Dr. French Oliver—Raiks High as an Evangelist

COMMITTEES FOR BIG REVIVAL EVENT ARE NAMED

Tabernacle Will be Erected Near Park Capable of Seating Several Thousand People.

Arrangements have been completed for Dr. French E. Oliver, the world renowned evangelist, to come to Twin Falls in February. A large tabernacle to accommodate several thousand persons will be erected near the city park.

On Sunday afternoon, a representative and enthusiastic meeting was held in the Methodist church. Mr. J. A. Tansel was elected president of the organization and presided over the gathering.

Building committee: Geo. E. Bryant, president; A. Estling, secretary. Music committee: C. D. Weaver, president; Miss Mary Douglas, secretary.

Prayer meeting committee: H. E. Powers, president; D. L. Hickling, secretary.

Soul winners committee: Leo Johnson, president; Mrs. F. D. Kautz, vice president; Mrs. L. P. Jones, secretary.

As an evangelist, Dr. French E. Oliver ranks with Sunday, Chapman and Torrey. Wherever he goes thousands flock to hear him.

Dr. Oliver is a man of splendid presence and striking personality and is six feet four inches tall.

Two noted singers will accompany Dr. Oliver and a host of four hundred voices will be organized.

Something of the wonderful personality of Dr. Oliver can best be ascertained by reading the following excerpts from the Xenia Gazette, of Ohio, in which city Dr. Oliver is just closing meetings.

"You may pass me as the contented day of the big tabernacle meeting. Three times Dr. Oliver addressed large audiences and his sermons may hit the nail with the intention of an absolute and unconditional surrender to Jesus Christ. More enthusiasm and interest have been manifested at each service and the third week of the campaign opens very auspiciously. The great feature of the day was the afternoon meeting at 7 o'clock.

"Out of his marvelous vocabulary and wealth of illustrations, Dr. Oliver formulated a drive home with unswerving effect an awful arraignment of sin in the lives of men. In a scholarly and scientific manner, the social evils of the world were pointed up for the men in all their causes and ramifications.

"Dr. Oliver's method is not to stampede the crowd for the sake of numbers. He works for clean cut results. When decisions were called for the swiftest action actually became truth. About 150 men came in response to the call for unconditional surrender.

Western Farmers Cannot Prosper Until Present Discrimination is Eliminated.

Washington — Since his return to Washington, after making a number of speeches in Massachusetts, Senator Borah of Idaho, has received many letters from Massachusetts Republicans commending his stand on the tariff and especially commending him for denouncing the idea popular in certain New England circles, that a protective tariff should provide for free raw material from the rest of the world.

When Senator Borah went to Massachusetts, prior to taking part in the campaign, he made an address in Boston, widely quoted at the time, and was asked in the course of that address to deliver to the people of Massachusetts a message from the people of the great west.

CROSSING ALARMS NEEDED

While the accident of last Friday cannot be charged to the negligence of the Short Line, yet the need for better protection of dangerous crossings is imperative. The crossing at which the accident can be truthfully said to be a dangerous crossing. How many others upon the Twin Falls tract where the railroad track crosses diagonally many of the public highways which are lined with trees and weeds thus shutting off a clear view of the railroad until the vehicle is almost upon the crossing. The Times believes that the Short Line should take steps to install alarms similar to those in use on its main line. Such a step will be expensive, but negligence at some future time on the part of the railroad employees may be more costly than the preventative measure.

FOR A BETTER AND BIGGER PARK

For several years the desire of those most deeply concerned in the civic welfare of this city has been for some place close into the city where a recreation park and public play ground can be secured at a minimum cost. Several efforts have been made toward securing the Day thirty-five acre tract one mile from the center of the city on Idaho boulevard. The financial disaster that threatened for several years however, put a stop to the securing of the land.

Now that the financial situation is clearing there is the same opportunity to secure the tract at a reasonable price. The Times believes that the city and the citizens should take steps within a short time to get an option upon the Day tract and attempt to make it into a beautiful city park and public playground. The land with a very pretty little coteau across one corner is ideal for developing into one of the most beautiful spots in the city. Let's get together and make a campaign for this park. If the welfare of the children of this city means anything to all of the citizens, it must mean an effort to provide clean amusement and recreation.

