A COMMUNITY BUILDER

Worth of Commercial Club Emphasized By Resume of Work

Every Good Move Made by the Community Can Be Traced Directly to Work Done by Booster's Organization.

The Twin Falls Commercial club, since its organization in 1908, has been the one great factor in the upbuilding of Twin Falls and in fact of Twin Falls county. Its officers and members, year in and year out, have ever been on the alert to secure everything that in any way would tend to bring in new energy on club matters, and to secure the whole Snake river valley. During the year 1914, Presidents Sweeley and Swin have devoted much time and energy on club matters, and Secretary McMillan has been on the job day and night and no matter was too small for his utmost efforts provided it in any way advertised or benefited our city, our county or southern Idaho.

COMING WEEK

A Real Minstrel Show with Forty People Rilled.

SCHOOL WAGON OVERTURNED

Automobile Driver Gets In Bad at Bath.

J. H. Doyle, of this city, had an exciting experience last week in which he came into collision with some fire rangers living near that place. Mr. Doyle stated that while running his fire truck last week he had occasion to pass four school wagons loaded with children and drew to one side of the road to allow them to pass. In doing so he became excited. Mr. Doyle's wagon became overturned. Mr. Doyle is not expected any danger to his life and the occupants proceeded on into Bath. Within a short time he was contacted by two fire rangers who accused him of willfully running into the school wagon and upsetting it. They were notified of the accident. Mr. Doyle was appointed to place him under arrest, but after investigating the matter, it was found that he was not at fault. A promise to appear in any proceedings were instituted against him. It seems that the team driven by the woman became unmanageable and ran away striking against a culvert and tipping the high wagon. Some of the children were shaken up and bruised but luckily escaped serious injury. Mr. Doyle very much regretted the affair and stated that the Times had had he known the accident he would not have gone on. All restorers every assistance possible.

SYNOPSIS

Zudora is left in an orphan as an early orphan. Her father, Mr. Miller, had been killed by a mine he was supervising. Half an hour after hearing of the death of her father, Zudora's mother—a light-rope walker with a circus—was seized with a vertigo, falls and is killed. Zudora and the fortune from the mine, which grows to be worth $20,000,000, are left in the guardianship of Frank Keene, a circus man, Zudora's mother's brother. Zudora giving promise of great beauty, reaches the age of 18. The night, who had himself up as a Hindu mystic and is known as Hassan Ali, decides in his greed that Zudora must die before she can have a chance to speculate on the fortune of her money, so that it may be left to him, the most of kin, and he prevails upon her to leave her money in his hands three years longer and say nothing to anyone about the fortune. Hassan Ali sees an obstacle to his scheme in the person of John Storm, a young lawyer for whom Zudora has taken a fancy, and he commands the girl to get the man out of her mind. Storm goes, and Zudora, at the hand of his niece, At first the crystal gazer will listen to the proposition—Zudora insists that if she cannot marry Storm she will marry no one.

"Well, you," says Hassan Ali, "if you take such a stand, I'll compromise. Save the girl, and you can marry him; fall in a single case, and you must renounce him."

Zudora, under the knowledge gained from years of casual visits to her uncle, unravels a series of baffling mysteries.

(Copyright, 1914, by Harold MacGrath.)

CHAPTER VIII. THE HYPNOTIC POWER OF MR. CHANG.

"For a long time Zudora paced her room. She was troubled. That afternoon Storm had pleaded with her so strongly to leave her money in his hands and go far away that she had been drawn almost irresistibly toward her lover. From time to time she paused before some object, moved it about wearily, and resumed her pacing. The youth in her wanted to fly away and be happy. The thought of her was fortune often tortured her. The moment the world-ford-out that she was so rich, she would be a beggar. Her fortune harked. Every grade of beggar would be at her door. More than that, she had made some "miserable" dealer. Her short career as a detective, and if these individuals know of her wealth they would level no stone unturned to find her and take some of her money. She could hardly count that sum durifig her allotted years!

"Sometimes she found herself on the street, looking at the faces of the people. Every grade of beggar would be at her door. More than that, she had made some "miserable" dealer. Her short career as a detective, and if these individuals know of her wealth they would level no stone unturned to find her and take some of her money. She could hardly count that sum durifig her allotted years!

