Our cities are evidently prepared to do things which Germany alone has been credited with by students of municipal efficiency."

Similarly enthusiastic is a Columbus editor who, noting other cities of his state "bound for better things," says:

"Dayton has adopted the commission plan of government with the managerial appendage, and Sandusky is to have the municipal, both right departures from the old federal plan. Now, watch them go by, which they will if the old gang doesn't resort to sabotage to destroy the delicate processes of civic reform. How we wish Columbus could have joined the roll-on opportunity and marched with her sister cities to the goal of an efficient and unselfish city government."

What the New York Evening Post calls "the noteworthy thing" about Dayton's new charter is "its break with commission government as it has been understood hitherto," and it states the case thus:

"Dayton, while declaring by a vote of two to one in favor of a commission, declares at the same time for that separation of legislative and executive functions which has been desired by advocates of commission government as a relic of an outworn system. Dayton's commission will do what any city council does, pass ordinances. Its mayor will have the honor of being the 'political head' of the city, and of presiding at commission meetings. But the man who will loom large in the city government will be the 'city manager.' Appointed by the so-called mayor, dependent for his salary upon the commission, he will exercise control, through appointments and removals and subject to civil-service regulations, of the entire administration, exclusive of the courts and schools. In other words, commission government has swung around to the point of restoring the office of mayor, but with the difference that he is appointed by the council instead of elected by the voters. This is cabinet government in little. It may be a wise development. At any rate, the evolution thus recorded is a warning to reformers not to be sure that old ideas of government have suddenly become archaic, and that by the simple process of discarding them we can have the millennium merely by voting for it."—Literary Digest.

TALKS ON THRIFT

NO. 1.—IS EXTRAVAGANCE A NATIONAL TRAIT?

"Save, young man, and become respectable and respected. It is the surest way,"—Benjamin Franklin.

The Savings Bank Section of the American Bankers Association, representing about 2100 savings banks and banks with savings departments in the United States, believes that as a people we are becoming too extravagant and it has entered upon an educational campaign to interest the citizens of our country in the great individual and national advantages of thrift and systematic saving.

It is claimed, and we believe with good reason, that as a nation we have departed far from the old-fashioned ideas of economy for which the American people formerly were noted. It is quite possible, as no less an authority than James J. Hill, the railroad "emperor-builder, has stated, that it is the cost of high living that is bothering us at present, quite as much as the high cost of living.

Another prominent financier is authority for the statement that we are living in an age of financial delirium, and that lavish expenditure has now grown to be a national trait.

Extravagance causes financial ills in the nation, but its effect on individual citizens is of primary importance, because no nation can be more prosperous than its people.

In the early history of our country, the precepts and proverbs of "Poor Richard," a sample of which appeared at the head of this article, were widely read and constantly quoted. More than that, they were acted upon very generally, with the result that a positive and beneficial thriftiness was exerted on the character and habits of the people at large. It would be impossible to estimate the vast aggregate of thrift arising from the widespread promulgation of these ideas. As a national asset, this spirit was invaluable and its total loss would be irreparable injury.

This newspaper is in hearty sympathy with the effort the savings banks are making to bring about a better realization of the present day importance of saving. To help along the good work in this community, we will devote some space every week to practical talks on this vital subject. We especially commend these articles to the attention of our younger readers—to young men and women starting out in their business career or establishing a home.

How to succeed, how to get on in the world—that is the problem that millions of earnest men and women are striving to solve, each in his own way, but all, consciously or unconsciously, observing the same general principles.

There is nothing in such an effort at variance with the highest moral standards. In fact, the zealous pursuit of such an object has a beneficial reflex action upon the character, as it has upon the physical and mental nature.

One purpose of The Times Thrift Talks will be the set down the results of experience and observation touching the best methods for making material progress as the result of one's own efforts, consequently in these articles the Times will not only point out the folly of extravagant living in general and the danger of unwise investments in particular, but we will also put special emphasis upon the practical wisdom of systematic saving from income, and hope to show clearly the wonderful power of stored-up money when put at work under the right conditions.

The Times suggests that its readers watch for these articles, read them out loud and preserve them for future reference. They will be interesting and helpful to all earnest people.

EUGENICS IN PENNSYLVANIA.

