

NOTHING DONE ON LOST RIVER PROBLEM

Claim Made That 150 Settlers Would Be Deprived of Rights

WOULD LOSE LANDS IF STATE ENTERED INTO CONTRACT

Board Holds Hearing on the Matter
But Defers Action Until A Later Date.

—More than 800 persons, representing about 150 settlers, will be obligated to forsake their claims on Big Lost river and Antelope creek, turning them to the government domain about twenty-eight thousand acres of land, if the state should enter into a contract with the Utah Construction company for the rebuilding of the Big Lost river project, according to Senator Rabe. Macbeth, who addressed the state legislature Tuesday afternoon.

Senator Macbeth said the settlers, Blaine and Custer counties intend to sue the state to the land, but he said the state should sue the settlers.

Utah Construction company from taking water from Big Lost river and Alope creek, which, the senator contends, is what the construction company intends to do should the contract be submitted by it to the land board.

"It will simply mean that the cow will have to determine whether Utah Construction company's water rights, taken out in 1906 when it was granted fifty thousand inches from Big Lost river and five thousand inches from Antelope creek, are of greater weight than the right of settlers, who have come in, tilled the lands, built their homes and otherwise helped build up the state since their arrival. It is the opinion of the people here that the only way to mean by this that every settler in Blaine and Custer counties will tribute toward determining U rights. Because the construction company has done nothing all these years, is no sign the rights of these settlers can be swept away."

Mr. Macbeth said that under water rights granted to the consteven become necessary to construct a dam, and that the natural flow of the Big Lost river and Antelope would be ample to irrigate the first unit of twenty thousand acres—would mean he said, that practically $750,000 worth of water rights would be required.

be illegally transferred from Blaine and Custer county settlers irrigate the first unit of the construction company's proposed work, that the construction company will not be obliged to pay out a dollar to transfer the water.

Charles C. Sherman, representative of the settlers on one of the tracts, said the proposed contract was "pernicious." Furthermore, he said, it was a question as to whether the construction company could furnish two acre feet of water per acre for the first year.

of twenty thousand acres. He declared that there were times when the settlers would be obliged to more than the amount mentioned in the contract. Asked by the attorney general if he thought the land would be justified in signing the tract with the construction company providing the company and state engineer could demonstrate that it was not possible to furnish more than one acre foot of water per acre, he replied in the affirmative.

construction company, said that was the only method he knew of which the construction company would use that the settler was in good faith. I thought, however, that after the payment there should be no further demands outside of interest for sibly three or five years. This money, however, was up to the construction company; and not up to him to do. He said the construction company contemplated a bond of 5 per cent. of the estimated cost of the construction work.

No action was taken by the board regarding the contract. The matter was more in the nature of a hearing and it is likely the subject will be brought before the board again on an early date.

Unofficial estimates have been compiled, giving the population of the United States—New Year 1916—compared with the censuses of 1910. The population state of Idaho is estimated at 41,000 compared with 38,000 in 1910. Increase for the past year was 1000.

Continental United States, not including Porto Rico, Alaska, Hawaii, etc., shows an estimated population of 101,362,510 on New Year's day of 1913.

compared with 99,590,231 a year ago. The increase for the year of 1919 was 1.6 per cent. At the same time, in 1910, the population was 96,116,140, showing an increase to the present time of 9,326,949.

Monthly Payment CITY LOANS

It is very, very easy for a concern to advertise "this has been the biggest year in our history," "our business is steadily improving," etc. And it is also very easy for you to doubt such assertions, isn't it? Naturally, for they are generalities, at best, without one concrete fact for your consideration.

Personally, we are never greatly impressed by sweeping assertions of great gains—unless specific proof is offered. A few definite statements are far more convincing to us than a page of paragraphs without figures for thoughtful comparison.

So we will not waste space in telling you whether our business is big or little, or even whether it is growing. We simply state one fact and from it you will draw your own conclusion.

During the year 1915 we had in window displays the portraits of over 600 different people. We wish we had three times the window space; we could easily fill it without exhausting the samples of our every-day work. You've seen the window displays; there was no room for hundreds of other portraits just as beautiful. Come and we will show them to you, as many of them, as you want to see.

