WASHINGTON NOTES

Items of Interest to the Residents of Idaho.

(Special Correspondence.)

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23, 1913.—Senator and Mrs. Brady returned to Washington last week from a trip west. They both enjoyed their visit to Idaho very much, indeed. Mrs. Brady was very much pleased with her reception in the state, and with the people she had the pleasure of meeting. Senator Brady at once settled down to routine work and says that he feels very much benefited by his visit to Idaho. He has met with many of the constituents and found out their needs and wants. In speaking of his trip Senator Brady said: "I never enjoyed a trip through Idaho more in my life. The weather was delightful and after the long hot summer here it seemed indeed good to breathe the fresh mountain air once more. I visited both south and north Idaho and met hundreds of people and feel that the time was well spent in the settling in touch with the needs of the people. Business conditions in the west are about the same as in the east. However, the abundant crops in Idaho are going to help matters very much indeed. I shall put in my time now while we are waiting for the currency bill in endeavoring to convince the western senators that it is the proper thing for them to work in harmony and have united action on measures that mutually affect the west. I believe that if this can be accomplished the west will come into its own. The senators will not attempt to enact many laws during the time the currency bill is being considered by the committee on banking and currency and this will give an opportunity to senators to look more in detail after the work that must be attended to in behalf of their constituents."

Proposed Amendment of U. S. Assay Offices.

The fight in the house of representatives against the continuance of the assay offices in the mining states was renewed when the urgency deficiency appropriation bill was under consideration last week. This bill contained a provision for a sufficient appropriation to defray the contingent expenses of the assay offices until the close of the fiscal year. The members put up a strong fight in favor of the provision, but they were outvoted by the Democrats. The bill, however, is not a final one. It is only a bill to carry the offices until the close of the fiscal year. The members put up a strong fight in favor of the provision, but they were outvoted by the Democrats. Congressman Smith's Tribute to the Miner.

Mr. Speaker, it has been the policy of our government since it was established to encourage the pioneer in his efforts to push forward to the frontier in the development of the country. In furtherance of this policy legislation was enacted lending government aid to the construction of transcontinental railroads. A homestead law was enacted giving to every citizen 160 acres of public land without cost, excepting filing fees. And we have recently, I am glad to say, enacted legislation to establish a bureau in the department of agriculture to assist the farmer in finding a profitable market in which to sell his products. We are expending hundreds of thousands of dollars toward the eradication of disease among every kind of domestic animals. We are appropriating hundreds of thousands of dollars toward the extermination of insects attacking our fruit trees and vegetables. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are being appropriated for experimental stations and the employment of those having a technical knowledge of plant and vegetable life in the development of our agricultural resources. There is even in operation in connection with the bureau of immigration in this country and conducted at a great expense a system under which we are endeavoring to find an advantageous location for the foreigner as soon as he reaches our shores; and yet, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York and others, members of the Democratic party, are endeavoring to take away from the prospector and the miner the only encouragement he has ever received from the government by abolishing the assay offices throughout the western country. Is no further consideration to be accorded to the intrepid prospector who endures the hardships and exposure to the elements incident to his calling, and on the restoration of high ceremonial in honor of the miner the legacy of the past ends? Although no longer the "wonder of the world" that Leiland was (for so-called architects of the last century restored it out of all recognition) the roof still remains a thing of beauty. It has been suggested that the chapel stands on the site of a garden owned by Chaucer. Henry, who built it, lavished money upon it—his successors evidently thought too much for their utterly neglected it. When George I. reorganized the order by introducing fresh blood, more honorable canopies were needed; they were provided by dishonoring the old ones into two—London Chronicle.

Hon. Axel Heston of Moscow, Ida., a member of the Idaho Utility Commission, is in Washington representing the state of Idaho in an effort to have patents issue to the railroad to which land grants were made years ago, some lands under which have not been patented. Mr. Heston contends, and the state authorities believe, that these lands ought to be made taxable at the earliest possible date.

