If I spend my Dollars out of Twin Falls and you spend your Dollars out of Twin Falls, and all the people spend their Dollars out of Twin Falls, WHAT IN THE THUNDER WILL BECOME OF TWIN FALLS?

THINK ABOUT IT

Twin Falls Commercial Club

The medical and dental inspection of pupils in the public schools, if carried on so as to give no opportunity to any doctor or dentist, should be wise move and one that should meet with the approval of all parents. The matter of picking the inspectors each time should be the object of a great deal of care on the board so that it will not cause trouble.

NEED FOR RESTRICTIONS

The reports of activities of Austrians and German spies in this country may or may not be true. But it is certain that this government has been too lax in enforcing every jot and tittle of international law. American freedom of action is for Americans not for foreign representatives, who are supposed to be honorable enough to uphold the honor of the nations they represent. To take advantage of the hospitality of a friendly or neutral nation is one of the most despicable acts possible between civilized countries and one that should be punished by quick retribution.

THE PROPER MOVE

The coming of the members of the State Land Board to the Salmon tract next Saturday indicates that the proper view of the state's responsibility is at last being taken by the representatives. The Times trusts that the settlers will meet the land board and give them the full truth on the situation, with care that nothing of exaggeration creeps in. The truth will be had enough of the conditions which confront many of the people who have staked their all upon the assertion of the state that Salmon River tract had a sufficient water-right.

The meeting Saturday, if the facts are brought out, will convince the land board of the necessity of doing something immediately to alleviate the suffering which is bound to come to many out on the Salmon before another crop can be harvested. It is up to the state to do its part toward making amends for one of the ghastliest irrigation mistakes ever made by the state engineers in the past. That the board is coming here is wise instead of asking a large body of settlers to make the expensive trip to the state capital. The Times believes that better days are ahead for settlers on the Salmon as the result of the investigation which is being made.

VICTORY GLIMPSED BY GERMANY

The last act has begun, and when the curtain falls it will find the Teutonic Powers wearing the laurels of victory. Such, at least, is the unanimous view of the Germanic armies in Serbia. So swift will be the advance upon Constantinople, we are informed that the Allies will have no time to organize an effective opposition before troops can be brought from France and England we are assured that all Europe between Antwerp and the Golden Horn will be in possession of Germany and her allies. The Berlin Lokal Anzeiger thinks that those who cannot see, even now, the angel of victory descending upon the German hosts must be blind indeed: "The neutral people would have to be sightless if they did not see over those standards the goddess of victory is moving nations who, after a fight of fifteen months against a world in arms, are able with such great certainty to lead, at a moment's notice, a new army to victory can not be defeated. This is the truth that our new victories disclose with absolute clearness even to the most incredulous." The semi-official Koinliche Zeitung announces, "proudly but without arrogance," that Germany is performing miracles—miracles that make her triumph a certainty: "With amazement, will the neutrals observe once more the calm strength and organization of Germany, which as one front, is sustaining without a waver a gigantic offensive and conducts on another front an offensive of the largest scale, keeps in hand and administers in a model manner territories as large as some of the European states in the East and in the West, protects its commerce and furthers new enterprises of the greatest importance, delivers successful blows at sea and from the air, and succeeds at the same time in bringing about out of their own accumulated strength, the greatest domestic loan in the history of finance."

Against such organization says the Rhenish organ, all the efforts of the Allies must fall because they are disorganized and "alfready tottering" to their fall:

"While the Britons are fighting among themselves Germany is performing miracles unknown to history. Even if the Quadruple Entente brethren who are still disputing arrive at an agreement as to which of them is to be exposed to the new blows, whether the French thin out their front or the English have every reluctant youth dragged away from the golf-course by four policemen, it will be impossible to prevent the success of a plan so well prepared and carried through with such gigantic strength by the new Quadruple Alliance (Germany, Austria, Turkey and Bulgaria)."

"The Koinliche Zeitung is of the opinion that the fate of Serbia will be sealed before the Allies can interpose effective opposition: "With superior organization and superior strength the Germanic Powers and Turkey have created a situation which is easily defined as a block. The new Quadruple Alliance stands firmly across the path desired for a junction of the forces of Russian and British imperialism. The help of neither French nor Italian forces can obliterate the block. It holds the fate of Serbia and will seal that fate while the scattered and demoralized forces of the Quadruple Entente seek with precipitate haste to bring together an effective defensive phalanx."

