of labor and the better of labor. They know that if any one thing will bring results it is their story of wanting work brought to the attention of a large number of people any time day. The dollar the labor market has been the advertising unit because with the laboring man. On the other hand with a few exceptions, the business man not fixating the value of the advertising stimulus does the reverse. When money is plentiful and business is good, advertising is also a boast. When the dull season strikes business, he begins to cut down advertising to expose the very first opportunity. In- stead of rightly fixating that advertising is a part of the fixed overhead expense, he regards it as a financial liability. Just why the business man should have a different view regarding the necessity of advertising as the key-note to business success is a matter to be given but not to be overlooked. Despite this, the advertiser succeeds in mercantile life by live merchants, the risk and the uncertainty fail to grasp the opportunity, but skilfully fail to figure out the reason and this each year get to counting on losing money during the dull season. Common sense judgment should show to any man that if advertising has a pulling power for business in the busy season, that it must still have the same force in the dull times. Yet where there is one live business man making use of a business getting power, there is a score of them in every community, who are not. Most of the business men baste mail order houses and want to combat them, yet will at the critical period be their vital connection between the man- ifos and the consumers and top all advertising. The mail-order house does not do business that way, advertising is their live wire connection with their million customers scattered over a wide area. The duller the times the more stress they put upon their cheaper lines of goods. Is it any wonder that the mail order houses grow faster in dull times than during prosperous times when the community merely marks time? It is because they actually sell the public that they expect no business, because the times are dull. You point out the successful ventures in any community and without a single exception you will find that venture keeps its connection with the public through some form of advertising. There is no reason why a man should drift down stream away from his destination when the will and the way to the shore of determination and a pair of oars await his hands. Advertising is not a chance or luck, but an applied science based upon the physiology of the workings of the human mind. The man who studies the situation of field in which his business is conducted, the man who at various attempts by some means or other in the way of advertising to keep up the public interest in his business. The absent treatment of advertising since never appeals to him.

A CALL TO GERMAN AMERICANS TO ORGANIZE

"In reading and perhaps grave possibilities for the movement to weld our German-American population has a unit for some action not as yet clearly defined. This plan is indicated in Mr. Herman Ridder's advice to Americans of German descent to 'organize' and by Mr. Maurice Leoni's assertion that under a special German law, Germany may become American citizen without sacrificing their German citizenship and allegiance. The subject acquires an added interest when we remember that some statisticians place the number of German-Americans in the United States at 20,000,000. It is well for those Americans of German extraction to ponder on the many grave problems which confront them owing to the war," writes Mr. Ridder, who is convinced that "the drift of public opinion, driven by a press un- friendly toward Germany, requires a clear bond of sympathy between the friends of Germany." The day draws near, he declares, when "the afflu- ent hard pressed, forced by their necessities, will demand of the United States even a more active co-operation than they are receiving at the present time," and "against that day they will be organized." This advice is set forth in his German-American fellow citizens is published in Mr. Ridder's New York Staats-Zeitung. To quote other passages:

"Each single and individual German residing in the United States or the descendant of a German man play his or her part in preaching the gospel of German justice and German fair- ness. Let us avoid the chain of in- dubitable help to giving the balance, which in favor of the cause we know is just. There must be no shirkers; no dropouts in this campaign. The responsibility lies evenly on every one of you. We cannot resort to conscription but must rely upon universal service of a voluntary character. . . ."

"There are over two thousand German societies of one kind or another in Greater New York. Practically every German-speaking American, as well as thousands residing in New York, are members of one or more of these societies. Similarly in each great city the Germans and their descendants have proved loyal to the traditions of their fathers. . . . These societies form strong rallying points for a campaign of education. . . ."

"There have been no traitors to the German cause either among the 66,000,000 Germans in Germany or their millions of Germans and their descendants in the United States. . . . I am preaching the highest form of loyalty I know. We are a mixed people in the United States. We have come from the ends of the earth. We have all given our oaths to the building up of this great country. We all deserve equally of it and of it all. There is no reason therefore, why its disputes should be swayed more by the people who think so, than by those who think so. . . ."