Among the recent arrivals in Washington are former United States Senator Fred T. Dubois, Miss Madge Linsinger of Boise, who has entered the Fairmount seminary, one of the foremost of the United States schools in the city, and Mr. D. W. Humiston. Mr. Dubois has spent the summer in Idaho, and will be later joined here by Mrs. Dubois.

Their daughters accompanied their father here in order to resume their school work.

Just as the vote in the congressional election in Idaho a few weeks ago attracted unusual attention, the recent vote in the 3rd West Virginia district where a member of congress was elected to succeed Hon. John W. Davis, Democrat, who was recently appointed as solicitor of the United States, has again focused attention of those interested in political developments.

In 1912, Mr. Wilson received 23,212 votes; Mr. Taft, 12,720; while Roosevelt received 12,257. With a few precincts still missing, which cannot change the result materially, the vote this week gave Mr. Scofield, Democrat, 13,290, Mr. Hearne, Republican, 10,382, and Mr. Laughlin, Progressive, 5,721.

While it is apparent that the vote was only about 60 per cent of the normal vote that is cast in this congressional district, the most striking feature of the election is the very small Progressive vote cast and the apparent return to the Republican party of the rank and file of the Progressives.

The Twin Falls high school team has won two victories in athletics and that in sports of lukewarm encouragement given it by the student body and by the towns people. The attendance at the game has been so slight that many there made the remark that "Twin Falls" big high school enrollment could not be proven by the number at the game. The same could be said truly of the towns people who are supposedly interested in the success of the school in all things. Next Saturday the boys will meet with perhaps the hardest battle of the season and the encouragement of a good big crowd to boost for them during the game. Huh! will be up with a good big crowd and will back their team to the limit in attempting to get Twin Falls. It would certainly be a pity to have the loyalty of the Twin Falls people to their school shown up by the Buhl contingent. Incidentally the locals need your admission money to keep up with the expenses.

The admission of the English aristocrat, Mrs. Pankhurst, to this country by President Wilson, may possibly be the easiest way to solve the problem, but will sooner or later cause trouble in this country, while she stays, like that endured by England. After all America can learn but little from Mrs. Pankhurst and her militant type. American women have discovered a better way to gain their ends and while they adhere to the campaigns so far conducted are certain to make progress. Women as the guardians of the home and the moral standards of our nation have shown that they are entitled to the ballot and are slowly gaining their rights in many of the most bigoted states of the union. But those rights have come to them not because of the force of violence like that attempted in England by Mrs. Pankhurst and her kind, but because of the spirit of fairness that is inherent in the mind of the American man as ruler. Mrs. Pankhurst can do little good in America. It is to be hoped that she may imbue some of the spirit and ideas of the American home makers—the women who are accomplishing good through right methods.

The removal of Governor Sulzer from office as governor of the state of New York by the impeachment court was not a surprise to any of the many million people who followed the trial. Governor Sulzer was a marked man from the time that he broke with Tammany and attempted to show his independence after being a tool for so many years. The trial of Sulzer while a foregone conclusion has brought out much in the life of the man that removes him utterly from sympathy of thoughtful citizens. He played the game according to Tammany rules, taking his graft money with little compunction and with nothing as an excuse to soften his guilt. His whole conception of politics being based on the Tammany belief that every man has his price. New York is fortunate in getting rid of him as governor, although his successor is another tool of the same rank. A weak-kneed, wobbly man in the power of grafters is more dangerous to the public than the stronger and more blunt exponent of political expediency. One has neither the will nor the mind to cope with right or wrong and is worked into more disreputable acts than the other class. The men of Murphy's type who control men like Sulzer are the most adept at feeling the public pulse and for that reason set down into law worst acts because of their bump of caution.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL OF THE WIRES.