"The Entente efforts will be in vain. Four unexhausted nations with troops accustomed to victory are determined that the Quadruple Entente shall reap in the Balkans nothing but fresh reverses which will smash their plans to atoms."

Similar views find expression in the Frankfurter Zeitung, which says that the case of the Allies is "so desperate that even their most eloquent spokesmen can no longer conceal their dismay." It then proceeds:

"The war appears to have reached its climax. It is being conducted with a strength and effort that remind one of the last days of an athletic contest. * * * We are more certain today than ever that we shall win. It is because our adversaries are beginning to perceive this also that disillusionment, anger, dejection and disunion are rife among them. These are sure signs that our cause stands well. * * * The most and richest provinces of France and Russia and practically the whole of Belgium are in possession of Germany and her allies. The Serbian capital is in our hands and before another month has passed the road to Constantinople will be free open before us."

The only paper that does not join in the chorus of victory is the Berlin Vorwarts, which in the true Socialistic spirit sees only another opening for the capitalist as a result of the great southeastern drive. It says: "We can not and we will not prophesy. Only battle-fields stretch before our gaze. New multitudes are being plunged into the fray. The future will show whether their fighting and the death are going to open up the German capturing territory now controlled by many, from Berlin to Bagdad."

The serious issues involved in the struggle in the Balkans are fully related in England and the London Morning Post gives us the views of Mr. Seton Watson, the well known authority upon Balkan affairs, who contemplates a Servian defeat with no easy mind. He asks what it would mean if Serbia went down before the Teutonic arms and tells us: "If Serbia went under it would mean that the route would be open to Germany to supply men and munitions to Constantinople to arm against us the 600,000 or 700,000 Turks who still could not be armed at home. Turkey would be saved. The Dardanelles would go. The position would be untenable unless Serbia and we with her, held the breach. The news would run 'Here an electric flash through the entire East.' Our prestige in Egypt would be gone. Our position in Mesopotamia would be threatened. Every banner in India would ring with the news, and Persia would be in arms."

"If Serbia went under, Germany would get all the gotton of Asia Minor, all the oil of Persia, all the copper of Serbia, and also corn. To talk of a war of attrition after that is an absurdity. It would also deprive us of the real field of a promising offensive—through the Balkans and Austria-Hungary."

TALKS ON THRIFT

No. 12—YOUR BOY'S CHANCE IN THE WORLD

"The dazzling attractions of a luxury-loving age constitute the greatest possible danger to American education," President of Brown University. "It's a fine Sunday afternoon. Proud and happy Father is giving Baby Boy an airing and getting a lot of good from the exercise himself. The youngster's asleep now, so we'll just join Daddy and have a quiet talk with him about his son's future. 'What are you going to do to give that boy of yours a start in life?' we ask. 'Why we're going to feed him, clothe him and try to keep him well,' says the fond parent. 'We'll send him to public school and Sunday-school.' He will have good books to read, good playthings and good playmates. 'That's fine,' we reply, 'but how is he going to learn thrift, and the value of money?' 'Well, my theory is,' replies the young father, 'that if my child is given those things I have mentioned he will be pretty well able to take care of himself when the time comes. Of course, I'm carrying some life insurance for the benefit of my family.'"

"What's all right," we reply, "but do you realize that learning the value of money by beginning to earn it and save it in his boyhood will do more to insure your boy's success than almost any other one thing? It will create in him a habit which will be of lifelong benefit. And if you open a savings bank account in his name and keep it up, faithfully, eventually, with his assistance, you can accumulate a really worth-while fund from money you otherwise might waste."

"By George, there's a good deal of truth in that. I never looked at it like that before," says the young father, "just as the baby wakes up and begins to say 'Dad, Dad.' 'I'll start that savings account tomorrow,' is his parting remark as we take leave of him. Now just a word to parents of older boys. Your boy is busy, every day laying the foundation for his career. His daily practices are becoming his fixed habits. If an "easy spender" now he will have much to undo before he "finds himself." A savings account at the bank will help your boy to gain poise as well as capital. Its effect upon his life will depend upon the attention he gives to it. Will you help and encourage him in this direction? T. D. MacGREGOR.

ELECTRICITY WEEK AT BOISE

Will Hold Stage Center From November 23 to December 4.