The operation of Pennsylvania's new marriage-license law, which provides a list of about twenty intimate personal questions to be answered by prospective bride and groom under oath, brings the whole question of eugenics again into editorial notice. Some observers doubt the wisdom of the Pennsylvania law, although they unhesitatingly advocate the eugenic movement as a serious social effort which has come to stay and "to exercise an increasingly beneficial influence" on our national life. On the other hand, there are those who have only a superior contempt for "the apostles of eugenics" and point out as the fatal error of their theories that human beings can not be "mated scientifically" as animals are mated. According to press reports, Pennsylvania's law, which went into effect on August 1, prohibits the issuance of a marriage license to persons having transmissible disease and to imbeciles, persons under guardianship, and persons of unsound mind. The marriage of first cousins is forbidden, furthermore, and to secure a license a man must be able to show he can support a family. Finally, no licenses will be issued to persons "under the influence of liquor or narcotics." A particular objection to this statute, voiced by the Washington Post, is that its enforcement seems to be "left to the marriage-license clerks." Nor should they be surprised, the Post says, to receive indignant replies when they ask "the blushing bridal pair whether they are imbeciles, epileptics, degenerates, or have any transmissible disease," while it picks out Wisconsin's law as much saner, because in that state "There is a opportunity for a subsistence to consult his doctor first, and if refused a certificate he might then excuse himself from marrying on the ground that his salary had been reduced. It can hardly be expected, however, that even an imbecile would admit his deficiency in the presence of his sweetheart. An epileptic, under the sudden shock of the question, might throw a fit for the benefit of the license clerk, but it is hardly likely that the question would bring out the truth in any circumstances. The law merely gives" the applicant a choice between perjury and admitting humiliating facts about himself or herself, and to many persons perjury will seem the lesser of the two evils, especially as the admission of disease or imbecility means a refusal of the license to marry."

Such a law as this is foolish, observes the New York World, in commenting on the press reports that many couples are going into other states to marry rather than submit to it. And The World adds:

"Another and less desirable result will be to delay marriage, if not ultimately to encourage irregular unions. This particular law is an example of the hasty legislation by which it is sought to secure racial improvement by statutory restrictions of marriage without regard to consequences, and which has become the cause of much of the discredit cast on eugenics."

However acceptable eugenics may be in theory, in practice it is bad, declares the Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph, which is not at all surprised to learn that the new law is "not working well in Allegheny county." The Chronicle Telegraph's authority for this dictum is Dr. Charles S. Potts, a neurologist of Philadelphia, who is reported as saying: "You can not regulate the marriage of people in this world on utilitarian principles, that is, unless you are going to run it on the principles of a stock-farm." Of this statement The Chronicle Telegraph remarks:

"One need not be a scientist in order to see the point of the objection thus ruled. Plain, unlearned men and women believe in getting married because of mutual love and respect, independent of scientific principles, can see it for themselves, and hence it is that the attempt to force the eugenics legislation upon the people of Pennsylvania already shows signs of being a failure."—Literary Digest.

TAX VALUES LOWERED

Cut of Ten Millions in State Tax Valuation.

At a late hour Saturday night the tax commission, the state board of equalization, the state auditor and the clerical force of the three departments, met at the state auditor's office to make a big slice of relief because the equalization of the taxes for 1913 had been completed and the tax commission had been authorized to make a cut of ten millions in the total value of the state.

The story is pretty well told in the accompanying table. It shows the total valuation to be $24,000,000 less than that of last year, but it must be remembered that much stock, personal property and some other classes of personal property are to be added in, so that the total valuation will be about the same as last year.

There was a cut of $10,000,000 made in the value of real and personal property by the state board of equalization.

from the figures submitted by the county auditors. The total before equalization was $34,220,184. This was reduced to $24,011,184.

In addition to the $900,000 to be used for the general levy for state purposes, there will be raised $80,000 for the interest and sinking fund, and $50,176 for public buildings. This will be distributed among the various counties in the same ratio as the general tax. The tax levy for all state purposes this year will be $1,024,833. Last year it was a little more than six cents on the dollar, but that was estimated on the 40 per cent of the cash value of the property.

In addition to the value of real and personal property and the value of railroads the completed schedule includes this year $1,455,323 as the value of the telephone lines in the state; $1,237,526 as the value of telegraph lines; $467,123 as the value of the private car companies; and $2,271,958 as the value of the power transmission lines.

Last year the telephone lines were assessed at $1,459,516; the telegraph lines at $1,152,450 and the private car companies at $261,824. Last year the property of the power transmission lines were assessed at $2,271,958 in the various counties in which the plants were situated.

HEALTH AND HYGIENE

Free Typhoid Vaccine.

The state board of health is supplying free of charge typhoid immunization vaccine for the first thousand people who apply for this treatment. Be vaccinated by your physician. Statistics prove the value of typhoid vaccination. All should be immunized who come in contact with typhoid patients, and all who reside or travel in typhoid infected districts, or in districts where the water supply is questionable.

