WOULD UNIFY COMM'L CLUBS

Idaho Fair Association

The coming convention of the League of Commercial Clubs at Boise, is expected to be the start of a strong movement to unify the commercial bodies of this state. R. C. Beach of Lewiston, and president of the Idaho Department store of the city, is the prime mover in the plan and is giving much of his time traveling about the state attempting to interest the various sections. The following letter received by the secretary of the Commercial club, shows what is being attempted in the matter.

Lewiston, Idaho, Oct. 24, 1913.

To the Secretary,
Dear Sir: I am taking the liberty of addressing your committee through you as I will not have time to meet with you personally before the convening of the state convention of the League of Commercial Clubs at Boise November 6 and 7. I am at present visiting the clubs of north Idaho—I have confined my personal efforts to the north because of the long distance to Boise. I think it is necessary to raise our influence in order to get them to join our central club. Several of them I myself have had splendid meetings, finding the people in a receptive mood and very much interested in the League. The State League was organized a little over a year ago at Boise, but only five clubs joined—Moscow, Lewiston, Boise, Pocatello, and Homedale. The dues received were but $85.00. Mr. R. W. Childs, exhibited splendid public spirit when he donated his services as secretary for the year and has been very efficient and painstaking. Even with this small nucleus we felt the weight of co-operation and it was the League which was largely instrumental in getting our exhibition appropriation and which has given us to Mayor Rouse a lucrative commission. I think it is today receiving the benefit of his experience and ability as an infiltration commissioner, although no money was appropriated for the office.

Probably the largest work of the League last year was its activity in assisting to raise a quarantined and great saving to Idaho, but to be successful the coming year we must have larger co-operation and take up the larger business questions pertaining to Idaho's welfare.

The State League is absolutely non-political and non-partisan. It is to combine the active and practical business brains in the state into a single organization which may, at all times, point the way to practical action in state legislation. We desire to maintain a bureau at Boise during the session of the legislature, to examine proposed bills, and when inexperienced members propose legislation that would work a hardship on the business interests, to point the way away or prevent capital from coming into the state, this bureau would inform the member to the state, for their consideration, and they then could memorialize their senators and representatives and let them know the truest and wisest will of their constituents, which is what every representative of the people most desires, and in this way the bureau of the state will be acting as a unit.

As we have the active assistance of the press, which I consider the greatest power for the people, we can get the whole people of the state thinking on state matters. If our constitution is to be amended, we can conduct a campaign of education in order that the people may vote intelligently on so important a matter. We can show the next legislature the many laws which it will repeal, the best interests of our state to be repealed or amended. These laws will be brought before the next state convention November 6 and 7. Also at this convention, we would like each delegate sent to have his ideas as to the needs of his section or the state at large well defined, as it is our desire to bring out the things most needed in Idaho, in advance of the legislature, so that when the legislature meets, we will be able to present the state, so that when the men are sent to Boise to represent us they will have a clear idea of the needs and advance knowledge of the bills to be acted on. No legislation on earth can come together and in two months give intelligent consideration to so many different bills. I am told there were 760 bills introduced in the last legislature. To say so much legislation at a state body was an agitate and back up all proper activity looking toward the completion of a north and south Idaho fair and a great Pan-Pacific exhibit at the Great Falls-Pacific electric exposition. In my mind there is no limit to the good we can do. If we work unselfishly for the interests of the great state which has done so much for us.

We earnestly request that your commercial club be represented at Boise November 6 and 7 and that you join the League for the ensuing year. Let us get all of Idaho united and working for the common good.

Respectfully yours,

R. C. BEACH, President.

POWER COMPANY ENTERING FIELD

Will Employ About One Hundred Men

IDAHO LIGHT AND POWER COMPANY SHIP MATERIAL.

Representative States That Only Three Months Time is Needed to Supply Power.

D. C. Brown, construction superintendent and H. C. Waters, general manager of the Idaho Light & Power Company, which succeeded to the Beaver River power company franchise, arrived in this city the first of the week to look after the rights of way into the city and look after the erection of poles within the city limits. Several car loads of poles and cross arms are on the way here and the company expects to employ from fifty to one hundred men for the next few months. Mr. Brown stated to the Times that in three months they could supply power to the city. The franchise was given out by Mr. Brown. Above the company's plant at Malad river the company is at present putting in a wooden flume one mile long which will increase by diversion the present power plant's capacity by 16,000 horse power.

The transmission line from their plant will tap a number of towns in coming to this city via Ruhl, but the exact location of the right way will depend largely upon the terms made by the company by ranchers and property owners.

Some of the attractions are new to this city, but every one who has heard of them will be glad to hear the praise both by the Lyceum bureau and by the press in cities they have appeared.

HAGENBECK-WALLACE SHOWS

At the Idaho Beginning Monday Evening, November 3.

The pictures on the billboard appear out of place with the coming of winter, but the circus that is now being advertised in Twin Falls is to be the first of the season. The first performance will start at 7:15 p. m. sharp Monday at the Idaho theatre.

Every detail of modern circus life with the great Hagenbeck-Wallace shows combined will be shown, starting with the arrival in town of the first advertising parade. The performance itself is exceptionally clear and brilliant, having been taken on a Sunday morning last July when the sun was shining at 5:00 in the morning. The pictures might be no flickering shadows in any of the photography.

The pictures are surprising for they are exceptionally well tinted and colored in natural colors and have been pronounced by the visiting film trade journals as among the best ever turned out in any country. The cost of production was enormous and the Idaho theatre is to be congratulated for advertising them, a corps of advance men being carried the same as with a circus and in addition, operators, mechanics, ticket sellers, etc.