"The week beginning November 23 and ending December 4, will be a busy one for the local electrical merchants," said F. K. Kleann, local sales manager for the Electric Investment company. "The purpose of the annual activity is to accelerate the saving-bank-of-prosperity-pendulum throughout the nation. "The bulk of the movement are men representing investments in the electrical industry of more than three billion dollars. The appeal of the campaign, which is aimed to hit at 'hard times' prophets and to give prosperity its true meaning, will penetrate to the most obscure section of the United States. This week will call to the attention of the public the comforts which have come to humanity through electricity. Operating in many ways it has created comfort-factors, that have carried the world out of the darkness of drudgery into the light of convenience. "It has more than any other agency, enhanced the comfort, health and happiness of mankind. The same current carried by simple little wires serves us with heat, light or power. It carries our burdens, it transports us from place to place. It lights our homes, stores and streets and thus protects us from the terrors that thrive in darkness. Benefits Free. "Electricity does our sewing, cooking, washing and ironing. It cleans the home, and keeps it free from dirt and germs. It supplies water in winter and cool comfort in summer. "It links together the peoples of the world by the wireless, the cable, the telegraph and the telephone, making one huge family of us all. "Electricity enters into the manufacture of practically all our necessities, making things cheaper and better than would be possible by other means. "Electricity finds no duty too heavy nor any task too delicate, with wonderful adaptability, always under control, it is powerful enough to drive ponderous machinery, gentle enough to operate an electric fan, or to warm the baby's bottle. It is always at hand, it obeys instantly—never sleeps—never tires, never rains. Never Failing Servant. "A twitch of a switch or a touch of a button, in all the effort required for this within the servant to do your work. Just imagine what would happen if the electricity were suddenly eliminated," said Mr. Kleann. "The wheels of commerce would be halted. We would be in darkness. With our telegraph, cable or wireless, we would be cut off from the outside world without the telephone we would again be deaf and dumb to all absent ones. Progress and prosperity would suddenly be checked. Therefore, Electricity Prosperity Week is dedicated in acknowledgement of the services electricity is rendering."

PORTLAND MARKET REPORT.

Portland, Nov. 8th, 1915.
Cattle.
This morning's market opened with about 1000 head in the pens. The market on prime light steers went 15 cents over last Monday's top, making the top $7.00. Non-descript steers of the dairy type are flooding all markets and it is no wonder that beef of good quality and feeding command a premium. Cows are holding steady at $5.15 and all other lines respectively following this range.

Hogs.
A new record made in the skine division. Seventy-eight hundred head were unloaded for today's trade. Hogs are showing some weakness although the dairy type are holding steady at $5.15 and all other lines respectively following this range.

Sheep.
Monday seems to be fast losing its popularity as a sheep market day. Only 411 head were offered. One load of choice wethers were sold at 6.00. Demand is excellent for good lambs and yearlings. Good lambs will bring $7.15 to $7.25; ewes $5.00 to $5.20; yearlings $5.00 to $5.25; wethers $5.50 to $5.75.

The following sales are representative:
30 Steers.....1077 $7.00

MYSTERY IN GARDEN HOSE

Idaho Falls Comes to the Front With a New One.

A hose in the ground is a queer thing to cause a mystery and yet this has excited no small amount of comment in this city for the last two days. Harry MacKnight, who lives at 469 West avenue, went to take a rubber hose Sunday to put it in the shed for the winter. The hose had been coiled up for the past two weeks and had not been touched. When he picked it up he found that one end of it was stuck fast to the hard earth. He pulled on the hose to get it out of the ground but had no success and finally got a shovel to dig it out. He dug down about four feet and the hose was still in the ground. When the hose was measured it was found that eight or ten feet was missing and evidently in the ground. THEATRICAL NEWS

KENWORTHY-PLAYERS' GOOD

Capable Organization Pleases Patrons of Lavering.

The Kenworthy Players, carrying their own special scenery and headed by charming little Helen Duffy, gave general satisfaction at the Lavering last Friday and Saturday. They presented the three act farce "The Temporary Wife," which abounded with witty lines and amusing situations. The gowns worn by Helen Duffy brought forth many exclamations from the feminine portion of the audience. Splendid pictures were offered also, making about the biggest 25 cent show ever offered in Twin Falls. The company will return this coming Friday and Saturday, presenting in addition to the regular picture program, the successful comedy-drama "The Trap," a play of city life with many laughable comedy bits and some intense dramatic situations.

