HARRY ALLEN IS ACQUITTED

Result is Highly Pleasing to Many Friends Here.

COMPLETELY VINDICATED BY ADA COUNTY JURY
Prosecution Falls to Prove any Complicity to Defraud State in Jury Case.

The many friends of Harry F. Allen in this city rejoiced greatly Wednesday morning when the news of his complete vindication on the charge of complicity in embezzling state funds was received.

While none of his friends here have ever believed him guilty in the matter, it was evident that an attempt was being made to have Mr. Allen the scape goat because of his relationship to O. V. Allen.

There are four similar cases pending before the district court against J. H. Peterson, F. L. Huston, R. W. Work and J. L. Long.

The flat failure of the district court to make out cases against most of the men indicted by the Ada county grand jury makes the whole deal look more like political jobbery than ever. Some of the charges under which indictments were made looked supremely technical and without much foundation. The cases which have gone to the jury so far have resulted in acquittals, a fair criterion of the opinion of the unbiased people. There has been evidence since the convening of the grand jury that an effort was being made to discredit the Republican party. A great many of the people thought that where there was so much smoke there must be fire. But from all indications the guilty persons were all eliminated before the Idaho administration went out of office. The rest of the smoke has been arising from political fires stirred up by Democracy.

A SMALLER UNIT PREFERABLE
The action of the Communist club in advising against entering into the Idaho Publicity association after a sober second thought, will probably be received favorably by most of the citizens. While any move which will bring Idaho to the front should receive attention from the good boosters here, yet all people of the Twin Falls country are vitally interested in the promotion of this section above all other parts of the state. Such it to be expected. With all community boosting the acquisition of expense is ever present to mitigate against the expenditure of money. The Twin Falls committee must, because of limited funds, at its disposal, make a choice between a smaller unit of co-operation and the larger one. Naturally the choice would fall upon the smaller unit, which will allow all money to be spent in fostering the prosperity of this section rather than by scattering the same small sum over the boosting of the whole state.

NORTH AND SOUTH FIFTY YEARS AFTER APPOMATTOX

No celebration marked the fiftieth anniversary of the end of the Civil War. But the whole country, as editors observe, has been none the less mindful of the events of that fateful April fifty years ago—the fall of Richmond, the surrender of Lee at Appomattox, the assassination of Johnson, the assassination of Lincoln. In April, 1915, there is voiced in both the Northern and Southern press the same patriotic pride in the greatness of the reunited nation, the same patriotic love of a common country. These fifty years, we are told on every hand, have sufficed for the definite putting aside of animosities. In New York and in Georgia, editors note with quiet interest the fact that the semi-centennial of Lee's surrender finds in the White House the first Southern-born President since the Civil War; the agitator with the same thankfulness that our half-century of domestic peace comes to a close the United States of America is the one world-power not drawn into the vortex of a great European War. Never had there been a truce from a glance at the editorial columns of representative newspapers that the word "Appomattox" fifty years afterward, does not, perhaps can not, mean the same on both sides of Mason and Dixon's line. While the Northern "Intinks of the triumph of the Union" over rebellion, secession, perhaps slavery, to Southerners Appomattox is "the scuttler of a nation," the "butcher place of a leg," the "many a night's cause. Moreover, while to the Northern Appomattox was simply the end of the war, the Southern remembers it as also the beginning of the gradual reconstruction period. On April 9, 1865, the meeting of the defeated general and the victor in the McLean farmhouse, foreshadowed by reason of the wisdom of Lee and the magnanimity of Grant a speedy, simple and merciful readjustment for the long war. At least, so it now seems to Southern writers. Six days later, they add, these hopes went crashing to the ground as Abraham Lincoln fell by the hand of the crazed and misguided Booth. The South declares the Nashville Banner, "was the greatest sufferer by Lincoln's death." At the same time, the paper adds, "the certain and inevitable result of his death would have mitigated the severity of reconstruction and have done much to allay sectional bitterness, as much as anything pertaining to his career, attested the greatness of his character." And we find Southern writers praising the general who crushed the Confederacy, while, as the Charleston (W. Va.) Gazette puts it, "the admiration for Lincoln in the South is balanced only by the admiration in the North for Lee." And fifty years after Appomattox there runs through the editorial comment of a common national heritage, both North and South, in the two great generals whose campaigns closed at Appomattox and the statesman whose career ended one short week later.

