FEEDING CORN ENSIAGE

Corn ensilage is a food which may be termed "grass like." For this reason it can be used very much as pasture in the feeding of domestic animals. The analysis of good corn ensilage shows that it is richer than a great many of the pasture grasses and therefore will go farther in feeding.

As soon as the silo is filled the feeding operation may start and though it be in the heating process it will be just as good food and will be relished by animals quite as much as old silage. It is generally conceded, however, that silage which is several months old is better than fresh silage. Some feeders prefer silage that is six months to a year old. However, it may be safely said that silage can be fed from the silo as long as the blower plug is taken out of the silo until the feeder desires to open his silo and this may be after it has stood for several years.

Silage is strong in carbohydrates, the principal food requirement for all animals, but acts poorly to balance it. Alfalfa hay is perhaps the cheapest and best for this purpose. Through-out the alfalfa belt it should form part of the ration where silage is used. This is not necessary, but simply makes it possible for the feeder to gain a greater economy in his operations and at the same time feed the animal a wholesome, balanced ration.

Corn silage may be fed out of drums in tanks, in the silo or in feed racks placed where animals can eat it without waste. In very severe weather it is best to feed silage into, as some will freeze and this will be a waste of stock to masticate, although the feeder need not be alarmed over feeding freezing ensilage. It will not injure the animal, but frozen food is not easy for them to consume.

In feeding milk cows it is a very good plan to give the hay in rack out of the silo, where the animals will not waste it, and feed the ensilage in the barn after milking. It may be given twice a day in a feeding or 20 to 30 pounds per day. Some large animals will take as high as 40 to 60 pounds of silage per day and make good use of it. In feeding fattening cove or steers, silage may be fed twice a day in smaller rations ranging from 15 to 25 pounds. For growing stock and for young animals from 6 to 15 pounds. Sheep will consume from 3 to 4 pounds daily and horses from 4 to 10 pounds when not working. It is not advisable to feed work horses large quantities of silage no more than to give them large quantities of hay.

Feed the ensilage so that the animals will eat it up as it spoils or freezes when exposed to the air for several days.

When to Cut. It has been found by experience that corn, fairly well matured, makes better ensilage than corn which is quite green. At a good time for the silo is when the bottom leaves begin to fall and the corn is in the early dent stage. It is well to know, however, that corn may be cut and mowed any stage for ensilage, and even after it has frosted it can still be put in and will come out good silage.

In a country where corn and alfalfa can be grown the silo is a logical and extremely profitable investment for the farmer. It is a great value for economic milk and beef production, that the combination of these two crops feeds a large number of cows and a fully 1/2 per cent and it costs less than $2 to produce it. The feeder cannot afford to be without a silo. As the experiment station has demonstrated, a silo will pay for itself every year, and where labor is difficult to obtain it will make possible the raising of stock where now it is out of the question.

Ensilage From Other Plants. While corn is the general crop for silage there are many other plants which can be used for filling the silo. Alfalfa has been thoroughly tested out and found to be a valuable plant for making silage. It often occurs that the first cutting of alfalfa is practically spoiled for hay, owing to the frequent rains and the weather is not put up. The first cutting can therefore be saved by putting it in the silo, and as the hay can be in good condition when the weather is not so storm. Sweet corn makes splendid silage and owing to its heavy yield it is a favorite plant for this use. On good, rich ground sweet corn will of ten yield fifteen to eighteen tons per acre. Oats and field peas, when sown in the fall, will make a silage which will be all put in the silo with success.

BERGER

Benuty sometimes is not even skin deep. One can think a good thought just as quickly as a mean one. Bert-long-the-golden-kernel will be falling before the sickle on every hand.

Robert L. Forbes was a passenger for the county metropolis Wednesday. Fred Haggard was seen going down the road with Kimberly as his objective point Sunday. Fred is in a hurry to get to the Kimberly neighborhood. What's the attraction, Fred? R. L. Forbes commenced harvest news silage. Some feeders prefer silage that is six months to a year old. ADDING TO BIG FACTORY

$1,000,000 Improvement to Factory at Detroit. At the big plant of the Hudson Motor Car Company in Detroit new construction to the value of over $1,000,000 is going rapidly forward. Several wings are being extended in full three-story construction. The space between the old wings is being utilized by a saw-tooth roof and concrete flooring. The additional area being added to the engine room and power plant. Extra room is being provided in the body department, the machine department, the final test section and the heat-treating section. New machine shops are being built and in other ways great activity is manifest every where. This is stated in a letter from the factory to distributor E. S. Johnson, to be simply an attempt to keep up with the demand for the Hudson. At the present time the Hudson is doing a larger volume of business than any other high-grade automobile in the world at $1000 and over. Production now is at a high figure, shipments having run as high as 100 cars in a day. In spite of this the factory is constantly beset by dealers for more cars in order to supply orders. Take that busted bike to Glorietta Brothers, they'll fix it. Mar. 9-15.