"Aristocracy" Thursday.

The next "worth while" photoplay attraction at the Lavering is the great Paramount production, "Aristocracy," featuring Miss Tyrone Power. It is one of the most elaborately staged productions ever offered on the Paramount program and will satisfy all lovers of good pictures. This film ran for four consecutive months at Orchestra hall in Chicago and established other unprecedented records in other cities. It will be shown in Twin Falls but one night only, Thursday, November 18th.

"THE FAMILY STAIN"

At the Isis Theatre Thursday and Friday of this Week.

No more strange or thrilling story was ever written than "The Family Stain," adapted from "The Widow Louisa" and produced by William Fox. It is a mystery story of far more than usual interest. In this story Eddie Gaboriau gives greater play to his fantastic imagination than any other story he has ever written. The leading role of the production is in the hands of Frederick Perry, who was recently seen in Salt Lake in "On Trial." Mr. Perry gives to the screen production all the dramatic intensity of which he is capable, and the resultant photodrama is an exceptional offer. "The Family Stain" will be the feature attraction of the week at the Isis.

WORLD'S PET STOCK

At Panama-Pacific International Exposition, December 2nd and 3rd.

San Francisco, Nov. 15.—With such noted men as Governor Hiram Johnson, Luther Burbank, Dr. David Starr Jordan, Senator James D. Phelan and President Benjamin Ide Wheeler of the University of California, endorsing the program, the Children's Pet Exhibition which will be held under the auspices of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, December 2 and 3, promises to be one of the greatest individual successes of the entire Exposition year.

The exhibition will not be a fancier show in any sense of the word. It is by the children, of the children and for the children of the entire nation. No entry fees will be charged, no advertising prices accepted nor will commercial exploitation of any kind be permitted. Feed, coops, benches and cans will be provided. All-year-olds will be judged from the standpoint of their utility and desirability as pets for children. Exposition prize ribbons will be awarded in all classes and special prizes will be awarded as donated.

Any child in the United States may enter pets in the exhibition. It is expected that nearly every school in California will have at least one entry. The superintendent, teachers and others are invited to aid in making the exhibition the greatest from an educational standpoint, ever held. Entry blanks will be sent on application to D. O. Evely, Chief of the Live Stock Department, or to Dr. Frederick W. D'Evelyn, 314 Phelan building, San Francisco.

The age limit for exhibitors is sixteen years, and all entries must be made on Children's Pets Exhibition Blankets. Entries will close Monday, November 22, at 12 o'clock. In connection with the exhibition, a Children's Pets Exhibition Congress will be held in Pacific Hall on the exposition grounds on the afternoon of December 3, beginning at 2 p. m. All interested in children's pets are invited and invitations have been extended to the governor, to the mayors of different cities, to chambers of commerce and boards of supervisors,

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A feud has existed between Colonel Arthur Stanley and his cousin, Judge Lamar Stanley, over the possession of the diamond from the sky, found in a jewelry store by an ancestor. Arthur's daughter is born in the colony and the mother dies, leaving him three years later the gypsy mother, having had no part in the matter, steals the girl, being reared in secret, and leaves her son undetected as the heir. The gypsy mother obtained possession of the diamond from the sky, and a document with the Stanley secret. When Esther is grown a beautiful young girl, she is now a queen, returns to Virginia with her, Dr. Lee, the late Colonel Stanley's friend, cousin, Arthur Stanley, who is now a doctor. Arthur Stanley eludes his pursuers and joins Haggar, who is secretly a spy, and upbraids him for his wild life. Needing money, he pawn's the diamond in Richmond. At a ball, which is attended by Vivian Marston, is the guest of honor. Arthur and Blair find the diamond on the table. She has been stolen.

Others Still Fought at One Another's Throats.