20TH CENTURY MEMBERS ENJOY LEGISLATIVE DAY PROGRAM

The principal feature of Legislative Day at the Twentieth Century club yesterday afternoon was an address by Hon. M. J. Sweely, the object of which was to give the members a better understanding of the making of laws in their own state. That the ladies appreciated the effort was evidenced by the large number in attendance. Each of whom felt repaid in the knowledge gained by the lucid manner in which the speaker handled his subject.

Opening the program Miss Nellie Teasdale sang three numbers from the specially composed songs of Cadman Miss Teasdale's expression was such as to put the very best of the composer into his productions, as was different from the meaningless jingles so frequently heard in modern music. Miss Vesta Thomas was the able accompanist. At the close of the program the singer announced that Cadman would be in Salt Lake sometime during the middle of March and craved he be secured to give a concert in Twin Falls if the proper guarantee can be arranged. The co-operation of the club will probably be given in furthering the movement.

Another musical number was instrumental duet by Misses Hopley and Walker, a very pleasing selection and well rendered.

At a business meeting following the question of the annual colonial ball was discussed and by unanimous decision was that the ball be given sometime during the early part of February.

The president announced a very important business meeting for January 15th and urged every member to be present.

SOCIETY NOTES

Society items for this column will be gladly received by The Times. Phone 125-W. The Society Editor.

In Masonic hall last Friday night, twenty couples enjoyed the regular club dance.

The members of the Episcopalian choir will hold an audition at the Justus Inn Friday night. An informal dance will follow. A silver offering will be taken.

Eight ladies enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. Newnam last Friday afternoon at a luncheon, followed by an informal afternoon. A potluck plant occupied the center of the table.

Mrs. Herrington was hostess to the Princess club last Thursday afternoon. The afternoon, as usual, was devoted to fancy work and conversation, after which light refreshments were served.

Mrs. F. F. Kenney entertained two tables at cards Wednesday afternoon. Quits were limited to a few intimate friends. Mrs. Cronin won first prize for high score. Mrs. Kenney served a two-course luncheon after the game.

Mrs. Ivan Price entertained the members of the Kimberly Road club last Wednesday. Mrs. Crawford had charge of the program, which consisted of vocal by Miss Porterford, a talk by Mrs. Baynor and a reading by Mrs. Stearns. Eighteen members were present.

A two-course luncheon was served after the program. The next meeting will be held the first Wednesday in February.

Mrs. C. H. Shilston was hostess for the Acacia club at the regular meeting Wednesday afternoon of this week. The meeting was called Domestic Day and in place of the regular program the time was spent in sewing. The guests responded to roll call with the names of the members. Mrs. Shilston served a dainty luncheon. The next meeting of the club will be held with Mrs. Stover, Wednesday, January 26.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Twice-a-Week Times Takes Lead In Circulation in This Section of Idaho

THE CIRCULATION OF THE TIMES EXCEEDS THAT OF ANY OTHER NEWSPAPER—WEEKLY, SEMI-WEEKLY OR DAILY—PUBLISHED IN THIS SECTION OF THE STATE.

We are able to make this announcement, which will be of special interest to advertisers who wish to reach the people of this section, by reason of the addition of the subscription list of THE HERALD, the Salmon tract newspaper, to the circulation of THE TIMES.

The recent change in management, whereby the editor and publisher of THE HERALD assumed the management of THE TIMES, necessitates the consolidation of the two circulations.

THE HERALD is the only county paper having an extensive circulation in the southern portions of the county, and the addition of its list of subscribers to that of THE TIMES extends the circulation of the TWICE-A-WEEK publication especially to the towns of ROGERSON, AMSTERDAM, HOLLISTER, BERGEL, and greatly increases the Twin Falls city as well as rural circulation. After Saturday's issue the publication of THE HERALD will be discontinued.

"ALL THE NEWS FIRST" will be our slogan. To promote the interests of this big section of southern Idaho our most sincere desire: To publish a complete newspaper, our aim.

"A reliable newspaper with the largest circulation" is the combination that makes THE TIMES the best and cheapest advertising medium; reaching the greatest number of people with the least expense.

The solution of your advertising problem is THE TWICE-A-WEEK TIMES—the complete newspaper.

THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY

ent I'll use the ready cash. And now, if you don't mind, for it is getting so warm morning, I will leave you."

"No, I won't go out the front door," he remarked as they walked from the room and down the grand staircase in the silent mansion. "I'll go out the way I came in. It's good luck."