For further information concerning immunization against typhoid fever address your local health officer or Dr. Ralph Falk, secretary of the state board of health.

They will supply you with the name of a physician in your community who will give you this treatment without charge.

Greater than all other safeguards of war or peace.

Remarkable results following use of typhoid vaccine.

82,000 United States soldiers immunized up to July 1, 1912. The typhoid rate dropped from 3.93 per thousand in 1909 to 0.3 per thousand in 1912. A reduction of 90 per cent.

61,622 British soldiers immunized in India during 1911. Typhoid incidences in the immunized 1.7 per thousand, in those not immunized 6.7 per thousand—a case of reduction of 75 per cent. Death rate in immunized 0.17 per thousand, not immunized 1.15 per thousand—a mortality reduction of 85 per cent.

24,795 Japanese soldiers immunized in 1909. Comparison of 12,916 immunized soldiers with 29,245 not immunized living under the same condition shows case per thousand among immunized, 14.55 cases per thousand in those not immunized—a reduction in the typhoid rate among the immunized of 93 per cent.

30,000 Persons immunized in Memphis, Tenn., during the recent typhoid epidemic. 97 of these were children 1 to 5 years of age. The department of health report says: "We believe from our experience that it saved one life from typhoid fever."

2,044 Persons immunized in Baltimore during 1911-12. Not a single case of typhoid fever occurred among these persons. In 299 hospital nurses and attendants immunized there were no cases of typhoid.

1,381 Nurses and hospital attendants in Massachusetts hospitals were immunized. Only two cases of typhoid fever developed. Without immunization typhoid incidences were nine times greater.

52,000 Anti-typhoid inoculations have been made in the United States since January, 1912. Only a small fraction of 1 per cent of those immunized had reactions requiring excuse from duty.

263,842 Immunizations tabulated above. No harmful results followed.

Be Vaccinated by Your Physician. Statistics prove the value of typhoid vaccination. All should be immunized who come in contact with typhoid patients, and all who reside or travel in typhoid infected districts or in districts where the water supply is questionable.

Have You Had Typhoid? Typhoid is the most to be feared disease that menaces travelers and vacation seekers (and people who stay at home for that matter). Everyone knows of cases contracted while traveling or away on vacation. But, this dreaded disease need not be longer feared, as army medical experience has demonstrated the almost miraculous efficiency of vaccination against it. We urge vaccination from the standpoint of being among those who have knowledge of something that no false ethics should deter us from passing on to those who have only a dim conception of their danger and the almost miraculous manner of protection that can be had against it.

Your physician is the one to go to for further information on the subject, and whether or not he uses our vaccine is a matter of less moment to us than the hope that we may be instrumental in leading many to seek the protection of which they have hitherto had little knowledge.

Physicians, are you doing your duty in the matter of educating your townspeople as to their danger from typhoid and the availability of absolutely certain protection against it?

negative is at any other time, but that if Mr. Sheer did not take kindly to it that he would have to go some if he caught him as he would probably be in Salt Lake or Denver before Mr. Sheer found it out.

John S. Glazebrook, who left a month ago for Lava Springs, returned the first of the week much improved in health. After transacting a little business he returned for more baths. Andy Mattson concluded he needed a little rest and returned with Mr. Glazebrook to the springs.

Mrs. J. C. Stoddard and Miss Luella, of Port Bryan, Ill., are visiting here. Mrs. Stoddard is a sister of Mrs. Young and the Journal editor. Miss Luella will go from here to Bridgeport, Wash., where she will teach the coming year.

Dr. Cartney, Filer's new dentist, is certainly filling a long felt want. A resident dentist is a necessity in any community the size of Filer, and when that dentist is thoroughly competent, it is a double blessing. Dr. Cartney certainly fills the bill.

Rev. J. K. MacGillivray, Sunday school missionary of Twin Falls, spent three days last week in Shoshone basin and Big Creek visiting home and holding religious services in the school house of the basin. He found Miss

The editor made a trip over on the Salmon yesterday, his first visit now in a year. He was surprised at the progress made by the farmers, and the splendid crops that met his gaze on every side. The farmers have done much improving the past year and many new fields were in grain that were acreage a year ago. They have had plenty of water and most of the fields were fenced with rabbit light fence, thereby guaranteeing a crop if it was in the ground. The day is not a day when men who own land on the Salmon will be envied by those who passed up the opportunity to secure it when securing was good.