 Agents to find a way to adapt the new circumstances to them.
Submarine Warfare.
 "The events of the past two months have clearly indicated that it is possible and practicable to conduct submarine operations as have characterized the activity of the Imperial German navy within the so-called 'war zone' in the Atlantic. The Imperial German navy has adopted practices of regulated warfare. The whole world has looked with interest and increasing satisfaction at the demonstration of that possibility by German naval commanders. It is manifestly possible, therefore, to lift the whole practice of submarine attack above the criticism which it has aroused and remove the chief charges of offense.
 "In view of the admission of illegality made by the Imperial government when it pleaded the right of retaliation in defense of its acts and in view of the manifest possibility of condemnation by the established rules of naval warfare, the government of the United States cannot believe that the Imperial government will engage in the practice of submarine warfare. It is manifestly possible, therefore, to lift the whole practice of submarine attack above the criticism which it has aroused and remove the chief charges of offense.
 "In view of the admission of illegality made by the Imperial government when it pleaded the right of retaliation in defense of its acts and in view of the manifest possibility of condemnation by the established rules of naval warfare, the government of the United States cannot believe that the Imperial government will engage in the practice of submarine warfare. It is manifestly possible, therefore, to lift the whole practice of submarine attack above the criticism which it has aroused and remove the chief charges of offense."

Rejects German Proposal.
 "The government of the United States, while not indifferent to the friendly spirit in which it is made, cannot accept the suggestion of the Imperial German government that certain vessels be designated and agreed upon which shall be free on the seas now illegally proscribed. The agreement would, by implication, subject other vessels to illegal attack and would be a curtailment and therefore an abandonment of the principles for which this government contends and which in times of either counsel or every nation would concede as of course.
 "The government of the United States and the Imperial German government are contending for the same great object, have long stood together in urging the principles upon which the government of the United States now so solemnly insists. They are both contending for the freedom of the seas. THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES WILL CONTINUE TO CONTEND FOR FULL FREEDOM FROM WHATEVER QUARTER VIOLATED, WITHOUT COMPROMISE AND AT ANY COST. It invites the practical cooperation of the Imperial government at this time when cooperation may accomplish most and this great common object be most strikingly and effectively achieved. The Imperial German government expresses the hope that this object may be in some measure accomplished even before the present war ends. It can be. The government of the United States not only feels obliged to insist upon it, but in the protection of its own citizens, but is also deeply interested in seeing it made practical between the belligerents themselves and holds itself ready at any time to act the common friend who and unbroken friendship between the people and government of the United States and people and government of the German nation impels it to impress solemnly upon the Imperial German government the necessity for a scrupulous observance of neutral rights in this critical matter. Friendship itself prompts it to say to the Imperial government that repetition by the commanders of German naval vessels of acts in contravention of those rights must be regarded by the government of the United States, when they affect American citizens, as deliberately unfriendly.

TRIUMPH OF THE SIX-CYLINDER
 Hudson distributor, E. S. Johnson, is telling callers at his salesroom at 142 2nd avenue north, about the wonderful record of a six-cylinder car in the Chicago Speedway Races. There was only one six-cylinder car entered in the race, and it was the only car that went the entire 600 miles without a stop. The driver never removed his hands from the wheel of this Sunbeam six-cylinder during the entire five hours.
 A remarkable feature was that the tires showed very little wear, demonstrating the correctness of the Hudson contention that a six-cylinder car is easiest of all on tires. The front castings of the Sunbeam Six were almost as good at the end of the run as when they left the factory. One is that it was made by a six-cylinder car.

