

SALMON SETTLERS
REJECT PLANSAssociation Repudiates Work of DirectorsMEETING HELD AT HOLISTER ON DEC. 20, WELL ATTENDED.Entrymen Unwilling to Enter Into
New Contract—Insist That Original
Contract be Carried Out.

The entrymen at their meeting in Holister Saturday afternoon rejected the proposals which, as the result of several conferences with a committee of bondholders at which the entrymen and representatives of the project were thoroughly discussed, were drawn up by the directors of the Salmon River Settlers' Association and their attorney, to be addressed to the bondholders, who by the retirement of the Kula interests have come into possession of this project and who wish, according to their announcement, to place this project on a sound, substantial basis with the least possible delay.

The session was called to order by Fred W. Berger, president of the association, who explained the object of the meeting, caused the proposals to be read, and recounted the circumstances which led to their being formulated. These details were reported fully in last week's issue of The Herald. Mr. Berger suggested that the proposals as drawn up by the directors should have such amendments as were suggested by the sense of the meeting, but urged that with such amendments and changes as were deemed necessary they be adopted by the entrymen, and submitted to the bondholders for their consideration at the meeting which takes place in New York City on New Year's day.

Opposition arising from several quarters, Mr. Berger plead eloquently for the success of the proposals. He urged that the proposals be finally rejected entirely, and a committee was appointed to draft resolutions embodying the sentiment of the meeting. The committee returned after a few minutes' deliberation with the following resolutions, which were adopted according to the secretary's report—unanimously:

First: We thank the bondholders for sympathy and assistance proffered and are glad to see them take over the system.

Second: It is the consensus of this committee that this tract be cut down to thirty-five thousand acres with present supply of water.

Third: We are in accord with you in regarding immediate title to this land.

Fourth: We realize that immediate action must be taken, to avoid a reversion and loss of the site of the project.

Fifth: We are heartily in favor of an economical use of water.

Sixth: We would be glad to appoint a committee to confer with the bondholders in the distribution of water for 1914 and for any other adjustment that might arise for immediate attention.

The resolutions were drawn by Curtis Adams, W. J. Trueblood, C. A. Do-Valley, and W. E. Flinn. They led the opposition to the adoption of the proposals drafted by the directors of the association.

Seventeen of the two of the directors' proposals was the first to get the axe: "Our respective indebtedness for the purchase of water, or any other indebtedness, shall be paid by the entrymen individually or the company should be funded into a new debt for which we propose to give our not secured by mortgage on our respective lands."

First interest payment to be made April 1, 1915, at six per cent, and annually thereafter, until the payment of the principal is completed on April 1, 1917, and to be paid in annual installments over a period of fifteen years, with the principal, however, of paying the whole or any part thereof in canceling the debt."

Attention was next directed to the first part of the last resolution to-wit: "We believe the Salmon River settlement includes more land than can be beneficially irrigated from the water available, and propose that the segregation be reduced in size so as to embrace no larger area than can be irrigated from the water available, the segregation to be determined by the state Carey act land board under the

The passage of the Glass-Steagall currency bill by the two houses will mark a new era in the financial circles of this country. Just what it will do for the curtailment of our national banks remains as a part of the future. Most banks and bankers, while hesitating to get in on the reserve bank bills, shake their heads over the outcome. The laymen look forward with the hope that the concentration of wealth in New York is a thing of the past. The newspapers of the west are sanguine that the new law will mean more capital for the development of western resources and a corresponding growth of population in every western state. The features of the new law which seems most doubtful is that of the directorate in the reserve banks being placed in the power of the dominant party. While the objections to the bill may seem valid yet there is the strong hope that the experiment which it really is will prove better than the past system. At any rate the law with which the laymen regard tinkering with the currency is fast disappearing and there remains the idea that even the bad features may be easily remedied at a no distant future.