CONCRETE NORTH SIDE CANAL

William McGinnis, of Jerome, Idaho, is in this city for a day or two, a guest at the Milner hotel. He is here today to discuss the plans for the concrete canal between Milner and Jerome which is to be built by the Idaho Power company. The plan is to build a concrete canal between Milner and Jerome which is to be built by the Idaho Power company. The plan is to build a concrete canal between Milner and Jerome which is to be built by the Idaho Power company.

The work will cost a great amount of money, but it will be worth it to the farmers of the country. No concrete canals have been announced as yet in connection with the work, but Slick Brothers, irrigation contractors, have had plans for the canal for several days looking over the ditch. ### 20TH CENTURY CLUB NOTES

Women's Club of City Covering Wide Scope of Work.

The program for next Tuesday at the club promises to be one of unusual interest to all progressive club women. The legislative committee has this program in charge. Two prominent lawyers have been secured to address the club upon subjects of universal interest.

Women are wide awake to the importance of knowing what laws have been passed that affect women and children, what bills failed to pass at the last legislature, and why, what will be presented at the next legislature. It is also important to know how well these laws are enforced in the different localities.

Women have labored long and suffered much for the right of equal suffrage, but there are many women, having come up residents in this state, who have had suffrage thrust upon them as it were, without previously giving the matter much consideration. These are now carefully studying the subject of legislation, and are becoming informed about all these things.

The following program, to be given Nov. 1 at the Masonic hall, is one of compelling interest:

Legislative Day, Mattie Beatty, leader. Piano Solo—Miss Conover. What effect politics will have in the home provided women take up the ballot, will the better class of women take up the ballot?—E. L. Ashton.

Reading—Miss Carmen Cox. How should the laws passed the last legislature regarding women and children be changed to better them, and what laws now pending should be passed?—C. M. Jordan.

Solo—Miss Graham. The music department met Tuesday afternoon at the Masonic hall.

Mrs. Kenneth has secured the position of musical director in the music department. The subject for the afternoon program was given:

Piano solo, "My Sweet Repose" (Liszt). Mrs. Carlson. Piano, "German March"—Mrs. B. A. Baker.

Quartette, "Forget Me Not" (Giesse). Mrs. Kenneth, Mrs. Willey, Mrs. Crozier, Mrs. Bowen.

Piano duet, "Polka de Concert"—Edith Ramey, Barbara McShane. All club members are cordially welcomed to these programs. The music department is planning to give a series of social and musical entertainments during the coming winter months. The first of the series will be given about the middle of November, at the home of Mrs. Kenneth.

Announcements. The history and literature department will meet at the home of Mrs. Bradley on Eighth avenue East, Friday afternoon, Oct. 31, at 2:30 o'clock.

The household economics department will meet at the Masonic hall dining room on Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 4, at 2:30 o'clock.

The current events department will meet at the Masonic hall dining room Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 12, at 2:30 o'clock.

BAD CHECK ARTIST MAKES BIG HAUL

Seven Checks for Twenty-five Dollars Passed

CHECKS FOUND TO BE ALL ALIKE IN SEVEN STORES.

Cook Takes Advantage of Closeness of Banks Saturday Afternoon.

Seven business men of this city concentrated the highway fund in this state, a check artist Saturday, came to the tune of twenty-five dollars in cash and goods. At each place the same money was used in buying a small bill of goods and then produce the check, made payable to Carl Hayden, and bearing the signature of Harrison. All seven checks were numbered 27, which was probably the mistake of the artist who meant 23, for he promised that when he turned before the checks could be turned down by the banks on Monday. The checks all were payable to Carl Hayden and all carried by the same man. In one store where the check was questioned slightly, the man bearing the appearance of a laborer, stated that he had worked in the potato field of Bergeron and stated that his ranch was located near here. His story was so straightforward that it was taken as the truth. Inquiry revealed the fact that no such rancher existed in the local country when the checks were turned upon—which they were drawn.

While the description of the stranger is being given, the owner of the store has been no trace of him so far.

KILLING AT MUD LAKE

Lewistown Man Meets Death in Gun Fight.

St. Anthony, Oct. 28.—Another chapter has been added to the history of crime in the sparsely settled Mud Lake country by the execution of a man by the name of Fremont county. Shortly before 6 o'clock this morning the county officials were notified of the killing of Samuel Thomas, of Lewistown, in this county, at an early hour near the western end of the Mud Lake section, in a quarrel over the possession of a band of range horses claimed by Billy Williams, a resident of Mud Lake.

It was reported that a short time ago Williams executed a bill of sale to Thomas for the band of horses in order to defeat the claims of creditors. The horses were afterward stolen or disappeared from the range, and when they returned they were taken into the hands of Thomas, who refused to give them up.

Williams, in company with his brother Joe Williams and a brother-in-law, Moss Johnson, took the horses to Thomas and demanded the return of the horses and in the general shooting across which followed Thomas was killed. The bodies of the three men died the shooting is not known. All three are reported to have been shot in the back.

A case is now pending in the district court of this county charging Joe Williams, one of the three men in custody, with grand larceny.

It is reported that the district in the county from the control of the officers of the law, and it is known that many of the residents of that section carry a scientifically equipped arsenal for some of their neighbors.

A well defined beat has been in progress under cover for some time, and it is known that Beat 10 has the most engagement. The shooting occurred near the Livemore ranch, in the vicinity of Bonanza, located on the west end of the range between Pocatello and Tubb.