ROBINSON'S STORE TALK. I have not been talking to you folks in the newspapers quite as much the past two weeks as I did before the store was opened. I wanted to see if what I had said, and the prices at which we were selling goods would bring you in the store even if I did not ask you to come in through the newspapers. I want to tell you this time how glad I am that those who came early are not only coming back, but are telling their friends and they are coming in, and buying too. Not only those who live in Twin Falls and those who live on the ranches near here, but the good folks who live in the other towns near here and those who live ten, twenty and forty miles away. That pleases me a lot. Another thing that makes me feel good is that parents are sending their children here to buy goods, that tells me that you have confidence in me, and that means more to me than anything else. I want your trade but with it I want your confidence, your good will, and your friendship and you do not know how hard all of us here in the store will work to have you become our friends while we are trying to sell you goods. Come often, come when you only want to look, and be sure to come and tell me if anything is not right. If you do not come I can not make it right and you know I want to have everything right. I want you satisfied all the time. Edward Robinson

RULES FOR FEEDING FOWLS

Much Depends Upon Age, Breed, Vigor,
Housing and Range Allowed—
Men Must Be the Gauge.

There can be no hard and fast rules laid down as to the amount to feed fowls, except this: feed all they will eat up clean at each meal. Hardly a week passes that the writer is not asked to advise on the matter. The amount of feed should be fed per hen per day, writes J. E. Dougherty in Orchard and Farm.

The quantity of feed eaten depends on breed, age, vigor, housing, range allowed, season of the year and many other factors which the ordinary man does not always consider and appreciate. The heavier-breeds will eat more than the lighter breeds. Heavier layers will eat more than poor layers. The feeder must study his fowls constantly and regulate the amount fed at each meal in accordance with the appetites of the fowls. A little study and experience will soon enable one to become quite expert in feeding. Provided he really is interested enough to his task to watch and study his fowls closely.

There is a saying among stock men that good brooders are born and not made. Be that as it may, we are sure that anyone with an instinctive love for fowls, a willingness to learn and good common sense can soon develop into a good feeder and a successful poultry man.

It will take, on the average, about seventy-five pounds of feed per year per hen. This amount may vary a little either way depending on the breed, but is a good average figure on which to base calculations as to the cost to feed a hen per year and the approximate amount to feed per day. If a daily feed consumption curve were drawn, we would find that the daily feed eaten would vary during different months, the winter consumption being heavier than that of summer. The hen herself must be the gauge by which to determine the amount fed from day to day.

BEST BREEDS FOR FATTENING

Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Rhode Island Reds and Orpingtons. Will Do Well in a Crate.

The breeds of chickens best adapted for fatty and crisp fatteners are the Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Rhode Island Reds and the Orpingtons. All these breeds, or any variety of these, will do well if placed in a fattening crate. They produce more and lay out very economically, and dress out neat, plump and desirable carcasses for table use. The cockerels of any of these breeds, when taken at three and a half to four months of age, will usually gain from a pound to a pound and a half in three weeks' time. As they get older the amount of food required to make a pound gain increases very rapidly and crisp fattening will not be very profitable after the birds are six months old. Strong, vigorous and healthy birds will always make better gains than those lacking in vigor and vitality.

The heavier breeds like Cochins, Brahmas and Langshans will not give very satisfactory results when fattened, as they do not stand close confinement as well as the utility breeds, nor will they make as economic gains.

Green Feed Essential.
Green feed must be supplied in some form. If the chicks are cooped up young girls they will help themselves, but if confined in small pens, green feed should be given them. To be easily assimilated, some tender and easily broken green stuff should be furnished, such as finely cut grass from the lawn, lettuce leaves, onion tops, chopped and or boiled vegetable.

Secret of Winter Eggs.
If you have not a nice lot of sharp grit on hand for your fowls during the cold and frozen weather, you can not expect them to make very profitable returns in egg production. Sharp grit to aid digestion, wheat and meat scraps to tone up the appetite, is the secret of getting eggs in winter.

This is a pretty good time to do that fixing up around the place which has been promised to your wife for so long.

WRONG PRACTICE WITH SOWS

First Pure-Bred Sow is Usually Put in Pen by Herself, Fed and Generally Overfed.

It seems almost natural for the purchaser of his first pure-bred sow, in his desire to give her extra care, to convert her into a sows-hen, away from the other hogs, put her in a close pen, where she is petted and fed at regular meal times, and lunch between in some instances, in their anxiety to do the very best for her possible.

This method of treatment is sure to ruin the sow, both in the feeding and in the close confinement, preventing her from taking the necessary exercise to keep her in the proper fit condition and building up on a solid foundation and to harden her in developing her, giving her a good constitution, broadening her and strengthening her with the exercise, which is also imparted to her coming litter.

