Mayer-Sweetley is to be congratulated upon his efforts to cover the Eighth avenue lateral and will be sure to have the gratitude of the parents of the north and east portions of this city. It is a good financial move, too, in avoiding possible damage suits. Not only the loss of life of some small child but the danger to teams and autos constitute a serious problem as long as the ditch remains unexcavated. A few hundred dollars spent in remedy is good insurance against damage suits.

The work of street commissioner Porter for this city is being watched with much interest and is a matter for commendation for results already obtained. Mr. Porter is evidently trying to make good and put the roads in condition and will no doubt, please the taxpayers even if the cost is a trifle higher at present. The bumps and hollows in some of the streets may have been a source of discomfort to drivers of all kinds of vehicles for some time, and the improvements will no doubt eventually cut the cost of road maintenance.

PECULIAR SITUATION To pick an engineer who has persistently fought a bridge project as the man to determine stresses and capacity for the making of estimates does not look like good business judgment. Yet that is what the Twin Falls board of county commissioners have done in connection with the estimate desired for the cost of the rim to rim bridge north of Hansen. Engineer Fox has opposed that bridge at all times and is known to favor other sites. This is well known to the county commissioners, who have employed him to procure data for guaranteed estimate of cost which the Missouri Valley Bridge company is to furnish this county. The bridge company will not have to depend upon his requirements for stress and load and width of bridge. Every additional and unnecessary requirement in connection with that bridge will, of course, add to the cost. Will Engineer Fox be broad enough to drop his prejudice in the matter of that bridge and be just? The Times hopes that he will, but is not expecting such justice in the light of his activity for other bridges.

The county commissioners could have secured for a lower price or less the services of some other engineer who would have no axe to grind in the matter and whose data would not be questioned by those interested in that bridge. As a matter of fact, most of the actual work of figuring bridge costs is furnished free by the bridge companies and only the data of distances and the stress is needed from the local engineer. Any engineer could as profitably do this work as well as the high priced favorite, of the county board. As a matter of fact, the estimates of the two steel bridges across Rock creek were the work of the Midland Bridge company, rather than of the engineer who claims the credit for close figuring.

CHANGE EXPECTED

The resignation of Secretary of State W. J. Bryan from Wilson's cabinet does not create as much sensation as might be expected from such an important event. It has been predicted ever since the beginning of the Mexican trouble that the two statesmen and cabinet members would not be able to work in harmony for any length of time. The German situation, was merely the last straw. Naturally by temperament and education, both President Wilson and Secretary Bryan have like ideas on peace. Both men as private citizens would no doubt hold to the Bryan idea of "peace at any price." The split came then only as the two men sought to interpret the policy of the nation. Bryan could not and would not change in the face of a strong without demand. Wilson because of his duty to the nation as its head, must of necessity yield to the demands of the nation in defense of its honor. This seems to be the only difference worth while between the two.

While the Times believes fully that President Wilson's policy is right, yet cannot help but admiring the steadfastness of Mr. Bryan in sticking to his principles even at the expense of lost prestige. It is characteristic of Bryan in all his public career to never waver once convinced of the right of his position. He is a great man today despite the criticism of his position. Great because of his courage and honesty of purpose.

STARVING GERMANY

The torpedoing of the Lusitania is justified by Germany as an act of retaliation against England for "starving" the German women and children. No actual list of those who have starved to death, however, has as yet been published. Predictions of lack of food and the consequent suffering of women and children have been alternating in the German press with confident assertions that the Fatherland is well supplied with all things necessary for existence and even has luxuries to spare. Newspapers of the highest standing such as the Koelnische Zeitung, the Frankfurter Zeitung, and the Berliner Tageblatt, have published impassioned appeals to the housewife calling upon her to observe a "Spartan economy" and yet, sometimes in the same issue, there may be found articles describing the abundance of the food supplies accumulated by the far-reaching authorities. For example, the Frankfurter Zeitung writes: "The last months before the new harvest are upon us. . . . From August on we shall again possess in consequence of our own production, the nourishment and necessities of life for months—for another year, if need be. But until August we must carry on with what we have. . . . Everything that has been done, written, and spoken since the outbreak of the war in connection with the securing of Germany's food-supply must now be put to the supreme test."

The Koelnische Zeitung urges householders in the annexed terms to list in supplies of preserved meat:

"The time has now come for every one whose means will at all permit it and who has adequate storage facilities at his disposal, or who can rent them, to provide himself as generously as possible with smoked and pickled meat. . . . Provision for the future is one of the most important among the many important duties imposed upon us by the war."

