TO HELP MEXICO SAVE HERSELF

His position that "watchful waiting" must give way to "helpful action" wins President Wilson the approval of even the most outspoken journalistic critics of his Mexican policy. "Considerations of humanity, the relief of a famished and broken people, indignation with the handling guerrilla chiefs who fight for their own gain, anger for the wrongs suffered by our undefeated citizens in Mexico, the enormous imperiled or ruined American interests in Mexico—all these," declares the New York Sun, "impel the American people to stand solidly by Mr. Wilson in whatever course of firm and deliberate suppression of disorder and faction and protection of natives and foreigners in Mexico he may be forced to adopt." The "considerations of humanity," as set forth by the president in his Mexican statement and in his earlier appeal under Red-Cross auspices for help for the starving people of that unhappy country, seem almost irresistible to most of our countrymen. The Chicago Herald-Examiner, which has endeavored to depict a revolution-ridden next-door neighbor as a great deal longer, "but it can not and will not endure indefinitely the sight of a starving nation." And the Springfield Republican, New York World, Philadelphia News, Charleston News and Courier, and Omaha Bee are but a few of the representative dailies which give emphatic editorial utterance to this thought.

Yet the New York Tribune and Chicago Tribune, though admitting that so serious a situation calls for action, argue strongly and at length to the effect that the call is no more urgent than it has been for months, that action which should have been taken earlier might well have been deferred at this time on account of the more serious issue with Germany, and that there is all the more reason to get the army and navy into a better state of preparedness in order to be able to make our words good in both continents. That his own "watchful waiting" policy, too, is largely responsible for the Mexican situation which President Wilson would now end in the opinion of several papers, including the Albany Knickerbocker Press, New York Journal of Commerce, Brooklyn Standard Union, Philadelphia Inquirer, Baltimore American, Washington Times, Detroit Free Press, and St. Louis Globe Democrat. On the other hand, the New York World is convinced that the long delay has brought a good many people in Mexico to their knees, and that we can go into Mexico now, if necessary, in the full confidence that there will be no suspicion as to our intentions, and that all Latin America will know that the United States is trying to do for Mexico what it did for Cuba.

While the New York Evening Post does not find a review of President Wilson's Mexican policy "exactly objectionable," it notes that he has had a "good measure of success in his chief objects."

"To set himself against the reconquest of Huerta, and Huerta is an exile from Mexico. He strove to keep the United States out of another Mexican war, and did it only, however, by a skillful turning of the corner, through the mediation of Argentina, Chile, and Brazil. Above all, he sought to make it clear to Mexico, to South America, and to all the world that the United States did not wish or intend to add a foot of its territory by conquest. This position the president has maintained throughout, and has re-emphasized it by various utterances, so that it may now be regarded as a settled part of his policy. In this his countrymen may well take pride. In his statement of June 2, addressed to the American people and evidently intended also for our ears, the Big Game, President Wilson points out that "Mexico is apparently no nearer a solution of her tragical troubles than she was when the revolution was first kindled. Meanwhile, she has been swept by civil war as if by fire," and, in short, "is straving and without a government." In these circumstances, says the president, we can not stand idly by. And he feels it his duty "to publicly and very solemnly call upon the leaders of factions in Mexico to act together and to act promptly for the relief and redemption of their prostrate country. I feel it to be my duty to tell them that if they can not accommodate their differences and unite for this great purpose within a very short time, this government will be constrained to employ the United States in order to help Mexico save herself and serve her people."

President Wilson's decision is held by the editors and Washington correspondents to be due in large part to recent Red-Cross and consular bulletins and the reports of special agents. The problem of relief in Mexico is said by Red-Cross workers to be more difficult than that encountered in the relief of San Francisco, the Messina earthquake, or Belgium. Red-Cross bulletins, based upon state depositions, report a total of frightful conditions, constantly growing worse. In cities like Monterey, Tampico, Jalisco, and Acapulco, the people are on the very verge of wholesale starvation. In Mexico City 100,000 people were reported suffering from hunger as long ago as March. Such food as there is brings fabulous prices. There have been serious riots and epidemics of smallpox and typhus.

While many editors predict armed intervention as the only way the president can carry out his purpose in Mexico, a New York Sun correspondent has written that he will first observe for a few weeks the effect of his statement on the Mexican leaders.