Then like a midday wave, his master struck and having humanity had looked upon them and torn them apart. Then it was that Arthur raged like a demon and struck out on all sides and knew no more in his madness, even when the wall gave way and the roof fell upon his unconscious body. Eddled to the outbreak of the combat, Quibba had plucked Esther from the storm of blows and had led her, dazed, to safety. When the hat had broken loose, Stanley had struck out smartly, hitting every skull in sight. But when the surge of the crowd had borne against the side wall and men and women had turned like leaves to read and tear each other, the lawyer, taking advantage of being near the doorway, had darted out into the night, which seemed to promise safety. In the excitement and the struggle he had not noted the diamond had been hurled through the air when Luke Lovell, struggling for it like the rest, had struck the arm of Kansas Em, loosening his grasp upon the chain of the pocket as she held it high above her

"A gypsy woman-bereft of reason in Richmond to identify."

Some he crushed to death's stillness beneath the wreckage of these there is only stolid young man in auto, come. His face, blanched in death or unconsciousness, is cameo-like. It is Arthur Stanley. A great timber is across his chest, and he is crushed and sorely shattered. "Are you hurt, dearie?" asks Kansas Em, turning to Esther from the sickening sight of the wreckage and the hideous cries which still rise loudly behind them. Esther creak and faint. "I am not hurt," she said truthfully, "but where is Arthur? Has he escaped? Is he killed?" "Was he your friend?" asked Kansas Em. "Why, that's the boss, Mr. John Powell, the millionaire, who has just bought the gillyas around here. He had just arrived when this broke loose. Is he your friend?" "Either could have said that the young man—my name is John Powell—is my only friend in all the world, save the poor Italian, Quabba, and a gypsy woman bereft of reason in Gypsy Richmond. But Esther said no word, but sped to the ruins and fought her way through several groups of men and women, who, coming to their senses, were beginning the work of rescue in the face of the flames, that were now bursting out in several places in the wreckage. The crackling fire shed its light among the ruins and down in such a terrific way when Esther, thrust herself in search of Arthur. Those who were planned in the wreckage and were conscious of the awful peril of fire screamed and begged for aid and succor. There was no cry from the pillaged man whom Esther sought and whom she found. As she died he lay, half covered by the wreckage, but with face unscathed and unaltered. Already the red edges of the were creeping near to him. Esther grasped at his shoulders, but the task was beyond her strength until Quabba and their friend, who had seen and then Esther, her strength and resolution leaving her, feels a deadly numbness come swiftly over her.

He struck Luke a mighty blow.

thump. Over the heads of the crowd it had dashed and fastened upon the deer horn, and so the lawyer had borne it by any one in the struggling medley, not even by himself. Scarcely knowing what he did, the panic-stricken lawyer darted into the first haven of safety he encountered. It was a barrel that Peter's butcher had converted into a tunnel for a stry nappy which had been given to him that day. Those who had not been imprisoned or crushed by the falling roof of the dance hall dragged themselves from the debris. Some ran wildly through the muddy streets of the little town

CHAPTER XXXVIII. To Be Near Her Love.

MAMMOTH is a lawless, common, and Peter Huff, the den keeper, is one of the most lawless arbiters. But he has the gambler's temperament. The destruction of his gambling hall is the adverse turn of a card to him. The diamond from the sky, since Durand has told him of it, now fills the mind of Peter Huff.

"Joint keeper's luck" he calls it. "Easy come and easy go! In a gamble for fortune, in a gamble for a million, I lose a dump worth five thousand. The odds were worth it even to lose!" says Mr. Huff. Then it turns to the ill inauspicious instance of his den and says, "Well, you, you pulled a bone for your boss when you started this gag for your young lady friend there."

Here Peter looked keenly into the white face of the fainting Esther. Peter was not altogether lost to the higher humanities. "Why, she's only a kid," he said, "and she's all in. Take her to your place and fix her up. We've sent for the doctor. We'll need the coo-gee, too—and the undertaker!" he added.

"I am a doctor," said Durand, who had been stooping over Arthur and thrusting aside several of the rough group who had gathered around the stretcher. "There are other people to help besides this one," remarked Durand to Peter. "Hustle! I'll take care of Mr. Powell."

"Don't think I'll live," asked Huff. "Are you really a doctor?" "He is badly injured internally," replied Durand. "Several ribs are broken and one of his arms. He should go taken to a hospital, as that operation is necessary. Yes, I am a doctor. I have a Hildeberg degree to prove it. But you must excuse me if I haven't it with me to clear up your doubts."