AT THE ORPHEUM

DEMAND THIS LABEL

On all of Your Purchased Matter. It represents Good Workmanship, Good Wages, and Good Conditions.

England's claim of friendliness to the United States in face of the pernicious activity of her Mexican ambassador, cannot be taken at par value. The recall of that active gentleman would be most pleasing to this country, and show much stronger than words the friendship so long professed. England's aggressive commercial policy has been the cause of much of her anxiety, not only about Mexico and this country, but about the United States. Panama canal policy and taken altogether does not look like anything but the selfish policy that England as a mother country exercised toward the states as a colony. England's friendship seems to have a very visible string to it.

The commercial revival planned for the early part of November is to be hoped, will do a work badly needed in this city and county. The boosters are here and the number has been added to largely by boosters from other communities. There is force enough in this city to make it the most heralded city in the United States as it was known formerly. All that is needed to get results is to get unity of action. If Mr. Irving can accomplish this in his week's visit to the city, he will be considered a noble benefactor. To face facts squarely, the boosting element of Twin Falls is split up into little factions which do nothing more than to abrogate and nullify the activity of the other faction until nothing can be done. Such situation was most apparent the past summer in the loss of the annual fair and other projects that would benefit the city and tract. Let's get together at the time of Mr. Irving's visit and show that Twin Falls citizenry still has the push that builds cities.

The cause with which the merchants here were atting last Saturday had been checked, though awaken the entire business element to the present conditions within this city. So much business has been done by checks that all business men have become calloused and indifferent to the handling of checks of entire strangers. The result of last Saturday will be repeated time after time unless the business men unite in a concerted effort to stop the "footloose" habit of honoring stranger's checks. The real reason for such practice is the fear of business getting away and each business house is jealous to keep and not more customers. But the business men here will have to learn that people with checks instead of money are really asking favors in getting them cashed and are for the most part responsible about the need for caution on the part of the merchant. Such caution really helps both in the long run, for it protects the check as a medium of exchange. On the other hand had the check artist will seek other climes if he learns that the business men are cautious about taking checks.

DO STRIKES PAY?

The strike of the "dockers" in Dublin which not only paralyzed industry in the Irish capital, but brought hundreds of families to the brink of starvation, was the occasion of a remarkable demonstration of practical sympathy on the part of English workers.

The steamer Lure was chartered at Manchester, loaded with food and dispatched to Ireland to supply the needs of the hungry dependents of those who had left off work at the dictation of the labor leader, Mr. James Larkin. His name, by the way, has given rise to the use of a new word, "Larkinism," and his side weapon against capitalists, declares the London Tablet, consists in "wild and revolutionary appeals" to the populace. The incident of the Lure's dispatch and arrival was thus picturesque related in Justice (London), which professes to be the organ of Social Democracy: "The most striking event of the week to the world of labor has been the departure of the ship Lure from Manchester last Friday. She left with a cargo of food to the value of £5,000 obtained by the parliamentary committee of the Trade-Union Congress from the Cooperative Wholesale Society at Manchester. For three days before the Lure, who had been on strike, had been working as hard as they could to load the vessel at the Pomona docks with the 60,000 food parcels for the docked-out men at Dublin and their wives and families. "The Lure arrived at the South Quay, Dublin, a little before two o'clock on the Saturday afternoon. She had been delayed by fog in the voyage down the Manchester ship canal and across St. George's Channel. But when she did arrive what a sight it was! The ship was fully decorated with flags and streamers; she was welcomed by the blowing of air guns and the ringing of bells—the quayside was black with thousands of men, women, and children who had gathered to watch her coming, and who sang and cheered and cheered and sang until their throats must have been hoarse. From Messrs. Harcourt & Company's mill on the canal bank a group of men were waving hands, and one of them pulled out a red handkerchief, at which more cheering went up. It need scarcely be said that that red handkerchief was taken as a symbol of the red flag."

The terrible suffering and riots which have made this recent Dublin strike so black a chapter in British industrial history have elicited from several specialists their opinion on the expediency or profit of such demonstrations on the part of labor of strongly entrenched capital. Their arguments apply to labor was everywhere, here as well as in England. Mr. W. J. Davis, president of the recent Trade-Union Congress, says in the London Morning Post that the employers, and the workers, are to blame for strikes, and that the Port is the victim of wealth and aristocracy, his message goes to the ones he aims to reach. As he puts it:

"Trade-unionism took its rise more from the employer than the labor leader. It came from the unjust employers, who, not satisfied with unfair conditions, placed indignity after indignity on the worker until one of their number had the pluck to rebel, and who, by the timid miming of the oppressed, was secretly proclaimed a leader. By common consent of the employers, and as they or their friends made and administered the laws, he was persecuted. The persecution, however, instead of annihilating the leader, produced leaders. "The 'down-to' action may be a mistake, and it is, employers are as much responsible for its adoption as the officials of trade societies.

"Instead of heading to a bargain, they often by diverse means set off men for no other reason than to set on cheaper labor. Many of them are unfriendly to any form of industrial combination and openly and tacitly approve a manager, and especially a working foreman, who coerces men out of their various unions. This is why the 'down-to' policy is so rife with men who are either not members of a trade-union, or who have been members for only a few weeks. This policy is in many instances a great mistake, as strikes do both harm to commerce and cause much ill-feeling between not only employers and workmen, but between workmen and workmen.