"If by that time there are no evidences of a disposition on the part of the factions to get together for the common good of the country, an embargo will be placed on the shipment of arms to Mexico. Meantime the administration will try to locate a strong group of men to take hold in Mexico during the period of reconstruction. In default of early statements from revolutionary leaders, one foresees a general election of Mexican opinion comes in ex-President Huerta's declaration that "our people will never stand for any government inspired by foreigners, no matter how humanitarian or noble the motives of such foreign nation appear to be." But an Associated Press correspondent points out that the assumption that the Mexican people would unite against intervention "is combated by those in sympathy with the president's purpose. Only a small proportion of the population—a small proportion of 10,000,000—has any opinion, and the contention is advanced that the great majority, bereft by hunger and suffering from other deprivations, would welcome intervention by the United States." Literary Digest.

THURSDAY IS THE DAY

Edward H. Robinson extends a cordial invitation to everyone, to you personally, to attend the 24th annual convention of the Young Men's Christian Association of Twin Falls, on Thursday, June 24th, between the hours of 8:00 a. m. and 6:00 p. m., at 241 Main, avenue east, Twin Falls.

This is a good time to lay in a supply of those things every family needs for the summer. It is a good time to buy by purchasing in quantities. Low prices for reliable merchandise makes this the place for you and your friends to trade for money. If for any reason you are not satisfied, write to the new comer in town, Mr. Robinson's experience in large business centers such that we feel certain you will find just what you want at his store, and at the right price. Every visitor will receive a useful present—something you always need. This does not in any way obligate you to purchase—just call and get acquainted. Mr. Robinson would like to meet you. These presents are for children as well as grown folks, when accompanied by an adult. Bring the children. A present for every member of the family. Don't forget the time, Thursday, June 24th, and the place, 241 Main avenue east. This is a personal invitation to you.—Adv.

THE BEEF EATERS' DILEMMA

An Allegory in Verse, Whose Meaning is Understood by Those Who Know Touching upon the transient friendships made in the Chautauqua and summer watering places.

By W. H. Head, Alhambra, California.

A Rush went forth from the river-bank
And walked the wide world through.
He was lonely and sad for he left behind
A fair mate and they were good and true;
But a duty he had a burden strong,
The he bore with him day by day,
Twas to help and to please the world of folk
That he roamed from his home away.

From the ooze of the brine, and the damp of the slime,
He had formed a crystalline pearl,
And to tell of his birth and his busy row,
Wore to tell the mob's mad swirl;
And so, though he wept for his quiet home,
He was brave, nor complained with a sigh;
His story he told, and his song he sang,
With ever a timid eye.

But across his path a butterfly flew,
And she looked toward his strength,
And her presence a glint of the sunshine cast
On the gathering shadows' length,
On the life of the great and the gentle hum
Of her wings of silver and blue,
Made his heart beat strong with a future hope,
Of a friendship helpful and true.

In his days' round turn, and the nights' long time,
The music of thoughts that were high,
She inspired in him, in his darkest hours,
But one eye as the sun-washed his westward way,
She flew, ere the orb was set,
Away from his life to a far away clime.

And so strong had she been in her quiet life
To lift him to heights sublime,
That he thought, "I may trust to her friendship help,
From now till the end of time,
But he said, "These butterflies come from afar,
And are not true, and are not true;
They are butterflies, more, and their art is to please,
And forget as soon as "tho' done."

But this butterfly seems a different thing,
And has shown such friendship strong,
That to suspect she'll forget, and cease to help,
Is to do her infinite wrong,
She will not forget, but this friendship pure
Will endure as long as time,
In exchange of hope and mutual thought
We will help in life's task sublime.

But alas! alas! 'Twas the same old tale;
A butterfly still was she,
She forgot, she forgot her friendship songs,
And the farther lone country,
Now the red is back in his eye home,
Along with his true mate fly,
But he wonders why such friendship songs,
Must be said into seasons old.

ROAD MODELS

Many Kinds of Roads Illustrated by Models.

The exhibit of road models shown for the first time in 1935 by the office of public roads of the department at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition here, is one of the most comprehensive made at the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, Cal. People who have seen these miniature model roads not only appreciate the benefits of improved roads but at the same time understand the methods of their construction. In order that these models may have the greatest usefulness, they have been photographed and form the basis of illustrations of a new United States department of agriculture bulletin No. 220, "Road Models."

The models as a rule, are constructed on a scale of 1 inch to a foot or more. Each model is constructed on the size of the actual road which it represents, building which are pictured and described are the concrete, macadam, block, macadam, sand clay, gravel and earth roads. Still other models show the processes of maintenance, re-urfacing and bituminous macadam construction by the mixing and pouring methods. Recent additions to the series illustrate road location and roadside construction, drainage, strengthening-unsafe foundations, etc.