No one seems startled nowadays by proposals for government ownership of telegraphs. Postmaster General Hitchcock advocated it officially as a member of the Taft administration. Followers of newspaper opinion are familiar with the arguments pro and con. But the rumors of the Wilson administration's intentions in this direction have provoked pointed suggestions from its opponents to the effect that, whatever merit the abstract proposition may have, the program as outlined in the dispatch has little, while the present is no time for its consideration. So far, it should be said, only its opponents have been heard from. The Dallas News (Dem.) has no objection to government ownership of telegraphs, but finds the report that the President will "thrust this question" upon congress next winter "altogether incredible," since "his highest task now is to hold his party together, and it is hardly a compliment to his sense of expedience to suppose that he would, just now, toss an apple of discord into the ranks of men who need but little provocation to set them into fighting one another." Then, too, it occurs to the New York Times (Ind.) that "if the wireless is as successful as its pioneers hope," the government's requirement of wire communications would be "backing the wrong horse." And with the same thought in mind, The Wall Street Journal exclaims: "Great idea to spend hundreds of millions of the public money expropriating telegraph wires which may be obsolete in ten years with the development of wireless." The reports from Washington say that the government contemplates the eventual acquisition of the telegraphs through the control of long-distance telephones. As the New York Press sums up the chief points of the rumored program as given in the dispatches:

"If the parcel post could be made a success as a government operation, a government telegraph service could be made an equal success.
"If the telegraph corporations will not be reasonable in giving themselves over to the government, then the government, through control and operation of the telephone systems, can carry the telegraph companies to a neck.
"While it would be an enormous expense to buy the telegraph companies as a business proposition, if the American systems could be had at bargain rates—forced by competitive stacks of telephone systems controlled by the government—then it would be as good a business for the government to be in as the parcel post has proved to be."

It seems extremely doubtful to the Savannah News (Dem.) that there can be anything in the story "that the government aims to get the telegraph lines by such a method." And a number of editors and Washington correspondents note that this report has been left without official confirmation, so that they look upon it as at most "a feeler." The administration, concludes the Savannah paper, "may contemplate government ownership of the lines, but if it does it will acquire them in a way that wouldn't be open to criticism."

"The telegraph lines are owned by many thousands of people. It would be unjust to render their property worthless in order to get possession of it. When all the facts are known, it doubtless will appear that if the administration is planning government ownership of the telegraph lines its plan includes the buying of the lines at a fair price."

Long arguments against the "delusive promises" of government ownership of wires appear in the New York Journal of Commerce and Times, Brooklyn Eagle (Ind. Dem.), Philadelphia Public Ledger (Ind.), and Baltimore American (Rep.). The New York Press (Prog.) takes less extreme ground. It recognizes the strength of the arguments for public ownership of the means of communication by wire, saying:

"If it were necessary, for example, to establish communications with or throughout territory where the business could not possibly be self-supporting, the government could do such a thing purely as a duty to a part of the public, when private corporations could not be expected to do the same thing. And then, of course, there is always the possibility that the government may require the exclusive handling of wire communications for purposes of war. And whether we concede the economic advantages or not of such government operation, there is a certain consistency in maintaining that if the government provides and operates mail communications, it ought to provide and operate all other communications, so as to have a correlated whole."

But nobody, The Press continues, "can extract cold reason out of the proposition that because the government has done well with the parcel post it could do as well with the telegraph lines." We are reminded that in the one case it had all the necessary machinery in existence and in operation; in the other, the whole service would have to be created, "unless it took over the whole telegraph business to help out the government." And in this case the same results, as far as the public is concerned, would be obtained by having the government undertake, not to own, but "to control the operation of the telegraph lines and to govern their rates and the conditions of their rendering their services—to control and govern all this, privately owned and operated."

Yet, despite all objections and the silence at the White House and the postoffice department, the Philadelphia Public Ledger's Washington correspondent believes that the postmaster general will make recommendations as outlined above at the coming session of congress and that the president will support him. Congressman David John Lewis, of Maryland, is said to be helping the administration in the preparation of data, and to have estimated the cost of the purchase of the telephone systems of the country at about $900,000,000. In the opinion of the New York Commercial, "the only objections to government ownership, and its practical operation, particularly such examples as England's losing investment in the telephone field, may be disregarded as applied to this latest suggestion that the key to government acquisition of the telegraph lines lies in obtaining control of the long-distance telephone lines." The Commercial's objections to "this latest suggestion" are found in its presentation of the existing conditions of telephone and telegraph ownership.