"Strikes do not pay," says Mr. Philip Snowden, an earnest advocate of labor's right, a brilliant journalist and lecturer, whose voice is frequently heard in the House of Commons pleading the cause of the proletariat. To quote from his article in the same paper:

"The do not pay the workmen; they do not pay the community; the employers are the only party who can be said in any way to gain by them. They have powers in their hands by which they can speedily more than recoup themselves for any temporary loss a strike may inflict upon them.

"The irresponsible section of the trade-unions today exercise an influence altogether beyond their numbers. They are mainly responsible for the strikes which have taken place in the last two years. . . .

"The first lesson to learn is that the strike is not a means by which any substantial and permanent improvement in the lot of labor can be secured. The second matter arising out of modern economic developments is that the public are now a third party to every big strike, and their interests are quite as important as those of the other two parties. The trade-unions will have to accept this fact. After all, the community is bigger than organized labor, and it is a mistake for trade-unionists to suppose that the methods for dealing with labor disputes and the regulation of wages will be just what they desire them to be."

Writing of the "sympathetic strike" as promulgated by a "cane of brotherhood among workmen," an un-fish readiness to run risks "for men in another trade." Prof. W. J. Ashley, Dean of the Faculty of Commerce, Birmingham University, acknowledges that these are "sentiments in themselves fine and noble," but he continues in his article in the London Daily News:

"It would be too much to expect the employers affected to see it in this light; but it is important that the public should realize this aspect of the matter. Modern condemnation of sympathetic strikes is worse than wasted; it does but strengthen them in their principles; and the abused idealist is apt to become a fanatic.

"In the first place, the sympathetic strike is usually unsuccessful. And this for several reasons. Unless the prevalence of the official strikers can be presented vividly and effectively to the public, a sympathetic strike is pretty certain to be unpopular. Moreover, a sympathetic strike is exceedingly difficult to make effective on a large scale. The less enthusiastic of the members of the union, and especially the middle-aged men with families, will be slow to come out and quick to go back. And under modern conditions there are often so many alternative commodities and ways of getting things done, that little inconvenience occasioned by the temporary lessening of some particular service, that it is nothing like so easy to alarm the public as the inexperienced suppose. And, in the second place, the sympathetic strike is, broadly speaking, incompatible with collective bargaining—the policy by which trade-unions have gained most in the past, and are likely to gain most in the future."—Literary Digest.

Danah and Balaam: Num. xxiii-xxiv:10.

Golden Text—A double minded man is unstable in all his ways. Jas. 1:8.

(1) Verses 1-4—Where were the Israelites at this time?

(2) What made King Balak and his people, the Moabites, so much afraid of Israel?

(3) What had been the success of Israel in overcoming the opposition to their march to the promised land of Canaan?

(4) How do you justify Israel for killing all those who objected to their marching through their lands?

(5) Verses 5-7—When Balak said that there was but little chance of his overcoming Israel with physical force, what was his character?

(6) Has any person ever been able to either help or hurt another by mental influence?

(7) Why would you say or not that the old wizards and witches, or any other persons, could help or hurt others by mental influence?

(8) What is the difference between a so-called "new thought" people, who claim they can mentally "treat" the sick or unwell, and bring to them health, or prosperity, and the old time wizard? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

(9) Would you say or not that Balaam possessed the power which Balak thought? Why?

(10) Verses 8-14—Can a man be other than good and true, who, before making a promise, gets directions from God? Why?

(11) Would you say that revelations from God in these days were confined to the Israelites, or in these days to the people called Christians? Why?

(12) On what ground did Balaam refuse to curse the Israelites?

(13) Verses 15-18—What useful lesson is there in Balaam's persistence, who, notwithstanding Balaam's promise, pressed him again with a prayer appeal than the first time?

(14) What effect did the offer of a big bribe have upon Balaam?

(15) Having had from God a definite answer to his question, ought Balaam to have consulted him again? Give your reasons.

(16) Why did God conditionally permit Balaam to go with these men, seeing that was not his first best plan?

(17) Verses 19-20—What was there in Balaam's action which merited the anger of God?

(18) Would you say that this story of the ass, speaking to Balaam, is an allegory, or an allusion, or a dream?

(19) Verses 21-25—When a man's preferences are opposed to God's will, and that has blinded his eyes so he does not see God as opposing him, is he as guilty as if he did see?

(20) Verses 26-31—Balaam, in his refusal to curse the Israelites, claims that promotion is "honored" as the chief thing. "Wherein was he wrong?"

(21) Chapter xxiii:1-10—If we are intent on doing wrong what does prayer, or any religious ceremony avail?

(22) "If God be for us who can be against us?"

MY TRIP FROM THE EAST

In traveling from my former home in southeastern Iowa to Twin Falls, I decided to go by the way of Denver, because of the beautiful scenery which is passed along this route.

I timed my departure from Burlington to be due to arrive and leave Denver in the morning; for it is just beyond Denver that the beauty of the trip lay.

My train was in two sections owing to heavy passenger traffic, and I had a time trying to get a berth. We waited for a birth reservation twice and then I had to get off my train at Hastings, Neb., in the night without the assurance of getting one.

As I waited for the second section, which was due in a few minutes, an eastbound train came in. It was very long. There was music and the engine made so much noise in switching that my own train pulled up beyond this one, on a side track and left without my knowledge. I knew there was some confusion on the other side of the train, but I never dreamed this train would sneak out without giving passengers a chance to get on. I afterwards learned many passengers got left there. One came out and said, "I left fourteen years ago."

This spoiled my schedule from Denver. I had stayed all night in Burlington and taken a slower train in order to leave at the most desirable time. But I would not give up my plans, and decided to leave Denver on schedule time just twenty-four hours later.