Americans in all parts of the country, says the Savannah News, now "look upon the great men of the war-days as Americans all, whatever the color of the uniforms they wore." And the Georgia daily remarks further: "Americans in every section take pride in the tributes paid by the most prominent commanders of the great war in Europe to the generals who led Confederates and Union armies. Strategy of Lee and Jackson and Grant has formed the study of these commanders and even under changed conditions of present day warfare is often applied to problems of the fighting of 1915. Only occasionally does anybody anywhere attempt to revive animosities of the sixties, and when he is rebuked immediately from North and South that he is living in the past and that he is wasting his breath and his energy. The country is living in the present and the future, and it draws upon the past only for inspiration to make it more prosperous, more just, and to keep its ideals of liberty plainly before it." "At the half-century mark after the war it is pleasant to know that the country is doing its best to promote peace, while it is the greatest nation that is not engaged in a terrible war. And it is also pleasant to know that economically and commercially it has reached an enviable position among the greatest nations, with the probability that it will be the world's banker, and second to none in prosperity after the war ends.

TALKS ON THRIFT

No. 6—THE GREAT VALUE OF SAVINGS BANKS

There is no sure evidence of the prosperity of a community than when its savings banks show healthy and growing deposits.—Burlington Hawkeye.

Following are half a dozen outstanding advantages of using a savings bank of the savings department of a commercial bank or trust company.

1. Safety. Savings banks are the safest financial institutions in this country. Recent statistics showed the total liabilities of failed savings banks in proportion to the aggregate deposits of all such banks to be only about six ten-thousandths of one per cent (.0006 per cent). Deduction for the amount realized on the substantial assets of those few unfortunate institutions still further reduces the already infinitesimal loss to depositors.
2. Ability to deposit or withdraw any amount at any time. Some banks have a minimum for deposits, although it is usually a low one—5 cents, 25 cents, 50 cents or a dollar, as the case may be. In different states there is a different maximum for savings deposits, ranging from $1,000 to $5,000. Ordinarily money can be withdrawn without any notice whatever. In times of panic or positive panic, however, a 30 or 60 day rule may be enforced.
3. Regular income. There are few better investments where it is possible to put in small, odd amounts at any time and have your money begin to earn interest promptly, as it does in a savings account. Savings bank interest is something you can depend on.
4. Compound interest. The investor in bonds or stocks must collect his interest or dividends, and if he does not use the money, must stand patiently for interest to be interest—allowing by the time the end of a given period if not withdrawn, is placed to the depositor's credit and itself draws interest from that time on, thus automatically becoming part of the deposit. That means a constant increase in the amount at interest and in the interest payments.
5. Freedom from tax. In most states savings bank deposits are free from taxation by state or local authorities.
6. The habit of saving. Lost but by no means least, of the advantages of a savings account is what might be called the reflex influence on the depositor himself. It firmly fixes in him the valuable habit of saving, which will be a lifetime benefit to him.—T. D. MACREGOR.

Men who do their own work want a car that does its work well. They buy the Buick—because it is sold on facts, from the Valve-in-Head Motor on through. They buy the Buick because it does more than was claimed—more than expected. And these men expect much.

Eleven years of building valve-in-head motors (in fact, the pioneer builders of valve-in-head motor cars)—eleven years of satisfying the most particular users of motors—eleven years of pulling through the heaviest sand and mud, of the steepest hill climbing. No wonder men buy the Buick.

RAISING DRY LAND POTATOES

Best Soil on Farm Should be Selected for This Purpose. Desires Success—Plow Deep as Possible.

(By A. J. SILLOCK, Ontario, O.)

The man who desires success in potato raising should select the best land on his farm for this crop. In the preparation of the soil, backsetting is best, if possible. The soil should be double disked as early as possible in the spring and harrowed after each furrow as soon as dry enough to handle. If the weather is favorable, the potatoes should be planted as soon as possible after the 20th of April.

Get good, clean, home-grown seed, from your own growing season. As possible, cut the seed potato so as to have but one eye to a section. When ready to plant, plow (at least six inches) and drop the potatoes into every fourth furrow. If furrows are narrower than 12 inches, drop seed potato every fifth furrow or so that the rows are about four feet apart. Drop one piece of seed potato in a place, every fourth furrow, about fifteen to twenty inches apart.

