The manner in which the citizens of Twin Falls responded to the work of cleaning up premises and streets and alleys shows that in a whole city can boast of good citizens. The clean-up, while not altogether complete for that day, has made a wonderful difference in the appearance of the whole city and makes it without a doubt the cleanest city in Idaho today. Alleys in many localities were almost swept in the eagerness with which the clean-up enthusiasts went after the rubbish and Twin Falls' alleys in consequence will present poor lodgings for the flies. The Times would suggest, however, in the future that two such clean-up days be set apart each year, and in the fall after the leaves have fallen from the trees and the other in April or herefore. Such a semi-annual clean-up would get people into cleanly ways so that there would be nothing left in the way of rubbish at any time.

The railroads of the east in clamoring for a five per cent raise in the freight rates are making the same old arguments that have been exposed time and time again. Poor management, rotten timbering and high salaries are never thrown into the other side of the balance when the rate question is discussed from a railroad's standpoint. Perhaps if the railroad heads would be honest regarding their problems they would create more of an impression when asking for anything which is just. It is too true that public sentiment has been opposed to the railroads and has in many cases been unjust, but the cause of such hostility must rest with the railroads. The public was damned attitude of the railroads is right now reaping a bountiful harvest which will make the railroad writer for many years to come. The revelation of the management of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad did much more to make the public blindly about its eyes to justice and turn on the screws of departmental machinery out of sheer desire for vengeance. Until such time as physical valuation of railroads becomes the standard for earnings rather than the present inflated values based on manipulated stocks there can be nothing but rocks ahead, as firmly fixed has the idea become in public minds that the railroads have been robbing the public.

It will be worth while to note whether the interstate commerce commission which at present is idolized by the people, will stand as high after granting the increase which they are pretty certain to do.

A SPLENDID MOVE.

The state land board and the prison board of this state have made an arrangement which in the opinion of the Leader-Herald is the best move undertaken during the present administration. If it is carried out along the lines proposed, it contemplates taking a large number of prisoners from the state penitentiary and working them on state lands. It benefits all the people by augmenting the value of public lands. It benefits the settlers in the immediate vicinity of the lands improved by doing away with a harbor for jackrabbits and other pests, and increasing the value of the settlement lands. It benefits the prisoners by giving them clean, healthful employment out of doors.

It is proposed to furnish these prisoners with proper equipment for clearing the lands of mesquites, level them and construct the irrigation ditch. The work will start in the spring irrigation district where the state has some ten thousands of acres of the finest lands in Idaho. These lands are now worth in the raw state from $25 to $50 per acre. When the prisoners are through with them they will be worth, it is believed, from $75 to $125 per acre. By reason of the work of the prisoners they will be enhanced in value of $50,000. When improved it is not the purpose of the state to be in any haste in putting them on the market, but rather to hold them for the right prices and in the meantime to raise crop of grain and vegetables to supply state institutions.

Idaho Empires of Anchorage, Inc.,
Three Million Dollars That Way.

Everybody in the Inland Empire will bring to them and to the community in which they live if it is kept in circulation here, instead of being sent out of this country to be used in the development of other localities. The service and the demand for the products of the farm and factory depend upon the substantial growth that can only be brought about by co-operative effort of all interests, for the common good. Every dollar of profit from business is lost to this country forever, while the profit on the business of the whole city and makes it without a doubt the cleanest city in Idaho today. To insure prompt recovery from measles and to prevent the spread of the disease, certain important things must be done. These are simple, easily understood and practicable by practically every mother in Idaho.

The first and most important thing to do is to summon the family physician as soon as the child shows symptoms of measles. The parents should take the child and go to the physician's office immediately in case of measles. They recall their own illness of the disease and do not think it worth while to call a physician, but the fact remains that the physician is the one who can best treat the disease.

The second and equally important thing to do is to have the child examined by a physician. This is done in case of measles. They recall their own illness of the disease and do not think it worth while to call a physician, but the fact remains that the physician is the one who can best treat the disease.

The third and equally important thing to do is to have the child examined by a physician. This is done in case of measles. They recall their own illness of the disease and do not think it worth while to call a physician, but the fact remains that the physician is the one who can best treat the disease.

The fourth and equally important thing to do is to have the child examined by a physician. This is done in case of measles. They recall their own illness of the disease and do not think it worth while to call a physician, but the fact remains that the physician is the one who can best treat the disease.

The fifth and equally important thing to do is to have the child examined by a physician. This is done in case of measles. They recall their own illness of the disease and do not think it worth while to call a physician, but the fact remains that the physician is the one who can best treat the disease.

more furniture than is necessary favors, best the purpose. Into this room no children should be permitted to come during the term of their childhood. Better still, no person except the nurse should remain with the child, as the nurse should not come in contact with other children.

To prevent the spread of the disease among a child who is isolated and under the care of a physician but one thing is essential—to care for the disease. This is made necessary by the fact that the contagion of measles is probably spread by coughing and sneezing. The minute organisms expelled from the mouth or nose in spray, will stay for a long time and will infect any person exposed to them. It is highly probable that the organisms may become dried and attached to the bed linen, etc., and thereby may reach others. To prevent this, a soft napkin or cloth should be held over the mouth and nose of the patient while coughing and sneezing. This napkin or cloth should be placed in a closed paper bag until the bag is nearly full. Then the napkin or cloth should be boiled and not used by other persons until the patient has recovered. If this is done, and if reasonable care is taken in the sick room, further trouble can be avoided.

The sick room must be darkened and warm to protect the patient's eyes and to keep him comfortable. A cold air current should be an abundance of fresh air.

Many cases of measles which promote a prompt recovery result disastrously because the child is exposed before he is truly well. The direction in which the physician gives should always be followed. Medicines should be avoided, and under no conditions should the child be allowed to leave the sick room until the fever, cough and all other symptoms have disappeared.

It is to be admitted that under present conditions the child cannot be expected to reach adult life without contracting measles, the very high mortality under five years of age and the very low mortality after the age of six. It is also impossible to keep their children from having measles until after they are five years of age. This is not a difficult matter if the parent will keep the simple facts stated in this letter in mind. Measles can be controlled in the same manner as smallpox, but not for so many years apart, and when such an epidemic occurs the parents with children under five years of age should prepare to protect such children from infection. The child under five is particularly exposed to infection from Sunday school or from the neighborhood.

During an epidemic of measles, therefore, the children who have not had measles should not be allowed to go to Sunday school, as it is almost certain almost certainly to contract the disease.

To prevent infection from the neighbor's children, do not allow your child during the measles epidemic to play with children who have not had the disease; they will run little or no chance of catching it. In particular, remember that it takes seven days and fourteen days after exposure a child who has not had measles may develop the disease and that he will infect others before you can tell that he has it. Keep your children at home for this period, and be sure that they will not spread the infection.
