HOLDS TO RIGHTS AS A NEUTRAL

Latest Note of Washington on Ally-Blockade

WILL BE GIVEN OUT ON RECEIPT BY AGREEMENT

Asks Definite Information as to Basis of Action and Enforcement of Order.

Washington—The copy of the United States government to the British order-in-council decreeing a virtual blockade against commerce to and from Germany, was called to Ambassador Page at London Tuesday night for presentation to the British foreign office.

As soon as the communication has been delivered it will be made public here and in London, under an agreement between the two governments. In the meantime officials decline to give any intimation as to its contents.

States stand firmly for its right to carry on legitimate trade with neutral countries, even though they be contiguous to belligerents. It is known of the administration's position in view of developments since the last note was dispatched, inquiring how Great Britain and her allies intended to enforce their prohibition against trade of enemy origin, ownership or destination.

It was said at the state department Tuesday that the usual practice of awaiting judgment by the prize court was being followed in the case of the cargo of the American Antheus, which was seized last month. The records show that the cargo consisted of a quantity of land and some machinery, both of which have been declared contraband by Great Britain.

On All of Your Printed Matter, It Represents Good Workmanship, Good Wages, and Good Conditions.

Those of the apartment in this section who are concerned for better conditions with regard to fish and game, are invited to see this county closed for a great many of the fishermen would be glad to have a law closing the fishing season from December 15th to May first, instead of just one month. The closing for one or two years of all streams in this section for trout would also please many who desire better fishing. By closing for two years the small trout which are now caught and taken from the streams so small as to be worthless would attain a size of ten or twelve inches and make a very good and better food. The Times would suggest that before another legislative convocation that steps be taken to push some of the matters which need attention. The splendid fishing and shooting on the upper waters of the Snake river is due largely to the efforts made by sportsmen of Fremont, Blaine and Hancock counties in getting regulations through the state legislature.

The shutting off of the water from the low line canal from which this city gets its water supply for four or five days will not inconvenience a single person if a little judgment is shown by the citizens. The storage reservoir of the Twin Falls water works company is capable of supplying the ordinary demands of the city if care is taken. On the other hand if the people insist on having sprinkling and "recess" use of the water it will not last three days. The Times wishes to urge the people for their own protection and convenience to carefully refrain from wasting water until the Canal company again turns the water into the low line. The danger from fire with normal pressure is not great, but if after three days of reckless use of water the company's storage reservoir becomes depleted or even a small fire may become a serious conflagration which will sweep the city. The laws will not suffer if not watered for another week. The water used in every home by reason of leaky taps and taps purposely left running, can be conserved fifty per cent and would be paid for and measured by meter. It is up to all people to calmly use good judgment and not insist on rights which may jeopardize the whole city. The Times is not making a plan for the water company, which is to plan for the inferior storage system, but for every property owner whose property is endangered by depleting the small storage supply.

MUST WE RELINQUISH OUR TRADE WITH GERMANY?

White indignation denunciation is poured upon England's long-continued blockade of Germany by some of our editorial observers, who call it an indefensible mischievous of sea-power, an attempt at "international bullying," and even a "new form of piracy." Our state department characterizes it more diplomatically as a course of action previously unknown to international law. The specific prohibitions laid down last week in Britain's order in council may be briefly restated as follows: 1. No merchant vessels from any port shall be allowed to proceed to any German port. 2. No merchant vessels shall be allowed to sail from any German port. 3. Ships sailing from one neutral port to another with goods intended for Germany may be arrested. 4. Ships sailing between neutral ports with goods originally from Germany may be arrested. In response to an inquiry by our state department, however, an assurance is given by the British government and France that those operations will not be conducted outside of European waters, including the Mediterranean. Great Britain's most concise official statement of the situation is contained in the following sentence:

"The British fleet has instituted a blockade effectively controlling by cruiser action all passages to and from Germany by sea."

"It is the view of the blockade in effect, says a Washington dispatch to the Times, that the loss to the United States in customs revenue alone will be approximately $100,000,000 a day. Certain notes of protest from our government against specific infringements of neutral rights by the belligerents have already been discussed in these pages. The next move, according to a Washington correspondent of the New York Evening Post, will be a blanket protest covering all such infringements as are involved in the policies laid down by Germany, Great Britain, and France. The same correspondent goes on to suggest that no radical change in the situation is probable "until there has been a big naval battle, and one side or the other has secured absolute control of the sea. Naval officers regard this feature of the situation as underlying the whole problem."