If one desires extra fine potatoes, the ground should be plowed as deep as possible, and the potato seed covered not less than six inches.

As soon as through planting, the land should be harrowed, and harrowing should not be neglected after rains until the potatoes are five or six inches high. Harrowing should be done each time in a direction opposite to the last previous harrowing. After the potatoes are up six inches, the harrow should be discarded and the cultivator used after deep rain until the plants are in bloom. The first cultivation should be close to the plant as in early growth.

The cultivator will always leave some weeds near the plants. These should be cut out carefully, but the land should never be "hilled up," as the plants do much better with leveled land.

Potatoes can be produced on sod land if dropped into the furrow of the breaking plow, provided the land is soft or sandy; but with heavy soil the land should be broken at least three inches deep and then chopped up with a disk. After disk it should be plowed about five inches deep and the potatoes dropped into the furrow.

BOOTH MERCANTILE COMPANY

TALKS ON SILAGE

(C. W. Melick)
Ever since Mr. Morris of Maryland built the first silo in the United States the knowledge of silage and its value as a feed for live stock has rapidly been disseminated among the farmers and stockmen.
Wherever this knowledge has spread it has met and overcome scepticism and has crystallized into an unshakable development of the use of silage.
Ninety-nine per cent of the farmers were at first sceptical and had to be shown that the "sour chopped corn" (silage) was fit food for cows. I remember hearing a member of the Nebraska legislature say when first shown silage at the State Agricultural College in 1886, "Why I would be willing to sign a petition to send any man to the penitentiary who would feed that stuff to cows." I also heard a Kansas farmer say in 1898 that he hoped that his cows would never be starved into eating that "blasted truck." Such prejudices were rapidly overcome in every community as silage was erected and silage-fed, until now there are very few farmers who are not convinced of the fact that silage is one of the best known food-crop products. The modern farmer can no longer afford to let his cows starve. What remains of his corn stalks in the cold stormy winter where half of the food consumed must necessarily go into the production of body heat. The loss of milk thus sustained would pay for the entire keep of the cow. We have amply proved this with our twenty-one herds ranging from one hundred to two hundred cows. Dry milkers, them during the greater part of the day throughout the year have no reduction in our milk supply due to weather conditions, mosquitoes or flies. Then by feeding silage the year round with about half the quantity of dry food, the silage has uniform condition both in our milk flow and in the health of the cows. Our cows are never constipated or have even a congested condition of the bowels. They realize the advantages of having their herds carefully treated for our milk is used entirely for infant feeding.

For years ago our Detroit herd was without silage from January to September. Although they were carefully fed and healthy, their condition showed lack of succulent feed, a tough ill-journated skin and too dry feed. These "buried-out" cows when given silage, soon overcame the effects of dry feeding and at the same time showed a marked increase in their milk production. We would not therefore be without silage in some form or another for our cows. Our supply of silage became exhausted last May, and as we had no available silage at that time we cut five acres of coarse wavy grass and put it into the silo, green, in each length, the same as corn silage. It made very little silage, in fact much better silage than it would lay or grass. We therefore convinced that most any kind of forage when cut at the right stage of maturity will make edible silage. Forage should be cut for silage just after it has reached maturity and at the point or drying or ripening. At this stage the stalks have the highest percentage of available food matter, especially protein. When cut earlier than this the percentage of water is higher and the protein content is lower. Some of the food of the stalk has been hardened into fibre where its only food value is to make bulk for milking with concentrated feeds. Our twenty-one herds supply as many cities in different states with our milk. We therefore have a variety of conditions which in combination, whatever the conditions of weather or kind of forage grown we aim to have silage for every herd throughout the entire year. We are free to say that in rainy districts where forage can hardly be cured before it begins to decay, in dry semi-arid regions where forage in its natural state is devoid of succulence, where pastures dry up in the fall of the year, and through the winter when no green silage is available, the silo is the only instrument through which the farmer may preserve his feed in a fresh and succulent state, and which his live stock may be kept in the best condition at the least expense.

but it was the impression that they would be dropped. It is possible that the Allen case will be appealed but on that point Mr. Givens was not decided either.