In the library Arthur sank again into the easy chair. Not one word had he spoken—He was ready to part with the blackmailer as he was ready to part with life itself—without fear and without hope.

At the thought his eyes fell upon the brassy glass, the polished dial upon which he was to drink his toast to Death.

Luke's eyes followed him. "Why, I declare," he cried, with an air of clumsy playfulness. "I actually forgot to take my drink with my coffee!" He picked up the glass. "At last!" he said. "The Romany Rye drinks your good health!"

Arthur stirred as though to stop him, but he was without fear and without hope. "This was destiny. What man may read the book of his fate? It was gypsyismet that Luke and not he was to pledge the toast to Death."

Luke drained the liquid at a gulp, then licked his lips. "Quite a stuff that!" he said. "Why, curse it, it burns like acid!" He looked at Hagar's son, and plain as words he read what was in the dark eyes of the other.

"It was a trap!" he shrieked at the gypsy grinning, treacherous face. It was a trap! A gypsy trick! You have poisoned me!"

And, reeling and cursing and grasping at himself as though to stay the agony that burned at his throat, Luke staggered through the window low to the lawn and across the grass plot to the driveway at the back of the mansion.

And then a great glare of light played upon him like a mighty beam of incandescence, and with a rasping shriek from the electric horn Blair's heavy roadster tore around the corner of the great mansion and in a flash had struck the poisoned man, crashing in his face and leaving him a huddled, quivering mass in the roadway.

John Powell clutched at his heart. In the agony of the moment his soul seemed to leap from him as he peered from behind the window shade at this last tragic tale of Death, the guardian of the diamond from the sky! There was a shriek from Virginia as the swift auto struck the poisoned his way through the mark before dawn to the house. Bringing out the great diamond, she chime, he rose with it and stepped upon the wings of the morning.

Out to sea, far out! This was a death to die! But the wings of the morning waited exultation to his soul. He caught the dusk of his degradation and turned and wheeled his distant flight—clear of mind and clean of soul again!

On the wings of the morning, and far below a gypsy caravan.

"Father!" he thought. "Father, my beloved, and Hagar, my dear mother!" He plunged. He saw in the bright light of the day that now filled the earth the crystal swarming out, and he could discern the slight figure of Esther.

Then he felt the air rise up on either side as he sank down like a plummet. And so he went down down—sinking, he believed, the outstricken arms and upturned face of Esther—without fear and without hope.

At the mansion of the late John Powell a wreath of flowers lay on the door. The newspapers scowled sensitively of his death and the strange story Blair had disclosed that the mad millionaire, who took poison and threw himself in the way of an onrushing automobile, was not John Powell, but Arthur Stanley.

The Supposed Death of Arthur Stanley.
fugitive from justice in Virginia and left to an English courier and the diamond from the sky!

A gypsy hunchback riding to the dead man's house on a travel-tried horse is told all this—the news sadly away. How shall he take such a message to a dying mother?

Silencing the Questioners.
A French gentleman who has been with M. de Talleyrand for twenty years accompanied him to the congress at Vienna after Napoleon's exile to Elba. People naturally concluded that Talleyrand's intimacy had made him familiar with a number of particulars of the minister's life and bearing; also upon the events with which he had been mixed up. Worried with questions, the friend invariably replied that he knew nothing, but the questioners would not be satisfied and returned to the charge.

"Very well," finally said Talleyrand's confidant; "I'll tell you a peculiar and altogether unknown fact in connection with M. de Talleyrand. Since Louis XV. he's the only man who can open a soft boiled egg with one backward stroke of his knife without spilling a drop of the contents of the shell. That is the only peculiarity I know in connection with him."

Discretion had scored a decisive victory. From that moment the questions ceased.

Outmatched.
"Did you hear about the row round at Penbecker's house last night?" Mr. Jones asked his wife as they sat at supper.

"No," said the lady much interested. "What happened?"

"Penbecker tried to thrash his wife, and the police were called just in time to arrest a tragedy."

"Oh, the brute! Did they take him to prison?"

"No; they carried him round to the hospital," New York Journal.

Hungry Man (to man behind the counter)—Bottle of milk and Graham crackers.