As we entered Colorado the effect of the altitude was noticeable. The air is pure and light. The average pressure or gravitation of fifteen pounds of air to the square inch of weight on our bodies, is greatly lessened here, and the feeling of weariness of our trip is gone because of it. We feel lighter on our feet—the "dancing fever" gets in the blood.

As we left Denver we are one mile high. The scenic conductor goes with us now for the entire day and points out the interesting and important views along the route.

My first glimpse of the mountains were snowy mountains, topped by perfect snow, and were in view as we left Denver. I must admit that my first view of mountains was one of disappointment. Very often the sunsets and the moonsets are more beautiful than that. Within two hours we reached Palmer Lake, a small lake in the mountains at the divide and heading of the Arkansas and La Platte rivers. It is a summer resort with an altitude of 7,247 feet.

Just before reaching Colorado Springs we have the best view of Pike's Peak, ten miles away. One of the noted high mountains of North America, it stands at an altitude of 14,093 feet. This mountain was not covered with snow, but there was snow in the crevices.

We passed delightful scenery in that vicinity. We saw some of the grotesque shaped rocks belonging to the famous "Garden of the Gods."

At Canyon City we all made a dash for the observatory cars for there we entered the Grand Canyon of the Arkansas. The scenic conductor came on board and along with him a guide called out "Get your eyes abridge, you will have to have them to keep the cinders out of your eyes. Only cost your eyes—now we are over the divide and see the beautiful scenery."

As there was no disappointment, as we went along the divide of the little mountain stream and saw the mountains rise up out of the Royal Gorge, several thousand feet above us. Not only was the precipitous on the side of us, but the turbulent stream twisted from side to side as abruptly that the walls would also rise directly ahead and behind us. We seemed to be in the very bowels of the earth.

At one turn I counted the coaches. There were ten and two observatories. And every coach was full.

Our attention was called to the "Hanging Rock," a great shelf of rock hanging directly over us as we rushed along. As we were passing over the famous "Hanging bridge," the conductor called, "Now turn to your right, quick and see the 'Devil's Gap,' where the lightning tore the mountain apart." He pointed out the highest pinnacle of the canyon—three thousand feet above us, and many other points of interest. Surely such a grandeur can never be forgotten. How pitifully small is man's best efforts in comparison with God's handiwork, as shown in the beauties of nature.

Just before dark we passed Mount Massive, 14,424 feet, the highest mountain in the state; and then the three peaks of the Collegiate range—Mt. Harvard, Yale and Princeton; all a trifle higher than Pike's Peak.

These were all covered with snow and were splendid. Mt. Princeton was decidedly the most beautiful mountain we passed. We began then to climb the Continental or Rocky Mountain Divide and soon after dark passed Leadville, Colo., the highest-mining town in the world, having an altitude of 10,200 feet.

A few miles beyond we go through the divide. It is pierced by a tunnel, called the Tennessee Pass, several miles long. It is at an altitude of 10,418 feet, about two miles high. It is also called "The Top of the World."

We notice the change as we climbed the ascent. The air was so cold we shivered even though we had on our coats. But I felt no other inconvenience. The heart and lungs worked as usual, but the air everywhere in the mountains is so fresh and pure, it imparts deep, joyous breathing. It was as if water after having drunk impurities all our life.

Owing to darkness we missed the "Mouth of the Holy Cross." This mountain is near Leadville, and has the cross inscribed by nature on its side, near the summit.

We reached Salt Lake City the next day in the afternoon. I was very desirous of seeing Great Salt Lake, but found to my disappointment that the next train for the lake—the three-day coaches had just gone. Salt Lake is fifteen miles from the city and a day runs to it. The reason for bathing in the lake is that the water is six times saltier than the ocean. In fact it is so salty that everyone can swim. They cannot sink.

The danger comes of strangulation from the brine. I visited the Mormon Temple, Tabernacle and Assembly hall. These are all enclosed in a tall acre lot, called the Temple Square. The Temple is a beautiful gray-white granite building 184,299 feet. It cost $4,000,000 and required forty years to complete. The Assembly hall is darker in color and smaller. The Tabernacle is an odd shaped building very large and low, somewhat resembling a turtle, and has a seating capacity of 10,000. There is not a nail in the entire structure. A convention was in progress when I visited the Tabernacle.

I went in and heard their organ, one of the largest in the world. It has 5500 pipes, some 32 feet long. It has 185 stops, and capacity of 400 tonal variations.

There is a hotel across the street from the Temple, that is, the magnificent. It is very large, pure white in color and would attract attention anywhere. The Temple grounds and the wide streets make an attractive city.

After leaving Salt Lake City we continued to have excellent views. The mountains always loomed up in some direction. The mountains are beautiful when their tops are covered with a swirling mass of clouds. It brought to memory that Scripture describing the smoking of Mount Sinai, when the Lord gave to mankind the ten commandments.

As we reached and entered the rugged surface gave way to more level ground; either barren or covered with sage brush. And as we traveled miles we saw land and only a shack for a house here and there, with a little spot of cultivation. I felt discouraged and heart sick. I wanted to take the next train back. In Iowa there is scarcely a foot of waste land. But when we reached the Twin Falls district all was changed. It seemed that darkness had suddenly changed to the brightness of noon-time.

We saw horticulture and agriculture productions that, nearly as I love my own state, I must confess puts Iowa completely in the shade. Wherever the apples were not harvested, we found a phenomenal crop. And trees that would have been too young for fruitage in the east, were bending with their load. And stacks of alfalfa from plots of ground that, honestly, did not look large enough to keep a cow.

