IS STRANGER THAN FICTION

Thomas Trusler, Sent Back to Front
From Hospital, Falls to Recall His Name and Is Reported Missing
—Forgetful of Parents and Falls in Love With Her
"All Over Again."

New York, Feb. 1.—A man played many strange pranks with the men fighting in Europe, but none perhaps is more curious than that in which Thomas F. Trusler figures. Mr. Trusler, who is stopping at a hotel, was a gunner in the Third brigade, Canadian field artillery.

The concussion from a shell which struck the ground near him last winter caused him to lose all recollection of the past. Consequently, his fiancée in Montreal mourned him for dead, and even after he learned his identity through a scar on his right foot he did not remember her or his parents.

However, as he explained recently, he took his parents' word that they were his father and mother, and, although he does not recall his first proposal, he said he has fallen in love all over again with the woman he is to have married and soon he hopes to make her his bride.

Although Sir Frederick Trusler, King George's surgeon, is said to have attempted to restore his memory by means of hypnosis, Mr. Trusler, who is twenty-one years old, recalls nothing of his past prior to the war, but his mind became blank from the concussion, and when he returned to Canada in the early autumn because of his wound it was necessary for him to relearn the way about his native city of Montreal and to be introduced to lifelong boyhood friends and schoolmates.

Under fire at Ypres.
The young gunner went with the first Canadian contingent which landed in France a year ago. At the time the German aerial staff was perfecting its schemes to break through to Calais by way of Ypres. Mr. Trusler first came under fire near Vimmer, though, just west of Ypres. His division was called a reserve force.

"I have been told by men who served with me on my gun that we all saw a huge German aeroplane fly over us," Mr. Trusler said. "Soon thereafter there came a rain of high explosive shells from his German gun. Several of our boys were killed, and the fact that I was not was a miracle. One of the shells fell within ten or twenty feet of me. I was told, but did not explode. The concussion, however, was terrific, and it dazed and stupefied me."

"I remember awakening in a base hospital with the wounded all about me. I felt myself all over and could find nothing amiss, so I went up to my cot. Then I got out of it and stood up and asked why I was there. A physician told me what had happened to me and sent me back to my brigade, which he located by the insignia on my uniform. When I got back I did not seem to recollect anything or any body."

"Some of the men of my gun company saw me and took me back to my quarters. It was necessary for me to make my story to an Englishman. They called me 'Howie'—a nickname—and soon I became known as 'Howie Trusler.' That fact made it difficult for my parents to locate me, because when I was asked my name I spelled it 'Trusler' because I did not recall anybody to know that I couldn't recall where I came from or who I was."

Is Reported Missing.
"Consequently T. F. Trusler went on the rolls of the missing. Consequently, I failed to get mail from my fiancée and my parents. It was not until last summer when I was wounded in the leg so badly that I was sent to England that I made any attempt to find out who I was. I confided my story to an Englishman of high rank who was interested in the hospital. She made inquiries among the officers of my brigade who remembered 'Trusler' who came out with the Canadians."

"My parents were communicated with and my mother remembered an old scar on my foot. So sure enough the scar was there. Even when I returned to Montreal I didn't recognize my mother and I don't yet. I learned I was engaged to be married before I left for the front and on my return home, my fiancée was at the station with my mother and father. I didn't recognize any of them, but they took me home."

Here Mr. Trusler admitted that he had fallen in love "all over again" and with the same girl.
Although the gunner cannot remember what happened before January of last year, he has a vivid recollection of what has happened since, and his descriptions of the battle of Ypres in April and of the effect of the poison gases used by the Germans is most vivid.

"About five o'clock of the evening of April 22," he said, "we were getting quite bored, for we were in the reserve force along the Poperinghe road, three miles west of Ypres. The situation was broken by the sudden appearance of a German French colonial troops, Singhaese and Zouaves, rushing in from the front trenches, clutching at their throats, holding their sides, rolling on the ground, gasping for breath, blood shot and staring, many of them bleeding at the mouth, but most of them unable to explain the cause of their peculiar actions."

Apophizing Gas Cloud.
"Along with them came scores of refugees, men, women and children, sleeping in the parks at night, living in their burning and wrecked homes. At that time we had never heard of apophizing gas and were at a loss to make out what it all meant."

The order 'stand to your arms' was quickly passed along to the reserves. The Montreal Highlanders were the first to get on the move. It takes longer to get on the move, and the move, and while we were working at feverish haste the Highlanders went by, each man singing and smiling, although they must have known that many of them would never return."

"At seven o'clock the artillery forces were all ready and waiting for the order to move forward. I shall never forget the scene at the moment. From the city of Ypres there arose a high in the air, a burst of flames, white overhead shells burst by the hundreds, and in our ears was the din of falling shells and all sorts of indescribable noises."

