The trip will be worth while to a large number of people here who have never visited the camp and have never obtained a fair knowledge of the size and value of the ore bodies in that district.

AMERICA FEEDS THE NATIONS

Scarcely a day passes but that the big dailies of this country note the crying need for food for the civilian populations in the war zone and with the crying need an intimation that America is expected to give aid. America has given aid generously and well and still expects to give aid, which is absolutely necessary. But it looks as though rich countries like Russia, Germany, France and England should care for their own people out of the war budgets. If the warring nations have to care for the people left destitute by reason of the war it will appreciably cut down the duration of the war and bring peace. On the other hand, every bit of aid given from this country increases the grip of the war on all people. It may seem heartless to appropriate such a measure, yet for America to refuse any aid, except for the money which comes for such goods, will terminate the war and is therefore the wisest and best course to pursue. With the war ended the destitution of the poor people will pass away and the wheels of industry set going. America is not being generous to the poor of Europe in helping the prolonging of the war.

GERMANY WILL NOT YIELD

President Wilson and his advisers believe the Germany will yield when the rest of the American people know the real situation in the Fatherland, are not so optimistic and feel that under no circumstances will the Kaiser yield on the point of submarine warfare, when it is the best weapon with which to fight his enemies. There is little in the past actions of Germany upon which the optimists can base their reasoning. Germany did not hesitate to break faith with Italy, when in order to strike France, Germany has not hesitated to use every means possible to successfully wage war. The German people believe that the submarine war is justified because they are fighting for their existence, as they fully believe. They also believe that the United States should shut off the sale of war munitions to England and the Allies and right or wrong will not be anxious to showing their disapproval to America even in the midst of war. Just as long as the German people can be fooled and made subservient to the German war machine, just so long will they earnestly fight as directed by the war lords. Sentiment in Germany, like that of any country, is created largely by the press. Just as long as the German press, rightly or wrongly, advocates the practices of savagery in warfare, just so long will the German people believe that such practices are justified by the conditions which confront them. It is sincerely to be hoped that President Wilson is right and that Germany will recede from her position; but it does not look possible.

THE AMERICAN RULE

All Americans will abide by the rule now being established for the press to criticize the bench. The modern and better side of the court are man's invention; the result of slow evolution. They are merely human institutions, have human limitations and frailties, hence are subject to err and stand to have their errors hammered out on the anvil of public discussion and cured by popular exposure. It is vain to contend that they are immune from just scrutiny and criticism to keep them up to a high efficiency of work. If it is not lawful to criticize the courts, then Mr. Lincoln was guilty when he attacked the Dred Scott decision, and also was it wrong to offer any criticism of the legal tender decision, the income tax decision, the rule-of-reason doctrine in the rate cases which were all attacked and defended by publishers, on the platform and in the press.

The abstract right to inspect and criticize the acts and doctrines of the courts in the rule in America, and to oppose that right is futile. We do not believe that great courts and judges are supposed to be general rules of neck-and-neck modification.

To quote President Wilson, the press deals in the raw material out of which public opinion is made; the reputations of the bar, the clergy, the platform, the author, that man-made and unmade by public opinion and in that way the press has a special strength for weal or ill. You hold us in the hollow of your hand. It is a rule that the court or judge is not allowed to enter a defense; a protest in the newspapers or on the platform. The unwritten law is that the court or judge criticized by being misquoted, misunderstood, aspeared, ridiculed, must suffer in silence. Therefore, if the soundness of the reasoning of a judgment is doubted or assailed by a newspaper, then a fair synopsis of those reasons should be gleaned from the original source; the opinion should be printed by the newspaper, and the soundness pointed out. You cannot intelligently maintain that you have the right in argumentation, when your reader will never hear anything except what they are told, to assign false reasons to the court or marble throne or assign none at all, and yet denounce the court's reasoning as invalid is wrong. If the point is obscure you can let it alone or inform your reader by inserting it. If the court is enforcing a statute and you don't like it, your grievances are against the statute, the lawmaker, and not against the court, and you should frantically so. The excuse of necessary haste or striking while the iron is hot, can never be allowed, for a misstatement or slovenly statement, it may in fact excite more, not all states ex-Judge Lamm in his recent talk on a "four-pronged" attack on the press and of the people of the courts in this country, beyond all question. But, it should at all times be just and after careful consideration of both sides of the case that it may be just and based upon facts—Idaho Falls Register.

