Now that the election is over and the nation saved it is about time for some one to start another railroad.

The result of the election with the defeat of Haines should be encouraging to the voters who believe in good government and a lesson to the party leaders who have sought to submerge public welfare to the desire for party victory and party spoils.

The federal authorities are pushing prosecutions against a number of the trusts under the Sherman anti-trust act and are causing a great many of the monopolists to look toward the tail timber with anxious eyes. For years the Sherman law has been a sort of standing joke among the bigger trusts because of the lack of severe penalties. A fine was nothing and was paid while the trust was flourishing; but how much it could add to the profits in order to take care of a little additional expense in the way of payment for a government tax to the demands of the masses. When any criminal act was discovered, some paid employee took the blame and the punishment being well paid for the sacrifice and self-sacrifice, known by the Roosevelt term of "Malfeasance of great wealth," have heretofore escaped punishment. With the fangs properly placed in the Sherman law, the government is now seeking to place the punishment where the blame has rested with the active heads of the directorates, whose shrewd minds have involved all the so-called financial crimes. William Rockefeller, George F. French, Tom Watson would startle the financial world yet all the men indicted have been the victims of the greed of the engine of the great terminal alliance, deceived and oppressed for the enrichment of the money ring cohorts. One sentence of a year's imprisonment to any one of the financial leaders will do more toward making good than out of bad ones than any other process, legal or legislative.

THE BOER DISAFFECTION. The threatened disorder in the Union of South Africa, "the other U. S. A." has come as a shock to Great Britain. It is said at the very least when the news of the independence and independence of the Boer republics, especially the Transvaal, reached the British Isles, that the call to arms against the Double Alliance had been the work of private quarrels. In Ireland, Canada, India, Australia, and Africa the individual grievance was laid aside and official assent was given of loyal support to the mother country. Indeed, as the Baltimore News and other papers point out the attitude of South Africa was especially conspicuous. The public announcement by Premier Botha that the government of the Union would indefinitely withdraw from England came as a crowning proof that England's generous treatment of the Union since the Boer War had not been in vain. But England's satisfaction has been short lived, for the open revolt of Colono Maritz, the apparent implication of German Southwest Africa, and the uncertainty as to the proportion of burghers siding with Botha or Maritz, place England, say several editors, in a position fraught with more danger than is immediately apparent. In the first place, the expulsion of Britain from Africa, with Germany successful in Europe, the Washington Times explains, would threaten her whole Empire. Dissolution would proceed inevitably, for Egypt would demand by Turkey, and Turkey, with the backing of a victorious Germany, might take it back. That would mean a German Suez; that in turn, German domination of the route to India. And this, in contrast to a possible Anglo-French Africa, with Britain in possession of territory extending a thousand miles east and west and north and south from the Cape to Cairo, is to the Briton unthinkable.

A vigorous and grave, and independent of the European outcome, is pointed out by other editors. "The revolt itself may not be serious," says the New York Evening Post, but "its main importance at present, is more symptomatic than military." In similar vein the Baltimore News explains: "The danger lies not so much in whatever annoyances Maritz may cause the Colonial Government, but in the precedent and the exaggerated rumors of it are likely to spread to other sections of the Empire where there is perhaps more real disaffection. It is but natural to strain upon the imagination when one remembers that Britain would be in should her Mohammedan subjects rise. It has been Germany's hope to see them rise, and there can be no question but that once rising they would turn England's military to control one of her colonies, the fever of insurrection would spread. History furnishes many an example of heterogeneous empires gone to pieces in just that manner."

The Post dwells upon the contagious quality of such a disaffection and asserts that "the nerves of the Empire will be set aquiver." "May not the Egyptian-Nationalists think to see their opportunity in England's crisis? Despite all that Indian princes and rajahs have said, may not the Young India movement show its head menacingly?" And, the Post is sure that sober Englishmen are gravely considering the possibilities.

England's chance of avoiding all serious difficulty, others point out, lies in the confidence which "it has already won in South Africa, and the fact that the Boers of the Union have grown to believe that Britain means to respect their nationality. Botha's own words were: "Those many heroes in the past have been hostile to the English flag, that would weary ten times rather be under the British than the German flag," definitely indicating the tremendous change in the Boer's attitude in the last few years. "This change has come about," explains the

New York Times, "as a result of an act of statesmanship not often equaled in breadth of spirit and in courage."

By the South Africa act of 1890, the colonies of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange River were united in a legislative union as the Union of South Africa. The popular body of the legislature, the House of Assembly, is elected by the whole people on a broad franchise, and from the start the Dutch Boer members, known as the Nationalists and led by General Botha, have outnumbered all other political factions combined. The English and Dutch languages are both official and are both used in the schools. The Governor-General is appointed by the king, but the English turned over the popular control of the Union to the Dutch whom they had been fighting eighty years before. Now we see the result. These Dutchmen "would be ill at ease under British rule, the German flag". It is a splendid triumph for the bold and broad statesmanship of the British Empire.

Writing in a German paper, the Hamburg Freidenblatt, a Prof. Paul Gauß, who has spent ten years in the Transvaal, discusses quite frankly the situation in South Africa and emphasizes the fact that the Boers are clinging to the idea of realizing their race and patriotic ideals under the British flag. In addition, he sees no "call of the blood" between the Boer and German. In his opinion, the Boer still recalls Germany's failure to answer that call and gives him expected help during the Boer War. The German professor foresees no revolution at the time that he wrote, September 26, but rather an open conflict between the Boers and the Germans.