A CHALLENGE TO OUR SHIP-REGISTRY

The bare facts of the seizure of the American steamship Hocking, bound in ballast from New York to Norfolk, Va., by a British cruiser, and her taking to Halifax by a prize crew, is enough to make a true American hang his head in shame. Says the New York American, giving vent to the feeling of indignation shared by some other editorial observers. If Washington will stand for this, regarding the New York Morning Telegraph, then "American sovereignty might as well be surrendered and a neutrality established with George V. as our overlord." The state department has made prompt protest to Great Britain, the press inform us, and the Washington rumor is that the Hocking incident will be settled by arbitration. Meanwhile the New York Evening Mail informs us that the high-handed action of the British Admiralty in seizing an American vessel in American waters, engaged in the coastwise trade of the United States, is explained on the ground that the Hocking came into American registry from Danish ownership and is suspected of being hacked by German capital. In this seizure, The Mail adds, the control of the American registry list is in effect taken from our government; and, if it is allowed to stand, the United States will be deprived of the power to decide whether or not a ship is to enjoy the protection of the United States flag. Another ship, the Hamburg, of Dutch registry, but whose ownership is ascribed in press reports to the Krupp or Germany, has been taken just off the port of New York and also docked at Halifax for action by a prize court. The commercial effect of this new policy of Great Britain, in the view of New York shipping authorities consulted by The Sun, will be harmful to many ships sailing under Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Dutch flags, may cripple American trade with South America and the West Indies to a great extent, and may also send freight charges of supposedly safe vessels up to prohibitive rates.

The task of unmaking protest in the case of the Hamburg, The Sun points out, devolves upon the shippers of her cargo and the Dutch company that owns the vessel. The Hocking is owned by the American Transatlantic company, of which Mr. Richard Wagner is president, who is reported as saying that he is a home American. Secretary Lansing caused Mr. Chamberlain to be overruled has not, however, been any better toward us. The Sun relates further that the seizures are in line with the announcement by Great Britain of the suspension of Article No. 57 of the Declaration of London. This article sets forth that even if a ship flying a neutral flag and carrying a cargo to a neutral port is owned to the extent of 50 per cent by an enemy subject the vessel can not be seized for confiscation. On October 25 an Order in Council declared this order suspended. On this point the New York World says that when Great Britain thus refused to recognize the long-established principle that the character of a ship is determined by her flag, "the great fabric of international law already mutilated, was reduced to tatters," and now we have prize-court law "as arbitrary and despotic as it was before civilization had rationalized it to some extent." The World also notes that the seizure of the Hocking as a matter of law presents an open question because our own authorities were not agreed as to her right to American registry and its title:

"Some officials of the Department of Commerce and the Department of State hold that so long as the vessels were owned and operated by an American company the fact that Germans were stockholders was not important. The Commissioner of Navigation was very emphatic in his objection to the transfer, arguing that any German ownership would certainly lead to complications.

"As a matter of policy, however, the British seizure appears to be indefensible. The Hocking was bound from New York for Norfolk, Va., with the intention of loading coal for Argentina. She carried a neutral flag and she was engaged in neutral trade. To capture a ship with such a status involved a needless controversy without accomplishing any military object worth the cost."

"Our note to Great Britain about her interference with neutral shipping is described in a Washington dispatch as containing the following sharp passages" and as being "very emphatic in condemnation" of several features of the British Orders in Council. At the same time we learn from a London correspondent of the New York Times that no apprehension of serious conflict between the two countries is apprehended in England, and that, on the contrary, it is expected that her explanation will be satisfactory to Washington. We read there:

"The alleged action of German vessel-owners in resorting to the use of the United States flag to protect cargoes which were being shipped from America to Holland or other neutral ports, thence to be transhipped into Germany, was what inspired England to abrogate Article 67, under which ship and cargo were protected by the flag flown. This alleged use of the American flag is held by British authorities to be wrong in that it is only a subterfuge. The feeling in official circles is that the United States will agree that the new rule of compelling shippers to show their papers, proving the ownership of the vessel as well as the cargo, no matter what flag is used, is legitimate.

"The British attitude is that because of the ownership of the German ships, the character of a vessel can not be determined by the flag flown as the Declaration of London set forth. It is argued that as a means of determining the precise ownership the stopping of vessels and subsequent inquiry can work no harm. The authorities here feel that they are privileged to do this in warfare on an enemy.

"It will be explained to the United States Government through Ambassador Page that the ships and cargoes will be held only long enough for investigation into the ownership of the vessel, and that the inquiry will be speedy. If it develops that the ships are wholly or partly owned by Germans, the British authorities will reserve the right to hold the vessels as prizes of war, but in every instance the facts will be laid before the American Government before final judgment, so that the United States may present any facts which it deems necessary."—Literary Digest.

TALKS ON THRIFT

No. 35.—SUCCESS THROUGH THRIFT

"The finest thing that ever happened to me, the finest thing that ever happened to any young fellow is to be poor. There is no greater stimulant than poverty—not as a condition to stay in, but as a condition to work out of. Behind every story of success is a story of hard work and self-denial."—Edward Bok, Editor of The Ladies Home Journal.