SECRETARY DANIELS' DEFENSE

It is conditional pessimists found reading to their taste in the recent issue of the Occurrence and demoralization of the United States navy quoted in our issue of April 24, the optimists may now console themselves with a picture of the naval situation from the pen of Secretary Josephus Daniels. While the facts set forth by Mr. Daniels are received with gratification by the press in general, not every paper goes as far as the New York World (Dem.), which declares that "the navy is being rapidly and completely destroyed by the critics in this country." Yet even the Republican Baltimore American remarks that "Mr. Daniels is to be congratulated upon making a statement that gives information and that affords relief," and the independent Washington Post predicts that the Secretary's "dignified reply" to his critics "will go far toward confining criticism to legitimate differences of opinion as to policy." The only outlet the Philadelphia Record (Dem.) disposes of the almost treasonable insinuations from Republican sources that the navy has suffered a diminution of efficiency during the past two years, and the Springfield Republican (Ind.), while conceding that Secretary Daniels' letter "may not tell the whole story," finds it "refreshing and comforting to have something said about the navy that does not picture it as a nation's disgrace." The statistics of the recent growth of the navy, remarks the New York Times (Ind. Dem.), "have not hitherto been presented in a form so intelligible to the plain citizen." These statistics are made public by Secretary Daniels at the request of President Harry A. Garfield, of Williams college, who expressed a wish "to be in a position to meet the statements made by representatives of Germany of Massachusetts, present unprepared for military emergencies." According to this official statement the navy is larger and better equipped with runs, torpedoes, submarines, mines, and aircraft than ever before, with a personnel for the first time in years up to the maximum established by law. Secretary Daniels points out that under the Wilson administration 36 new naval vessels have been placed in commission, with 47,000,000,000 has been appropriated for naval construction, as compared with $26,000,000 appropriated in the two preceding years; millions have been saved on naval contracts through the development of competitive bidding; and the ordnance department "has developed 174-inch gun that will handle the heaviest shell now in use or known to be designed by a foreign country." To quote more at length: "There are now in active service, fully commissioned, 236 vessels of all character, which is 25 more than were fully commissioned when I became secretary. There are also 101 vessels of various types in reserve and in ordinary and uncommissioned capable of rendering service in war. We have under construction and authorized 77 vessels (9 dreadnoughts, 23 destroyers, 28 submarines and 7 auxiliary) as compared with 54 vessels (5 dreadnoughts, 24 destroyers, 23 submarines, 3 gunboats and 9 auxiliaries) which were under construction on March 11, 1913.

"All the vessels enumerated, those in active service and those in reserve are supplied with munitions of war. No navy makes public the quantity of ammunition and torpedoes, mines, and other munitions of war, and how much it keeps ready. It may be well, however, that within the last two years the quantity of all has been steadily and greatly increased. For example, mines, on hand and in process of manufacture, by 24 per cent. With reference to torpedoes the increase in two years has been 90 per cent.—By the enlargement of the naval powder factory we shall soon be able to manufacture the torpedoes, and like enlargement of the torpedo works and the equipment of plant to construct mines will still further increase, at decreased cost, the quantity of such plants, and the possession of such plants in times of emergency will enable the department to be in a better state of preparedness as regards the supply of ammunition than ever before.

"The personnel of the navy is at present composed of 4,355 line, staff, and warrant officers and 53,711 enlisted men. Increase in the number of officers is dependent almost entirely upon the output of the Naval Academy, admission to which is restricted by statute. The number of enlisted men also is restricted, and the navy is today recruited to the maximum of strength allowed. There are now with the colors 5,234 more men—an increase of 12 per cent.—than there were on March 11, 1913. "The European war, as emphasized the value of aircraft. The navy has lagged behind in this instrument of war. Last year I appointed a bureau of aviation. It recommended the utilization of the abandoned navy yard at Pensacola as a training and repair station for aviation and an aviation base in the department. This has been done. Over 100,000,000 has been appropriated to begin upon an elaborate plan, the real development of aviation in the navy. It also approved my request to pay aviators an increase of 50 per cent and we are organizing a class of capable aviators. To make immediately effective this feature, three new hydroaeroplans have just been purchased, which is but the beginning of the work of aviation, now well advanced along the lines of a well considered plan. I regard this one of the most far-reaching steps taken by the Wilson administration.