Motions Overruled

At the opening of court Tuesday morning Judge Davis announced his decision to overrule all the motions offered by the defense Monday night. The court then adjourned until 1:30 to allow the preparation of instructions to the jury.

Address for State

Each side was given one hour to present its argument. Mr. Givens opened for the state. He called attention to the records in books of the Twin Falls Seed Farm company which showed that H. F. Allen was the principal stockholder. He reminded the jury that the entries stopped just before the time when the first of the money started coming from O. V. Allen.

The methods of drawing the money was reviewed by Givens and he urged that the amount received in this manner was much too large to pass without investigation when two persons were alone in the business relations as were the two Allen brothers. He asked why no security was given for the once secured from the Bull and Twin Falls banks, and said it appeared strange to him that a man who was drawing on his partner for amounts each month as great as the yearly salary of the partner should himself not be even told to advise himself of the source of this income.

Bowen Replies

Mr. Bowen was the first speaker for the defense. He reminded the jury that the defense was not making a case on the state's proof, believing that it did not need refutation. He argued on the fact that the amount of O. V. Allen's annual salary was drawn each month by Harry Allen and asked why this was not worthy of consideration. The fact that no security was given for the loan, he considered a strong point because he could not understand why, even though H. F. Allen had promised his brother half of the profits of the venture, he should not realize that the present possession of this kind is not the kind of security required when the money is borrowed and must have been taken out of some source from some other source than the regular channels. In such a case, Mr. Givens asserted, it would not be reasonable to believe that he would not investigate said that H. F. Allen was a farm operator on a large scale who was holding the sum of money which he had received from his brother to aid in these operations. He contended that the statement of O. V. Allen to the effect that the defendant had come to him with an offer to manage the proposition if O. V. Allen could arrange to finance it and promised to divide any profits half and half. As to the custom of drawing $500 at a time, he said the information was that H. F. Allen did not wish to burden his brother with the payment of any more interest than was necessary.

No Attempt at Secrecy

There was an attempt to avoid publicity, Mr. Bowen said. The drafts were presented and handled in the same way as ordinarily, "a glaring inconsistency with the possibility of anything being wrong." He stated it was his experience that when a man was doing wrong, the members of his family were the last ones to be told of it and inquired why Harry Allen should have questioned the ability of his brother to raise the money when he had been able to do it when they had been associated in other deals.

Guthrie's Point

Closing for the defense, Mr. Guthrie endeavored to make a special point of the fact that they were not trying O. V. Allen but that the state was endeavoring to fasten a part of the blame on the defendant. He said he was unable to see anything strange in the business transactions. He laid special emphasis on the fact that when the state was unable to pay the unpaid and asked why, if H. F. Allen knew that O. V. Allen had all the resources of the state of Idaho at his disposal, he should have been able to do it when they had been associated in other deals.

Another point on which Mr. Guthrie dwelt with some emphasis was the testimony of O. V. Allen. This witness, he said, testified that his brother did not have any idea of the source of the money supplied to him. It was placed on the stand by the state, he said, and the state vouched for his integrity.

Givens Closes

Mr. Givens closed by cautioning the jury against being affected by any plea for sympathy. He dwelt

FARM POULTRY

TO SECURE EGGS IN WINTER

Hens Have No Particular Laying Season—Do Well in Cold Weather—If Given Attention

It followed carefully the hints given below will insure a satisfactory supply of eggs during the winter. Never exposing the fowls to blustering, snowy weather, remembering that a cold, uncomfortable hen cannot be expected to be a profitable one. Therefore the houses must be of generous size. Early hatched pullets. Strong, healthy yearling hens. Roomy, comfortable, well-ventilated houses. Regular feeding of food rich in nitrogenous qualities. Scratching sheds and the towels made to hunt for the grain among the litter. Each year brooding from the strong set and best layers and never increasing. Using trap nests by which the drones can be detected, so as to give the room and feed to the workers. Never overfeeding, but given just as much as they will readily eat up clean and not waste or allow to sour. Never exciting hens, but rather keeping them tame so that they will have confidence in the feeder and not become scared. Keeping the houses perfectly clean and cheery, so that good health may be maintained, and that lice may be discouraged in making their headquarters about the premises.