"I have you an appointment," asked the servant bowing. "One sees him at night, only by appointment. I believe he will see you. He is repelled with a singular smile. "Announces Hassan Ali. Dr. Roy, the physician, returned directly. "Follow me, madame, the master will see you."

pend?" murmured the distracted lover. At any moment Hassan Ali might appear upon the scene. "Still he might change left the room. "It is done!" he said to Hassan Ali. "It is something, I've never been able to access him. She'll, very strong mentally." "But at that moment she was thinking of love," said the oriental. "Now Hassan Ali, who had been upon, discussing the silence of the night, young man may at any time become suspicious and break in. Let us act at once. Hassan Ali, I shall remain the servant of Hassan Ali. You have makeup. Come! hurry!"

In a very short time the two returned to Zudora. They put on her hat and coat and led her from the room. "Storm called has gone around to the door," said the girl fervently. "You are the only one who knows Hassan Ali," said the girl. "You are the only one who knows Hassan Ali," said the girl. "You are the only one who knows Hassan Ali," said the girl.

"Come on then! And drive like the devil! Did you get the license number?" "Too dark to see, but there was a crack in the tail lamp." "It was a wild goose chase, for they had not seen the car with a crack in the tail lamp. But there was one thing that John Storm knew: if it was in the way of harm befall his sweet girl, he would kill Hassan Ali with his bare hands.

"Suppose we go down to Chinatown and make a try," suggested the chauffeur. "A good idea!" By dint of inquiry they learned that the car was in the hands of a man named Storm. Storm called for over an hour, and no one came out. He concluded that the car was in the hands of a man named Storm. Storm called for over an hour, and no one came out. He concluded that the car was in the hands of a man named Storm.

there came occasionally a ripple of applause. The sweet began to form upon the face of Chang's forehead. Two such exploits in one day were terribly conserving. When the affair was over the stiffened figure of the Chinaman who found some difficulty in opening his thin lips, turned toward which had been tightly clenched under the concentration of his will. "I am weak," he whispered rather weakly to Mills, who sat next to him, and E. Will took the letter of his bargain. "And never hear again of your son's whereabouts?" "I don't know," said Mills, flushed, but for all that he was mightily glad to be high and dry on shore. He would send the boy on a boat, and he would be back in a week.

Chang entered Mills' automobile, and a plain clothes man recognized his face and immediately warned Storm and the other officers. Chang's face was white as he was taken away from his house, but he was weak and tired and wanted to be left alone. "I am weak," he whispered rather weakly to Mills, who sat next to him, and E. Will took the letter of his bargain.

"That's my business," said Hassan Ali gruffly. "Now this is a room for the girl, I am not going to trust to you to take care of her." "There is a walled room, the method of getting in and out of it is secret." "I rather believe you can find me out with the secret," said Hassan Ali gruffly.

"Follow me!" Zudora had to be led. She was physically tired and her mind was temporarily blank. Once in the walled room, she saw down below, after the manner of persons hypnotized, and started to run. It was as if Hassan Ali could do to resist the desire to bring her out of the room. She was so tired and her mind was so blank that she could not resist the desire to bring her out of the room.

He followed Chang's advice without more ado, and was stung inside a taxi with Zudora when Chang opened the door to Storm. He made as though to close the door, but he was stopped by a quick kick for him. He rushed in thoughtlessly, and as Chang closed in, flung his arms about the girl. Storm, who had been sitting in the car, got out and rushed toward the girl. He followed Chang's advice without more ado, and was stung inside a taxi with Zudora when Chang opened the door to Storm.

It is the aim of the real Shoshone falls and are located in the heart of the Palaces. It is expected to have the Shoshone falls grade completed by May first, thus enabling the club to develop the Shoshone falls, Shoshone falls and thus to write and Ely, Nevada. It goes without saying that these miniature falls at the exposition will attract many tourists, to whom rights of this kind appear and will keep them from the falls.

See America First will be the slogan this year and nowhere in the United States is there a larger attraction than Shoshone falls and the Yellowstone.

The club has been regularly before the county board of supervisors, roads and bridges and have secured many needed improvements and construction work.

The club now has a complaint filed before the Utilities Commission concerning excess rates. The change sought will prove beneficial to the rate payers and will result in a substantial reduction of the present rate.

Secretary McMillan got in touch with Helen Idaho Falls Commercial bodies and jointly they went before the railroad officials and secured free slide trips from Minotaka to Twin Falls on the Shoshone falls.

A new idea, to-wit, a community Christmas tree, was inaugurated and while not all the club could have attended, it showed the true Christmas spirit and it is the forerunner of a larger and better showing next time.