Luther Bailey was a small town merchant in New York State many years ago. One of his customers went West, leaving an unpaid account of several hundred dollars, which he promised to pay as soon as he could. Time went on and still the debt was unpaid. Finally the debtor offered his creditor in payment a piece of vacant real estate he had acquired in the western city. Mr. Bailey accepted it because he believed that half a loaf was better than none. To make a long story short, this land increased in value with the growth of the city. Mr. Bailey, in time, sold it at a good profit. Instead of blowing it in, as many men would have done under similar circumstances, he saved it and reinvested it from time to time, with the result that in his later years he was "very rich and when he died his children were well provided for in his will.

A young woman in Cedar Rapids, Ia., less than three years ago, was induced by her employers to lay aside her savings each week, and more as she could. Today, out of a very modest salary she has on deposit in one institution over $600 on which she receives interest semi-annually. She also has a checking account in another bank. She has a standing not only with her employers, but also with her associates in the same office that the non-savers do not have.

Mrs. Harry Carson of Shelbyville, Ind., is said to have become a half millionnaire with a start in the decidedly feminine business of millinery in that city. Her name was Flora Joseph and at thirteen she lost her father. The orphan started at pressing and cleaning hats. But she quickly lost her job because she had too many ideas of her own about how the work should be done. Then she borrowed $25 and at that early age, with little or no experience, she invested it in stock and started a millinery shop in her room.

Ten years later, at the age of 23, she had saved enough to purchase the largest business block in Shelbyville. Fairly launched now in real estate, at 30 she was the richest woman in her own right in the State and a few years ago she married Mr. Carson, a wealthy broker. What her fortune is today is not known, but if any woman was ever self made financially, Mrs. Carson can claim that distinction.—T. D. MacGregor.

AN IDAHO CREDIT PLAN

Welsch Merchants Devise Scheme to Aid Local Farmers.

A plan of extending credit to farmers which has proved out in operation by Welsch merchants that works well there has awakened the interest of the federal reserve board at San Francisco, who intend to adopt it. It is given below as taken from the Welsch American:

At Welsch, Idaho, the Merchants' association, composed of thirty-one members and comprising 85 per cent of the business interests of the town have entered into a co-operative arrangement for extending credit, which has numerous features as to justify widespread adoption.

The plan referred to is devised with reference to extending credit to farmers, and its main features are the following:

Application: The Welsch association has appointed a representative, the major portion of whose time is occupied in the duties of "credit man." At his office at certain hours of specified days farmers file with him applications for credit to the extent desired. These give information as to the applicant's assets and liabilities. These applications are passed upon by an executive committee of three members of the merchants' association.

Crop Mortgage: Upon approval of his application, the applicant creates in the representative of the merchants' association as trustee a mortgage covering his growing crop. The mortgage obligates himself to do certain things in connection with the production of the crop and failing to do these gives the trustee the right to take the necessary steps to develop the crop and harvest it.

Credit Certificate: Upon execution of the crop mortgage, a credit certificate is then issued available for use in buying of any of the members of the merchants' association, whose names are reported upon the certificate. This certificate is signed by the trustee and is much like a letter of credit, setting out the amount and conditions of the credit. Blank drafts reading "on or before November 1st, etc." and drawn on the trustee of the merchants' association are given the mortgagee in connection with the credit certificate. When he makes a purchase from any member of the merchants' association, whose name is given in the certificate, one of these drafts is filed out for the amount and given in exchange for the goods or services.

The trustee of the merchants' association is thus kept informed constantly of the advances made to any of those to whom credit is thus extended. Drafts of this character constitute such paper as would undoubtedly be readily acceptable from the seller for account by any local bank desiring to increase its loans, and would in all probability be acceptable by banks in other sections.

Member banks having such paper would find it viewed with the utmost favor when offered to their federal reserve bank for discount.

The issue of the paper proceeds from the fact that there is the specific security of the crop, which, under normal conditions would provide the liquidation of the debt, and even would follow the general responsibility of the farmer; then that of the reducing bank.

Instead of more or less inadequate supervision of borrowers by the representatives of the various members of the merchants' association, none of whom would have information as to the total credit extended to any farmer, this plan would centralize such supervision in the trustee acting on behalf of all thereby securing important economy of supervision and much greater efficiency because of all information as to credit extensions.

Fuller competition in selling is maintained. The mortgage is for the common benefit of all sellers concerned. If it ran only to one member of the association, the farmer would necessarily be obliged to confine his purchases to that one, thus eliminating competition.

It is stated that upon the death of one mortgagee, the trustee proceeded to harvest the crop at minimum cost, thus saving the estate and assuring the most economical harvesting result.

The results of operation are the first test of any plan. This is the first year during which this plan has been in operation at Welsch, Idaho.