The professor of political science at Kiel university, Dr. Harms, issues a fervid appeal for economy, which according to the Berliner Tageblatt, runs:

"Do not let a crumb of bread—that gift of God—be wasted. Eat only war bread. Regard the potato as a means to assist us to victory. Blush for shame if your desire for luxuries tempts you to eat pies and pastry. Look with contempt on those who are so immoral as to eat cake and so by their greediness imperil our supply of flour."

"In the face of such a report it is a little difficult to discover where the truth lies. Breadstuffs may be, and very probably are, dangerously scarce. But men does not live by bread alone, and other provisions seem to be both abundant and cheap. This we learn from a careful study of the advertising columns of the newspapers, which, in times of stress are always a valuable index of the national life. In the Berliner Tageblatt we find the advertisement of A. Wertheim, Berlin's great department store, which caters to the comparatively well-to-do classes. It is headed "Cheap Provision," and certainly the prices show that one can starve in Berlin in comparative comfort. Here is the price list in American money. . . .

Inclusive of women and children, with starvation she evidently hopes to obtain a peace which she would not be entitled to by military success. Now, to be sure, this plan is doomed to failure, although Germany has been placed in an unpleasant but not a dangerous position by the cessation of imports. But the unbridled brutality of the opponent has now forced Germany to re-consider, and she will likewise have to see starvation of the enemy as a weapon of defense. Literary Digest

TALKS ON THRIFT No. 18.—THE COST OF WASTE. Men do not reap in the spring my dear. Now are granaries filled in May. Save it be with a harvest of former years Stored up for a rainy day. "The Seasons will keep their own true time, You can hurry nor furrow nor sod. It's honest labor and steadfast thrift That alone are blessed by God." —Alfred Austin.

There are weeds enough in many corn fields to fatten a carload of sheep allowing them to eat the down stalks, the lower blades, and the low-hanging ears that the farmer would hardly miss. They are great wasters of corn fodder. All through Ohio and Indiana and even in New England, one sees farmers busy taking down their corn "fodder" all winter—beating out the outside, husking them out by hand, throwing the corn into piles on the ground—to be picked-up, again, and then tying up the fodder leaving much of the valuable fodder outside to be weathered before it is fed to the stock. "Even greater waste is that in the corn that is not harvested. Iowa, Illinois, eastern Kansas and Nebraska and southern Minnesota had about forty million acres of corn last year, of which probably not more than one-fourth was harvested for the silo or for stock or for shredding. The rest goes to waste, and it amounts to over one-third of the feeding value of the whole crop." But the city dweller, he business man or manufacturer, can not afford to point the finger of scorn at the farmer as a waster, because waste is rampant in the cities likewise. Lewis E. Thiele, who has investigated the subject thoroughly, is authority for the statement that unnecessary coal smoke costs American industries many millions of dollars yearly. Black smoke coming largely or un-consumed coal particles thrown into the atmosphere by improper stoking. Smoke also contains acids of value which not only are usually wasted but they are also destructive of everything they touch. The pollution of our atmosphere with smoke places a heavy burden upon us. It greatly increases the death rate. It lowers our efficiency. Engineers have estimated that the cost to the city of Cleveland because of its smoking factories is $8,000,000 a year. The loss to Chicago is estimated at $12,000,000 a year. The people of Pittsburg suffer an annual loss of $10,000,000 through smoke. The annual bill on account of smoking factory chimneys is reckoned at $500,000,000. One Pittsburg manufacturing company alone has effected a saving of $50,000 a year through the abolition of smoke in its chimneys by means of double steam pressure and mechanical stokers. Installation of smoke consuming machinery and proper stoking, engineers claim, will prevent much of the loss now suffered from this source. We are hindered by the stupendous waste being wrought by the destructive forces of war on the other side of the globe. Let us not overlook the fact that, individually and collectively we Americans are responsible for an aggregate waste which is almost if not quite as stupendous and the fact that history's most devastating war is now in progress should impel us to wage unremitting war on waste of all kinds in our own country. —D. MacGREGOR.