The question bridging the Snake river at Shoshone falls seems to have struck a snag with the refusal of the county commissioners to attend the conference last week in the Commercial club rooms with the citizens interested in the road improvement. The Times deems it a very unwise move on the part of the commissioners to turn down that conference at least. Such conference could not have bound the commissioners in any way except to listen to the arguments of the citizens and to give their own reasons for refusal to consider the plan. As it now appears the county commissioners are put in a very bad light with the citizens who believe in fair play. The Times believes that a very strong impression exists in various parts of the county regarding what the highway enthusiasts were attempting to do. The impression has gone forth that the city of Twin Falls was, by attempting to get the falls bridged, throwing down the rest of the county on the east and west highway. Such impression has been fostered to a large extent in and around Huhl where they are very prone to trump up charges against Twin Falls. Twin Falls is not letting up for a minute on the highway east and west nor will it do so. No Twin Falls citizens will contravert such an idea. Neither will this city lay down on a chance to get the north and south route. Shoshone falls is not the property of the city of Twin Falls nor should it be considered so by the rest of the county. It should be regarded rather as a midwest scenic asset for the whole Twin Falls country. Such is the feeling with which it is regarded on the North Side of the river and Lincoln county which cannot receive half the commercial benefit from tourist travel that this county can, is working hard for a good bridge across the falls. There seems to be little reason for the upsurge made in certain quarters over a move that will make available a considerable amount of state money. The Times does not believe that the rest of the county are going to get anywhere toward the east and west highway by knocking Twin Falls. It does not believe that anything can be done without co-operation of all concerned and the antics of certain sections of the county toward Twin Falls will do away with much enthusiasm of citizens here toward boosting for anything for the rest. If selfishness, purely, is to be the policy of the rest of the county then they cannot blame Twin Falls for adopting the same policy and endeavoring to improve conditions which do not directly help this city. What is fair and right for one should be fair and right for all. But the Times does not believe that such spirit does exist all over the county nor does exist in this city. The citizens here always have and always will move more than half way the rest of the county. There has not been a single attempt so far for

Twin Falls to use its tremendous voting strength to hurt any part of the Twin Falls country or county.

HOW SECY. REDFIELDS WOULD CURB THE TRUSTS.

President Wilson's Word for it that the chief concern of the present session of congress will be "to prevent private monopoly" most effectively, than it has yet been prevented, and that one step toward this goal will be legislation to reduce the "deplorable ground" about the Sherman antitrust law, lends peculiar interest to the program of trust regulation outlined in Secretary of Commerce Redfield's annual report. Many editors, in fact, take it for granted that the secretary's suggestions, rather definitely formulated by the administration's trust policy, which is soon to be officially formulated in a special presidential message to congress. Thus the Brooklyn Eagle (Ind. Dem.) points out that while Mr. Redfield is "an original and independent thinker," he is also "a man of good taste and of personal loyalty," who "would never think of touching so delicate a subject in a way to embarrass the future of a administration, or to disturb peace between the commerce and industry of the United States." The New York World (Dem.), however, fails to detect the Wilsonian note in the commerce secretary's recommendation and, "until more fully advised," rejects the idea that they throw light on the president's legislative program.

Mr. Redfield's recipe for the further regulation of "big business" includes several new laws and several thoroughgoing investigations by the bureau of corporations. He would have a law declaring all restraints of trade to be unreasonable, another guarding against the watering of industrial securities, and yet another forbidding interlocking directorates. At the same time he would have an investigation to determine whether or not trusts are socially and economically efficient in production, an inquiry into the question of fixing retail prices, and an inquiry into the cost of production of clothing. Of the need of new legislation he says in part:

"That there are immediate and well-known conditions that should and can be remedied by law is apparent. Some of these remedies are, for instance, a law providing that there shall be a presumption that all restraints of trade are unreasonable and placing burden of establishing the reasonableness of such restraint upon the party alleging it; legislation looking to fundamental changes in the way of corporations doing interstate business; that stocks and bonds shall not be issued except for money or property at its true money value, preventing the watering of stocks; that corporations shall not hold stock in other competing companies, and that neither a person nor a corporation, shall at the same time own a controlling interest in two or more competing corporations and that the officers of corporations shall not be affiliated directly or indirectly by holding office in other corporations."

Secretary will undoubtedly address itself to some of these aspects of the situation with creative provisions, he submits a statement which fortifies some of the correspondents in their belief that his views coincide with those of the president.

But "regardless of such legislation," he goes on to say, "there will remain a fundamental economic fact to be determined," namely, "whether the trust or monopoly form is socially and economically efficient in production, as is alleged." Upon the solution of this problem, he says, "must depend the ultimate attitude of the government toward combinations and consolidations in business." For the investigation of this big question by the bureau of corporations, Mr. Redfield advocates an appropriation of $125,000. "Some of the chief lines of retail prices, another subject recommended for investigation, he says:

"The law with us is for the time fixed by the decision of the supreme court, that the fixing of retail prices on the part of the manufacturers is unlawful. If, however, new legislation should in the future be required, it is important that the truth be known before legislation be done, not so much to the manufacturer as to the consumer."

"Some of the chief lines of retail prices, another subject recommended for investigation, he says:

Of the need of further light on the subject of the cost of production in the clothing industry, he says:

"The inquiry is not one that can be hurried. It has already been begun with a portion of the funds recently appropriated by congress. It will be continued if the appropriation of $100,000 for this and similar work included in our estimates is made by congress."