"I have answered your questions at some length. There are two reasons for the length of my letter. "1. Because these two years have been epoch-making in the navy, distinguished by more wide and progressive naval achievement than any previous like period (thanks chiefly to a patriotic congress), and "2. Because certain persons, ignorant of their ignorance, and for selfish partisan reasons, have bungled themselves with misrepresentation the true condition of the navy. "All who would learn the truth may be assured that the navy of 1915 is larger, better equipped, and in better condition than in any previous year, and that the fleet is becoming more eminent, with every passing month."

"Some papers, however, like the Newark Evening News (Ind.), Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph (Dep.), Detroit Free Press (Ind.), and Brooklyn Eagle (Ind. Dem.), point out that the real question before the country is not whether the navy is more eminent than it was two years ago, but whether it is as efficient as it ought to be. "In addition to these objections we find papers like the New York Press (Ind. Rep.), and American (Ind.), regarding the statement of Mr. Daniels is constitutionally unfit to head the navy department. Remarks The Press most emphatically: "If there were a 200,000,000,000, that we have under the Stars and Stripes, there were many more fleets of cruisers and submarines, they would not, so long as Secretary Daniels were in charge of them, be a satisfactory navy; they would be first a joke and then junk."—Literary Digest.

He bought a Dodge. Billy has been a hard man to suit. He looked them all over carefully and then made his choice. The pump at the city well broke Monday and as a consequence Filer is "dry." Every person in town should be extremely careful while the water is out of the mains. It may be several days before the pump can be fixed.

The board of education held their regular meeting Monday evening and transacted routine business. After the meeting the board tendered a farewell dinner to Prof. Dooley in the conference room.

The spread was a credit to the Domestic Science department who served it. The evening was very pleasantly passed.

Talk about a good rain, but that one Tuesday night a fine shower with the water out of the low line and the city well out of commission, the rain came to a long rest was very early. If the dry farmers and the farmers on the Salmon are not grateful, then we are sure there is no thankfulness in the human hand.

Starling Evidence Secured Against The Insect.

Following the sensational exposure in the confidential letter found in the files of the pure food and sanitary department by Commissioner J. K. White of House Fly and Co., a quiet investigation has been in progress by the commissioner and his deputies as to the operations of this company in Idaho with the result some startling evidence has been secured. With reference to it the commissioner issued the following statement:

"They tell me neither do they spin, but when it comes to bringing forth their young they have got Teddy Roosevelt's hobby, beat a little."

"About this time of the year Mr. and Mrs. House Fly leave their winter quarters and take themselves to the nearest manure pile, where Mr. House Fly makes her nest and lays one hundred and twenty eggs in one sitting. As a matter of fact, Mr. House Fly and White Leghorn hen beat to a frazzle in 12 hours, under favorable conditions. The eggs hatch into maggots, and are then picked up by the old hen and converted into hen eggs, they crawl down into the manure and eat this nutritious substance for about a week. After leaving dormant in the warmth of this manure pile for about another week they come out full fledged flies, dressed in an Easter suit minus that hat and split skirt, and proceed to blow the air into the theory another blow in the solar plexus."

"The house fly is born in the manure pile. He feeds on it when young, and like most youngsters, he fails to rise above his environments. There is no place too filthy to repel the fly. The fly has six legs with 162 hairs on each leg and a small sponge on the bottom of each foot."

"Washes Feet in Milk."

"In the garbage can, cuspidor or open privy vault, or on a decayed rotten cat, rat or dog, he wades around, soaking his feet and covering his hairy legs with filth. Then he files into your dining room and proceeds to scrape off his hairy legs on the bread and the edge of your plate and washes his feet in the milk."

"Although filth is bad and not very wholesome, it is not the worst that Mr. and Mrs. House Fly carry around with them. With their hairy legs and sponge feet, they gather up, while crawling around open sewers, privies, stables, garbage piles and animal rotten carcasses, all kinds of germs, such as typhoid fever, tuberculosis, infantile paralysis, cholera infantum, etc."

CHAUTAUQUA AS BUSINESS FORCE

Merchants Trade Journal Gives Views in Impartial Way

The following extracts are from a comprehensive article to business men by a business man—the editor of the Merchants Trade Journal, of Des Moines, as authority to what is said.

"Any business man is glad to be able to say 'We have a good Chautauqua in our town' because the word Chautauqua is recognized as a symbol of culture, high ideals and broad thinking. These are things for any community to be proud of. But few people appreciate the Chautauqua as a business force, as most of them have never thought of it as such.