It is stated that the crops thrived and under control of the merchants' association make certain that every cent advanced under this plan will be repaid in full without a single loss.

rural credits much attention has been given to the co-operation of borrowers. The plan approaches the problem by a co-operation of sellers.

While final results must ultimately determine the success of any such plan, yet many elements of any such advantage to seller and buyer suggest themselves. Although a plan for extending credit individually yet fundamentally it links the whole community co-operatively. Sellers have the incentive to extend credit where arises from the certainty of increased business through the development of the territory. The risk of loss is minimized and the paper received is so available in bank that the procedure differs little from selling for cash. The cost of supervision, a burden necessarily falling upon buyers, is reduced to a minimum. The buyers have the benefit of competition which apparently would closely approximate that resulting from cash buying. They have the benefit of being protected by suggestions from the trustee, who as "field man" would, presumably, acquire special skills. Important errors and serious neglect would thus be avoided. Safety in a necessary basis for liberal credit, and it seems obvious that credit could be extended upon such conditions much more liberally than under ordinary conditions to the very great advantage of these lacking money. This would be an important stimulus which ought to add largely to the prosperity of the community, and there would be the further probable result of weeding out undesirable citizens, since only those worthy of credit would remain. The plan described here has been devised for extending credit to wheat growing farmers. It seems capable of many modifications that would adapt it to other situations.

- They are made in 28 shapes.
- They may be had in all weights of fabric.

- They are daintily trimmed.
- They are durable.

Below are features that give Athena its comfort, its distinctness and its tailored fit.

Shaping Shoulders and Sleeves
Conform to the shoulder curve of the body without wrinkling under arms.

Patent Fitted Seat
Keeps garment from stretching across the shoulder and holds sleeve in place.

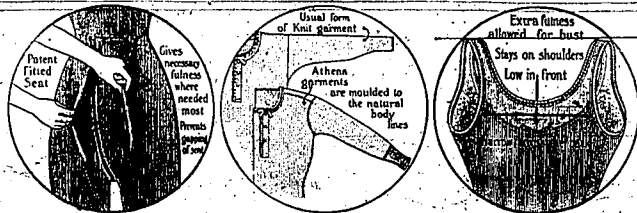

Curved Armholes
Brings arm seams to the natural curve of the shoulder and holds garment snugly and smoothly under arm, staying away with unnecessary strain.

Three-Cornered Gusset
Is so shaped as to follow the usual strain at the thigh. Insures greatest comfort and longer wear.

Low-Neck Sleeveless
Just as a woman is taller, across the bust than the back, so this garment is made with extra fullness in front.

Patent Seat
This consists of a plait on each side of the back, instead of extra cloth in the middle where it causes discomfort. Always stays closed and allows wearing room, sitting or standing.

We took the Athena agency because we thought it worthy a place in our high-class stock. We are not disappointed. Wear it once, you'll buy it summer and winter.

NO JOKE FOR BUHL WOMAN

Mrs. F. C. Brown to Sue Boise Man for Breach of Promise.

When, after she had "waited at the church" for Saturday night wedding, her bridegroom failed to appear, Mrs. F. C. Brown of Buhl decided to bring him to account and arranged with her attorney to file suit for breach of promise. Mrs. Brown came to Boise Saturday, she says at the request of a Boise man with whom she had been corresponding, and they were to be married Saturday here. She left for Buhl Wednesday night in response to an urgent telephone call, after instructing her attorney to prepare papers in her damage suit.

Mrs. Brown was a former resident of Boise. She is a vivacious little person with bright, black eyes, and claims to be much in love with the man whom she expected to wed last Saturday.

Only One for Her.
"I love that man, I can't tell you how much. He is nothing for looks but several, refinement, and he is bald headed, but his eyes are remarkably beautiful. Our love affair began when he boarded at our home in Buhl. He would invite me out to dances and parties and my husband being much older than I, and not caring to go, would urge me to accompany him, dear old innocent. A real hot love letter from this man, which fell into my husband's hands a year ago, caused him to divorce me. Since then I have supported my two children. I have had three pairs of twins, the four little girls are all living, but only one of the boys.

"I could find him."

"When I arrived in Boise Saturday

I went straight to the rooming house where my prospective husband told me to meet him, but we could find nothing of him. After waiting some time, I telephoned to his sister-in-law, at whose home he boards, and she answered he was out doing chores and she would not call him. I tried again and she said he had gone out with some hay.

"Finally I succeeded in reaching him through the route of getting someone else to call up for me."

Says He Dodged:
"Then he told me he had been sick in bed but would see me that evening. I told him I wanted to see him the next morning at 11 o'clock, but when the next morning arrived, he failed to put in an appearance and I later learned he had skipped out down the valley."

"I am once instructed my attorney to commence suit for breach of promise and had it not been for my call to Buhl tonight, I would have had the paper signed and ready. I don't know what is wanted at Buhl, the only thing I can think of is that one of my children is ill, but I expect to return on the next train, unless I find some serious trouble at home."