The history of road construction, dealing with the early methods employed in Italy and France, is followed with discussions and illustrations of the most modern ways of road building in the United States; the use of road building is necessarily large and in many cases roads must be constructed largely on material at hand. The bulletin "Road Models," is applicable to a wide range of conditions.

In the section dealing with earth roads the subject of the split-log drag is treated as follows: A suitable drag can be made from a log 7 or 8 inches in diameter and from 8 to 10 feet long. It should be carefully split and the halves, with the flat sides vertical and facing to the front, connected by stakes. The stakes, three or four in length, are joined so that one end of the rear half is from 16 to 20 inches nearer the center of the log than the corresponding end of the front half. An ordinary trace chain and a set of double lines are then attached in such manner that when the horses move forward the drag will be pulled along the road at an angle of about 45 degrees, with the forward end nearest the ditch in order to move the earth toward the road-center.

The drag should be light enough to be lifted by one man. The best material for dry red cedar, though red elm, and walnut are excellent, while box elder, soft maple, elm, or willow are superior to oak, hickory, or ash. A heavy-duty tire, placed on the front axle to strengthen the drag and furnish a place for the driver to stand. After a little practice a man can learn how best to shift the weight so as to make the drag cut, spread, and pack the earth properly.

Filling the ruts by dragging up one side of the road and down the other is all that should be undertaken the first time, but this should be repeated every few days. A small oil-end road can be dragged in a few hours; this method of maintenance is simple and inexpensive. If the drag is used in conjunction with the road machine, fairly good earth roads can be built at a small expense. Dragging is done for 50-60 cents per mile in some parts of the country. At this rate a mile of earth road can be dragged once a month for $6 annually. Some remarkable results have been accomplished with the drag without the aid of the road machine. Farmers' bulletin 597, "The Road Drag and How to Use It," deals fully with this subject. Copies of this publication will be sent free to persons applying to the editor and chief of the division of publications, U. S. department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., as long as the department's supply lasts.

HEALTH AND HYGIENE

Hot weather is the time of danger for the babies. The record of the state for 1934 was better than ever before, but even last year babies died during the four summer months in Idaho, nearly half of them from summer diarrhea. One out of every four of babies from this cause would have been given proper food.

The only perfect food for a baby is mother's milk. The bottle fed babies die one fed at the breast. Breast fed babies seldom have the bowel trouble which is so fatal to bottle fed babies during hot weather. There are very few mothers who cannot nurse their babies—if they try to do so under the direction of a competent physician and breast feeding is the one great thing which can prevent the loss of thousands of babies from preventable disease this summer.

When it is for any reason impossible to secure mother's milk for a child, fresh cow's milk, properly modified and pasteurized, is the best substitute. Milk may be pasteurized by placing it in a double-boiler in a cooking pot and putting in a thermometer and heating until the water is 160 degrees. This cooker should then be moved to the back of the front stove so as to keep the temperature between 140 and 150 degrees for thirty minutes. This is necessary to hold the harmful germs which may get into even the best milk.

"The same result can be reached almost as well if you have not a thermometer but heating till the water around the bottles just comes to a boil and then setting on the back of the stove for thirty minutes.

The baby needs less food, but more to drink in hot weather. Bottle milk should therefore be diluted with boiled water and cooled before given freely between feedings.

Clothing in summer should be light, and the baby should be kept out of doors as much as possible except in the middle of the day, when it is very hot. He should be bathed morning and evening in hot days in the middle of the day.

If any signs at all of diarrhoea appear the baby's food should be diluted with boiled water and the amount increased. If the trouble continues and there is vomiting or fever all food should be stopped at once (giving only boiled water) until a physician called immediately.

Detailed directions as to these and other points in infant care may be had from your physician or pharmacist. There is one nearby, and a booklet "Your Baby—How to Keep It Well" which has been prepared for mothers by some of the foremost authorities in this country, will be mailed to any one who sends a request to the Idaho State Board of Health, Boise, Idaho.

WATER SITUATION ON SALMON

Only Irrigation Tract Gets Commenced Last Week.