The club organized a free rural Lyceum course which has more than 40 of our citizens attending and every week these members visit the rural districts and at the school houses give most excellent entertainments. The success of these members is "donated" and the entertainments absolutely free to our country neighbors. This high school band frequently volunteers some splendid music.

The Seed Growers' Convention was held in Twin Falls, Idaho, on the 20th and 21st of January. The Twin Falls growers in attendance from all over the state and Utah. The amount and quality of the seeds grown in the Twin Falls country was a revelation to the convention and created much favorable comment.

The Eastern Idaho Press club held their annual meeting in the club rooms. The club offered a purse of $25 for the best written article on "The Twin Falls Country."

The club has secured for the year the Fifteen-White Chautauqua for one week in June, 1915. Twenty-five of our members entertaining the same and our people are fortunate in having this opportunity at their home and at small a cost.

The club took up the matter of a 3-cent railroad fare with the Union Commission for the Twin Falls branch of the Short Line. Such a rate is now in force and is of much value to all the business interests of the city.

We have secured and distributed 2500 volumes of the state booklet, "The Dawn of Plenty," and innumerable other forms of literature together with thousands of personal letters written by the secretary of the club that has an up-to-date bearing right in the heart of the Twin Falls.

We are now on the edge of the largest flow of people to the west we have ever seen. See America First. The millions of dollars that have gone abroad every year in the pockets of the tourist, will be on account of the Twin Falls. This year's drift to the scenic west. To to our efforts to pull together split our efforts and a pull together split established and prosperly will shine on in plenty. We are fortunately situated to attract travel. We have the greatest asset, as has the state of Idaho, in the Great Shoshone falls. They are our drawing card and will be used by the state to attract tourists. 1915 is the opportunity for Twin Falls. Let us embrace it and begin now.

NEW SYSTEM FOR CAREY ACT

House Investigation Reveals the Lack of Business Methods.

Testimony of officials of the state land department before the house investigating committee yesterday brought out the fact that the system of accounting of Carey act lands does not charge expenditures to the several separate projects and that it is impossible to ascertain what the state's supervision of any particular project has cost. The committee is a mind to recommend to the legislature an establishment of a business-like system of bookkeeping for a fund, but has not arrived at a decision as to what specific suggestions should be made.

S. P. Shawhan, member for the state of Idaho, was elected as the state legislator of the state board of land commissioners, and Herbert Wing, acting state engineer, were the witnesses called before the committee yesterday. The examination took the form through most of the afternoon, of an inquiry as to the method of drawing contracts and vouchers against the Carey act funds. Mr. Jennings told of the two offices where vouchers are made out—the office and that of the state engineer. Vouchers are drawn by the state auditor after the vouchers are approved. Mr. Jennings explained that the vouchers drawn by the state engineer are direct to the state board of examiners and only a duplicate of each is filed in the land department, and to the project office.

Mr. Wing was questioned at length about the part given in administration of Carey act projects by the state engineer's office, about his opinion regarding the success or failure of various projects, especially the one known as the King Hill and the Twin Falls West End. The committee wants to learn not only what has become of the Carey act funds, but what were the underlying causes of the troubles that have given Carey act projects and the state of Idaho an unsavory reputation in the minds of settlers.

Having been an assistant in the office of the state engineer since 1904, Mr. Wing has been in the state engineer's office, about his opinion regarding the success or failure of various projects, especially the one known as the King Hill and the Twin Falls West End. The committee wants to learn not only what has become of the Carey act funds, but what were the underlying causes of the troubles that have given Carey act projects and the state of Idaho an unsavory reputation in the minds of settlers.

Mr. Wing said it was true that vouchers against the Carey act funds were drawn by the state engineer without having been passed upon by any board—the governor employed in his message. But the vouchers were sworn to and accompanied by state vouchers, and he had always supposed that they were approved by the board of examiners before they were drawn.

New Counties Get the Final Touches of Governor's Signature.

New Counties. The legislative counties came into being last night. Governor Alexander signed the Benewah county bill Saturday afternoon. He authorized the signature of the bill to the double event with evident jubilation. News of the signing of the Benewah county division bill reached northern Idaho and it was a matter of course that it should be a part of the English judicial district.