Says Parents Were Pioneers.
Mrs. Brown claims to be a trained nurse. Her husband's father was one of the pioneers of Boise, she said, and built the log cabin which still stands on Fifth street between Idaho and Main streets. She was quite excited when interviewed last evening, feeling she had been most unjustly treated.

"I have corresponded with this man since 1911," she said. "Some one suggested that the reason he backed out of marrying me was because of my five children, but that is nonsense, for he had himself photographed with four of them, so you see he must know about them. I do not intend to stand such treatment and I shall make him suffer for my humiliation."—Statesman.

On Saturday, November 13, Rev. W. E. Harman, united in marriage Ed-Edw. E. Sheeler, of Buhl. The ceremony was performed at the study of the officiating minister.

and analyze without prejudice, the doctrine of reciprocity with Canada and strip it of its subtleties and verbiage it represents nothing more in its last analysis for nothing less than the selfishness of the New England manufacturer." The farmer's protection for the eastern manufacturer and free trade for the western farmer. It means that the producer, the farmer—the stock-raiser and the manufacturer—market and buy of you in a protected market. It means that you want to buy of Canada because you think you can buy cheaper and it is impossible for you to buy cheaper there without injuring the western farmer. You think you can use the Canadian farmer to beat down the prices on the western farms of the United States.

"What is this raw material about which you talk? Most you manufacture product represent the finished product to you any more than the farmer's crop represents the finished product of his industry? The farmer plants his corn or sows his wheat, watches and tills the long season through, harvests them, threshes and hauls them to the railroads, and you, one not blinded by self interest conclude that that is any loss his finished product to the railroads? Is not the article, is the store which he has raised and fattened, the hide which he has gathered, the hog which he has prepared for sale, a moderate loss the finished product of his labor than your manufactured product is of yours? This doctrine of raw material from the farmer and protection for the narrow, selfish policy of those who want the benefit of the protective policy and would at the same time demand the same protection for the manufacturer and countryman.

"Now, I want to say in all courtesy but with entire candor that you are greatly misled if you suppose that any such system will ultimately prevail in this country. We will either have a policy which applies to the whole country or the railroads will, at all, a policy which covers the whole land and all factories and callings, or we will have a policy which applies to the platform of the farmer, a moderate establish and maintain in this country any such short-sighted, narrow, selfish policy as the doctrine of free trade for the farmer and protection for the manufacturer. I say this much and more briefly and less politely than I feel, because we are soon to write to the railroads, which the Republican party is to-bid for the future, if you should succeed in instituting any such doctrine in that platform, you will have a moderate policy of protection, moderate tariff but I would unhesitatingly vote to take the last vestige of protection from the New England manufacturer if New England should conclude that she prefers to do business with Canada. I do not think that free trade for the farmer is a good thing, but I am sure that it is infinitely better than free trade for some and protection for others. Such a system is indolent and intolerable.

There's a very great difference between the price of a Christmas gift and its value.

Many a time you have turned from the costliest parcel that Christmas brought you to a lower-priced gift which tugged the heart strings with a dear association or a precious memory.

The gift you want to send to your own people or your nearest friends—the gift that really means you—that's your photograph. It's a gift of value, indeed, and may be high-priced or low-priced—as you choose to make it.

Also the succession to the Stanley estate in England was a controversial matter. When a daughter is born to the colonel and the mother dies, the colonel buys a gypsy and a fortune teller. Three years later the gypsy mother, leaving had no part in this drama, etc., etc. The gypsy, Esther, forced in secret, and leaves her son unloved as the heir. The gypsy then, returning to her native land from the sky, and a descendant with the Stanley secret. Years later Hagar, Arthur's business associate would be looked after by his cousin and eastern business associate, Blair Stanley of Richmond, who had been summoned to Los Angeles by Mr. Powell just previous to his death.

had been given much space in the newspapers. The reports were meager as to just how his injuries were sustained save for the fact that his physician, Dr. Frank Durand, a stranger to Los Angeles, had good fortune been with him at the time of the accident. Dr. Durand had stated for the management's reporters that the injuries sustained by Mr. Powell had occurred by the collapse of a building during a drunken riot at the Mammoth mine, which Mr. Powell owned.

homecoming to it a crushed, shattered, unconscious and seemingly being unalive. And then the accident ceased to be a three days' wonder, and other sensational happenings and events of interest supplanted it in the papers, and Arthur Stanley was left with no further concern save to those who were personally interested.

Among these was a pretty young woman who lived quietly under the name of Esther Harding at a modest hotel. Esther, after her first rebuff at the portals of the Powell mansion, the day after the injured man was brought back, returned again and again and was persistent in her demands to see the injured man.