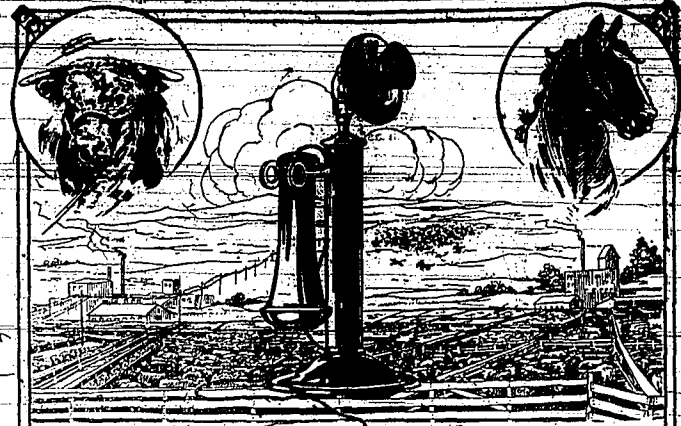

"Yes, sir. Want a bowl with it?"

"No; but I want to eat the supper, and I'll drink through it."

"Yes, sir. Have a spoon with it?"

"Oh, no. I always eat milk with a knife."

"Yes, sir. Spoon's safer, though. You're liable to cut yourself with a knife."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

The Stock Industry and the Telephone

No single industry derives more benefit from a comprehensive telephone service than does the stock business.

Telephone service unites the breeder, the shipper and the market in a community of interest.

The market uses telephone service in canvassing the territory of supply.

The breeder uses telephone service in keeping in touch with demand.

The shipper uses telephone service to keep himself informed as to market conditions.

The ranchman uses telephone service in the economical handling of his stock on the range—in feeding, in negotiations with buyers and in securing cars and making other shipping arrangements.

Altogether, comprehensive telephone service is a valuable factor in the growth and development of the stock industry.

TALKS ON THRIFT

Take the Proposition to Your Banker.

Unless all signs fail, the one certain result of the European war is going to be a general stimulus to American industry. Our mills are running to full capacity, our crops are bumper crops, our mines are gorged with money; our people employed at good wages and constantly shorter hours, making things for Europe to eat, and wear and shoot. We shall have great prosperity.

With prosperity comes the promoter, trying to get some of that prosperity without working for it. He will have great schemes to make you (and himself rich) by first—then banker, for vice versa.

Fallen by the thousands will follow in the wake of prosperity all seeking to separate you from your money. The warning is particularly opportune now. Beware the promoter. If you are offered any scheme to make money, take it to your banker. If it offers over six per cent, turn it down on general principles. The promoter finds poor pickings when you take his proposition to the bank man. Ask the banker: Would you go into this with the bank's money? And if he wouldn't—don't you.

Years ago a Western concern organized a bank and offered the stock. It was a clever scheme—a good scheme, and a profitable one. It had much merit and should have gone to a better end. But it was too good, and the promoter could not stand the prosperity it brought him.

"Two hard working miners got interested and bought the stock of the bank. He paid ten per cent, and you only four, and meantime they made the stock will double in value in a year." "Yes, all that may be true," said the banker, "but you're not strong enough to take the risk and for the possible profit you can afford to chance a probable loss." They went in and in less than six months the bank went broke and the miners never went broke with it—they had plunged. Today that stock lies hidden in tin boxes, mute evidence of what happened when you go against the advice of your banker.

A certain steamship captain never carried more than a hundred dollars a month, and yet in the course of the war five years he was able to raise a family, dress and educate them, provide a handsome home, clear of debt for them, and leave his widow with a large sum of money. He was a good man—all this on a hundred a month. He saved half he earned. The secret may have lain with the wife, or with him; or with both; but the result was there, just the same. What this man did you can do. He stuck close to the bank;

he bought his home and paid for it by degrees; carried a fair amount of insurance, never tried any schemes, and held fast to what he got.

The really big things are not hawked about the streets like vegetables. The big deals are not for the "dear public." Henry Ford never offered his stock broadsheet. A certain New York undertaker (now bankrupt) did—Standard Oil never went with him in hand, seeking those who would buy. Big things are for the few, little things for the many.