While many papers agree with the Dalhousie Sun (Dem.) that this is "a pretty fair program, all in all," others hasten to indicate its weak points. Thus the New York Times (Ind.) and World, the Brooklyn Eagle, and the Boston Advertiser (Rep.) are as one in objecting to the suggestion that "there shall be a presumption that all restraints of trade are unreasonable, placing the burden of establishing the reasonableness of such restraint upon the party alleging it." Says the Eagle: "We can only note that the Sherman law, which is to be retained, is in part a criminal law, and that all jurisprudence recognizes the need of defining closely what a crime is misdemeanor. The plan to assume that any restraint of trade, which means any business contract, in criminal, and make the accused person prove that it is not criminal, runs counter to our ideas of justice. Proving a negative is difficult or impossible. It is for prosecutors to prove that the condition is involving criminality exist."

It is Mr. Redfield's program of investigation that seems specially objectionable to the New York Journal of Commerce (Cont.), which charges, "his suggestions in this line are 'impossible and absurd.'" This paper goes on to say:

"It has been noted by some curious minds that the present cost of federal administration is about one-fifth the total crop yield of the United States. That is a startling comparison, but one that would be of little importance were there real results to be shown for the money spent. In fact, the federal government, in spite of its vaunted power of 'unselfish' direction of business, gets less per dollar, bid out than any other organization." For its outlay on commissions and investigations, it gets less of all. The enormous sums spent in such work are absolutely wasted for the most part. Such outlays are as recommended by Mr. Redfield and others would be simply ridiculous and would result in no possible gain."

On the other hand, his investigation proposals are applauded by the New York Times, and The World is convinced that "there is need of legislation prohibiting interlocking directorates and the emission of swindling issues of stocks and bonds."—Literary Digest.

A COMMUNICATION.

To the Stockholders of the Twin Falls Canal Company, Greeting:

In view of the determined opposition to the present management of the Canal company, it may be that some would like to know what real objection there may be to some, and for my part will explain my reasons for declining a change.

I am aware that the oldest man in the canal and water business is not in a large concern, objectionable matters crop in that escape the notice of the management, and much of the trouble is caused by the fact, but there is much complaint of extravagance on the part of the management, some of which seems to be the result of the canal company's policy.

However, if we could feel that the affairs of the company were being properly handled in other ways, then the heavy maintenance charges might be tolerated.

When I learned that the state commission had decided to pass by acquiescence and evaporation, I was plain that we are long the system would not be able to furnish our own water, but we are not of water per 30 acres as designated.

Gov. Brady, of wide experience in this line, admitted that in our case this was a very reasonable estimate.

When in 1912 I learned that, with less than 5% of the land under cultivation, it was necessary to divert between 200 and 300 sec. feet over our decree, to supply the required amount of water, I saw no reason why we should not obtain a decree for the extra amount needed, which, while it would come after the stipulated and 200 sec. feet, would be prior to any later project, and would not furnish us water till after July 1st, when our heaviest demands are over. I saw no reason why we should not obtain a decree for the extra amount needed, which, while it would come after the stipulated and 200 sec. feet, would be prior to any later project, and would not furnish us water till after July 1st, when our heaviest demands are over.

Later, I purchased Mr. Harlan and found him equally opposed to same, although he admitted by his own estimate upon a basis of 1-2 less, that if we diverted 200 sec. feet, we would still be short when our 200 sec. feet were used to secure as much of this amount as our canal could furnish. He would be satisfied to divert upon any more water, but he would like to make a series of experiments, to ascertain if the tract was not liable to overflow.

I have talked with many others upon the subject, nearly all of whom favored it, including my attorney, Mr. Brown. A few were indifferent, but only the two above mentioned opposed the plan, yet they failed to explain how the plan could injure us, in any way. It was said to be a diversion of water, which would be needed, and if later we found that we could spare it, it should be sold for a large amount.

Mr. W. H. Pitt left Saturday for a reservoir to augment our supply only in occasional years, and yet water, which we need every year, is being year through the growing season, and which we must have to avoid being cut down in our allowance, is allowed to go to waste. It has already been with a portion of the funds, recently appropriated by congress. It will be continued if the appropriation of $100,000 for this and similar work included in our estimates is made by congress."

other priority of about 200 feet through the canal, in a case an exact parallel to ours, naturally leads me to think of these questions, and I see but two obstacles in the way of our obtaining it.—Harlan and Taylor: for as one director recently stated-it was practically impossible to obtain any action of the board of officers by them. Last fall I learned of an experimental farm to be conducted by Don Harlan, and attended the meeting when the subject was considered. Not being satisfied with the result of observations taken from the work of practical farmers, the board decided to pay a part of the expense of conducting experiments upon twenty acres of choice land. As we well know, with good land, and intense cultivation regardless of cost, it is possible to show some startling results with but very little water, but for all large tracts a smaller amount of land in that manner? And how about the follow on this soil?