It was not as a third plunder Esther had come to the so-called Powell mansion on a first occasion. She was determined to see Arthur. Factually she had waited with the watchful Quabba and Esther until she had seen Durand and his shadow and accomplice, the dapper Count de Vaux, leave the premises. Blair Stanley's name was at Arthur's office, already taking charge of his affairs.

Esther was not afraid of them, collectively or singly; but she deemed it best to encounter Vivian Marston, who she learned was in charge of the sick-room alone. Esther had no desire to bring notice and ruin perhaps upon the injured man, known here in Los Angeles as John Powell, by any premature disclosure of his real identity if she could help it. But she was determined to go even to this length were it necessary and were she able to help the loved with every fiber of her brain and loyal little heart.

Some intuitive sense of Esther's attitude must have impressed Vivian Marston, for she did not heed the mild request to the one in all the world she loved with every fiber of her brain and loyal little heart.

Esther had been in communication with Blair, the Richmond detective, when she had trusted as at least one disinterested and influential friend. This night she wired him again that the condition of their friend, she had without his knowledge, Arthur being injured—would keep her for the time at least in Los Angeles, and while she sat that night, perchance to dream of happier days to come, a strange conclusion—the strangers of a soul—was reached in the luxuriously appointed library of the young millionaire who lay upstairs in delirium from his injuries and opiate.

"You cannot come in here!" she said tensely. "Mr. Powell is at death's door. Any intrusion, or excitement would be his death."

Esther answered: "Then the Stanley spirit asserted itself. 'Better he die with a true friend by him than live with such a yoke and your associates ministering to him' she said scornfully."

"Then his eyes opened, and he saw her. 'Esther!' he murmured. 'Is it you, dear?'"

"Yes," she whispered softly. "It is Esther."

He smiled and was about to try to speak again. Then Vivian moved slightly. A film passed over Arthur's dark eyes. They closed, and he lay still. The drug lulled him again to unconsciousness.

"You see, he is very weak," said Vivian quietly. "This meeting has been a shock to him. In your regard for him so selfish that you would cause his death to gratify your desire to intrude further?"

Esther's fortitude gave way. Arthur was so weak she feared even now that the hour of death was on him. She rose to her feet and slowly left the room, followed by Vivian, who closed the door behind her. A heavy draft fell upon the heart of Esther. With this she seemed in a moment, the day of all her hopes for happiness with Arthur had closed forever.

occur in the fall litter during cold weather. Fall pigs can be wintered at comparatively low cost, but they should be fattened sufficiently early to insure a good growth before cold weather.

An acre of alfalfa furnishes ample food for twelve 200-pound sows, but with proper methods more can be carried. The best results are obtained from wintering the pasture into two parts, using each part alternately.

Corn is the principal grain used to supplement alfalfa pasture and hay. The average yield in 1914 on the project was only 15 1/2 bushels per acre.

HOGS AND IRRIGATION

Possibilities of the Industry Pointed Out in Government Report.

Farmers on reclamation projects, where forage and grain crops are the chief crops are urged by the department to consider very carefully the possibilities of raising hogs as a means of converting crops into products which will bear transportation.

On the North Platte, it is stated in a report on this subject, there appears to be no reason why the annual surplus of hogs should not be developed to a point where the resulting revenue will represent an important part of the farmer's receipts from their crops.

In 1913 about 55 per cent of the hog crop on the North Platte project was devoted to alfalfa and about 32 per cent to grain. As in the case of many of the other reclamation projects, the cost of raising hogs on the North Platte region to the large market centers is so high that the price paid to farmers for the hogs is small.

While it evidently pays, therefore, to fight hog cholera with serum, it is still more important to take proper precautions to see that it does not appear. Treatment with the serum alone is not sufficient for from 30 to 90 days only, and unless proper sanitary measures are taken, reinfection is almost certain to follow.

Denver is the chief market for the fat hogs raised on the project, about two-thirds of which are shipped by farmers to Denver and cashed in by local buyers.

The chief problem, however, confronting hog raisers on the project is the control of disease. The natural conditions which favor hogs as the health of the animals should be good and their quarters easily maintained in a sanitary condition.

Hog cholera appeared on the project in 1913 and was widespread early in the summer. The campaign against the disease was directed (1) toward the securing and enforcing of a quarantine order; (2) to securing prompt reports of all outbreaks in order to treat the hogs in the infected herds; and (3) to improving sanitary conditions.

While it evidently pays, therefore, to fight hog cholera with serum, it is still more important to take proper precautions to see that it does not appear. Treatment with the serum alone is not sufficient for from 30 to 90 days only, and unless proper sanitary measures are taken, reinfection is almost certain to follow.