Many papers dwell on the partial parallel between the recent British orders in council and those of 1897, which led to a declaration of war by the United States in 1912. "It is clear that the possible course of action are the same which were open to our fathers," declares the New York American, which goes on to say: "We can submit to orders of foreign powers, permit our neutral commerce to be destroyed, our flag to be insulted and degraded to the office of despised foreign article, and become contemptible in the eyes of the whole sneering world. Or, we can declare war against any power that violates commerce, voyaging under the American flag, as our forefathers did. "We can lay an embargo and cease all trading with Europe until Europe's warring rulers have had their fill of fighting. Or we can re-enact the non-intercourse law of 1809 and refuse to trade with any countries so refuse to receive the neutral flag of our commerce on the high seas."

"One of these courses we must pursue. Because if we do not adopt one of the three active methods of refusal and resistance, then we must accept the first and eat the dirt of submission. There is no escape from that logic."

"Whatever course it is decided to pursue, we should all stand by our government. This is no time for feckless deputies of politics. It is a serious time when American men should warily put shoulder to shoulder. And it is emphatically a time to drop un-patriotic and unbecoming and unneutral partisanship, a time to be neither pro-British nor pro-German, but note by Anglo-American."

"A 'Risikio blunder' is all the White House Post can see in Great Britain's novel plan of driving Germany into submission, for if it is effective the first to suffer will be hundreds of thousands of French, Russian and British prisoners. "Would the German government (she plans to feed the prisoners of war first while Germans themselves were starving," asks The Post, which adds: "In a short time it will become apparent that Great Britain has made a gigantic blunder by thus antagonizing the peaceful nations of the world."

Her plan is unworkable, for two reasons: First, the Allies will not permit their soldiers in Germany to be starved which would be necessary and inevitable if Britain's blockade were effective and secondly, the neutral nations of the world will not permit their commerce to be destroyed. They will go to war against Great Britain, if nothing short of that will break her grip upon the seas. "But Germany's 'war zone' decree and Great Britain's 'Orders in Council,' declares the St. Louis Republic, "challenge fundamental neutral rights and are founded in injustice. They are, in short, 'just attempts at international bullying.'" As The New York World sees it, "the rights of neutrals on the ocean are being sacrificed to the caution or timidity of the belligerents to their own destruction."

"If Germany, with one of the greatest of navies, had been willing to risk its high-sea fleet in battle, it would not have regarded to the security of its submarine warfare, menacing friends and foes alike. "If Great Britain, always bountiful of her sea-power, had been willing to engage it effectively at the start, it would have blockaded Germany instead of blockading the commerce of neutral nations."

"To excuse its naval inaction, Germany has nothing to offer but the plea that the chances of defeat were too great. It will keep its battleships in the Kiel Canal, safe from harm, until successful fighting is reasonably certain. "To explain its refusal to blockade the coast of Germany, thereby challenging and probably forcing a sea fight, Great Britain has nothing to offer but the plea that, since the arrival of the submarine, blockading operations are exceedingly dangerous. "We thus have two great naval powers, each of them, but both leaving a hand of equal neutrals in the expectation that by such methods they will inflict serious economic damage upon their foes. What they do to their peaceful neighbors is a matter of secondary importance."

TALKS ON THRIFT

No. 10—THRIFTY ALIENS

"Thrift, to become a fixed habit must be practiced with regularity and be given an opportunity for exercise over an appreciable length of time. And unless it becomes fixed, it will be of little value. Spasmodic saving followed by spasmodic extravagance makes for ruin as surely as any habit of improvidence," says Frank C. Mortimer, Berkeley, California.

A Swiss banker, visiting in this country recently, said:

"I notice that it is the custom in America for men to spend most of their salaries. They do not appear to be concerned about the 'rainy' day. In Switzerland and other countries of Europe the people have developed the saving habit."

"There is so much money deposited in the savings banks in our country that we have to go to foreign countries to find investments for it."

In America the people seem to believe in keeping plenty of money in circulation. In a general way, this policy is beneficial, but it shows lack of thrift in the individual.