Mr. Brown cautioned the board, regarding this point, and as we were well aware, the result of these experiments will figure later in determining the amount of water we will be allowed for acreage, and if it is shown that we need less water per acre, the Bureau promoters will profit millions there by, but we will pay for the trouble.

But recently another matter has been thrust into the limelight by the board, the seepage question, the most dangerous of them all, not in itself, for all large tracts a smaller amount of land in that manner? And how about the follow on this soil?

After considering the above facts, and any other coming to our attention, we will some day find our water rights materially reduced?

An according to Mr. Harlan's estimate, it will be one-fifth, or to forty inches per acre, and to less if we lose the state lands. Why does he take this position on this question? His staunch supporters claim that he is too honorable and upright to do anything that would injure us. Last January the stockholders voted that thirty days before their next meeting, the secretary should prepare a list of the absentee stockholders to be left at some convenient place in each town upon the tract that had a vote. This was not done, Mr. Taylor explaining that the office foreman had no time to spare. Yet I have been since informed that this same office foreman, a while before, had furnished a list of stockholders to a loan company for forty dollars. Copies from this list would have sufficed, if only the office foreman made by almost any office girl for a few dollars. Why was it not done? Did Mr. Harlan approve of this omission? One of our prominent stockholders informed me that Mr. Harlan had told him the day after the January meeting that "the directors would pay no attention to those resolutions." Only one liberal contribution can be reached, i. e., that they were afraid to allow the stockholders at large to obtain these addresses for fear that proxies might be secured thereby, that might be the means of assisting to elect a board of directors unfavorable to them, and in that way might cause them to lose their positions and the salaries pertaining thereto; for since the last decade passed a law for the relief of the settlers upon this tract in particular, prohibiting employees from voting proxies, their means of securing proxies by the aid of ditch riders has been somewhat handicapped.

We are largely what we are because of the loyal support of our many friends, and we trust that in the future we may receive, as we shall endeavor to deserve, a continuance of this spirit of friendship, loyalty and cooperation.

At this time, therefore, we desire to extend appreciative thanks and most cordial greetings to all of our friends.

Are people who are ready to place the dollar above honor, safe men to entrust with the management of our affairs, and when they take a position upon important questions that it is plain will some day cost us a part of the value of our land?

Think it over. One year ago I opposed their method; now I believe that dismissal, just yet information, to be the only way remedied.

INTEND BUILDINGS TO LAST

Writer Describes Habit of Putting Up Temporary Structures to Stay on the Farm.

As one looks back over his life on the farm he is tempted to see how much he has accomplished in doing things that are temporary; that must be done over and over again. For always there hangs in his knowledge the fact that foundations are crumbling, walls bulging and roofs leaking.

The lax on maintenance on the farm is too large, and now is the time to begin to correct this evil, the breeders' Gazette says. For the sake of our remaining years on the farm, for the sake of the boys who will come after us, let us build for permanence, so far as we are able. Concrete makes imperishable foundations and floors. It makes cheap walls for the lower stories of farm buildings. Concrete fence posts should last a hundred years. Roofs of the slate or galvanized iron are fairly imperishable.

In Europe the farmer inherits much more than his land; he inherits buildings so well constructed that while they are hundreds of years old they will yet endure indefinitely. The farmer adds a shed or two; he bequeaths them to his sons as an inheritance that is comprehensive, useful and needs no special work to keep it in repair. Let us quit "moving on" in America, but settle down on the land as though we meant to stay there, and signal that intention by beginning the era of permanent construction on the farm.

WORD IMPRESSED THE JURY

Clever Use of Scientific Term Resulted in Acquittal of Lawyer's Client.

The case was one of assault and battery, and one of the witnesses was a local doctor whom the prosecuting lawyer proceeded to bully, suggesting that he was prejudiced in favor of the defendant and had wilfully distorted his evidence in his favor.

The doctor denied this, and went on to say that the defendant was suffering from "phosphorus." The word caused a sensation in court, and asked to define the disease, the doctor described it as "a sort of chronic disease of an inflammatory nature which affects certain cranial tissues."

Asked if it affected the mind, the doctor said he was not posing as an expert, but he had known some persons who suffering from the disease become raving maniacs, and others merely foolish. Some showed destructive and pugilistic tendencies, while many others had suffered for years and had never shown any mental abnormalities.

His refusal to say anything further, and the jury promptly acquitted the defendant on the ground that the doctor's evidence was not reliable.