OCT. SEVERE ON DRY FARMERS

Extra Dry With Abnormally High Temperature and Lots of Sunshine.

October was a "mean" month, measured meteorologically, according to the monthly report of Section Director Wells, of the weather bureau. It was a negative sort of span throughout being sunny, dry and dusty, favorable for harvesting for the most part and feverish throughout. It was hard on the dry farmers and it scared the inhabitants in the south with an earthquake on the 2nd.

The department report follows: The month may be characterized as mild, sunny and dry. The mean temperature was nearly three degrees above normal, and only three degrees statewide records were begun in 1893 has the mean for October been higher. However, higher individual temperatures have been experienced seven times in the same period. The average precipitation was less than half the normal amount. In only two instances has the recorded amount for October been less. Practically all precipitation was rain and the mountains remained bare practically throughout the month. There was an abundance of sunshine, particularly in the southern counties, where a new record for October in this particular was established. During most of the month the roads were dry and dusty. In the southern counties the soil was too dry for plowing and seeding, and for the germination of fall grain. Harvest of apples and beets was nearly completed and potato digging well advanced.

An earthquake of unusual importance for Idaho was experienced on the 2nd at 11:55 p. m. mountain time. It was felt over the southwestern part of the state, and in some places the shock was sufficiently severe to stop pendulum clocks, rattle sash weights and cause some alarm. No damage was done at any point.

Less than one inch of precipitation occurred generally south of the Salmon river and over about one-fourth of this area in the Coeur D'Alene and Bitler Root mountains the amount exceeded three inches. The precipitation was practically everywhere below normal. The principal precipitation periods were from the 1st to 4th, 10th to 14th and 23rd to 25th. There were two periods of three days each and two periods of two days each without appreciable precipitation at any reporting station.

The monthly mean for the state as shown by the records of 103 stations was .62 of an inch. The mean departure from the normal for 20 stations having 10 or more years, record was .30 of an inch. The greatest monthly amount was 3.44 inches at Hurke. There was 10 stations reporting entire absence of precipitation, and eight stations at which only a trace occurred. The greatest amount in 24 hours was 1.26 inches at Whitbird on the 2nd. The heaviest snowfall was 2 of an inch. The greatest snowfall in 24 hours was 5 inches at Big Springs on the 10th. The average number of stations with all of an inch or more precipitation was 4.

EDUCATIONAL BULLETIN

Boise, November 11th, 1915.

To County Superintendents.

Dear Superintendent:

In accordance with my proposal submitted to you some time ago, and heartily approved by all the superintendents who expressed an opinion on it, the State Board of Education passed the following rule:

Districts with three teachers or less which desire to carry on work above the 8th grade must obtain the approval of the county superintendent. This approval shall not be given if in the opinion of the county superintendent the grade cannot be carried on satisfactorily from the attempt to carry high school work.

The basis of this rule is the belief on our part that infinite knowledge of the situation such as the county superintendent possesses is necessary for the formation of a wise judgment concerning these schools.

In view of many inquiries from county superintendents, and for the purpose of securing reasonable uniformity throughout the state, we call attention to the following points, which should be considered in passing upon the applications of these schools:

(1). It seems to be the unanimous belief of county superintendents that schools with one teacher should never undertake high school work; indeed some of the superintendents have requested that a rule be made by the state board to this effect.

(2). It is evident that geographical situation should be taken into consideration. If a school is situated in an easy distance of a good high school, it is usually far better for the high school pupils of the district to attend the standard school under the provisions of article 23.

(3). It is necessary to take into account the number of pupils and the number of grades in the elementary school. It should be carefully noted to lay too much stress upon this, inasmuch as these conditions vary so much from year to year.

(4). Consider the number of pupils ready to take high school work should be given much weight.

(5). The financial ability of the district should also be taken into account. In some cases if the district is able to employ an additional teacher high school work might be authorized when otherwise it would be undesirable.

(6). Note particularly that a district may offer one or two or three years of high school work, and take advantage of Article XXIII for pupils who desire to go beyond the course offered.

(7). You must help to make the trustees and people in these smaller districts see that they default not only the elementary pupils but the high school pupils themselves when they keep up the empty form of a high school without any adequate equipment or teaching staff. This is emphasized in the High School Bulletin No. 1, page 11.

(8). The smaller district near a large high school should see that it cannot possibly give over full high school opportunities as cheaply as it can get them under Section XXIII. Especially when they think they are getting the high school work for nothing by having their regular teachers do it, they are giving a heavy price—neglect of the elementary grades—and getting nothing for it.

(9). The superintendent is the possible of High School Bulletin No. 1. We shall be glad to send you additional copies of this bulletin or to send them free to any addresses which you may send us.

Sincerely yours,

EDWARD C. SISSON,

Commissioner of Education.