Such opinions as this indicate that England's fears over the "avalanche" may be exaggerated. It has been stated that German Southwest Africa has not the men nor the wealth to aid the Maritz faction against the Union, unless a vast number of the Union Boers go over to the German standard. There is, in addition, another consideration that may weigh heavily with the sympathizers of Maritz, and that is the action of Portugal in siding definitely with England. And the New York World reminds us that "in that quarter of the world the little Republic has power by no means to be discounted." —Literary Digest.

family

Our trade in Munsingwear is family trade. Fathers buy it for themselves and for their boys, mothers buy it for their own use as well as for their daughters. And the fact that our trade is growing right along, seems to show that they all like it. There's a right size for everybody, from little tots to grandparents.

And what underwear can anyone in the family get that will wash so well, wear so long, fit so perfectly and give so much comfort and satisfaction for so little money, as Munsing Union-Suits? As for us, we're glad to be able to distribute locally an article of such unusual merit as Munsingwear.

Our Manufacturing Department is at Your Service

Just a word of warning to those that wish any jewelry made to order before Christmas. Bring in your old and out of date Jewelry at once and have it made over into new and up-to-date designs. We can do this in our wonder shop, but not if you wait much longer as Christmas is just around the corner and we are unable to do manufacturing the last two weeks before Christmas, therefore do it now.

German Cruiser Sunk by North Sea Mine

SIX JAPANESE CRUISERS SIGHTED OFF CHILIAN COAST

Fighting Waves Near the English Channel. German Troops Transferred to the East

(Special to The Times.)

Tacoma, Nov. 5th. 1914.—A British collier which has arrived and Valparaiso has now sunk eight Japanese warships in Easter Island in the Pacific, about 2300 miles west of the Chilean coast. Easter island belongs to the Republic of Chile. German cruiser "Yorck" has struck a mine in Jade Bay and sunk.

The Associated Press informed me today that the British and Swedish Shipping Association declares that the English blockading of the North sea is a blow to shipping of neutral powers.

TKD—Dispatch says it is official that the bombardment of Tripoli continues.

LONDON—Reports are that Great Britain has formally annexed the island of Cyprus today. It was part of the Turkish empire. ## A NEW TYPE OF PLAYS

The Shepherd of the Hills Depicts Southern Mountain Life at its Best.

"The Shepherd of the Hills," the dramatization of Harold Bell Wright's novel, which holds the record for the largest sales of any American work of fiction, which has been made by Wright with the assistance of Michael Redford, opens its first engagement at the Lakewood theatre, Saturday evening, Nov. 7.

The scenes of the play are laid among the Ozark mountains of Missouri. It is a story of the hills and the simple life, yet it has plenty of excitement and an air of mystery that hold the auditor from beginning to end. The author has written it to entice the reader to the Ozarks.

"The story has to do with the father of an artist, who, tired of life, goes into the Ozarks for peace and quietude. He learns of a grievous sin committed by his son, whom he loves and despises. The son had visited the hills alone, a year before, when he fell in love with a simple country girl. He painted her picture and when he went back to the city, deserting the girl, he earned fame because of the picture. The girl deserted and broken-hearted, died, leaving behind her a half-finished son.

If you are the type of person who is worried about the father of the artist, come and here he is employed to watch the scene. He grows to love the country and its people, and he and the girl—when there is a love story between them through the play of a young giant of the hills for "Sammy Lane," a girl of unusual qualities.

There are several characters whose quaint humor is a decided novelty. Taken as a whole, the play promises to be a refreshing change from the general run of dramatic attractions this season.

Meers, Gaskill and MacLean, the producers, are said to have given the play elaborate costing, the mountains of the Ozarks affording an opportunity for fine examples of the scenic painter's art. The cast has been selected for their peculiar fitness for each type.

IF WE ONLY HAD THE NERVE

Eastern Editor Has Blew War Time Pipe Dream.

Last week we received an invitation to buy a ticket to see "If We Only Had the Nerve," the things are not so well. We'll be lucky if we can buy a spot of cotton. Gee! If we only had the nerve! What we couldn't do! Had we been born with the kind of some people we'd be here. Who's who?—you would find out there's a lot of us who have been raised to $5 per year, cash in advance."

"On account of the loss from import duties, advertising rates will be increased to 50 cents per inch. Effective at once."

"We're almost to announce that owing to the almost complete suspension of the importation of chemicals, obituary notices will cost you 10 cents immediately. Being impossible to export these articles, notices of church services will be charged for at the rate of $2 each and two tickets to the supper."

"Resulting from the suspension of regular shipping facilities between this town and the Gulf of Mexico, all pumpkins, apples, potatoes, corn-squash, etc., brought to this office

WOULDN'T BE BLUFFED

Maxwell Movie Man Does Spectacular Stunt in Chicago.

A Maxwell Movie man was driving one of the Maxwell cars down Michigan Avenue, Chicago, with a friend, afternoons in view, and as they passed the Logan monument in Grant Park, opposite Ninth street, a traffic policeman stopped him.

"You can't drive on the sidewalk," said the policeman.

"I'm not driving on the sidewalk," retorted the Maxwell man. "I'm not driving on the sidewalk," he retorted. "Meet me again at 4:30 tomorrow morning and we'll go up and down Grant Park again."

"Well, if I know it, you won't take me up there, but I'll let you a dinner and the film if you are plucked, that you cannot take the car up there."

Edgar the next morning the Maxwell man called at the office of the Essanay Film Company and their operator got into the car. At 3:30 they were at the monument and the camera set up. An unusually clear picture resulted, and will be shown together with a hundred other equally clear pictures.

"It's a great success," said the operator. "I'll be no admission, complimentary tickets being obtainable from the local Maxwell dealer, Mr. E. S. Johnson."

"Don't fall to see this wonderful production. It is just as interesting as it is educational. Lots of life and a comprehensive study of automobile manufacture."