Prohibition. The prohibitionists were disturbed by the late date set in the resolution. They have repeatedly stated their confidence that, even if they fail to get a statewide bill on the floor, they can carry Idaho by from 15,000 to 20,000 majority for a constitutional amendment. It is said to be quite evident in the introduction of the statewide prohibition bill, affecting January 1, 1916, that the dry are not going to take any chances. They claim 50 per cent of the house of representatives is dry and passage of the bill is assured. If it is therefore considered to rest with the senate. The upper house is believed to be dry by a safe majority. Even the most prom-

BUICK owners have that snug feeling of security which comes from knowing that their BUICK will take them anywhere and bring them back.

The BUICK develops more power and goes further on a gallon of gasoline, than other cars, because of its overhead valve motor.

It was BUICK power that sent a motor car across the Andes mountain for the first time in history. Other American cars tried and failed. Foreign cars tried and failed. But the Buick pulled its way across.

has for its county seat Bonners Ferry and is formed out of the north half of Banner county and is the most northern county of the state with the Canadian line as its northern boundary.

Benewah county was named in honor of a celebrated Indian character of the north, Chief Benewah, whose fathers have ranged the hills ment of the wet leaders, after a poll, admit they can only muster 15 votes.

A well defined antagonistic attitude on the part of members of both branches of the legislature developed within the week just closed, against existing commissions, commissioners and heads of departments, boards and there is every reason to believe now, that every effort will be put forth by them to strike from the statute books the acts that placed them there by previous legislatures which created either the commissions or boards. The public utilities commission has apparently been rejected for renewal. Its friends may have some difficulty in saving it. Two years ago they had a fight on their hands to create the commission and clothe it with power. There are now pending in both house measures to repeal the chapter that gives it existence and a separate bill is pending to take from it the power to regulate competition.

FENCE FOR SHEEP PASTURES

All the Extra Care and Feed Given to the Farm Flock Generally Yields Greatest Returns.

The late and profitable sheep raising country has been the factor in the decline of the sheep industry in many localities. A woven wire fence is the cheapest and most satisfactory, all things considered. If it must be depicted the producer should be close enough together to prevent the dogs passing through, and it should be at least five feet high, which is a desirable height for all outside fences. Care should be taken in putting up the fence to see that the wire is close enough to the ground to prevent dogs from crawling under it. A temporary fence three or four inches high, 24 inches wide, is very satisfactory, and is used extensively. An advantage of wire fencing is that neither sheep nor dogs will jump it so readily. Hardly any wire is used, except at the top, because the sheep fear out their wool upon the bars.

Hurdles are a great aid in handling sheep under certain circumstances. They are convenient in pasturing on rangeland and similar crops where the sheep are to be confined to a portion of the field. This is desirable in that it prevents the sheep picking out the choicest pasture first and leaving the poorest for the last when, as a matter of fact, under favorable conditions, the best should be available.

Fencing off part of the field in this way also makes more frequent rotation of pasture. In England nothing is more common than the use of temporary fences of rope or staples. Sheep farming in this country has not been intensive enough to warrant a very extensive use of these appliances, but they will be more in evidence in the future. Hurdles or panels are a very convenient in making temporary pens. Light hurdles that can be handled readily should have a place upon every sheep farm. They are well worth their cost. Every sheep owner should be prepared to make pens for his sheep on short notice.

After lambing, some ewes refuse to leave their offspring. If left loose the ewe becomes a pest among the flock, and loses its characteristic smell by which the ewe recognizes it. She may then refuse to clamb it, and the trouble begins. By having some panels or hurdles at hand the ewe and lamb may be quickly placed by themselves and a close watch can be kept upon them to see that all is well. The length of time they should be kept in this claiming pen will depend upon how long it takes the ewe to become reconciled to her lamb. If the ewe persists in biting the lamb away, she should be tied so as to allow the lamb to suck. This soon brings about a reconcilable relation between the ewe and lamb. This is but one of the numerous cases where it is advantageous to have portable panels handy. Temporary pens are conveniently made of two sides of light material and consist of two sides that are hinged together, and which is a corner of the barn or a corner by the means of hooks. Rows of these can be placed along the side if necessary. They have the advantage that they take up little room and they can be removed when not in use. Sorting pens and lots are very useful, especially if the flock is of any considerable size. It is often desirable to separate the different classes of sheep. A number of pens should be available for this purpose. A chute, with a gate that swings either way, saves much time and trouble in separating the sheep. Portable pens are very useful for this purpose.