"There should be a happy medium between the dissipated habits of the Scotch and the spending habit of Americans. There is a half-way ground in which the advantages of both methods may be realized."

"The American people owe a great deal to the aliens, or those who quite recently have become naturalized, for lessons in thrift."

"The average foreign-born citizen and the average alien is a real saver. In a single year the foreign born people of Massachusetts have what amount, via one route, over $9,000,000. In addition there are some foreign-born people have saved—deposited in banks or elsewhere at home—other millions. In this respect, the old-time American can afford to take off his hat to most of the foreign-born, who are among our most trustworthy people. It would be hard to say which are most thrifty. French and Italians stand high in this matter. Thrift is likewise characteristic of the Germans, the Scandinavians and the Scotch, and in countless instances it has rewarded its possessors a thousand fold. The people have learned that the first essential in acquiring the art of making money is to spend save. Can't native born Americans learn this lesson from them? In these days of electric motors and gasoline engines we don't very often see a treadmill, but most persons know pretty well what it is—a moving inclined platform gear, so that the weight of the horses walking on it turns the machinery. The point about it is that the horses never get anywhere, for all their hard work. How many people are occupied in just the same way! They work hard and they accomplish things for somebody else, but they never get anywhere themselves. That is exactly the position you are in—your own work for somebody else and not regularly save from your income to build up some reserve capital to fall back upon when your strength is no longer equal to the treadmill of ceaseless work. T. D. MacGREGOR go to college. It will be a fine thing for the college "teams," if not for scholarship, says New York World. Or is scholarship also to be put on a physical basis, with the "paid student" eliminated under modern ideas of eugenics? It would seem to layman that this was one of the last problems a university president had to worry about. Boys who survive the preparatory course of study in high schools and academies are presumably physically equal to the demands of a college education. With the steady increase in population, the products of the sea assume more and more importance. How to conserve the immense supply while at the same time making a constantly increasing use of it is one of the problems of the present which will press still harder for solution in the future. In the case of oysters it is well known that if nothing had been done but to trust to nature unaided, the supply would have been utterly exhausted long ago. Planting and protection have increased the supply of oysters and scallops, notwithstanding the increased use of both as food. The annual report of the Rhode Island commission on shell fisheries shows something of what has been and is being done in the way of conservation and cultivation," says the MANHATTAN Union. The "marine farms" of Rhode Island yield to the state treasury in annual rentals about one hundred and sixteen thousand dollars. This is no small amount of revenue, but it is of less consideration than that the system of rentals has led to careful planting of oyster beds in order to derive the greatest amount of profit from them. Gunotton may be described as a mixture of cotton wool (which the chemist would call cellulose). Both nitroglycerine and gunotton are less useful as explosives themselves than their derivatives, although Russia and the United States use compressed water gunotton in their high-explosive one of the most famous derivatives is the smokeless propellant used by the British army and navy, cordite. Germany is reported to be using in the present war a new explosive. Its chemical name is trinitro-toluene (picric acid is called trinitro-carbolic); but it is commonly called T. N. T. or in Germany, tyrolyl. It is not at all new. It is in fact a well-known member of a series of aromatic explosives, and toluene is a derivative of coal tar. It has long been known that it much improved the ordinary detonators and that detonators made with T. N. T. were being used in Germany. Hand-picked Pea Beans and Lady Washington Beans for sale. It is probably only a matter of a few dollars in the price of the car, that delays your decision.

As for as the car itself goes you KNOW there is nothing better than the HUDSON

If things were equal you'd pick the HUDSON in a minute.

So we say—it's all the price after all.

It surely is worth something to get a car that you know is not an experiment.

One that is now in the hands of 10,000 owners. That has been driven over 25 MILLION MILES of average roads.

One that has a reputation the whole world around.

That will be worth more than other cars next year and the years thereafter.

We say again, the Hudson is the pattern car and "imitation is the sincerest flattery." You know what Kipling says of the following:

They asked me how I did it, so I gave them the script and text. You keep your light so shining a little ahead of the next. And they copied all they could follow, but they couldn't copy my mind.

So I left them awestruck and standing a year and a half behind.

MORE ABOUT SILOS AND SILAGE

—Not an Experiment

The worth of the silo for the Twin Falls section is no longer an experiment but a demonstrated fact. The average yield of corn—last year—in terms of silage amounted to 118 tons per acre with a maximum yield of 19 tons. Considering the advisability of the past season such a yield promises well for the future.