"Formerly it was thought that for one to gain an education it was necessary for him to drop his every-day work and go away to some great institution of learning. No one thought of having culture and training brought to the community, and while of course, we fully appreciate the fact that for one to receive a broad technical or professional education he must still go to the institutions of learning offering special courses of study along the lines that he wishes to follow. It is at the same time true that the people of hundreds and hundreds of communities throughout this country have been educated to a considerable degree and lifted to a higher plane of thinking and living through the influence of this great education movement.

"Go into any community where a force of this kind has been at work for a number of years and you will find that the whole appearance of the community has been changed. We might cite you town after town that we have watched personally and we could tell you of the great educational achievements of these towns much of which can be traced to this source.

"But the point we wish to make in this article is about the direct and special interest to every retail merchant, men whose business success depends there upon their community development. The Journal is glad to note that there is a tendency throughout the country to consider the subject of business and commerce on the Chautauqua platform. It is fitting to have the business men's programs because business is, after all, the chief aim of a majority of our people. We mean business in the larger sense and not in the narrow sense of barter and trade, as the term is often misunderstood.

"Just now the question, 'How can we keep the young man at home?' is a question receiving not only the attention of parents but of educators and business men everywhere. But we want to say to our readers that in our opinion nothing can be done that will have a greater tendency toward causing more young men to stay at home in the smaller towns and rural communities, where they should be, than to give them the right kind of education. Teaching, just such teaching as they have a right to expect from this great forum, the Chautauqua; just such teaching as they have a right to expect right in our own community. This great movement, the Chautauqua, is demonstrating every day the fact that the community can be bettered by giving the people thoughts and ideas that uplift and broaden them. Then if it is true that the thing to be done is to have a greater tendency to benefit the communities in a business way it is only good business.

Honeymoon Trip Made Possible by Moon Cars.

The romantic marriage of William B. Lampert, wealthy mine owner of San Diego, Cal., to his childhood sweetheart in St. Louis several weeks ago has resulted in an equally romantic honeymoon; the couple is now taking in a Moon roadster. They left St. Louis this week on their 2,500 mile, overland journey to Ukiah, Cal., where they will make their future home.

The honeymoon trip will be interrupted by camping and fishing. The roadster was specially fitted up by the Moon Motor Car company with special trunks on the running board to carry all the fishing outfit and other paraphernalia. Two revolvers and two shot guns completed their equipment.

Lampert and his bride were stopping at the Buckingham Annex in St. Louis, after their marriage and were planning to go to California by rail. An advertisement of Moon cars suggested making the trip by automobile. A ride in the Moon Six-40 roadster convinced them of the arrangements for the trip were immediately made. The Lamperts expect to journey to their new home by easy stages, taking about six weeks for their trip.

SILAGE BULLETIN

Reasons Why You Should Buy a Silo.

You need a silo because your farm to make more money on your farm. You need it because you can't afford to do without it, as the silo is usually the most profitable investment the man who has one must have one, too.

The silo will reduce the cost of production of milk, meat and eggs. It will permit of keeping three times more stock on your farm than you now have.

If you use a summer silo you will need less pasture and will therefore have more land for cultivation. It will help you to sell and increase the value of your land.

A silo saves labor, as with it you can feed more stock in much less time than by any other means and it can be done easier. Not only does the silo decrease the cost of production, but it increases the animal's production and the quality of the products.

Times Are Tipt for the Silo.

Conditions have changed in this country during the past few years and the silo has now become a necessity. Years ago when corn was worth from 15 to 25 cents a bushel, and hay from $4 to $5 per ton, it was a profitable investment, but now with high priced grains and forage the silo is a necessity. The grain question before the keeper of live stock is how to lower the cost of production. The silo will do this, and it is now as much a necessity with the stock raiser and feeder as the self binder or combine is to the grain raiser.

Silo is Not an Experiment.

The silo is not an experiment. Twenty-five years ago it was found to be a good economic method of preserving stock food. If the silo is a good thing, why don't we have more of them? The answer lies in the fact that ensilage has no market quotation. It certainly is a happy thought to know that here is a farm product that cannot be overproduced. If the great markets of the country bought and sold ensilage as they do wheat and corn, we are sure there would be more silos on the farms than there are today.

Value of Corn Ensilage

Comparing ensilage with hay, grain roots and pasture, and basing them on their present market value, corn ensilage is worth between $5 and $7 per ton. There are many other things, however, we must consider while fixing the value of corn fodder, and while these are true and important factors they are hard to fix in figures. The silo is a necessity for the farmer. Aid to Digestion, Convenience in Feeding, Soil Fertility, Economy of Storage Space, Stock Carrying Capacity of Land and Keeping Quality of the Forage.