The parlor sow, with her pettings and care, is nearly always a failure, and the party wondering why it is, writes William Carruthers in Orchard and Farm. It is the wrong method throughout. It is unnatural and almost certain to result in failure of the sow.

Feeding when properly done, combined with exercise, is the proper idea. Feeding of the right character is essential; it needs to be regular, at uniform times, and with plenty of water and proper exercise is the power that is depended upon to develop and improve the breed. The feeder is an important man in the destiny of the hog and should understand the business and act according to reason and the experience that is taught from those who have made a success of it.

MAKING AN IDEAL SEED BED

For Wheat and Other Small Grains
Soil Should Be Mellow Only Little Deeper Than Planted.

(By PROF. A. M. TEN ETICK.)
The seed bed refers to the tilled soil as deep as it may be plowed. This may be from three to twelve, or even eighteen inches, when the subsoil plow is used in connection with the stirring plow. The tilled seed bed, however, for seeding wheat, or other small grains, should be loose or mellow only a little deeper than the seed is planted. Below the depth at which the seed is deposited in the soil the seed bed must be well pulverized, but not so deep as to bury the furrows, slices making a good union with the subsoil below.

The seed bed may be prepared by cultivating with different implements. The disk harrow may be the best implement to use after fall plowing, or early in the spring, several weeks before seeding. But surface cultivation just before seeding should usually be accomplished with some implement which does not cultivate so deep as the disk harrow.

The mellow soil produced by cultivation is the muck which has to do with the conservation of the soil moisture. The soil muck may be two or three inches in thickness when the ground is being finally prepared for seeding wheat, or other small seeds. Again, we often weight the spike-tooth harrows so as to make them sit deeper and leave the ground in a more favorable condition. This usually results from light harrowing.

DOMESTIC WATER FOR SETTLERS

State Land Board to Sink Deep Wells on Salmon Tract.

Water for domestic purposes is going to be furnished to the settlers on the Salmon river project if it is within the power of the state of Idaho to provide. This was indicated yesterday at a special meeting of the land board, at which the members of the board unanimously voted to send State Engineer Smith to the Salmon river tract to make a complete and thorough examination and endeavor to locate several sites for wells on the land. When the reports back to the board his findings showing that it will be possible to sink wells at the places he designates the state will proceed forthwith to have the wells sunk. In this way it is hoped to supply an abundance of domestic water to the settlers.

For a long time there has been a condition regarding the water supply for domestic purposes on the tract that has resulted in unusual inconvenience to the settlers. Many of them are now using the water from open ditches. It has also been found difficult and in many instances almost impossible to find water when wells were sunk with the result that wells have proven to be "dry" projects in many instances.

Recently Governor Alexander made a trip over this project. He saw conditions as they really are and called the facts as they were presented to him, and as he discovered them to the land-board at a special meeting held yesterday. He suggested that the state take some action towards securing an engineering report as to the chances for striking water on the tract by the sinking of wells. It is possible to do this if the proper sites are secured, it is said. The board unanimously voted to send the state engineer to the tract for that purpose and he will leave within a few days accompanied by assistants to make the examination.—Capital News.

ATTACKED BY COYOTE

Animal Snaps at Sleeping Boy Near Mountain Home.

Returning from a trip to Atlanta with his wife and young daughter and two sons, Mr. Harris camped near the foothills Monday night. Mrs. Harris and her daughter made their bed in the wagon, while Mr. Harris and the two boys, Verne 18 and Roy 12 years of age slept on the ground. About 3 o'clock in the morning Verne awakened the family with the cry that he had been bitten by a coyote. His father thinking he was dreaming told the boy to be quiet and go to sleep. The lad had already covered his head with the tarp and soon cried out again, the animal having poked his head under the covers and touched his bare leg with its cold nose.

By this time the father was thoroughly awake and grabbed the young boy and threw him into the wagon while Verne mounted a wagon wheel. The coyote then went for Mr. Harris and he was forced to get out to cut himself with hands and feet, the animal being between him and his gun. Finally he was able to climb to a tree where he hid until the boy remained until daylight, when the coyote trotted away.

In its first attack the coyote snapped at Verne's forehead, but did not cut through the skin. Mr. Harris escaped without a scratch.

Coming into town the next morning the party met C. B. Farady, James Tye and Cole Rainey, who were out in Mr. Farady's car after a coyote that had been trotting around town. This one was first noticed at the school house grounds. It trotted along the sidewalk past the county stacks and