Never overcrowding the flocks. Small families will do more work. It is better to keep 15 hens in a house built for 25 than in a house only big enough for 15. If these warnings are carefully heeded, there will be no difficulty in securing winter eggs. Hens have no particular laying season; they usually lay best in warm weather because conditions are better. It is up to the poultry man to supply these.

WINTER PRODUCERS OF EGGS

Question of Keeping Old Hens During Cold Weather Season Should Be Decided by Conditions.

The hen more than a year old is not a winter producer of eggs. Why this is so is difficult to explain. The pullet produces the winter eggs, but as she gets older, her season of egg production is later. The question then is whether it is profitable to keep the hen for a year or more old. The answer is yes, if she has a good market for eggs in the spring and summer, even though you buy the food, and decidedly yes, if one grows the food for the fowls. If the market in the spring and summer is not good, then it will not pay to winter the old hens, so that, after all, it is not a question of management, but one of being governed by conditions. In feeding the old hens during the winter, economy must be practiced, and the best way of doing this is to have all these hens by themselves and feed them a light ration.

COMPOSITION OF EWES MILK

Different Breeds Show Some Variation in Fat Content—Lamb Needs Good Laxative at First.

An analysis of ewe milk shows it to be very high in fat content. The different breeds show some variation in this regard, and there is a considerable variation in the fatty content of the milk at varying ages at various times. All ewes give richer milk immediately after the lamb is born than they do later on.

The percentage of fat sometimes runs as high as 11 per cent at this time. Mature milk is not so rich, no doubt, because the lamb needs a laxative at first to set its digestive apparatus in motion and give it forces that have been collecting during its prenatal growth.

Crop of Lusty Lambs. Proper feed and care will insure a lusty lot of lambs in the spring.

ROUGH ON THE WITNESSES

Twin Falls Man Comments on Accommodations in County Building.

"I would rather go to jail for contempt of court than serve as a witness before the Ada county district court in a case where the witnesses are excluded," said a prominent citizen of Twin Falls, who was in Boise to testify in a recent case.

"It would be more comfortable were we excluded from the courtroom while I was quite proper, but to be in a room with a lot of recontractors, incommunicado, without even a plank to sit on between meals was nothing but a cruel and unnecessary punishment. One of our party got up from a stool to come home as a witness. He was in no condition to stand up all day and we had to take turns giving him a seat. There is a little bench at the top of the stairway which we worked overtime. The railing around the stairway afforded some relief, but

ONE WEEK ONLY

THE PAYETTE LAKES

Wonderful Scenery—Resort in Heart of Idaho Mountains.

A little over one hundred miles north of Nampa, Idaho, on the Oregon Short Line's Lakeport branch, lies Payette lake, which next to Jackson Lake is the largest lake in the Fourth Forest service district. Payette lake is a "little" lake, a little less than 2 miles wide, with a large arm from the upper end to the eastern side. It covers 2,000 acres or over 5,000 acres. Twenty-five years ago Thomas McCall located on the southern shore of the lake and is still living down that has grown up about him and bears his name held his second election on Tuesday. When McCall located there had the habit of coming down to the lake to drink and a hunter who knew their haunts could go out and "kill an elk any day." Early freighters to Warren, Idaho, were grazing with their oxen in the morning. Across the lake from McCall the Payette Lake club has laid out grounds and is building an attractive three-story club house. North of McCall, on the east side, is Picnic Point where a hotel, the first has come in which about 60 tents are rented furnished. On the eastern arm of the lake a Welch club has laid out grounds but no buildings have as yet been erected. Near "the narrows," is Sylvan beach, an ideal bathing resort, where athletic swimmers show their prowess by crossing the lake, here a quarter of a mile wide. Here a large launch is kept to convey parties across by train to the lake in all about 60 boats on the lake in the summer, many of them launches or boats equipped with a motor. The "Lads" having become unconvincing, Captain Dodge has built a new 60-foot steamer. The lake has thirty-eight miles of densely wooded shoreline.