Owing to continued hot weather there will be no dance in the Filer opera house till Field Day, the 27th of September.

Meadams Finley, Jones and Dingle entertained the members of the Ladies' Aid yesterday afternoon in the church parlors. The program consisted of "ye old time delectable schule," and a very novel and interesting feature.

"I was surprised how little the scholars knew in 'geography' and 'arithmetic.' It is said the antics of the scholars was quite similar to what the teachers of years ago had to put up with. If they had stuck in a few old boys in the east we think we could have found a few 'peaches' around town who could have helped out amazingly."

HINTS FOR PACKING FRUIT

Twin Falls Fruit Growers' Association Receives Book of Instructions.

Valuable information for fruit growers is contained in a little booklet recently issued by the Idaho-Oregon Fruit Growers' Association. The booklet is entitled "Suggestions and Tables for Fruit Growers" and contains advice on pruning, thinning, spraying, picking, packing and grading. The booklet may be obtained from the office of the organization at Payette and has also been mailed out to all members of the Twin Falls Fruit Growers' association, affiliated with the Idaho-Oregon association.

In addition to the booklet, the association has sent out the following timely hints to fruit growers:

Packing—A note of warning to all packing stations as well as to all growers who pack their own fruit. In cleaning up the pack there is necessarily an accumulation of odds and ends, all of which should be packed in this care should be used in marketing the boxes containing this mixed stuff. Irregular or second-grade fruit should be packed in a separate box, and the whole car, if the buyer opens one of these boxes suspicion is at once attached to the whole car and in some cases has caused the car to be rejected.

Name on Box—Again let us urge the grower not to stamp his name on the label and to let the buyer know by Mr. Shiffert, our Omaha representative, he said, "please keep the name of the grower off the box." The writer, in drawing him up in support of his plea, found the effect of such practice from the sales end, to be that the grower's name appears on the box and the buyer's suspicion is at once aroused and if the car contains apples from a half dozen different growers the buyer generally demands a sample box to be opened from each grower. Please use your "Grower No." instead of your name. Those who desire can stencil the reverse end of the box where nothing but the "Packer No." appears.

Label—The magnitude of the apple business will soon reach such proportions that the individual grower's brand will be lost in the grand confusion and we feel much respect judgment will be exercised if we all unite in using our I-O label, which will soon be established as the standard and we feel much respect judgment will be exercised if we all unite in using our I-O label, which will soon be established as the standard and we feel much respect judgment will be exercised if we all unite in using our I-O label, which will soon be established as the standard.

Wanted—Man for general farm work for season. $50.00 a month and board.

Wanted—Man for harvest hands $12.25 per day and board.

Wanted—Woman cook, $40.00 per month and board.

LETTER TO DR. W. F. PIKE,
 Twin Falls, Idaho.

Dear Sir: We manage to get some fun out of you. J. H. Kohlmeier, Grove Street, put in a note, asking care a witness of somebody else's paint before ours, had got there.
 Salesman said ours was short-mensure, but we were not sure, hung him up and flopped; stopped ours and took his.

It was our turn now. We emptied
 our can and he put his into ours.
 The short-measure was his, not ours;
 and we kept our man.

And, ever since then, that paint-manufacturer gives full-measure; his paint is not pure, but his gallon contains four quarts.

Go by the measure, and the name to go by is Devoe.

Yours truly,
 F. W. DEVOE & CO.

No. 4. SAMUEL FINLEY BREESE MORSE

Copyright, 1912, by The Associated Newspaper School, Inc.

On May 24, 1844, an anxious and expectant crowd was gathered about a crude little instrument in a building in Baltimore. The minutes passed slowly. The crowd stirred restlessly. But at last came that for which they were waiting. The instrument moved, and then began an irregular clicking. "What—hath—God—wrought!"

This was the message that the instrument spelled out, and this was the message that proved to the waiting crowd that Morse's dream of telegraphy had become a reality.

Samuel Finley Breeze Morse was born at Charlestown, Massachusetts, on April 27, 1791. He was the son of the Rev. Jedediah Morse, and the great-grandson of Samuel Finley, the second president of the College of New Jersey at Princeton.

Morse entered Yale at the age of fourteen, which was not considered extremely young in those days. It was there that he first began the study of electricity. But his tastes led him more strongly toward art than toward science, and in 1811 the young graduate became the pupil of Washington Allston and went with him to England. Here he remained for a year, distinguishing himself with his brush and making many friends.