"The American Telephone and Telegraph company owns the 'only long-distance telephone wire system in the country. Obviously the suggestion is to acquire this company's wires and system. Then the telegraph companies will be brought to terms. The Bell corporation is in a sense a transportation company. It licenses local concerns, holds as a rule 61 per cent of their capitalization, and collects all charges for all long-distance messages sent over its lines which connect the various community systems. There are more than 5,200 local exchanges in its system, with 11,610,813 miles of wires."

"It covers the country like a fisherman's net. It owns practical control of the Western Union Telegraph company, and is a far more valuable property than the Western Union and most key companies combined. These two, it has Canadian rights, and controls the Bell Telephone company of Canada. How the Dominion government would look upon American official control and operation of its long-distance service probably has not been considered."

"The American Telephone and Telegraph company has a capitalization of $12,393,200 and a funded debt of $100,351,000. Its dividends last year totaled $26,000,000. The suggestion that the easiest way of acquiring the telegraph lines is by taking over this vast organization needs no further comment than the contrasting statement that the Western Union's capitalization was but $29,817,100, and its funded debt $28,745,000, while the Mackay system, including the $23,000,000 cable concern, is capitalized for but $91,250,000, and has no funded debt."—Literary Digest.

ed $26,000,000. The suggestion that the easiest way of acquiring the telegraph lines is by taking over this vast organization needs no further comment than the contrasting statement that the Western Union's capitalization was but $29,817,100, and its funded debt $28,745,000, while the Mackay system, including the $23,000,000 cable concern, is capitalized for but $91,250,000, and has no funded debt."—Literary Digest.

ARE YOU USING BROMIDES?

Questions to Be Answered by Non-Church Goers.

There are, let us say, 8000 people living within a radius of three miles from the center of Twin Falls. Doubtless some will insist that this is too low an estimate, but let it stand at that for the present statement. The considerable church in the morning and evening congregations, and yet the two audiences at any church will prove to be largely made up of the same people. When this and the fact that the churches are never all filled are taken into consideration, we are almost obliged to conclude that probably two-thirds of the people in and about the city who might easily reach the city churches if they cared to do so, are either "halfhearted" non-churchgoers, or very rare attendants at a church service. Is this a showing of which the people of the community are to boast? Is it one with which they are satisfied?

Bromides are said to be used extensively to quiet the nerves and induce sleep. A recent writer observed: "In the church pharmacy are at least four bromides that infallibly induce a quiescent conclusion, and greatly put the patient to sleep: (1) The fact is, I work so hard all the week, that when Sunday morning comes, I feel as if I must go to bed. (2) When I was a boy, I was made to go to church three times a day, so now, (I feel) also for a woman patient. (3) Company came just as we were ready. (Never fails.) (4) I came twice, and not a soul spoke to me. (Succeeds every time.)"

In and about Twin Falls bromide No. 1 is being widely used. The people on the farms especially have to be busy for the production in enormous and the season is short. But is there any real need that so many of them should sleep on Sunday? Cannot enough be done on the Saturday in the week? And the people who use this bromide really work so hard during the week that they cannot so when they want to go on Sunday? It seems only reasonable to believe that it is no harder for tired people to go to church than to go to a baseball game or to the falls, or to visit their friends. Indeed, taking all the facts into consideration it is reasonable to believe that they would find a church service a most healthy restful hour to them if it entered into with the right spirit.