When the case was over the prosecutor sought enlightenment as to the mysterious disease, and found that "phosphorus" meant—idleness.

When Sea Feeds Land.

Seaweed, at one time thought valueless, is a wonderful fertilizer. Tons of it are collected in carts at low tide by the Cornish farmers and around the coast of England.

After being dried in heaps, it is spread on the land. There its nutritive properties of hydrogen and potash, in which it is very rich, are absorbed into the soil and produce wonderful crops. New potatoes from Jersey, and spring cabbages from Cornwall, are raised with seaweed fertilizer. The sea also furnishes food for the land in other ways.

The displaced starfish, in many places known as five-fingers, are eagerly sought and carried away in tons from the coast to fertilize the fields further inland. Small fish, too, useless for human food are sold by the million as manure. Rich in phosphates, a primary element in land fertilizers, they are good for almost any kind of root crops.

Supplying a Necessity.

An English policeman ordered the house of a publican one morning and informed him that it would be necessary to hold an inquest there in the afternoon. Now the landlord had a great objection to anything of the kind, and said: "Oh, I can't be troubled with inquests in my house. Here, what'll you have to drink?"

Robert said he'd have a drop of Scotch, which he did. "Have a cigar, too," said the policeman. After the consumption of two Scotches and cigars the constable said he thought he could get the liquor held somewhere else, but as he was leaving the landlord said: "What'll you have to drink?"

TO HELP GERMAN BARMAIDS

"Dogs in Berlin Treated Better Than We Are," One Writes, Telling Her Experience.

Berlin—Appalling conditions of abuse, want, misery and immorality have been uncovered among Berlin's "barmaids." The editor of a local paper is conducting a crusade to help them. The lot of those in the cheap beer saloons is the hardest. Wages are small, hours long, and the barmaid is largely dependent upon tips, which in turn depend upon her comeliness and her lack of resistance to the coarse jokes and indignities which she must suffer from customers.

EARTH ROADS MOST POPULAR

Doubtless Will Be Commonly Used in Rural Districts Because of Their First Low Cost.

(By H. R. FLINT, International Farm, St. Paul, Minn.)

The earth road will doubtless be commonly used in rural communities for many years because of its low first cost. The overhauling process of upkeep on such a road can be solved very largely by the use of the so-called split-log drag.

TO HELP GERMAN BARMAIDS

Berlin—Appalling conditions of abuse, want, misery and immorality have been uncovered among Berlin's "barmaids." The editor of a local paper is conducting a crusade to help them. The lot of those in the cheap beer saloons is the hardest. Wages are small, hours long, and the barmaid is largely dependent upon tips, which in turn depend upon her comeliness and her lack of resistance to the coarse jokes and indignities which she must suffer from customers.

IDAHO COAL BED

Coal Beds Examined in Gosse Creek District.

The result of an examination of the Gosse Creek district, Cassia county, Idaho, by C. F. Bowen and C. T. Kirk, have been published by the United States Geological Survey as a part of Bulletin 531-H. The district includes an area of about 155 square miles.

Two large trunks of the Oregon Short Line and the Idaho Southern, have recently been built to the town of Oakley, on Gosse Creek, about 4 miles north of the northern boundary of the field.

Lignite occurs in two principal beds ranging from 1 to 7 feet in thickness and a number of thinner beds. The lower bed contains the better lignite. The lignite occurs badly on exposure and weathers into a mass of dark brown flakes and scales. No statement of the extent of the beds beyond their outcrops can be made at this time. A copy of the Bulletin may be obtained free on application to the Director of the Geological Survey, Washington, D. C.

FIRE HARD TO STOP

Pullman Car Burns Five Hours in Shoshone Yards.

Last Saturday morning before No. 18 arrived at Shoshone one of the Pullman cars was discovered on fire, and it was necessary to transfer all the passengers to other cars. The Pullman was set out at Shoshone, and it was believed the fire was extinguished, but when No. 14 came along a little after noon to pick up the car and take it into Pocatello, fire was again discovered under the car's floor, and it required the services of the train crew and employees of the depot for an hour's hard labor to cut through the floor and put the fire out. The car was then taken to Pocatello by the train. The Pullman was completely burned and the loss was several hundred dollars—Shoshone Journal.

ROAD DISTRICT

Case From Blaine County Determines Validity of Organization.

Judge Walters had before him this week a matter that indirectly involved the validity of all the good roads districts in the Blaine and Coeur d'Alene counties. It arose in the action of A. Brinnesar against W. F. Horne, the auditor of Blaine county to prohibit and prevent the city of an election at Fairfield. In that county, for the creation of a good roads district.

The plaintiff asserted that the 50 voters should represent 20,000 acres of land. Judge Walters held that the law only required the district to comprise not less than 20,000 acres.