No. 5. ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL

One hot afternoon in June, thirty-eight years ago, a young man was standing in a grimy workshop by the side of a crude little machine composed of a clock spring, a magnet, and a wire. He was bending over this queer machine listening intently. Suddenly he bent nearer, a startled look on his face. The young man straightened up and ran into an adjoining room, where another man stood near a second instrument similar to the first.

"Snap that reel again," he cried excitedly.

The assistant obeyed him, and again came that faint "vzzzzt" from the spring in the front room. The telephone was born.

And the man who accomplished this wonder was a poor young professor of elocution in Boston, Alexander Graham Bell. He was not an American by birth. He was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, on March 3, 1847. His father was Alexander Melville Bell, the inventor of a system by which the deaf can read speech by observing the motion of the lips.

The Bell family moved to Canada, in 1870, and Alexander, the younger, took up teaching the deaf and dumb in Boston. He became instructor of phonetics, or the art of visible speech, in Monroe's School of Oratory. He was a hard worker, but poor. One time when he had rheumatism, his employer had to pay his hospital expenses.

It was about this time that Bell began experimenting with electricity. He was not alone in this. For a number of years other people had been trying to do this. Sir Charles Wheatstone in England had discovered that wires charged with electricity often carried notes in a curious way. In 1863 Heli, a German professor, constructed an instrument which sent a series of clicks along an electric wire to an electro-magnetic receiver at the other end. And others were turning their attention to this interesting phase of telegraphy.

No. 6. THOMAS ALVA EDISON

The scene—the Boston office of a great telegraph company. The time—the half century ago. Enter a tall young man wearing a slouchy broad-brimmed hat and a wet dust clinging to his legs, who marched into the superintendent's office, and said:

"Here I am."

The superintendent gazed at him. "Who are you?" he finally asked.

"Tom Edison."

"And who on earth might Tom Edison be?"

The young man explained that he had been ordered to report for duty at the Boston office. He was told to sit down and wait. A little while later a New York messenger who was one of the most rapid in the telegraph busness at that time, called up. All the operators were busy.

"Let that new fellow try four," said the chief.

Edison sat down and for four and one-half hours took two speedy messages. The faster the instrument clicked, the faster he wrote the words. At the end New York called—

"Hello!"

"Hello yourself," Edison flashed back.

"Who the dickens are you?" asked the New York operator.

"Tom Edison."

"You are the first man in the country that could ever take me at my fastest," clicked out New York, "and the only one who could ever sit at the other end of my wire for more than two hours and a half. I'm proud to know you."

The little story of Thomas Alva Edison shows this even a young man he exhibited unusual ability. He was born on February 11, 1847, at Milan, Erie County, Ohio. His family moved to Port Huron, Michigan, when the boy was seven, and when he was only twelve years old Edison became a train newsboy on the railway to Detroit. It was during this time that he rigged up apparatus in the baggage car and experimented with chemistry and telegraphy.

He dropped out of school when he became a telegraph operator. But his studies and experiments interfered so much with his duties that he was discharged.

Edison was determined to work in the cities of the United States and Canada. At the age of twenty-one he had built an automatic reporter, by which telegraphic messages could be transferred from one wire to another without the aid of an operator. By means of this messenger could be sent direct to a much greater distance than formerly.

Edison finally went to Boston, as related above, and thence to New York in 1865. There he invented an improved printing telegraph, for stock quotations—the ticker. For this he received $40,000.

Then he built a laboratory at Newark, New Jersey, but four years later moved to Menlo Park, and later to West Orange, New Jersey. All the time he continued his experiments and inventions. He lives now at Orange, and he is as hard a worker at sixty-six as he was when a young man.

Among Edison's more important inventions are his system of multiplex telegraphy; the carbon telephone transmitter; the phonograph; the incandescent lamp and light system; the kinetoscope; and his invention of this year, the talking-movie-machine, in all he has had seven hundred patents granted to him.

In 1878 Edison was made Chevalier and afterward Commander of the Legion of Honor by the French government.

GOOD telephone service depends largely upon mutual courtesy.

The telephone is more useful to those who talk as if face to face, for civility removes difficulties and facilitates the promptest possible connections.

As in other intercourse, it often happens that two or more people wish to talk with the same person at the same time. Without courtesy confusion is inevitable, and the confusion is greater when the people cannot see each other.

The operators must be patient and polite under all circumstances, but they will do better work if they meet patience and politeness on the part of telephone users.

The Bell Telephone Service enters intimately into the social and business life of each individual. The best results come through the practice of mutual courtesy.

Cole went home to Pattonburg, Mo., by way of Canyon City, Texas, to assist with the aged father.