Value of Silage

With alfalfa hay worth $5.00 per ton, results obtained from different feeders show that the approximate value of corn silage varies from $2.50 to $4.00 per ton. In one case it required $10.80 worth of grain to replace one ton of silage, while in another it served as a substitute for $5.00 worth. These values are comparative and change with the prices of the feeding stuffs to which they are compared.

Growing and Filling

Two acres, who cut yield 10 and 18 tons to the acre returned figures to show that it cost $2.10 and $1.25 per ton, respectively, to grow the corn. Under normal conditions it will cost from 70c to $1.00 per ton to put the crop into the silo. Deducting these costs from its feeding value it is not difficult to figure the profit on one ton of corn silage.

Choice of Silo

There are a great many types of silos on the market from which one may choose, and while there are some differences in the various silos offered, the greatest mistake a livestock man may make is to choose a silo, by choice of a silo, but rather in a failure to choose one at all. The chief factors in deciding one for or against are—durability, appearance, the keeping qualities of silage are determined more largely by the way it is put into the silo than by the kind of silo.

It is not the purpose of this article to discuss the relative merits of the many commercial silos now on the market but rather to call attention to the possibilities of erecting homemade ARBOR DAY FOR SCHOOLS County Superintendent Treves Proper Celebration by County Schools.

In accordance with Section 155 of the School Law of Idaho, thereby set aside Friday, April 2nd, 1915, to be observed as Arbor Day throughout the school districts of Twin Falls county, and recommended that it be observed as a community affair, teacher, and pupil and patron taking part.

Teachers, school boards and principals have done much in the way of planting trees and improving the school grounds. Much still remains to be done.

The life of a community the one in which is pathed its most impressionable element. The school is supposed to be a public expression of order to make good American citizens. It aims at securing the highest possible development of mind and character. Every member of the community has a duty and every broadening influence, every appeal to the finer nature of the child means better men and better women and a more thrifty and prosperous community.

Let us make the school environment the best possible, the most beautiful in the community.

BERPIA NOEL, County Superintendent of Public Instruction, Twin Falls, Idaho, Mar. 31, 1915.

Largest Chain Drives. The largest chain drive in existence, three times greater in size than any previously built, is to be found at the O2 low power plant, on Snake river, Coppsfield, Ore. The plant consists of a 2,000-horsepower generator, operated by two water-wheel units, each consisting of two pairs of water-wheels of the 48-inch horizontal type, operating under a 24-foot head. The speed of the water-wheels is 47 revolutions per minute, and each water-wheel unit is connected to the generator by four Morse chains, each 21 inches wide, with the sprockets on the line shafting having a two-inch pitch, and the shaft centers being ten feet apart—Scientific American.

TWIN FALLS BANK AND TRUST COMPANY

In the Twenty Million Dollar Mystery By Harold MacGrath

SYNOPSIS Zudora, heiress to $20,000,000, is placed in the guardianship of her uncle, Hassam Ali, a mystic, Hassan Ali is determined to secure the girl's fortune for himself...

(Copyright, 1914, by Harold MacGrath.) CHAPTER XVII. THE ISLAND OF MYSTERY.

During one of his visits at La Fontaine, the girl, Detective Hunt, was fortunate enough to secure a copy of the new diamond mine which had been purloined from Zudora's room...

"You want me to go to Africa?" "If you will, it would be the greatest pleasure in the world to see your feet," went on Zudora...

"What's that?" "That's a fact," asserted Hunt. "We might need them for the Star Slug, on the counts of abduction and attempted murder..."

"On the following day Hunt and Baird entered a booking office and applied for tickets for Cape Town. "What do you think about it, Hunt?"

"Ten pounds to carry me to the station," said Baird. "But my orders are to wait for the express."

that boarded chap in dead, well and good. "But you find that he was merely knocked senseless by a blow..."

"Keep away from him," warned Hunt. "If you see him in the smoke-room keep out. We'll play the same game as last time, and if he comes over, I'll hang him up to dry when he sets foot in little old New York."

There had been a series of automobile accidents and holidays about this time; so when the three men got out from an alleyway and overpowered the chauffeur...

"Madam walked and went, offered her jewelry, implored; the men paid no attention to her. Zudora, on the contrary, uttered not a sound. She read these three faces tolerably well...