W. A. Broadhead and B. M. Agui, Blaine lawyers, represented the parties in the action. Deputy Clerk McClellan of the Blaine and Engineer Campbell of the Shoshone were the witnesses called by the plaintiff—Shoshone Journal.

CALIFORNIA QUAIL

Large Numbers of This Beautiful Bird on the North Side.

California quail are becoming quite numerous on the tract, a number of every having been seen this fall very close to Jerome. During the past week the heavy snow fall with the low temperatures has no doubt been very severe on these birds and it is hoped that they may be able to withstand the elements and go through the winter. They are a beautiful bird, half domestic to start with, and doubtless of much benefit to the farmer. While considered a game bird, and the game laws apply to them, and certain restrictions, they should be protected to the extent that they may multiply and not be destroyed or driven out of the country—North Side News.

GREAT HERD OF ELK MOVE

Storied Thronged Yellowstone Park Drive Herds to Montana Valleys.

—Manito Hot Springs, Wyo., Dec. 22.—One of the largest elk flights from the Yellowstone National Park in recent years is in progress as a result of the terrible snowstorms in the park. Herds are increasing to many. The last snow delayed the flight until after the elk hunting season closed in Montana. In former years an army of hunters would hunt the annual flight, slaughtering elk by the hundreds.

FRESH WHEY FOR YOUNG PIGS

Should Be Fed in Combination With Grain, Corn and Barley Meal Being Preferable.

By PROF. G. C. HUMPHREY, Wisconsin College of Agriculture.

For pig feeding whey that is fresh from the factory or at least only slightly fermented is considered to be worth about one-half as much as skim milk. It should be fed in combination with grain, corn and barley meal being preferable.

Feed in this combination, experiments indicate that 1,000 pounds of whey has a feeding value equal to 100 pounds of corn meal. Ordinary whey has been found to be 30 per cent. more valuable than whey which has been separated to recover the butter fat. One to two pounds of corn meal, however, added to 100 pounds of separated whey will compensate for the fat that has been taken out. As it is found that it is not so easy to feed whey as milk, and that whey is not so palatable as milk, it should be taken as far as possible to feed whey in sweet condition only.

It requires more or less whole and skim milk and the utmost care to raise calves on whey. After calves have been raised to a month or six weeks only, ten to fourteen pounds of fresh sweet whey fed daily with the best of hay and a choice grain mixture will grow calves, but as a general rule not as successfully as skimmed milk.

FATTEN SHEEP FOR MARKET

Cull Animals Can Be Prepared Early in Season by Turning Them Into Rape Field as Pasture.

All old and such young ewes as the owner does not desire to keep should be culled out to fatten a short time before the ram is turned in with the breeding ewes. The cull sheep can be fattened earlier in the season by turning them into a rape field as pasture. But if you put off too late special food is required. In pure-bred flocks the ewes are often kept until they die of old age, as their lambs are worth more than they are, but in a graded flock it does not pay to keep ewes that do not have good milk. An old ewe is likely to be unsatisfactory.

In selecting rams the aim should be to select those that are strong in the points in which the ewes are weak.

Prize-Winning Dorset.

For instance, ewes that have an open coat and are narrow breasted should be bred to rams that are strong on those points. By this method a very uniform flock can be established in a very few years. It is a good idea to turn the ram with the ewes in the evening after he has been fed and take him out in the morning before feeding. A ram should be well fed. Bran, oats, roots or vegetables, make a good ration, with clover as roughage.

HORSE IS A POOR REASONER

With the Exception of Sheep He is the Weakest Mentally of All Our Domestic Animals.

The horse is a very poor reasoner. Mentally it is the weakest of all our domestic animals except the sheep. Therefore, says a writer in Denver Field and Farm, when once taught a trick or allowed to do a certain act not wanted it is with deep difficulty that the horse can unlearn an account of mental weakness.

A horse kicks his master to death when turned upside down with foot in stirrup, because in that position the horse does not know what his master is, and suffers from imaginary fear. He kicks the shafts of a buggy until his legs are broken because he does not know that the shafts are harmless and that he himself is doing the damage. He runs away from the saddle or in the harness because he has not sense enough to know better. "We heard a man," and one who claimed to be a horseman, say not long ago that a certain horse had more sense than the average boy. We saw the same horse shortly afterwards nearly turn a buggy over trying to get away from a piece of paper fluttering across the road.

Hogs Need Sunshine.

The hog needs sunshine but there is a limit to such a good thing. When hogs have the chance to choose between shade and sunshine you can rely on their good judgment.

Injurious to Pigs.