Like Pasture.

Pasture grass when analyzed shows no marked abundance of nutrients, and yet we know the beneficial results on cows when they have a supply of this food. The cooling, appetizing effect of ensilage on the animal's di-

Will Protect Americans Force Sent to Mexico to Aid Citizens Against Indians. San Diego, Cal.—The cruiser Colorado, flagship of the Pacific fleet, carrying an expeditionary force of marines and a machine gun for their use, sailed for Mexican waters Sunday afternoon and if necessary, American colonists in Sonora who have been fighting Yaqui Indians.

Radio signals received Sunday by the Colorado, en route to Mexico, stated that fighting between Yaqui Indians and American colonists near Esperanza, Sonora, had ceased, all Indians having left the Yaqui valley. They left word, however, that they intended to return.

This information came from Superintendent Smith of the Richardson contract mining company, a large land holding corporation in the Yaqui valley. He said he had held a conference with Captain Magruder of the cruiser Raleigh at Guaymas Saturday night.

According to the message from Smith the Americans at all times had access to the railroads but refused to leave. They intended, it was stated, to concentrate their forces at a point about 10 miles west of Cajeme.

To prepare for the threatened return of the Indians they had asked the commander of the Raleigh for 100 rifles and a machine gun with ammunition.

The gunboat Yorktown reported Sunday its arrival at Manzanillo and stated that railroad communication between Colima and Manzanillo was entirely suspended.

No excitement over Department. Little excitement occurred during the embarkation of the Twenty-fifth and Twenty-eighth companies of marines aboard the cruiser Saturday night at 9 o'clock Sunday morning. The field pieces and equipment of the marines were taken aboard the cruiser Saturday night but the men remained ashore in the camp at the exposition grounds awaiting final orders from Admiral P. B. Howard.

During the night several thousand pounds of fresh vegetables were taken aboard and when the recall gun was fired at 10 p. m. practically every officer and sailor on shore had returned to the flagship.

The Colorado steamed out of the harbor at a 15-knot clip at 1:40 p. m. and should join the cruisers New Orleans and Raleigh at Tubira by Tuesday afternoon.

SILOS AND SILAGE

The most common method of preserving forage crops during the winter is to dry them out, or "cure" them, as hay or fodder. Dry feeds, however, are much less desirable for the fresh green grass or forage as it grows in the field.

The silo is an airtight structure used for the preservation of green, coarse, feeding in the best condition. If such green, juicy forage is piled up in a heap in the open air, it will begin to heat or ferment, and finally rot and become worthless for an feed.

The advantages of the silo are: (1) Forage crops can be preserved in any kind of weather and not interfere. (2) Feed is near at hand and does not have to be hauled when weather is bad or feed is scarce.

The location of the silo is very important. The silage is fed every day throughout the winter. Therefore the silo should be handy to the barn, yet the silage odor should not penetrate the house.

The size of the silo will depend on the number of animals to be fed and the length of the feeding period. In many cases, 40 cubic feet of silage will feed a cow for a week.

Table with 4 columns: Silage, Tons, 16 T, 6 mo. It lists silage amounts for different durations and animal counts.

Sufficient silage should be provided to furnish a reserve for such emergencies as the silo being out of order, or the silage being spoiled.

The economy of storage depends upon the compactness of the silage in a deep silo. The more solidly the feed is packed, the more silage can be stored.

Good roads mean much. Good roads mean much to moral and intellectual welfare as to economic distribution.

True Civilization. Working for good roads at every opportunity is a mark of true civilization.

wood, cypress, red fir, white pine, tamarack and yellow pine. Only straight heart wood should be used, having no checks, large solid knots or fogs.

The modified Wisconsin hop silo is a cheap but serviceable silo. On the foundation a circular sill is laid and upon it 2x4 studs are erected at intervals of 12 or 16 inches depending on the diameter of the silo.

Concrete silos are coming into favor. They are constructed and waterproofed they are excellent. Impervious to rain and moisture, weather-proof and unchangeable, they are the best.

The crops used for silage are many. Corn is easily the most popular, being used almost wholly in the eastern states. In the western states, alfalfa and clover are used.

Cost of Silage. Twenty-one farms in Western Washington reported the cost of silage. The average cost per ton for alfalfa silage was $1.00.

Many farmers in the wheat districts grow their silage corn on ground that would otherwise be summer-fallowed and the cost of growing the crops is practically nothing.