One wonders if many can honestly use bromide No. 2. Not many have ever required to go to church three times a day in childhood. But even if some of us were, might it not be wise for us to inquire very carefully whether or we were ever hurt by it? Possibly some of us might be far worse off today if we had not been required to go. The moral teaching we absorbed, even though unwillingly, may very easily during the years have proved of enormous value to us. Is there really any one who can conscientiously say that he believes harm came to him through required attendance upon church and Sunday school while a child? Possibly, also, church services have changed somewhat since your childhood. Better come around and see.

Undoubtedly bromide No. 3 is in constant use, and with most satisfactory results to those who use it. But why would it not add variety to an all day's visit to take one's guests to church? It might be a novel and very valuable experience for all parties. We read of theater parties and card parties, why not some of Twin Falls' good people who are socially inclined introduce an innovation into the social world and inaugurate a series of church parties? If the suggestion seems tame, possibly it is because of the effects of the bromides you have been using.

But No. 4 is the finest of all, isn't it? Went to church twice and no one spoke to you? Yes, it does sometimes happen, for some people sit near the church door and shoot out of it so quickly after the benediction it would take something like a shotgun to catch them. Even the preacher, who almost breaks his neck and the necks of others to get to the door can get only a glimpse of their backs as they go down the steps. But if you finger a little after benediction twice and no one spoke to you, don't you think you might better try it just once more? And if the third time they do not speak to you in one church, why not try another? And if the time you have gone three times, go to each of the churches in town you will have found something in the service, that will make you want to go whether any body speaks to you or not. Not all of the benefits of a church service is to be found in being spoken to, however desirable that may be—Communicated.

NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

Feed your soil.

Always use a pure-bred ram.

Sheep are beneficial to the land.

Never allow the milk to sour in the swill barrel.

Give the colts attention. It will not do to neglect them.

For the fence-flying habit, trim one wing. It is a painless cure.

Churning should be done on time. Better put off something else.

If you want to keep eggs for any length of time turn them over every day.

First, grow bone and muscle, then put the fat on. Corn is splendid for fattening.

A feed of something while milking will often make a stubborn cow let down her milk.

The working hours of the poultryman extend from early till late; there are no holidays.

The Babcock test for a cow's production is often an acid test of her owner's gumption.

Try raising the farm horses instead of buying them. It is the safe and profitable way.

Don't expect every chick hatched from those high-priced eggs you bought to be prize-winners.

The chilled or wet chick gets a set-back from which it will not soon recover—sometimes never.

With pastures burned up the man with silage left over from last winter is now finding good use for it.

Even in rush time it pays to take a half day off every week to keep the machinery in good working order.

Chicks that have been drowned in water tanks that someone forgot to empty would make a good-sized flock.

Old pastures are sure to have interlarded parasites and this is one reason why frequent changes should be made.

The sooner the calf can be grown up to cow or steer the more profit there is in the business of raising cattle.

The better way to raise chicks is to keep them in a good and sound with poultry netting until they are well feathered out.

Save the soil moisture by working early in the spring and avoid the idea of saving the moisture clearly before you all the time.

The feed for maintenance may be the same as a butter that returns 600 pounds of butter for a year as for one that returns two pounds.

Hens will eat a great quantity of coal cinders, and they are very good for them. Try putting a lead in the chicken yard and watch the result.

Throw the milk strainer in the scrap heap. The cloth strainer over the pail is the only thing. Dirt kept out will not have to be strained out.

Where the cows run in rough brush and pasture there will be cuts and scratches on udder and teats. Keep a bottle of vaseline handy at milking time.

Keep close watch of the potatoes. Do not allow the bugs to get settled in their destructive work, but prevent it by spraying in season or other methods.

The brood isn't all and the feed isn't all. All you are on the right track with both and you will be no disappointment in the dairy business for you.

The planting of a few shrubs as apricot, lilac, mock orange, highbush blueberry about the edges of the lawn or in groups, often adds to the value of the homestead.

Health is natural and disease unnatural. In the flesh between the two nature will usually come out victorious if we give her a little encouragement in the way of humane treatment and sanitary surroundings.