Files Better Sheeps. Watch your sheep for an hour or so some warm day when the flies are harassing them and you will understand why sheep owners are so anxious to gain even on the best of pasture.

MARKETING WORLD'S GREATEST PROBLEM

WE ARE LONG ON PRODUCTION, SHORT ON DISTRIBUTION.

By Peter Radford, Lecturer, National Farmers' Union.

The economic distribution of farm products is today the world's greatest problem. The farmer, while he has brought his hardships, has clearly emphasized the importance of distribution as a factor in American agriculture and promises to give the farmers the cooperation of the government and the business men the solution of their marketing problem.

This result will, in a measure, compensate us for our war losses, for the business interests and government have been in the main assisting almost exclusively on the production side of agriculture. While the department of literature on the farmer telling him how to produce, the farmer has been dumping tons of products in the nation's garbage can for want of a market.

The World Will Never Starve. At no time since Adam and Eve were driven from the Garden of Eden have the inhabitants of this world suffered from lack of production, but some people are so hungry for food that they are ready to pay any price for the day-of creation to this good hour for the lack of proper distribution. Slight variations in production have forced a change in diet and one locality has felt the pinch of want, while another surplus has been a land of plenty.

We now have less than one-tenth of the tillable land of the earth's surface under cultivation, and we not only have this surplus area to draw on but it is safe to estimate that in case of dire necessity one-half the earth's population could at the present time knock their living out of the trees of the forest, gather it from wild vines and draw it from streams. No people are so hungry for food that the world will never starve.

The consumer has always feared that the producer would not supply him and his fright has found expression on the statute books of our states and nations and the farmer has been urged to produce recklessly and without reference to market, and regardless of the demands of the consumer.

Back to the Soil. The city people have been urging each other to move back to the farm, but very few of them have moved. We welcome our city cousins back to the soil and this earth's surface contains 16,092,160,000 idle acres of tillable land where they can make a living by tilling the earth with a forked stick, but we do not need them so far as increasing production is concerned; we now have all the products we can use.

The city man has very erroneous ideas of agricultural conditions. The commonly accepted theory that we are short on production is all wrong. Our annual increase in production far exceeds that of our increase in population.

The World as a Farm. Taking the world as one big farm, we find two billion acres of land in cultivation. Of this amount there is approximately 750,000,000 acres on the western and 1,500,000,000 acres on the eastern hemisphere, in cultivation. This estimate, of course, does not include arid lands, forests, etc.

where large quantities of meat are produced. The world's annual crop approximates fifteen billion bushels of corn, thirteen billion pounds of flour and sixty-five million tons of wool.

The average annual world crop for the past five years, compared with the previous five years, is as follows:

Crop	Decade	Previous Half Decade
Corn (Bu.)	2,334,174,000	3,403,655,000
Wheat (Bu.)	7,522,769,000	3,527,528,000
Oats (Bu.)	4,120,017,000	3,508,315,000
Cotton (Bales)	19,869,800	17,841,300

The world shows an average increase in total production of 33 per cent during the past decade, compared with the previous five years, while the world's population shows an increase of only three per cent.

The gain in production far exceeds that of our increase in population, and it is safe to estimate that the farmer can easily increase production 25 per cent if a remunerative market can be found for the products. In textile fibers the world shows an increase during the past half decade in production of 15 per cent against a population increase of three per cent.

The people of this nation should address themselves to the subject of improved facilities for distribution.

Over-production and crop mortgages force the farmers into ruinous competition with each other. The remedy lies in organization and in co-operation in marketing.

HAD TO STAND THE GHOSTS

Frenchman Vainly Tried to Get Relief—From His Unwelcome, Noisy Visitors.

Writing on the effect of ghosts on tenants, William W. Ackery in Chicago comments that of cases before the parliament of Paris less than four centuries ago. It appeared that a house was let in the suburbs of Paris, and that the tenant, being promptly disturbed by "noises and rattling of tables and chairs, which afforded neither himself nor his family to sleep at night," as promptly went to law. The lower court broke the lease, the hauntings being considered insupportable nuisances—yet this held without letters royal, and the tenant appealed on the formal point. Then the ghost was in for it. The learned counsel for the lessors brought in a host of noisy spirits, and cited Joan of Arc, and others from Plato, Philo, Juvenal, Empedocles, Marcus Aurelius, Quintilian and Dioscorides, as authority. He concluded that the tenant and his family were suffering from nightmares, and suggested that they should consult a physician and use a solution of grain. That the house was haunted, that they should appeal to the clergy, and not to the law. Naturally the tenant's attorney did not appreciate his adversary's method of argument, and told him so. He then called upon the agents for assistance, citing Pliny, Plutarch, Suetonius, Ovid, the Fathers, and whom else do you suppose? Why, none other than the self-same Plato whose authority had been quoted so glibly to the contrary. Obviously that philosopher was like many of our courts, either overlooked, or found good reason for overlooking, a former decision; or else he was an equitable soul and wished to satisfy both parties. Anyway, however, it seems that the lower court was reversed, and the poor tenant, of course, had to endure his unwelcome cotenant, or pay the full term's rent and vacate.