"Oh, don't be sore at me," retorted Mr. Huff. "I don't care whether you're a huss doctor, a human doctor or no doctor. But as Mr. Powell's teeth may mean the stopping of these works you see your own judgment as to whether we will try to take care of him here or get him to Los Angeles. You had better attend to him, and I'll stick around here and search everybody, living or dead, and dig in these ruins when they're cool enough for that big stone you say is called the diamond from the sky. Don't worry about me. I'll be on the square."

"Of course you'll be on the square," replied Durand testily. "How could you disclose it if you didn't hand it over to me if you find it? Don't worry about being square with me. Worry about me being square with you." And thus, having thoroughly infuriated Peter Huff, Durand turned to minister to the unconscious Arthur Stanley.

It was no little honor of Durand's that he was a physician and the possessor of a Hildeberg degree. His skill had been marked in his profession, and had been chosen to devote himself to it. Durand would have been famous both as a physician and a surgeon. Alized in several scandals, he had been forced to fly from New York, Paris and Vienna. But of recent years he had wholly abandoned the dealing in illicit drugs for the more exalted and dignified profession of international gun crook, securing for him the pseudonym of "the king of diamonds."

Arthur was badly injured, how badly Durand surmised at his first superficial examination. But Durand had also surmised that his patient's youth and strong constitution would enable him to stand a hurried journey to Los Angeles ere the results from shock set in. Then, too, a daring scheme was already formulating in Durand ministered to the unconscious Arthur. Durand's mind, Arthur, crushed and helpless—just as the millionaire, as Durand knew him—was wholly at his mercy. Sorely when John Powell recovered strength and consciousness common gratitude would impel him to retain the services of the physician who had saved his life by hastening with his shattered form from the wilderness to the care and replenishment of the city.

Besides this, Durand remembered Vivian speaking of Blair Stanley and the strange regard and fondness the now injured man had always held for his cousin. For Vivian had informed Durand and the other former associates, that Arthur and Blair were cousins, though she had deemed it best to keep the secret of Arthur being other than John Powell, as he was known to the world.

cries of appreciation and delight, she seizes it and hangs it around her doll's neck. Immediately her little sister Polly demands it, nay, even grasps it. A Secret Spring Was Touched in the Breast of Kansas Em.

to aid him in running and caring for the great car, Durand departed from Mammoth with his still unconscious patient swathed in blankets.

When Esther had recovered herself the improvised automobile ambulance was gone. Esther knew nothing of Durand save what Peter Huff could tell her in answer to her frantic inquiries. "He's a doctor, kid. That's all I know," Mr. Huff had replied. "He's a big doctor, too, and an old friend of your friend, Mr. Powell. At least, he's a friend of friends of his. You ought to be thankful. Doc Durand told me Mr. Powell wouldn't have a chance for his life unless he was taken to a hospital at once and operated on."

There were tears in Kansas Em's world as she eyed at Esther's sorrow and distrust. "If you're not satisfied you go follow them," Em whispered. "Have you any money, pet?"

"Yes, thank you," murmured Esther, "I have quite enough money. I will have Quibbe here get our horses from the stable, and we will ride to the station and take the first train to Los Angeles."

"You will think—sometimes of me, too," she said, as she turned away. "Here is the prayer for the lock, too. Did you know that it was in it?"

"No," said Esther. "I don't think any one knew it. There seemed to be a concealed secret spring that was touched by the diamond in the dance hall."

A secret spring was touched in the sinful breast of Kansas Em. "Your mother put it there when you were a baby," she murmured. "I knew it. I tell you. There is a faint perfume like lavender about it. A mother's prayer!" She sobbed as she took the paper from her bosom, where she had thrust it when the fight had begun in the dance hall.

"Even a slimmer like I am is made the better by it," continued Em. "And will you pray for me?"

"Always," said Esther brokenly as she took the crumpled paper, with its faint, vague, old-time perfume. Then Esther put her arms around the stout, cast-older woman and kissed her in token of pity and gratitude.

But the diamond from the sky? Of all the world Marmaduke Smythe is unmoved by its powers for good or ill. Whether it be believed to those who have no claim or right to it or whether it be truly a charm against harm for Stanleys of the blood means and matters nothing to Marmaduke Smythe. He feels his duty to surrender it to the Stanley heir, but meanwhile it is a responsibility he does not deem devolves upon him. He will be rid of it.

Em hits by a signpost that reads, "Twenty Miles to Mammoth." He hops his brow and thinks, and truly, it's a long, long twenty miles that he had to come, bearing with him by its shaftwright handle the deer head that she sought in the auction at Stanley Hall. He normally the deer head is far more to Marmaduke Smythe than the diamond from the sky.