The American Pigeon Keeper says: Though we have handled hundreds of birds we find it impossible to distinguish the sexes except when about three weeks old; then the female is generally smaller, and the legs and feet of the male bird are larger than those of the female.

Mixed rations are best.

It pays to save the manure.

Keep the eggs in a cool place.

Save the meat scraps for your fowls.

Fowls cannot be healthy without exercise.

The biggest cow is not always the best milker.

A bit of planning will always save time and muscle.

Proper food and a variety of it makes strong, healthy chickens.

As a growing proposition there is nothing better than a spring pig.

Horse's must not be unheated, have spirit and finish and be fast walkers.

If the now is fed on sour, dirty swill the effect is quickly seen in the pigs.

Undue excitement during hot weather often proves fatal to overfat fowls.

Clean earth is one of the best absorbents that can be used in the poultry house.

The dairy farm is a highly developed business establishment and should be so operated.

Whitewashing the nests, inside and out, is a good means of keeping them free from vermin.

It takes a stockman's eye to detect the first symptoms of falling conditions of his stock.

Little chicks need a feeding coop where they can eat in peace away from the older fowls.

Those who have silos full of silage find winter feeding easy and satisfactory to the live stock.

A poultryman too careless to keep the henhouse free from vermin does not deserve to be lauded.

A good feeding crop for chicks may be made by tacking some coarse mesh poultry wire over a frame.

A quarter spent for a batch of butter paper is money well invested where butter is marketed.

Young pigs kept in dry, dusty lots and fed on corn exclusively will not make money for their owner.

A quarter buys a dairy thermometer and no dairyman can make a better investment of two cents.

No honest breeder will sell a culled ram to an ignorant farmer. It is as bad as passing counterfeit money.

Milk, cream, and butter are susceptible to all manner of taint and the result is antimicrobial butter products.

Drought can be largely controlled by care of the physical condition of the soil and in the preparation of the seed bed.

Dust sitting twice with pyrethrum powder twice or three times before the eggs hatch and there will be no lice on the chicks.

Poultry and fruits are closely allied. Both do well together, and they readily thrive on the same land without hindering each other.

The sun has a purifying effect on milk pans and pails, but they should be covered with light screen cloth so the flies cannot chase over them.

Any woman who manages well can find an hour during the day when she can shut herself in from all outside worries and recline, relax and rest.

It is just as necessary to plow or otherwise cultivate the peach orchard when it bears not a peach as it is when the trees are to be loaded with fruit.

Decaying matter of any kind left lying around at this time of the year may prove a very costly bit of carelessness to anyone that is raising chickens.

It is in favor of the sheep that it will yield a profit under conditions so unfavorable that other farm animals under the same conditions will be unprofitable.

Ducks can be raised without fear. In fact they should be kept away from the hog lots or stock yards, where the clumsy birds are at the mercy of the stock.

Unless the stock turkeys are large it is almost impossible to get the young ones to a good weight. It is best to purchase the largest and finest stock obtainable to breed from.

Wheat is just as capable of increased yields as oats and corn, and those farmers who have combined science (common sense) with their agriculture, have reaped not 1 bushel but 30 to 40 bushels per acre for a series of years.

Breeding stock should be selected for health, strength, vigor and maturity first, utility second, and fancy points third. Unless a bird is matured, and possesses size, vigor and a sound constitution, it should be barred out of the breeding pen.

Build yourself a silo.

The breed of a cow isn't all.

A poultryman works all the time.

Shade is necessary in the hog lot of course.

Disease waits at the doors of damp poultry houses.

No one should expect to get sound colts from unsound sires.

If butter is overvalued or overworked its delicate flavor is ruined.

If you keep sheep on the same pasture year after year trouble is sure to follow.

When soft shelled eggs are very numerous there is something lacking in the ration.

Plenty of bedding in good season will often help materially in saving a litter of pigs.

As a rule hens that lay steadily during cold weather are indifferent to hot-weather layers.

Hardiness does not go by color of plumage. Hardiness depends upon the care given to fowls.