This was not a mile or two of such great productiveness, but we traveled through miles of such country. Before leaving my home in Morning Sun for the west, I took a steamer for an excursion down the Mississippi river, to see the world wide renova Power plants, dam and lock at Keokuk, Iowa. This power plant when completed will be the largest ever built, having 250,000 horse power. The dam across the Mississippi river in the big gorge, at its kind in the world. The lock which the government required built, is higher than those of the Panama canal.

The Gatun lock at Panama is a wonderful engineering achievement of its kind, yet the Keokuk lock is just as wide, (110 feet) and has a cut of forty feet, whereas the lift at Panama is twenty-eight feet and four inches.

As we steamed into the lock we discussed the method of the upper gate closing. It was not anywhere in sight, but presently as we watched it slowly rose up out of the water like a huge monster, operated by compressed air. With the closing of the gate the water in the lock rapidly sank down, lowering us to the level of the river below the dam, and then we realized from the exposed walls more fully the greatness of the work.

The lower gates are monstrous. In their greatness, and weigh about one and one-half million pounds. The gates are of steel and two in number. They swing on ball bearings, hinges and notwithstanding their enormous weight, so perfectly do they work that a man with a crow bar can move them.

The dry-dock is large enough to accommodate all the steamers on the upper Mississippi. We have thoroughly enjoyed my entire trip. And I find the people in the west very kind and sociable.

ERADICATION OF INJURIOUS SHEEP TICK

Dipping Sheep on Western Ranch.

(By LEROY D. SWINGLE.)

The sheep tick is one of the worst enemies that the sheep raiser has to meet. The damage that it does is accomplished slowly, silently and continuously. For this reason the damage may not be noticed or thought to be of much consequence. Nevertheless, in the course of a year, constantly pestering its host by its blood-sucking habit, the sheep tick can effect a large amount of damage, which, however, is hard to estimate. If it should require but ten cents worth of grain more to raise and fatten a ticky lamb than one without ticks, the damage done in a flock of 10,000 is $1,000. This is worth considering. The fact is that the damage is more than ten cents per sheep when the effect on the wool is added. Therefore, laying aside our moral duty to ally the suffering of the suffering brute, there is a potent financial reason for destroying the sheep tick. For determining intelligent methods of destroying the tick it was necessary to discover the details of its life history.

The life history is divided into four stages: the egg, the larva, the pupa, and the imago, or fully developed tick. This is the stage that is common to everyone. The egg is not laid in the case with most flies. After fertilization it remains in the uterus of the mother and develops into a larva, which is laid in the wool of the sheep. This larva changes into the pupa stage about 12 hours after it is laid. When first laid it is covered with a white chitinous membrane which soon becomes brown and hard. For convenience, I shall include in the pupa stage that portion of the larva stage which passed outside of the tick and shall speak of the tick as laying a pupa. Most people call the pupa an egg.

From the standpoint of the eradication of the tick the incubation period of the pupa, i. e., the time elapsing between the laying and the hatching, is the most important. None of the sheep dips will kill all the pupae, because more than one dipping is necessary. The last dipping must occur after all of the pupae have hatched. It was found that pupae would hatch in from 19 to 23 days in warm weather. In cold weather the incubation period might be much longer, sometimes 25 days being required. Thus the last dipping in summer must be at least 23 days after the first in order to kill all the ticks after they have hatched. In autumn or spring the last dipping should be made not later than 25 to 28 days after the first.

The question of next importance is how old must a tick be before it lays its first pupa? Experiments indicate that ticks may lay their first pupa within two weeks after hatching. This means that a young tick hatching soon after the first dipping may reach sexual maturity and lay its first pupa before the last of the other pupae on the sheep have hatched. Theoretically, it would be necessary, in order to prevent this, to make another dipping about two weeks after the first. Three dippings placed two weeks apart are certain to eradicate the tick. If the proper dip is used. There are, however, certain other factors that make it unnecessary to use three dippings, two being sufficient. These should be placed about 25 to 28 days apart in such weather as occurs in September. It is difficult to determine which is the best dip to use, some being better than others. Among the coal tar dips there are several that may be mentioned as effective.

It should be remarked that sheep and lambs with short wool should be left in the dip longer than those with long wool, on account of their drying more quickly.

The best time to dip is probably in the autumn. The chief reason for advising dipping in the fall is that the wool on the lambs and sheep will be grown out so as to retain more dip. This makes the killing of the ticks more certain. If they are carefully dipped then the flock will be rid of the ticks and no dipping will be needed thereafter. The result will be that the next crop of lambs will be free from ticks from the first.

The sheep tick once eradicated will not return to the flock unless they associate with other ticky sheep. The sheep tick will not live but a few days, generally not over three or four, of the sheep. In this respect it differs from the true tick, which may be picked up by the host in the brush. The sheep tick's whole life is spent on the sheep. The pupae will, however, hatch even if they are kept off the sheep during the whole incubation period. It is therefore important to keep the sheep after dipping away from the short wool for at least a month. Young ticks will be hatching out in the short wool for three or four weeks after shearing.

It is hardly necessary to mention the fact that the attendants should not come in contact with the undipped sheep and then associate with the dipped flock.

LESS DOGS MEANS
MANY MORE SHEEP

One Big Detriment to Animal Industry Is Large Increase in Worthless Curs.