Early this week the huge gates at the dam were swung open and the waters which have been impounded there during the spring and previous springs, started on their way to bring relief to the burning crops on the Salmon tract. The grasses are not suffering alone now, for friction has appeared in numerous fields of grain, to such an extent that the injury is already very marked. Particularly is this true of fields of grain which were sown early in the spring on lands with comparatively shallow soil. In such instances where the early growth has been rapid, the grain has not withstood the protracted drought as well as some of the smaller grains, or the grain on lands with deeper soil. That the condition is more serious than many realize is the opinion of some farmers, for they point out in justification of their belief, the fact that unless the situation is relieved with more rains, it will be a week or ten days yet before the farmers had reached all parts of their grains with water, and that the drought will have done irreparable damage to parts of the fields by that time.

Although the water company has announced that it will divide the available water into two runs, of about twelve days' or two weeks' duration each, it is thought probable that this plan will be abandoned. Such an arrangement, it was thought would allow the application of the first run of water to the grasses, and the second to the grain. It is apparent, however, that the grain crops cannot be held over longer without water. It is probable that the supply of water in the reservoir will be exhausted by July 10th, and it is possible that water will not again flow in the canals of the Salmon river system until late next fall when the fall rains may extend the water above the tunnel to an extent sufficient to allow of a delivery of water for domestic purposes.

As near as can be ascertained, the first cutting of alfalfa is running on for irrigation will be turned into the Salmon River Canal system on or about June 14. The acreage in crop this season is approximately 35,000 acres and it is estimated the delivery over the measuring weirs will be about 9 inches per acre.

"It is planned to divide the available water into two runs or periods; the first for grasses and such grain as now need water, the second for maturing grain and other crops. The period between runs will depend on the weather and conditions of crops and the wishes of the majority of users. The endeavor will be to furnish every acre entitled to water with its proportionate allotment, within the period governed by average irrigation requirements."

"Irrigation heads will be limited to the capacity of the system and the ability of the user to take care of the water efficiently, and as far as possible reasonable requests will be complied with, on the usual two days' notice. Payment from one tract to another will be permitted within reasonable limits. Measurements of head used will be made at frequent intervals and amounts computed at end of each week. A memorandum of the quantity used will then be issued to each water user, and when the full allotment is drawn upon any entry the water for that entry will be shut off. Users are asked to give as much notice as possible in advance of their requirements, thereby enabling us to better regulate delivery and prevent waste shortage."

"It is urged that water users have their ditches cleaned and regulating devices in good order, and their land well prepared to receive water. It is very important that diligence be used in handling water and every effort made to conserve it."

"The co-operation of all is asked in the careful and intelligent application of water in order the most beneficial results may be obtained from its use."

"All users are urged to remember that the run off into the reservoir this season is less than twenty-five per cent of the average, and that to call for their allotment of this year's limited supply until their crops are in actual need of water."

The small run-off of the Salmon river this year will reduce the yearly average flow of the river considerably. Using the government's figures on the flow of the river for the years during which measurements were taken, an average for 125,000 acre feet per year, the average will be reduced by this year's small run-off to approximately 110,000 acre feet, assuming the company's statement to be correct, that this year's run-off is less than twenty-five per cent of the average for former years.

Of the some 42,000 acre feet of water in the reservoir available the first of the week, over thirty per cent or between thirteen and fourteen per cent, said acre feet was held over from last year.—Hollister Herald.

CHIGGERS, OR RED BUGS

Attack the Skin of Humans and Cause Severe Itching and Inflammation.

"Throughout portions of the South, East and the Central states the chigger, or red bug, scientifically known as the harvest mite, and which is microscopic in size, often attacks a person when walking through long grass or other vegetation. They are small and choose any particular part of the body, but attack the exposed portions first. Thus the barefoot boy in many parts of the South 'chiggers' has become painfully acquainted with these red eight-legged pests. They enter the large sweat tubes or pores of the skin, where their presence is necessarily slow, and a few hours later the spot where they entered becomes very painful or causes intense itching."

Chiggers are most abundant and troublesome in the Tropics, but are generally distributed in the Gulf states up the Mississippi river to Missouri and Illinois, and through the Atlantic coast states to northern New Jersey. Farmers' bulletin No. 671 by the United States department of agriculture, harvest mites or "chiggers" states that these pests are most bothersome between the months of June and October.

The large inflamed spots which the presence of the mites under the first layer of skin cause are often diagnosed as liver, nettle rash, urticaria, or other skin eruptions.

"Chiggers are easily recognized by 'bites' of flies and of some mosquitoes. A characteristic of the harvest mite attack is that on the second or third day a minute water blister usually develops in the middle of the inflamed area."