Replying to Mr. Ridder through the columns of the New York Sun, Mr. Leoni writes:

"Organize for what? What is expected of German-Americans by Mr. Ridder and his associates? Here is the issue of the election called in the United States are expected to stand as one man for the German cause, and Mr. Ridder now proclaims that any one in this country coming under the all-inclusive description of the German Citizenship Law who does not stand by the German cause as steadfastly as the invaders of Belgium, northeast France, and Poland must be stigmatized as a traitor.

"In this connection the Pan-German campaign conducted by German members in Congress under the convenient cloak of news propaganda is of a significance which has been clear so far to comparatively few of our citizens. It even leads one to suspect that the Los Angeles Times might be well informed in its disclosure of the preparations for a raid against Canada by a German force mobilized in California.

"Mr. Ridder's call to 'organize' is intended to be understood as meaning 'mobilize.' This mobilization is not to be largely military in character. . . . leave for the present, but rather political. Dr. Bernbach, on the basis of an enormous German political machine, has been elected to the American Government so that it will recognize the annexation of Belgium by the Kaiser. Once that is achieved, our Minister and Consuls in Belgium will be treated as mediators concerning themselves improperly with matters affecting German subjects if they continue their activities in behalf of a prostrate people to whom the United States still stands as the symbol of human justice and pity.

Speaking for the German-American members of Congress, Representative Richard A. Barthelet, of Missouri, rose one the floor of the House to answer Mr. Leoni's charge that he and his colleagues were acting as agents of the German Government. He said in part:

"It is true I am an American citizen of German birth, but this means, if I do not differ from all other American-Germans, that I am a man who is loyal to the Stars and Stripes and who is by America against England, America against Germany, for America against the world."

Turning to the dual-citizenship charge, Mr. Barthelet denounced it as "almost incredible in its mendacity." The facts, he said, are simply these:

"Germany like every other country, has a law which makes it possible for those who are away from the Fatherland to retain their citizenship by reporting within ten years to a German consul, but when so reporting they must make oath that they have not acquired or taken steps to acquire citizenship in any other country. The period within which they must register used to be only two years, but was extended to ten years when it was found that many persons had innocently forfeited their citizenship owing to the shortness of time. That is all."

This does not silence Mr. Leoni, however, who thus returns to the attack:

"It is amazing to find that these Pan-Germans in Congress have been driven to such desperate devices as actually to try to deceive the House of Representatives—swearing the sacred and effective of the German Citizenship Law. The text of that law, which was adopted by the Reichstag and Bundesrat and signed on July 22, 1913, by the German Emperor, at Ballholm, on board the yacht Hohenzollern, is found in the supplement to The American Journal of International Law of July, 1914. Paragraph 2 in Article 25 of that law reads as follows:

"Citizenship is not lost by one who, before acquiring foreign citizenship, has secured an application from the written consent of the competent authorities of his home state to retain his citizen- ship. Before this consent is given the German Consul is to be heard."

The New York Sun points out that this dual citizenship could not be achieved without perjury, since under our law the applicant for American citizenship must make solemn oath that he "absolutely and entirely re- nounces and abjures all allegiance and fidelity to every foreign prince, potentate, State, or sovereignty, and particularly by name, that of which he was heretofore a subject or citizen." This paper goes on to say:

"It will be seen that this oath is as searching and inclusive as it will could be. The possibility of a dual citizenship, or subject-citizenship, is not contemplated by the law. Such a division of loyalty, such a commingling of allegiances as the retention of foreign citizenship in company with American citizenship, as might be accomplished by a German under the terms of the law quoted by Mr. Leoni, would be repugnant to American institu- tions, subversive of American inter- ests, and against our public policy."