I cannot concede, all things considered, says Secretary Coburn of Kansas in a recent address, that the Archipelago of the Universe made on this round world of ours an equal area better adapted than Kansas to profit the sheep industry. The one detriment is worthless dogs, who also the way we raise to the opportunity with a kind Providence confronts us. In 1883 we had 806,000 sheep; in 1910 we had 176,000, a decrease of more than 78 per cent; in 1883 we had 29,000 dogs; in 1910 we had 129,000, an increase of about 64 per cent. These figures line with the experience of all the ages, which points out that no people whose land owners neglect animal husbandry, who also neglect the manure spreader, expectate upon a sheep and defy the dog, can have any considerable well grounded, permanent prosperity.

Keep Stock Growing.

Do not let the stock stop growing or producing milk during the fall, for lack of food or from exposure. Any loss sustained will be again made up in great expense of feed, or not at all. Keep the stock comfortable by supplying them with shelter from bad weather and see that they have plenty to eat.

GOOD DEMAND FOR HIGH-CLASS HORSES

Insistent Call for Draft Animals Cannot Be Supplied—Mare Is Profitable.

(By H. G. GARDNER.)

There is an insistent market demand for high-class horses, especially for draft horses, that cannot be supplied. On the other hand, the country is flooded with common ordinary "plugs" of horses. The demand for the high-class is insistent, and the demand for the very low and profit-killing plugs for which they must sell. This insistent demand for high-class draft horses does not come from the market alone. There also comes a demand from the farm, for this is a day of heavy machinery, demanding and increased amount of motive power. Experience has proven that the most satisfactory and economical form of motive power on the average farm is the heavy, sound draft mare. Besides doing most of the farm work she will raise a valuable colt each year. If properly handled, this mare is constantly producing a profit. The mare does the work she does. The gelding or male will not do this and in these days of high-priced lands, feeds, and labor this proposition is worthy of careful consideration.

HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT

ROAD IN RURAL COMMUNITIES

Ever Recurring Problem of Unkeep Can, in Large Measure, Be Solved by Use of Road Drag.

(BY R. H. FLINT, University Farm, St. Paul, Minn.)

Because of its cheapness the earth road is, for many years to come, will continue to be, the most common form of road in use in rural communities. The ever recurring problem of upkeep on such roads can, in a large measure, be solved by the use of the so-called split-log drag, which can be constructed as shown in the accompanying picture by any one who has suitable material at hand. A log is not necessary, or perhaps not desirable for its construction. Choose four pieces of plank of some strong wood, such as elm or red fir, two inches thick and eight feet long. Two of them should be ten or twelve inches in width, but the other two may be narrower as shown in the picture, since they are simply bolted to the backs of the wider planks for reinforcement. If planks three and a half or four inches thick can be obtained, a single thickness of them should be used, instead of building up as shown in the cut. In any case, the drag can be put together with round poles wedged into auger holes as shown, or the crosspieces may be set in with mortise and tenon joints and kept tight by long bolts reaching through the front and back planks.

A piece of iron about three and one-half feet long, three or four inches wide and one-fourth of an inch thick should be used for a blade. By means of bolting with flat counter-sunk heads, this blade should be attached to the front plank in such a manner that its edge will project a half-inch below the plank at the ditch end, while the end of the iron toward the middle of the road should be flush with the edge of the plank. If the face of the plank stands plumb it will be well to wedge out the bottom of the iron with a wedge-shaped piece of wood to give the iron a set similar to that of a plane bit.

A platform of such boards elevated together, with cracks an inch wide between the boards to prevent dirt from collecting on top, is placed on the cross-pieces of the drag to furnish a platform for the driver. This platform should rest upon the cross-pieces between the planks without being fastened to the planks. It is not shown in the illustration.

Any chain having the strength of a trace chain may be used to draw the drag and should be attached as shown in the picture, but the proper position for attaching the double-ends must be determined by experiment and will vary with the kind of work done. The chain should be about nine feet long for a drag of the size shown in the cut and should have the eye for the clevis put in about three feet from the end. The chain attaches by means of an eyebolt, as shown in the picture, to the ditch or blade end of the drag. The other end of the chain should finish with a grabhook for use in adjusting the length of the hitch after the chain is passed around the cross-piece at the road end of the drag.

Commonly the drag should follow the team at an angle of about forty-five degrees with their line of travel, to leave the dirt to move steadily and truly along the faces of the planks from the ditch toward the center of the road. In every case the angle at which the drag will travel can be governed by the position of the hitch, which is changed within reasonable limits by loosening or tightening the chain, and by the position of the driver on the drag. A very little experience will enable anyone to adjust these things satisfactorily.

To Clean Plumage.
The plumage of a fowl can be cleaned of dirt by washing with a clean white or transparent soap that is free from much alkali. Make a strong lather and use your hand feather downward, from the head to the tail.

Abuse of Roads.
Using the roadside for a "public dump" and filling the ditches with refuse material doesn't help appearance any, nor does it help to solve the drainage problem in the maintenance of roads.

Takes Out Wrinkles.
If you are riding a swiftly moving vehicle, like an automobile, you can easily tell whether the road has been dragged or not—dragging takes out all the "wrinkles."

SENATOR BRADY HONORED

Invited to Deliver Address Before Commercial Congress in Mobile.

(Special Correspondence.) Senator Brady highly honored. Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—Senator Brady is in receipt of a request to deliver an address on the subject of "Trans-Mississippi Territory in its relation to the Panama Canal," at the 1913 annual convention of the southern commercial congress which is to be held in Mobile, Alabama, on October 29-30.