To walk among blackberry or other shrubs, or to come in contact with grasses or similar herbage along streams or pools or pools, on edge of marshes, or under trees near such places the mites infest, is to invite an attack. It is obvious, therefore, that the best preventive is to avoid exposure. If a bath of hot water, or water containing salt or strong soap, however, is taken within a few hours after exposure, no ill effects will be experienced.

Sulphur is the best preventive for chiggers. It has been found, according to the bulletin, that a person walking through vegetation is attacked mostly from the knees downward, and into the shoes and stockings, these mites are eliminated to a great extent. Sphthalium is also successfully used in the same manner, and is a powerful agent against several kinds of insect infesting tropical insect pests. After a person has become exposed to the mites, the affected parts of a moderately strong solution of ammonia is possibly the best counter-irritant through them. Vegetable growth has been successfully kept down by the use of cattle, sheep and goats. Grasses bordering on ponds frequented by cattle, wild blackberry bushes and similar plants should be cut down and destroyed in the vicinity of houses where people are liable to be infested by the mites by passing through them. RECEIVES WOUND ON HEAD

Buhl Man Injured in Quarrel With His Neighbor. During a fight which occurred Monday morning between P. E. Duncaan and his neighbor, the latter received a blow with a hammer which made a cut in the bone for about an inch over the eye. The injured man was taken to the hospital and will be kept there for some time. Duncaan claims that he took the hammer from Chapman who threatened to strike him. The preliminary trial will be held tomorrow afternoon in the court of Judge A. J. Miller—Buhl Herald.

The Christian Endeavor of the First Christian church will give a six-weekly social in the church basement, Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

TOWN DOCTOR, NELS DARLING

OF OKLAHOMA CITY

During the next twelve months The Times has arranged for the exclusive use of a series of articles upon Civic Betterment from the trenchant pen of Nels Darling, the best known exponent of home-town loyalty in the United States. These articles will be pertinent talks on "The Home Town," "Talks with the Business Men," and "Talks on Advertising."

They are interesting, terse and to the point. Darling never wastes any ammunition. The Times believes that these articles will do much to awaken Twin Falls citizens to their responsibility for the success of the home town. Some of the talks to the merchants will probably stir up some argument and opposition, but will nevertheless set them to thinking.

BUICK EXCURSION TO CONTACT

Twin Falls Boosters, Headed by C. E. Lind, Spend Day in Camp.

Sunday was "Buick" day in Contact, and there were little Buicks, big Buicks and Buicks of every kind and description. The day was a success. It was the annual outing of these machines, and Mr. Lind, who is Twin Falls agent for this auto, had charge of the run.

Leaving Twin Falls at 9:30 o'clock, about 30 machines, bearing in the neighborhood of 200 people, headed for Contact by way of the Salmon river dam, where an hour or more was spent in viewing the dam itself and visiting other points of interest. At 1:30 p. m. the first machine reached Contact, closely followed by the others, with a truck bringing up the rear.

Every machine carried the name of "Buick" and Mr. Lind bore a happy smile when he found that all had made the run without mishap of any kind and it was a happy party that camped on Main street.

The autoists brought their own lunches and the Contact owners, with supplies of food, and coffee and soft drinks. Their appetites appeared "miffed" by the "machines" proceeded on up the gulch to the Belmont and properties of the Nevada Copper Mining, Milling & Power company, while others took in sights in and about town. At the Mammoth, the sightseers were shown every courtesy by the men in charge, viewing the big compressor in operation and seeing when it is started, and with others it was their first trip to a mining camp. Much interest was shown in all that was seen, and Mr. Lind, who is Twin Falls agent for this auto, had charge of the run.

ROTEL TO STAY CLOSED

Posseltell Man in Bar With Local Opinion Law.

According to the decision handed down yesterday by the state supreme court the Buick hotel may remain closed. Some weeks ago, following the arrest of W. F. Kaskela and Dick Jones, who were charged with the operation of a bar in the hotel, Judge Guileen of the district court issued an injunction closing the entire hotel, and the two men are charged with twelve counts for alleged violation of the liquor law. The well-known hotel was locked and the keys placed in the hands of Sheriff Cooper. Following the injunction, the attorney for Mr. Kaskela appealed the matter to the supreme court, and yesterday that body rendered a decision, which was unanimous, and sustained the action of the lower court. Hence the hotel, which must remain closed until final disposition of the cases against W. F. Kaskela and Dick Jones.