IDAHO A PROSPEROUS STATE

Salt Lake Man Says This Is the Place to Sell Cars.

If a Salt Laker journeyed through Idaho in the fall of the year and returned to his city running over with enthusiasm on conditions in the West State, Frank Bollerhoff is the man. Bollerhoff left Salt Lake 10 days ago, and touched at Pocatello, Boise, Twin Falls, Idaho Falls, Blackfoot, Caldwell, Rexburg, Rigby, Nampa and other Idaho points before returning to Salt Lake.

He found so many automobiles in use in Idaho and discovered so many prospective purchasers of automobiles and saw so many sugar beets and ran across so much money, that he returned an Idaho boomer of the first water.

Discussing his trip recently he said: "No man who doesn't make a trip to Idaho at the close of the year, and particularly this year, can't realize what a remarkable season they have had in that state."

"I was in Idaho with Harold Smith, one of our salesmen, for the purpose of looking over several Idaho towns, with a view of placing agencies for the new Hudson car, on which we expect initial deliveries in December."

"Mr. Smith and I went prepared to make a thorough investigation of all conditions in Idaho, and as a result of our trip I am frank to say that Idaho has much to be proud of."

"The farmers have had an exceptional year, and there is plenty of money in the state. I saw more sugar beets than I thought existed in the world, and including what related to me by prominent business men in the towns and cities I visited of farmers who have reaped such incomes this year that they are not the farmers had been operating mills instead of farms."

"Everywhere we went, we found prosperous, happy people, enjoying the good things of life and among these good things are thousands of automobiles."

"It was our purpose to thoroughly organize certain sections of Idaho as selling territories for the Hudson car, inasmuch as our interest in the Hudson factory are to prepare to sell three times as many Hudsons as we have ever sold before."

"Twin Falls and Idaho Falls are exceptionally prosperous, and both have a vigorous live appearance."

"I was especially surprised at Blackfoot to find everything in such splendid shape, and the same is true of Caldwell, Rexburg, and Rigby."

"None of the things we saw, both Boise and Pocatello, are in excellent shape."

When the opportunity to step right salt car comes to you, be the first to if you watch the classified ads.

WIRELESS PLANT IN HILLS

Mysterious Aircraft Has Been Spotted in Rapid Flight Near Blaney.

For sometime the federal government has entertained a belief that somewhere in the mountain regions of Idaho a secret wireless station was being maintained in the interests of European powers now at war, and attempts have been made to locate the plant that apparently has communication with Canada and then with Europe. It is barely possible, of course, that the mysterious aircraft that has been seen near Mackay to be in the service of such hidden wireless station. The Mackay Minor, of this week contains the following story of the flying machine.

Al. West, prominent stockman and proprietor of the Blaney stage station, while in the fields of his ranch a couple of weeks ago, was puzzled over a swishing, rumbling sound that apparently came from nowhere in particular. He first thought an earthquake was being pulled off in Custer county, but the sound came nearer and nearer, and he finally detected that it came from overhead, so gazing upward, he beheld a large flying machine hurtling through space at lightning like rapidity. He rubbed his eyes in a bewildered way and took the second look to make sure that his eyes were not playing a trick on him. He watched the huge machine until it gracefully disappeared over a snow-clad hill that pierced the sky south of the stage station some 15 miles away, then stood in a contemplative mood for many minutes after the machine had disappeared absolutely bewildered.

About a year ago Fred Westendorf, his cousin beheld the same spectacle in the same vicinity and told their story to many people of Mackay. Mr. Westendorf wrote many papers asking for information as to the flight of the machine, but none could throw any light on the mysterious appearance of a flying machine away up in the most mountainous country of the Rocky mountain region. Seafers laughed at their story and much joking followed, but both of the men persisted in claiming the truth of their story, and the subsequent joking and kidding they would say nothing of the incident.

Upon returning to the house he was accosted by his wife with the question: "Did you see that flying machine?" Al replied, "Why did you see one?" "Yes," said Mrs. West, "Well, I did too," said Al, "but I decided that I wouldn't say nothing about it, till someone else did, for fear they might think I was foolish."

The strange and unaccounted for appearance of the machine was the topic of conversation in the West household for days, and the story was told to many of the travelers who pass that way. Thus, twice within one year has a flying machine been sighted 25 miles above Mackay. Many theories are advanced to account for its appearance, among which, and the most probable one, is that the government is making secret tests of its machines while another one is that some Custer county man has outstipped the inventive world with a machine that can make long flights in stiff winds, over the loftiest mountain peaks in the Rocky Mountain region. Others claim that the four people who have witnessed the flights of the machines have been the victims of a strange mirage, but the fact that all four have been first hand witnesses, by the unmistakable sound of a rapidly propelled air craft disproves this theory.