FEATS OF CARRIER PIGEONS

Since the Franco-Prussian War Their Value Has Been Recognized by All Governments.

The famous performance of carrier pigeons during the siege of Paris in the Franco-Prussian war, when they carried upwards of 40,000 messages, was the result of an inspiration rather than of forethought. Private citizens who chanced to have pigeons offered them to the government. Their performance was such a splendid success that France has ever since maintained large flocks in charge of the engineer corps.

The birds are carefully trained as soon as they are able to fly and are then drilled daily for the rest of their useful lives. They are taught to fly to a light on signal. The first thing Blumark did after the treaty of peace was signed was to establish pigeon-lofts in Berlin and elsewhere throughout the empire. Every other nation in Europe followed his example, and today every government has thousands of pigeons, all ready to carry messages in time of war.

Signaling With Smoke.
A simple and most ingenious method of signaling from an aeroplane has just been invented by a young French aviator named "Mok." It is a system of signal telegraph, the dots and dashes of the Morse code being written in the air by short and long puffs of smoke.
The apparatus for discharging these puffs, as built by Hergot, consists of a black receptacle for smoke, situated below the aviator's seat and projecting downwards. It is closed at its lower end by a valve that can be opened and shut with a small lever. According to the length or brevity of the puffing the puff of smoke is a dash or a dot. The smoke trails horizontally behind the aeroplane and remains long-time in the air if this is still; even in a high wind it remains long enough to be read with a field-glass at a distance of several miles.

Agreed With Him.
Bertha Mann, is a southern girl, but she is not blind to the little shortcomings of that section.
It was while she was touring, during the days preceding the "arrival" of a sterling dramatic actress, that she stopped at one of the hotels for which the southern town is less celebrated than distinguished. She dallied with the boys, and the common belief of the hardness of her life in a small town.
"Do you feed your own family the same food that you feed to the guests?" she inquired.
"Just the same, just the same," he replied.
"Then I agree that you do have a hard life," was her mournful reply.

Concrete Roads.
Concrete road construction has increased from 254,000 square yards in 1905 to 15,200,000 square yards, which it is estimated has been laid during the season of 1914. This would be sufficient, were it put down in a single trench, to form a roadway four yards wide and 2,700 miles long—Scientific American.

Shoes With Aluminum Soles.
One of the newest and perhaps odddest uses of aluminum is in making the soles of shoes for use by workmen employed in wet and damp places. The aluminum-soled shoe lasts much longer than the ordinary shoe, and is said to be impervious to dampness.

LOST HER PUPS; ADOPTS PIGS

Rescued Terrier Makes Raid on Litter of Savage Sow and Carries Off Two.

So far as known the following authenticated bit of unnatural history holds the belt. It is vouched for by the entire staff of the Big Otis Wild Animal farm, on the Farmdale road.

Bingo, a black and tan terrier belonging to "Fatty" (last name not given), lost her litter of four puppies last week by the sack-and-stone route. The puppies, though wonderful in her eyes, were nothing but mutton to those of "Fatty," one of the employees of the wild animal farm. Bingo is a thoroughbred herself, but her children, alas, were not. So they were put away.

Bingo mourned sincerely for six days. On the seventh, still grieving, she made an excursion to the farm of a neighbor. There, in a pig sty, she came across a litter of 12 baby porkers, pink and succulent and a week old.

Little Wooden Shoes.
A tramp who was passing through the streets of Amsterdam, and who impressed himself strongly upon my memory; the notice of so many little wooden shoes—children's shoes—that clicked on the cobblestones in the characteristic short run of frightened people into the broad stream of their collection of noises, but none quite so pathetic as the "click-tock-tock" of these horses of children trying desperately with their tired little legs to keep up with father and mother—From the Amsterdam Herald.