The supreme court held that Judge Guileen's injunction does not violate the rights guaranteed the defendant under the Fourteenth amendment to the constitution, and is not an unreasonable exercise of the police powers of the state.

The hotel proprietor had set up the contention that his constitutional rights had been violated because his entire establishment had been closed. It is contended that the supreme court will find that the injunction is not a violation of the rights of the defendant.

If the injunction is not a violation of the rights of the defendant, the hotel will remain closed until the cases against Kaskela and Jones are disposed of. The hotel is not a cloak to hide the illegal sale of liquor, but it is a business, and it is not an unreasonable exercise of the police powers of the state.

Taking that view the supreme court ruled that the entire hotel was a nuisance and could legally be closed, pending the final outcome of the criminal cases brought against the proprietor.

RATE CASE POSTPONED

Action on Petition of Consumers is Delayed.

Representatives of the various power companies in southern Idaho, and a large delegation of power users from the district west of Caldwell, comprising eight towns west of there and the various power interests, met with the public utilities commission this morning for the purpose of going into the hearing in relation to fixing the rates on the various power plants owned by the public utilities commission. The commission on representatives from the power companies and the power users, by reason of the conflicting interests, the various power interests in southern Idaho and the inability of the companies at present to determine their operating costs and get organized, and the unavailability of complete data as to the cost of operation and power demand, and the desire to complete this matter, have agreed to postpone the hearing until October.

This agreement was the result of a conference had between the power companies and power users, and on the showing made by the commission, it was concluded that it would be in the best interest of all concerned to postpone the hearing until October.

In other words, the power users will have to pay the first half of his bill until the rate is finally fixed, and then upon the determination of the commission the rate shall be fixed. The amount to be paid by the consumer for the entire season, it is the desire of the power company, after it has gathered its data, to put into effect with a low rate as possible consistent with their investment and that it will give them a fair return on their investment. It is also desired that the power company be permitted to operate at a reasonable cost. Just arrived at or would be could not be at a field of grass in several years time. Most farmers, however, will have to rely upon clean cultivation, and that would be to the detriment of the power producer and power consumer.

Frank D. Ryan, noted as spokesman for the power users, said that the individual users of the power are not the company which represents, which company indirectly operates the business and the power company, has never, after taking charge of properties, raised rates, and that it was his hope that with the unification of the companies and with the cooperation of the users that the adjustment of the rates will put them in the reach of every power user who wishes to use the power for irrigation purposes, power of any sort, light or household conveniences. He further stated that the success of the power movement was not dependent upon the power company but the company and the consumers had to work in hearty cooperation. It is further stated that the company and the Power Users' association would cooperate and work together in the collection and preparing of the data which is required by the commission, and that it was the hope of all concerned that all consumers would do all within their power to aid the commission in the collection and compiling of data.

BERMUDA GRASS

Valuable Pasture Crop in the South, Planting and Control.

Bermuda grass, called in some localities "Bermuda grass," is a very valuable forage plant and a serious weed, depending upon where it is growing. It is the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde of the grass world. It is a perennial plant spreading rapidly by rootstocks, which send out tiny shoots in frequent intervals. These shoots are very hard to pull out, therefore, that make Bermuda grass a desirable forage plant also makes it a formidable weed. The idea of a weed in the public mind is associated with the quality of "worthlessness." Yet some of the best feeds for stock are made of weeds under certain conditions, that is, when they are growing in places where they are not wanted.

Bermuda grass is the most valuable pasture grass in the North, but when it invades fields of alfalfa it is very injurious to the alfalfa crop. It is also a weed in the worst weed with which alfalfa has to contend. Like alfalfa, Bermuda grass is very hard to pull out. COMMITTEE TO MEET

Republican State Central Committee Will Meet in Boise, July 7.

Chairman George A. Day, of the Republican State Central Committee, has issued a call to the committee to meet in the Owyhee hotel, Boise, on July 7, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The committee will be in charge of the selection of party matters at an early date, and many matters of importance will be considered, including the selection of a state chairman, which may or may not be Mr. Day, as there were some rumors to the effect that you should be in the position. His letter to the committee reads:

Official Call.
Boise, June 18.—Dear Sir: I am anxious to see you in person at the office of a special meeting of the Republican state central committee, to be held at the time and place indicated.

It is expected that there will be business of great importance to the party to be transacted at this meeting, and you are especially urged to be present in person. In the event that you cannot so attend, then you should have a representative of your district to attend in your stead.