The convention comes soon after the opening of the Panama canal and the theme of the collection will be the relation of the United States to the canal, to Latin America, and to world commerce. Many of the distinguished men of the nation, as well as from the Latin American countries, will participate in the program. From Mobile, a large delegation will go to the canal zone and there dedicate a memorial to the late Senator John T. Morgan, of Alabama, who was the father of the isthmian canal project by the American government, and who worked twelve years for the passage of the required legislation. From the canal fifty representative business men will visit the Latin American countries for the purpose of establishing more practical trade relations between those countries and our states.

The Pan-American commercial conference held every two years under the auspices of the Pan-American Union has been postponed and decision made to co-operate with the southern commercial congress in making the convention a marked success. Delegates will be present from all Latin American countries. Senator Brady regrets that he will not be able to attend this convention owing to the complicated condition of affairs in the senate which requires his presence at Washington.

Smith Desires More Money for the Jerome Experimental Station. Congressman Smith, in an interview with the secretary of agriculture urged that he recommend in the estimate for appropriations next year $20,000 for the maintenance of the experimental station at Jerome so as to continue experiments in the raising of potatoes and sugar beet seed, and in the prevention of potato diseases.

Too Many Jack Rabbits. Mr. Smith also urged the secretary to conduct experiments toward the eradication of the jack rabbit in the Salmon river section of the Twin Falls tract by inoculation with a contagious disease which is injurious only to the jack rabbit and by other means. They are causing immense injury to the young orchards and growing crops in the sparsely settled sections, and the farmers are greatly annoyed by this apparently useless animal.

Idaho Fruit on Washington Streets. That Idaho fruit is making and holding a place for itself in the markets in the east is suggested by the prominent signs of the citrus vendors in the city of Washington, bearing the words, "Fine Italian prunes, grown and packed by A. A. Richards, Elmer, Idaho."

Lane Favors Surveys. Senator Brady has visited Secretary Lane relative to his idea of having all the unsurveyed lands in Idaho surveyed and made available to others. Secretary Lane since his visit to Idaho is very favorable towards the proposition and Senator Brady is hopeful of securing the appropriation necessary to complete this work. This will throw open thousands of acres of the richest lands in the state to settlement.

with the McCordles. Bersing is a young pitcher with something of a record. He was the property of the Boise club at the beginning of last season, but at the request of Twin Falls he was given his release, and he pitched the entire season for the southern Idaho metropolis. His record was 27 games won out of 32 played.

Bersing was with the Eau Claire team in the Wisconsin-Minnesota league last season. During the life of the league he won 12 games and lost three. The league exploded, and he became a free agent. He was wanted by St. Paul, but declined to sign a contract and came west with his brother. His early record has been such as to bring him to the attention of the higher-up agents, and if he continues to work as he has done he will undoubtedly prove a find for Portland. Statesman.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION

President Wilson Calls on the People to Give Thanks.

The season is at hand at which it has been our long-respected custom, as a people to turn in prayer and thanksgiving to Almighty God for his manifold mercies and blessings to us as a nation. The year just passed has been marked by manifestations of His gracious and beneficent Providence. We not only have had peace throughout our land, but with the nations of the world, but that peace has been brightened by multiplying evidences of genuine friendship, of mutual sympathy and understanding, and of the happy operation of many elevating influences both ideal and of pride.

The nation not only has been prosperous, but has proved its capacity to take calm counsel amidst the rapid movements of affairs and deal with its own life in a spirit of candor, righteousness and equity. We have seen the practical completion of a great work at the isthmus of Panama, exemplifying the nation's abundant resources to accomplish what it will, and the distinguished skill and capacity of its public servants; but it also provides the beginning of a new era of new contracts, new neighborhoods, new sympathies, new bonds, and new achievements of co-operation and peace.

"Righteousness exalteth a nation," and "Peace on earth, good will toward men" furnish the only foundations on which can be built the lasting achievements of the human spirit. The year has brought us the satisfaction of work well done and from various of our duty which will make the work of the future better still.

Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, president of the United States of America, do hereby designate Thursday, the twenty-second of November, next as a day of thanksgiving and prayer and invite the people throughout the land to cease from their wonted occupations and in their several homes and places of worship render thanks to Almighty God.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the city of Washington, this twenty-third day of October, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and thirteen, and of the Independence of the United States of America, the one hundred and thirty-eighth. (Signed)

WOODROW WILSON,
By the President:
W. J. BRYAN,
Secretary of State.

REWARD DISTRIBUTED

Estate of W. E. May Reverses Nien Sum for Capture of Train Robbers.

The following article will be of interest to the people of Twin Falls county who remember the capture of one of the robbers who held up the Union Pacific train near Omaha in 1909. One of the robbers made his way to Idaho and was captured at Buhl and was held in the county jail in the city until the arrival of a deputy marshal from Omaha.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 25.—The reward for the capture of the five train robbers, who held up and robbed a mail car on the Overland Limited the night of May 22, 1909, was apportioned by Federal Judge Munger here. Six Bohemian boys in South Omaha get $2,700 apiece, or each one-tenth of the entire amount. They are: John Holak, Frank Kudron, Rudolph Morawsky, John Kowik and John Kudron.

Two Denver policemen, Peter J. Carr and Coleman Bell, get one-fifth of the total reward, or $5,400.

An Idaho town marshal, Willie E. May, is dead, but Homer A. Somler, administrator of his estate, gets one-fifth, or $5,400 for his capture of one robber.

Two South Omaha policemen, who arrested three of the robbers, get no part of the reward because, as Judge Munger says, they were simply doing their duty. Fremont, Neb., Evening Tribune.