You worked pretty hard for your money, and it is right to work for it. Not overwork, but just keep constantly busy. It will work right and fully for compound interest—strongly; but if you work it too hard, it will, like the faithful old horse, keep going for a time, but eventually the you—Don't try the impossible. For per cent, with safety is better than the per cent, with risk. Don't lose your principal trying to bet big interest. You must sacrifice one of two things: principle or interest. Keep safe, your income, will be small but sure, but if you seek large returns, you must of a certainty jeopardize your principal—betting much, your goal, by the jumps that lead you on the ground each time, rather than that flying leaps in the dark. Thrift consists in keeping some good things alone. The promoter is one. His best scheme is not good enough for you.

THEATRICAL NEWS

EXCITING PLOT OF "SAVED BY WIRELESS"

New Triangle Keystone Play an Amazing Extravaganza of Espionage and War Preparation.

Mack Swain plays the part of an international secret service man in the amazing extravaganza of espionage, "Saved by Wireless." The Triangle Keystone play, presented at the Orpheum this Friday and Saturday, the chief spy (Mack Swain) and his transitory aid (Charles Conklin) are two international secret service men of questionable reputation. They have taken up headquarters in an underground refuge, from which they direct their operations. They are seeking to steal a valuable code book from the minister of war (Dick Cogan). Cogan's Butler is in league with the two spies and keeps them in touch with developments at headquarters.

By a forest-leader Conklin gains access to the prime minister. He falls in love with that dignitary's daughter (Gloria Grey). The better-attended code book from the minister and turns it over to Swain. They force the captured Conklin to return to the den.

The latter attempts to blow up the yacht on which Harry, the lover of the girl is coming. Conklin sends a wireless to the boat, is discovered by Swain and bound and gagged. Swain races to the light house, where he hopes to turn off the lights, thus causing the yacht to be wrecked. His auto is pursued by a traffic policeman with a motorcycle. Conklin is freed by the secretary, chatters an aeroplane and hastens to the lighthouse.

Cogan suspects Harry of stealing the code book and sets the police after the boat. Harry and the girl decide to flee. There is a fight in the air between Conklin and Swain, in which Swain is kicked from a rope from the aeroplane and drops on the yacht. He is shown up in the explosion that causes Conklin to rescue the girl from the water, but she turns him down for Harry. Conklin weeps out his anguish on the shoulder of the forgiving prime minister.

MATRYRS OF THE ALAMO

"Remember the Alamo!" long the rallying cry in the affairs in Texas between Americans and Mexicans, leads today to the thrilling historical drama of early days in Texas, "Matryrs of the Alamo" to appear at the Orpheum this Friday. Santa Anna, dictator of Mexico, comes to San Antonio, Texas, and there ensues a series of outrages upon Americans—living there.

The wife of Captain Dickinson is lured by one of the dictators officers. When her husband goes to demand satisfaction he is thrown into jail. There are introduced Bowie, Crockett and Silas Smith. The last of the trio, played by Sam De Grasse, falls in love with the dictators daughter (Juanita Hanson). These leaders of the Texans successfully conceal their arms when Santa Anna issues a proclamation confiscating all weapons. With these arms the Texans capture Santa Anna, a combined mission and fort.

Santa Anna, who has been away during the capture of the fort, returns and leads a desperate resistance the fort is taken. Only Silas Smith, who had been sent to San Houston for aid, Mrs. Dickinson and her baby and the old soldier's daughter are spared.

Houston hears of the fate of the defenders of the Alamo when Mrs. Dickinson and her child ride into his camp with his small force. He gives battle to Santa Anna's army on the San Jacinto river. The 600 Mexicans are routed by the few hundred Texans and Santa Anna is taken prisoner. He is released only after he has agreed to grant the independence of Texas.

FAMOUS PHOTOPLAY AT THE 1918 NEXT WEEK

The story of "The Regeneration" the memory of Owen Kildare and of the Mamie Rose, who had redeemed him from the life of a drunkard and an outcast, will be seen by millions on the screen when William Fox presents this remarkable and unusual story to the world.

No expense has been spared to make "The Regeneration" one of the strongest pictures that has ever been filmed. Under such a great director as R. A. Walsh and with scenes and settings on which no cost was spared, with types from the Bowery that it took weeks and months to secure and in fact with everything as nearly human as human ingenuity can make it, this picture is predicted, will be an epoch in the film world. There are scenes of New York life that are too human and too perfect to describe by words. The part of Mamie Rose is taken by