Dairy farming is more carefully studied today than ever before and it pays well for this.

The good cows in the dairy are the ones that make the profit. The loss is with the poor milkers.

When bean vines are wet, let 'em alone. Cultivate or hoe them only when dry, or they'll be rusty.

A mare may be safely worked up to within a week of foaling provided she is never subject to heavy strains.

Cut away all dead branches as soon as discovered and cover the wound with paint to prevent further decay.

Clover has the ability to obtain nitrogen from the atmosphere and incorporate it in its roots, stems and leaves.

Treat the hired man as a human being and furnish him with a cottage home, not a shack stuck behind your big red barn.

The acid of cream unduly sour destroys more or less of the butter fat and if kept too long a bitter condition is set up.

The real test of value in a horse is strength, liveliness and endurance and combined in the lightest weight possible.

The amount of limestone to use per acre varies. When soil is acid it requires from one to three tons per acre to correct the acidity.

There is not enough temper in the whole township to conquer a healthy horse; so there is no use for you to match what you'd got against one.

Mixed rations are more economical than the feeding of any particular article of food exclusively, as some foods ferment in the digestion of others.

It is just as necessary to keep the sheep supplied with green crops after the mowings give out as it is to keep the stock going in the same way.

Charcoal and grit should be kept where the fowls can have access to them at all times. They are a preventative as well as a cure for indigestion.

Look out for the cattle flies when they make their appearance, and by the application of some preventive help to keep them free from these troublesome pests.

The critical period in the young turkey is generally at an end when six weeks of age. Inbreeding, lice, dampness and improper food are the main causes for great mortality.

Scrub poultry may serve a good purpose in the pot, but they should not be permitted to propagate their kind. Scrub hens should be mated to pure bred males so that the breeding has an upward rather than a downward tendency.

If your poultry yards are bare they no doubt rest hard and baked these hot days. Sprinkle up a part of them preferably in some shady corner and see how the fowls will enjoy dusting in the soft dirt. It will more than pay you for your trouble.

Purchase a separator.

Butter must be kept cool.

Mulching potatoes is excellent.

Change the sheep pasture often.

A dog which worries stock is dear as a gift.

Powdered charcoal mixed with soft feed aids digestion.

Be sure the salt box in the sheep quarters is kept filled.

The floorless coop on drained ground is the only kind for this season.

Courage based upon knowledge is the farmer's most valuable asset.

Confidence and contentment are two important factors in poultry culture.

The first calf should be dropped when the heifer is about two years old.

Generally the more condensed and finished the products the more the profit.

If vermin bother the setting hen, try a few moth balls in the nesting material.

An even and proper temperature of the ground gives texture and solidity to the butter.

Poultry likes fresh straw now and then just as well as the cow likes to be well bedded.

Dairymen does not bring its best returns until it is made a business instead of a chore.

An abundance of sunlight is a great help in keeping poultry houses clean and fowls healthy.

The ambition to become rich and own a horse has kept many men poor all their lives.

(This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.)

Poultrymen of Mountain View, Cal., claim to have developed a breed of chickens that have red, white and blue feathers, and they call it the "Patriot."

The general trails and feeding habits as well as needs of chickens, ducks and geese are so different that it is quite impossible to get the best results from all three classes when they are housed in the same quarters.

A good idea of the returns that are at present being received by the owners of California grape ranches is shown in the receipt of $7,000 for the product of thirty acres of Thompson seedless by a grower living not far from Modesto.

It would be an interesting study to trace the causes of the deterioration of the human race from the time that the "Germans" of Caesar used to battle in the rivers in midwinter to the present, when many take soapbaths to bed with them when it is 10 above zero and have five quilts for a covering.

To prevent damage to orchard trees by the few rabbits that may have escaped gun or trap a few limbs of poplar or alder should be scattered on the runs where the rodents enter the orchard. They are fond of the bark of both of these and will usually strip it off before touching the trunk of the fruit trees.