At the lower end of the shores of the lake rise gradually, like the outer part of a great saucer, but above the Narrows they are abrupt, high, rocky mountains extend into the water, and the roar of cataracts can be heard and seen on either side. The Payette river, above the lake is navigable all this season of the year for some distance if a sharp lookout is maintained that the motor of the boat is not fouled by a submerged log. Here horse-shoe bends, wealth of forest to the water's edge and rocky cliffs abound. At the lower end of the lake, on the river, a road leads from about 10 inches to 2 feet in length down from beneath the boat frequently, and checks and turns fly and looms down as the boat approaches. Toward evening fish are seen leaping from the water. In the time of the late season, the spawning is when they "run," that is produced up the river from the lake to spawn. These seasons are usually in June for trout and in September or October for whitefish. The fisherman must be on hand for there is not time to send him word. Several seasons ago Charlie Zumwalt, who runs the McCall and Warren stage line, and George Chapman came into McCall for the first of July. On camping at the lake between the big and little Payette-lake they cut an aspen pole and they took. One baited the hook and removed the fish while the other threw them out. In a short time they had both alfonjas of the pack saddle full, and their camp was very populous. They had a whitefish and a man caught sufficient whitefish in two afternoons to salted down, supply the Halfway road house during the winter.

McCall is the headquarters of the Idaho national forest, which, excepting a few sections of state land contiguous to the lake shore, surrounds the lake on all sides but the south, and has a half million acres tacked on the northeast, lying next to the main Salmon river between its south and middle forks. McCall is undoubtedly the most appropriate headquarters town in the district. Across the lake the smoke from Frier's sawmill is visible from the supervisor's window. Four horse loads of sawed lumber were sawed last fall and hewed this from the big camp are frequently missing while 300,000 feet of logs are floating in the stream of sawed lumber in piles just below the window. The hum of the Holt and Brown sawmill is heard early and late, having begun on Monday his season's run of about a million feet. And there is inspiration in the thought of these things—raising the aspen occasionally from the desk—the big logs are seen going up the incline from the lake, soon to emerge in the form of boards, dimensioned and ready for Ben McCall, chief sawyer, and Carl Brown, foreman, have no opportunity to correct an estimate, made ahead, as it must be almost instantly.

Mrs. Josephine Helmer has just been cured of open, untidy, breast cancer, which started a small lump in the breast of her neighbor, Mrs. Modesta Avery, 2734 26th st., near York st., San Francisco, who had cancer in each breast from neglecting one sore. Dr. Chaumley's Lactin Plant, Princess Pills, nothing until cured. This is the physician who cured Lucky Johnson, millionaire horseman south of California, so bad that surgeons would not operate. Also—Mrs. E. J. Porter, of Northwestern Pacific, San Diego, now at Eureka, Cal. Hundreds of other prominent people whom you will have noticed in Western California, who have had breast cancer cured. MOTOR TOPICS

One of the places where progress in motor car construction is most evident to the user, is in the top and curtain construction. For really the only four years ago not only top and curtains, but such essentials as windshield and magnets were all regarded as "extras" today "one-man" top and "jiffy" curtains are proving themselves the last word in security, comfort and ease of operation, as supplied as standard equipment on the Marmon "41".

For instance, on the Marmon "41" it takes but five minutes to change from the protected luxury of the limousine to the open phaeton, balmy summer breeze is made possible partly by the convenient one-man top, partly by the convenient one-man top, curtains, one from each bow and one on each side, and partly by the clever "lift the dot" fasteners, which are snapped on and off as easily as an electric push button, but resist any other tendency to loosen them. Another feature is that curtains can all be lowered or raised from within.

The spark plug in the cylinder has a great deal to do with amount of power to be received from an engine.

For instance in the "41" head type of motor, if the spark is placed over the intake valve, the spark occurs at one side of the combustion chamber, the spark occurs at the other—direction only.

In order to ignite the gases in the cylinder with greater rapidity, many users of the "41" head type of motor have placed two spark plugs, which fire simultaneously and ignite the charge quicker and give more power.

The placing of the spark plug in the center of the combustion chamber, also tends to keep the spark plug cooler from oil.

To those of us who have been in touch with civilization all our lives, it is not surprising that we have become so dependent on the telephone, the automobile and the firing machine, imagine, though you can, being an old man and seeing all these things for the first time in a period of less than two weeks.

This very thing was experienced a few days ago by a man 82 years old. The man's name is Many Tall Featherers. He is a fat-blooded Indian, a member of the Blackfoot tribe, whose reservation adjoins the Glacier national park. Many Tall Featherers is one of the delegates to the International Pacific exposition to take part in the dedication of the great Northern Railway company's building.