A COMMUNICATION
In the last issue of the Twin Falls News there appeared an editorial headed "A Legal Fiasco." This article was a direct slap at the jury in the case of the State of Idaho vs. Pettigill in an attempted assault on a little girl. Now the writer of that article looks for an explanation from the hands of the jury, and it would seem from the utterances contained not from the sober investigations of in that article that some attention was paid as it is just such expressions that excite anxiety, disapproval and "moral" readers. It is from the sober investigations of two men in an all night eight-hour labor—that excites such sentiments that would lead some people to think they had their rights trampled upon, but it is from the howling expression of some bombast who in the "sumum bunnum" of all that is pure and good in the field of sacred literature. Not but he—

He began to switch his tail. Well, I never; he did murmur. There's a mutt that's been in jail. When I see an article in a paper that is to be read by everybody, who have not had the opportunity to know the facts in the matter, and that article breathing terms of discontent, mis-true, anarchy, and perhaps attracting public sentiment at the expense of a jury in trying to belittle a juror's efforts, trying to belittle them in the eyes of the public, I tell you gentle reader, that the writer of the article is, absolutely as ignorant as the other man.

things and he will no doubt be a welcome addition to the business circles of the city.—Adv. June 9.

Had the writer of that article come to the jury and asked the reason for acquitting the defendant, undoubtedly he would have spent his time in admonishing witnesses to be more careful in the giving of evidence, he would perhaps have asked that citizens render the jury assistance by giving evidence. He would have said, "The witness is a man, he is a little one to play along with a crowd of boys, running the streets after nine o'clock at night. Now what are the marks on the floor of the boxcar in the dust. Four witnesses swore that the dust on the floor was from sixteenth to one-quarter of an inch thick. The testimony showed absolutely that no other marks were visible in that dust on the floor except some finger marks which the little girl claimed to have made in a scuffle at a crumpling position. Witness swore no dust was disturbed other than as above stated. Can a child lie down on the floor covered with dust, and get up without making other marks or other finger prints? Can a man get on the floor and not make hand marks or dust in the same way? Can a man get up without making any marks in a jury manufacture evidence? Now further.

The chief man at Buhl seems to be a man of more than ordinary intelligence and let certain phases of the evidence to a doctor at Buhl, who was at the boxcar that night when the alleged crime took place—saying he thought the doctor more competent in certain details of evidence. The doctor at the hospital said, "Where there is a doctor that can throw the least particle of evidence that will assist nearly any fact, it is his duty to do so. The garment of the little girl which was exhibited in evidence hardly seemed sufficient. A piece had previously been taken away containing about three inches below the waist line in the rear part of the garment there were under-nails and up across the front of the garment to within about three inches of the waist line in front and a new piece sewed in with a single white thread about the New York white thread was broken in one place only. The thread was practically all there and a part of the thread picked out, and the patch was gone. This man who you within about three inches of the waist line in the rear part of the garment—No, a single mark of violence which will be shared with his customers.

JENKINS & COMPANY, Twin Falls

SEC. BRYAN HAS RESIGNED.

Items arising out of the use of sub-marines against merchantmen, we find ourselves differing irreconcilably as to the methods which should be employed.

"I fall to your lot to speak officially for the nation, I consider it to be none the less my duty to endeavor as a private citizen to promote the good which you have in view by means which you do not feel at liberty to use.

"In severing the intimate and pleasant relations which have existed between us during the past two years permit me to acknowledge the profound satisfaction which it has given me to be associated with you in the work which has come before the state department and to thank you for the courtesies shown.

With the heartfelt wishes for your welfare and success in your administration, I am, my dear Mr. President.

"Very truly yours,
 (Signed) "W. J. BRYAN,"
 Washington, June 8, 1916."
 President's Acceptance. May 28 11.

The president's letter to Mr. Bryan was as follows:

"Dear Mr. Bryan: I accept your resignation only because you insist upon its acceptance, and I accept it with much more than ordinary regret with a feeling of personal sorrow. Our two years of close association have been a privilege to me. Our judgments have accorded in practically every matter of social duty and of public policy until now. Your support of the work and purpose of this administration has been generous and loyal beyond praise. Your devotion to the duties of your great office and your experience has been a great help and a great opportunity for service if offered has been an example to the rest of us. You have earned our affectionate admiration and gratitude. From now we are not separated in the object we seek but only in the method by which we seek it.

"It is for those reasons that my feelings about your retirement from the office of secretary of state go much deeper than regret. I deplore it for the sake of the name and we ought to pursue them together. I yield to your desire only because I must and with you I shall continue to work for the same causes even when we do not work in the same way.

With affectionate regard, sincerely yours,