Dirty and fifth taken into the stomach along with feed impair digestion and reduce the gain, also affecting the appetite and general health of the pig.

ALWAYS A SIGN OF DEATH

Flag at "Half-Staff" Sure Indication That the Dread Visitor Has Been There.

Nearly every one speaks of a flag, when being flown at a distance from the top of the pole, as at "half-mast." This is not the correct expression. Such flags are at "half-staff" because they are flown in this manner whether on land or sea from the flag staff.

To see a flag at half-staff means death. It may mean, on an incoming ship, that one of the passengers or crew died at sea. Many a little fishing vessel comes into Gloucester and a wharf in Boston every season with a flag at half-staff, and this means one of the fishermen, or more, has met death, generally being swept, overboard.

This custom of flying flags at half-staff originated first as a token of defeat. That is, when an army was defeated, its flag was lowered down the staff to give room for the victorious army to place its flag above that of the defeated army.

From this the custom grew into flying the flag at half-staff when an officer, army or navy, died. Later it was adopted by civilians as well, and, when a man of prominence died, regardless of whether he was sailor, soldier, or civilian, the flag was hung at half-staff. Whereas, in the olden days, when the custom started, the upper space was left to indicate that the victor could put his flag there, now it seems that death is the victor, and so the space is left. It is, of course, a mark of respect to the dead person to have flags at half-staff for him.

EMPLOYMENT FOR OLD CAR

Gardener Has Found Really Ingenious Use for Automobile That He Had His Day.

"Where do all the old cars go?" is a question that is asked continually, and there are very few persons who can answer approximately who answer with any degree of satisfaction either to themselves or to others. But it is certain where at least one of them has gone for it has been turned into a lawn mower. The reason for its fall from aristocratic to plebeian work is because its owner has a really tremendous lawn to keep in trim; he is head gardener for a large golf club and as every one knows putting greens must be kept "just so." There was an antiquated two-cylinder automobile on the premises that long had ceased to be of any practical value for pleasure purposes, and the gardener conceived the bright idea of making it "die in the harness," so to speak. So with the help of some steel strips and some chains he attached no less than three lawn mowers to it—originally they were drawn by horses, but he found that in fact except that the place of the front wheels is taken by a heavy roller; two rollers take the place of the driving wheels.—Scientific American.

Beautiful Bird of Paradise.

Women of fashion who wear the bird of paradise plumes do not realize how beautiful the bird is that surrenders to them its pride and glory. Its total length is about eight inches; its body, wings and tail are of a rich coffee color, which deepens on the breast to a blackish violet or purple brown.

The whole top of the head and neck is of a delicate straw color, the feathers being short enough to look like velvet. The lower part of the throat is covered with emerald green feathers which reach to the eye, and velvety plumes of a still deeper green extend to the back across the forehead, and chin as far as the eye, which is bright yellow. From each side of the body beneath the wings springs a dense tuft of long and delicate plumes, sometimes two feet in length, of the most intense golden orange color and extremely glossy, but changing toward the tips into a pale brown.

The Best He'd Ever Known.

"I remember some years ago, traveling in a third-class carriage with two mechanics and a clergyman," says an English writer of note. "Presently the workmen began to discuss a mutual friend. 'Ah, he was a good man,' said the elder of the two, 'the best man I think I have ever known, and I am over fifty.' I saw the person prick up his ears. This eulogy of personal goodness appealed to him—it was in his line. 'Yes,' the workman continued, thoughtfully, 'the very best man I ever knew. The way he guarded with his right and got in with his left on the conk was a blooming revelation.'"

Dignifying the Oyster.

Mr. Justice Darling has defined a shuriff as something which is half-way between an oyster and a lord mayor. But Thackeray anticipated the judge in attributing human intelligence to oysters. "I was walking with him one evening from the club," writes Edmund Yates, "and, passing a fish-shop in New street, he noted a sign—'OYSTERS, one marked—He a dozen,' the other 'is 3d. a dozen.' How they must hate each other!" said Thackeray, pointing them out.

Soon Indeed.

"At last," exclaimed the long-haired inventor, "I have evolved the greatest practical blessing of the age."

"Oh, tell me," Theophilus—told me what it is!" begged his wife.

"A collar button with a little photograph inside that will call out when it sells him a pair of corners under the drowse, 'Here I am! Here I am!'"

"CLUTTER" WOULD BE MISSED

After All, This Must Remain Always a Matter of Individual Opinion.