A big sturdier Buick valve-in-head automobile took the party, consisting of Many Tall Featherers, Chief Eagle Calf, Chief Medicine Owl, Fish Wolf Robe, Paul White Horses, Johnnie Red Eagle, two squaws and a popoose, out through the Paradise to Golden Gate park, then out the great highway, where Dr. Christofferson gave the strange visitors an exhibition of flying in his new military airplane. After the exhibition, Chief Eagle Calf asked to be taken up as a passenger, and it is safe to say that the eagle-featherer, who formed his massive head dress over his forehead when they were attached to their original owners. At the end of the trip, after getting out of the big Buick, he walked slowly around it several times, inspecting everything closely, and then said to the interpreter: "If this great spirit will only give me a machine like this when I reach the happy hunting ground, I will be satisfied."

A CLEVER, CLEAN CIRCUS

At G. Barnes Animal Circus Will Be Light Old and Young.

A line of clean, wholesome, interesting and enjoyable entertainment throughout the program given by the Barnes Wild Animal Circus. The laughing part of the show is one of its distinctive features.

Forty comical clown bears, dogs, elephants, monkeys, goats and ponies, supply places throughout the entertainment, where the visitor may relax after seeing a "shivery" wild animal act, and have a good hearty laugh.

A quartette of mules—Maud, Danger, Dynamite and Gunpowder, present some very laughable situations.

Forty cents per minute is paid to anyone who can stick on Danger, or Dynamite's back. Many applicants try for the coin, but the one result is inevitable—they go away wiser and without the money.

The big feature acts on the Barnes program are given with wild animals in which large groups of lions, tigers, leopards, bears and jaguars are shown. These acts are amazing and thrilling. 24 full grown, man-eating African lions being handled in one act by one man.

Domestic animals also take a prominent part in the entertainment, among which are the Barnes-challenge horses and ponies, said to be the finest collection ever assembled. These horses are all actors, in fact, the entire entertainment provided by the Barnes show is given with educated animals—over 600 of them. Sixty-five feature acts are presented by these animals.

Performances are given at 2 and 8 p. m., and the new feature, mile long street parade at 10:30. The date for Twin Falls is Wednesday, May 12.

WORK ON STATE HIGHWAYS

Work Progressing Nicely According to Chairman Brodhead.

Chairman W. A. Brodhead, of the State Highway commission returned yesterday from a few days' trip of inspection of the state highway.

Chairman Brodhead left Halley on his Wednesday and was met at the State Highway Engineer Ed S. Smith, at Shoshone, they were met by H. Cornell, division engineer of the state highway.

The party left Shoshone Wednesday night for Twin Falls via Hagerman and Owsley's Ferry. The next day they traveled over the state highway along the Twin Falls county line. From there they went to Alpen and had an interview with the commissioners of Cassia county on road matters.

The party then visited Burley and went from there to Pocatello. On Friday they went to Bancroft and drove over the proposed new routes in Bannock county.

Chairman Brodhead states that the construction work is now going forward on over 400 miles of state roads.

ELOPEMENT

Mr. Richard Ford's Maid Elopes With Neighbor's Coachman.

There was great excitement in the Ford household when it was discovered that Ellen, the maid, had eloped with the neighbor's coachman, Mrs. Ford said to her brother, Bob, who was spending the week-end at the sister's home, "Why, you know, Bob, a maid has never left me without warning before, to all my experience." "Nearly big thing," amplified Bob, the horrid man spoke.

Ellen succeeded in getting a new maid, whose attractions and loveliness, together with those of a certain other young lady, make up one of the "nifties" comedies—the people of this city have ever been privileged to see.

And to make it even more attractive, this splendid play will be put on by the Boy Scouts, assisted by some of their highly talented girl friends and directed by the Boy Scouts. The affair will be in progress at the evening of Tuesday evening, May 25th.

The work of the Boy Scouts at night is well known and it is a foregone conclusion that the play will be out of the ordinary in the home talent line.

There will be specialties between the acts showing the boys in some of the stunts they learn in their scout work, first aid drills, etc.

All are familiar with the splendid work being accomplished by the Boy Scout movement and the boys will undoubtedly receive the whole-hearted support of the whole community. They are planning another camping trip for this summer and will use the proceeds of the entertainment to help finance their journey.