Some thirty feet from the road, in a straight line with the signpost, is a great, low, oak tree. In its main hole is hollowed. Smythe hides the diamond in this hole and makes a careful memorandum of the hiding place and nearby landmarks and his paced meaning "to" the road and signpost. Then he goes his way.

His way leads him to where two children—Toodles and Polly—come toddling down the road with their dolls and playthings. A gins of milk would tempt him to the future. The child, deep indicate their doorway to the Sunbeet and kindly stranger, and there Toodles makes his way and is regaled with milk and bread and butter and honey by the rancher's kindly wife, the said plainer will apply to the little children.

The children go down the road to play "house," as is their custom, beneath the live oak. Toodles finds the gleaming bauble. She is a girl child. She knows it of a necklace, and with

At the ruins of his dance hall Peter Huff watches the diggers with a keen glance that never wavers. The dead that are brought from the charred debris are nothing to Peter Huff. He has them searched, as he had the living and the wounded searched in his frantic endeavors to find the diamond.

A little, old, squat built workman arouses the suspicion of Peter Huff. For the little old workman has furtively picked up and secreted some shining object. Forced to disclose, the workman shows a still warm silver dollar. With a bitter curse of disappointment and anger, Pete smashes the little old digger in the face and knocks him sprawling. The old fellow picks himself up. "You think I had the diamond that was lost last night?" he asked. "Well, I'll tell you since you've been handy with your fist. One of the boys says he's seen that stranger with the side whiskers running out in that direction with the diamond when the fight broke loose."

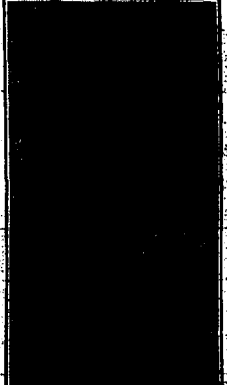

There is such an air of sincerity about the fellow's words that Peter Huff feels a gambler's "hunch." He rushes from the work at the prompting of the hunch and commands the cheap, old automobile of a friend and with his friends goes in pursuit of the fugitive stranger with the side whiskers. So remarkable a figure as Smythe, not to mention the possession of the deer's head has left a blazed trail. Twenty-one miles from Mammoth Smythe is overtaken and held up at the pistol's point. The diamond is not on his person, but Pete and his pal find the memorandum of its hiding place.

Back to the oak tree they bear the protesting Smythe, but the diamond is gone again.

Pete and his pal part from the lawyer with curses and returns to Mammoth. They pass Toodles, aged, four, crying from a bee sting. Then Toodles runs, crying, home to mother, as little girl did before her. The diamond has been cast aside and forgotten by Toodles, who had been engrossed with it as she crossed the bee yard, till, trespassing too near a swarming hive, she had been stung. The diamond, dropped by the scurrying child in pain, lies on the alighting board of the beehive while the workers of the hive push out the drones and sting them to death against the bubble at the doorway.

In Los Angeles the newspapers spread stories of the dramatic first homcoming to his great mansion, shattered, insensible, more dead than alive, of John Powell, the young oil and eating magnate. The papers speak longingly of the skill and untiring attention of the celebrated physician, Dr. Durand, and of the care and attention of friends and relatives of the injured man, including favorite cousin, Blair Stanley of Virginia, who has recently arrived and will take complete charge of Mr. Powell's affairs, say the newspapers.

The papers also mention briefly that a pretty and agitated young woman called to inquire as to Mr. Powell's condition, but refused to give her name to the servant, who happened to see that no one could be admitted to Mr. Powell's bedside except Dr. Durand and the nurse in charge, Miss Marston.

So Arthur Stanley lies helpless at the hands of hatred while Esther of the loving heart is barred out at his door and the diamond from the sky is buried about by base who perhaps whisper of it to their sovereign, for it is, indeed, a jewel for a queen.

Most chronic diseases can be prevented if only taken in time. Don't wait until you notice the symptoms; that is usually too late. Long before you suspect that there is anything wrong, a careful medical examination will discover the beginning of the disorder. Therefore if you value your health, consult your family physician once a year, submit yourself to a thorough examination, and carefully follow the advice he gives you.