Men are just as much disposed toward the cluttering habit as women, but not one in 10,000 will admit it. The average man is forever bringing things home. By this we mean things that nobody else in the house has the slightest interest in. They may take the form of books, pamphlets, or pictures, or bric-a-brac of various kinds, of fishing apparatus, of golf sticks, of group photographs or of friendly souvenirs from business associates, and he insists that they shall all be kept in view. Usually they crowd other clutter which the average woman has spent a great part of her life in collecting, and which is found on all the mantel pieces, on all the stands, on the tables and on all the walls of all the rooms of the house. Then as the children grow up they bring things home that are dear to each one of them respectively, and these, too, must be kept in view.

But when all this is said, an important point has still been omitted. Clutter may, often does, cease to be clutter in the eyes and thoughts of the family. There are instances in which it has come to be regarded as family treasure. With all the complaint that is raised against it, it is often grievously missed when parted with. So truly is this the case, so closely interwoven does family life become with all of its surroundings and associations, that it is difficult to conclude here without asking a question that will doubtless arise in the minds of thousands of readers, namely, What, after all, would home be without its clutter—Christian Science Monitor.

MAY BE RALEIGH'S SETTLERS

Group of People in North Carolina Hard to Account for in Any Other Way.

There lives in the woods and swamps of Robeson county, North Carolina, a strange group of people, appearing somewhat resembling Portuguese or mulattoes. Their manners, customs, and personal appearances are unlike those of any other race on the American continent, says the Southern Workman, and intercourse with their neighbors is limited to the extent which necessity demands. Harking back to 1687, it will be recalled that one of the expeditions of colonists sent out from Edgeland by Sir Walter Raleigh arrived on Roanoke island, North Carolina, under the command of Capt. John White. Capt. John White never saw his people after he left them on Roanoke island and returned to England for supplies. When he returned the little band, it is supposed, had gone to the mainland and been absorbed in an Indian tribe. It is now believed that the descendants of the first of Indians and that this time living in Robeson county, where more than thirty families have names similar to those of White's colonists.

Trials of Composers.

They tell of a Scottish composer who fled from Edinburgh to London in order to escape the brain-exhausting ordeal of deciphering Carlyle's hieroglyphics and putting them into type. He had been at work in London for some time, when one day a "take" of Carlyle's copy was given him to copy. The sight of it appalled him. "Is that man here, too?" he exclaimed. Whereupon, he laid down his composing stick, put on his coat and hat, and vanished.

Haycraft's copy was also a nightmare to composers. According to the London Standard, the failure of the establishment that printed his works was the direct result of the enormous labor spent in making corrections in the proofs of his manuscript. What it meant to put his copy into type is shown by the fact that "Caesar Broughton" had to be reset 16 times in 20 days!—Youth's Companion.

Castle for Shop Girls.

For many years the Count Greban de Pontour, owner of a stately castle and large grounds in beautiful Touraine, has been charmed each day in Paris by the sight of thousands of pretty little millinettes, dressmakers' assistants and shopgirls whom the hour of noon liberates for their daily walk along the boulevards. Noticing how some of them, rosy and fresh at first, grew paler from their work in the crowded sewing rooms, he left when he died recently the castle and its park to the millinettes of Paris. He also provided sufficient money to maintain the castle with a perpetual house party of young girls resting and recreating there. In future any millinette needing a holiday has only to apply and to show that she is free from infectious complaint to be received there as a guest free of cost.

New Idea for Betting.

Those who buy betting for machinery will not have to worry about the price of leather in the years to come if a certain sort of betting which is being manufactured by a firm in Connecticut proves to be a success. The new product is called flexible steel betting and is really a step further than the chain and sprocket idea. The betting is made in a complicated series of links and can be used on all pulleys of from two inches in diameter to the largest size. It has been designed especially for services where subjected to conditions are bad for leather and rubber belts.

Some Tasks Are Hard and Some Are Easy For Want Ads---While Few Indeed Are Impossible

The easy want ad tasks are usually accomplished through one publication of the ad. The want ad tasks may require repeated publications of the ad---sometimes growing into the dignity of "want ad campaigns."

And, while purely "transient" classified advertising may not complete the task set for it, a "want ad campaign" does not fail, if sensible persistence is used. This means that such difficult want ad tasks as that of finding

for your property, or the man who will be glad to invest in your enterprise, or the best possible tenant for that store or business property, are

if you enter upon suitable want ad campaigns.

This store is famous for its upright dealings—merchandise is bought and sold for cash only—Common sense alone tells you what the advantages are—We are not in business for our health—It would seem that some merchants are seeking health, did one believe the nonsense they print under SALE HEADINGS.—It is not our wish to censure, but the abuse of the good old fashioned sale occurring at the right time—after a busy season; makes it advisable to remind you that WE do not belong to the crowd of humbugs.—We have had a prosperous year—thanks to you; now we are prepared to clean up for Spring. Our first prices are always low—sale prices represent a sacrifice.