At the southern corn show, which was held recently at Atlanta, Ga., the first prize for yield in the boys and girls corn growing club was awarded to a Miss Hyaline of Raymond, Coweta county, Ga., who is credited with having grown an average yield of 133 bushels per acre. The next best yield was secured by a boy who reported 130 bushels per acre.

Owing to their heavy natural coat of wool, breeding ewes do not require the same degree of protection during the winter as do brood sows, but their heavy shaggy coats are so arranged that they can have a dry bed in which to rest during the day and sleep at night and will be sheltered from direct winds and sleet or rains. If these conditions are provided they should be allowed to range at will during the day and will be much the better for the exercise which they get.

From figures recently published by the census bureau appear abundant reasons why turkeys for the grading of the Thanksgiving and Christmas tables have been from 20 to 25 cents a pound instead of from 12 to 18 cents, as used to be the case some years ago. These figures show that in 1910 there were 5,000,700 turkeys on the farms of the country, while in 1900 there were 6,004,005. If this movement should continue for another ten years we won't be able to touch a turkey with a ten foot pole.

The Colorado experiment station has tried a number of methods of exterminating prairie dogs and other grain eating pests and has found the following does the most satisfactory: To sixteen acres of corn or other small grain add one ounce of strychnine sulphate one teaspoonful of slup and one quart of boiling water. Stir the grain until all of it is moistened and then distribute in the places desired where poultry or other grain eating pests are at work. The same bait is excellent for pocket gophers, the grain being inserted in the runways.

It is a lamentable fact that 90% of all shoes sold for less than $4.00 contain substitutes for leather in the heels, counters and soles. You pay pure leather prices for this shoddy.

PORTLAND MARKET REPORT

North Portland, Ore., Oct. 17, 1913. Gentlemen: Receipts for the week have been: Cattle, 13,911; calves, 432; hogs, 3,515; sheep, 3,521; horses, 42. Optimism has ruled the cattle market this week and prices are five to ten cents higher than they were six days ago. Prime steers and cows were in demand and sold quickly. Best load of steers averaged $3.00 early in the week. Other top sales were $2.75 to $2.80 and $2.90 in small quantities. Hatcher stuff had a good outlet and buyers filled orders with some choice rows, bulls and steers. Bulk cow top was $5.50 and $5.75, with one load at $5.80. Steer range closed $7.50 at $7.75 and bulls $5.00 and $5.00. A slight flurry on Thursday eased prices off about a nickel but the stock offered was not extra choice. By and large the beef situation has been very favorable.

Portland's swine market can always be depended upon for surprises. It sprang a new one this week by advancing a full dime to $7.75 and this advance was made notwithstanding a total receipt as large as that of last week. Outlet has greater capabilities than the trade anticipated and the run was disposed of at sellers' prices. Swine weights were better also, and quality averaged high. Bulk of light swine sold at $25 to $26.55. Heavy weights $27.55 to $27.80.

Mutton buying was limited to ewes, as yearlings and old wethers were not offering. A strong ewe top at $3.00 was established and three full carcasses went over the scales at that figure. The lamb market was quiet to Wednesday and then set a new October record by going to $5.00 for an extra choice lot of Washington stock, representing the tail end of the 1913 lamb run from the Cascades. Bulk lamb top on average good grades is stand $5.00 to $5.25.

AFTER SCALP OF DIAMONDFIELD

Band of L. V. W. on Way to Salt Lake For His Scalp.

Butte, Mont., Oct. 18.—The band of sixteen Industrial Workers of the World were arrested in this city Friday and released amid shouts of "Socialists who filled the court room. The men later seized an Oregon Short Line box car, defying the train crew, and riding as far as Dillon, where they were clubbed out of the town after a battle with the officers. They are en route to Salt Lake for the purpose of "getting" Diamondfield Jack Davis, according to information which leaked out in Industrial Workers' circles here Friday.

Davis was assaulted by three workers here in a store in broad daylight about a month ago, shot through the jaw, but not before he had seriously