"The her up, mother, while I take care of this one," said one of the abductees, pushing Zudora ahead of him.

"The two of em are worth ten thousand if you can get 'em," said the man in the blue coat.

"The finder will notify John Storm in 1915. But Zudora had been a prisoner for ransom on Craig Island."

A BIG VITAL STORY

"A Master Mind" is a Wonderful Paramount Film.

The story of revenge and malice over which triumphs love, is most interestingly revealed in "The Master Mind," the final chapter of the famous dramatic success with Edmund Keene in the leading role, which is announced for presentation at the Loring theatre, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 1, 2 and 3. In the leading character of "The Master Mind" is depicted a type of criminal against whom it is most difficult to secure a conviction despite the fact that every effort is made to capture the Master Mind of the underworld, he mingles with his wife and her family, and conceals them. His one motive in life is revenge, and his object, the district attorney who recently secured the conviction of his wife. The accomplishment of his purpose and on the verge of the final denouement, his love for his ward asserts itself and the mighty power of the Master Mind is broken amid tears of forgiveness. The play fairly teems with gripping situations.

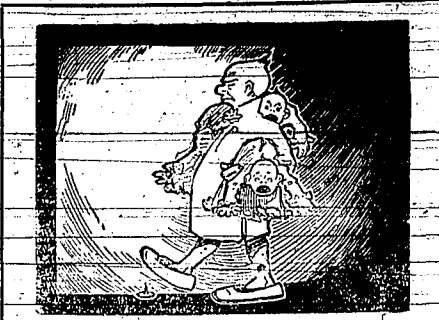

CATCHES BIG STURGEON

Monster Fish Taken From River at Charlemagne Ferry

A 250 pound sturgeon and probably the largest of its kind ever caught in the Snake river was taken off the line a week ago by Judge Uhrhahn. The fish weighed 210 lbs. long and took considerable angling before it was safely encased in the millway water. Portions of the big fish were brought to the city by J. O. Gates, who vouches for the preclaratory ability of the Ike Walton of Riverside.

POBBY NOTES

Poor stuff always encounters a glut. Ship dressed male birds in separate packages. Warm quarters and the right ration will bring out the eggs. Never peck dressed poultry until all the animal heat is out of the bodies. A light morning feed for the flock is best, because it keeps them hustling through the day. A tablespoonful of baking soda placed in the water two or three times a week will prevent bowel trouble. During the winter months, or while fowls are confined, supply them with suitable grit, charcoal and green stuff in addition to the regular grains. A pullet is in the pink of show condition just before she lays her first egg; laying dulls the plumage, takes away the brightness and sheen, and affects the shape. Don't let the pullets that are to be shown come to laying. This can be avoided by changing such pullets from house to home and by feeding a maintenance ration only. A repetition of your want ad, in the course of your quest for a cock, may be good policy.

PACKING PLANT FOR POCATELLO

Incorporation Papers Filed and Company Ready For Actual Work

With the filing of the incorporation papers yesterday of the Pocatello Packing company, a quarter-million-dollar industry was launched that will mean much to Pocatello and all Idaho and the nearby sections of adjoining states. A big packing plant will be erected here at once that will care for the stock raised in this section and will provide the consumer with a high grade of finished products.

reached by those who bring in stock overland. The ground covers 32 acres and lies so that stock can be driven directly from the road to the third floor of the building. The main building will be of brick and cement 50 by 100 feet with reinforced concrete floors for each story. The plant will be complete in every detail, fitted in the latest manner and equipped for a complete outfit. A government inspector will be stationed here at all times so that the company can engage in interstate trade—Pocatello Chronicle.

The first directors of the company will be: W. D. Pate, of Goodwin; H. E. Walker and R. W. Houston, of Pocatello; J. M. McCall, of Pocatello; E. J. Merrill and R. S. McCall of Pocatello. These seven directors will meet next Thursday evening in the office of Attorneys Budget and Harwood to choose officers and make final arrangements for beginning work on the plant.

Your Easter dinner will be ready for you at the Regester Cafe any time between two o'clock in the afternoon and eight o'clock in the evening.

The site of the plant will be a mile and a half north of town and the shoes here will put in a spur at once. A public road passes through the grounds so that they can easily be