"When the order came to move forward we surged out across the cheer and a song. It was necessary for us to make a detour south of Ypres in order to get to the main road leading to our damaged front. It also was necessary to cross the Yser canal about half a mile south of the town on a pontoon bridge. The first gun got over safely, when along came a German shell and destroyed it."

"Under a deadly fire, for the German shells hit the range, we waited while the engineers worked to construct another bridge. Two long thick poles were placed across the narrow canal and crossways on them timbers and logs were piled. The second gun was acrossed, but the third was upset by a rolling log, the cannon carriage falling on one side of the narrow bridge and the six horses on the other. While the cannon and horses seemed to be assessing this way and that across the bridge a shell put an end to all the trouble."

Into Hurricane of Fire.
"Then a third bridge was constructed, and my gun went across. By this time the glare from the burned town was so bright that I was wondering just what was ahead of us when an aeroplane high above dropped a star shell. This was followed by a perfect hurricane of shells, and the last gun to attempt the crossing went into the water. The crossing force ran into a murderous gunfire from German infantry and machine guns. My gun and others of our battery were buried into this open fire-swept field, swung around and in less than two minutes opened fire on the Germans."

"Each of our shells contained 300 bullets, and at a range of 250 yards one can readily imagine how the Germans were 'battered.' The German infantry remained hidden behind a deep fringe of trees with their own dead piled up against them. Our guns could not do effective work because of the trees. Therefore we were ordered to use high explosive shells."

"I shall never forget how those shells were brought to us. The horses on the ammunition supply wagon became crazed and ran away. They dashed back and forth of the German lines, and one brave rider—no one ever knew who he was—shot the first two horses dead. The wagon rolled over them and him. Then there was an explosion, for the wagon, hit a mine, was blown to bits. The explosion wrought havoc among the Germans and our infantry, quickly following up the advantage, drove the Germans out of the woods."

"Meanwhile our line was badly pressed back. Just after the arrival of fresh British and Canadian our battery was ordered there. We went right into the town. But on and on came the German infantry, and the retreat was sounded."

Spying Is Dangerous.

"The Germans are very clever at it, and one method of sending news between the lines is by trained dogs. One night one of our sentries saw a dog dart past him. He called to the animal, thinking the dog would make an excellent mascot for the battery. The dog came back, a big, fat, tall and the sentry took him to his quarters."

"The following morning one of the men remarked on the thickness of the plain leather collar worn by the dog. An examination revealed that the collar was hollow, and in it we found a message in cipher. Instantly an officer was summoned, the dog was put on a long wire leash and driven out of camp. He went direct to a barber shop, where the men were in the habit of lounging and talking when off duty. The barber, whom we thought to be a Belgian, was a German spy and afterward was put to death."

TALKS ON THRIFT

HOLD FAST TO WHAT YOU HAVE
If there is anything more pathetic than the man who has lost his home or his money, it is the man who has a home and did not appreciate it. The world is full of such men, and every town has its "has been" who once "were" and could not keep. It is a sad commentary on human life that man must work and sacrifice to have, practice thrift, for years, accumulate a competence, and for one reason or another lose it all, and begin over again worse by far except for the experience.

Men who were once citizens of affluence will be found in the bread line, sleeping in the parks at night, living on relatives, in the poorhouse, selling shoestrings on Broadway, when by better management they might have been in comfortable circumstances.

There are two principal reasons why men lose what they have acquired. First, by being an easy mark, lending to friends and relatives and unable to say "no" to a request for help for an alluring proposition. Second, the desire to make money fast—not by gambling, but by trying to get a large income from a small principal. The stories of men who have acquired considerable money, and in the doing make it grow fast have lost it all, would fill a book and no nation is more opportune than this: Hold fast to what you have.

A few basic and common-sense rules will, if persistently followed, save those who heed them many a pang of regret.

First: Do not lend your friends. Friendship loans are bad; it is a delicate matter to ask for money.

Second: Never endorse a note for anybody. More losses and business disasters have come about through lending one's name to a promissory note than perhaps any single cause. If you want to help a friend and have the money to spare better make a gift outright and forget it than try to deceive yourself that it is a loan. If you can't keep your friends without lending them money better lose them; friends are cheaper made than money.

Third: Put your money in a bank and leave it there. Experience has proven that the average man can do no better than bank his money, for in making private investments—risk—lends and loses often follows. There are good banks, and one is no doubt in your town, and bank books are mighty good investments.

Fourth: If you accumulate enough to warrant an investment be satisfied with five per cent, and never aim to get more than six. Danger lies beyond six per cent.

Fifth: Experience has again proven the country over that first mortgages on improved property at not over 60 per cent of a fair market value is the most satisfactory form of investment and yields the highest returns compatible with safety. Savings banks make a specialty of mortgage loans, and you can follow their lead with safety.

Sixth: Before making any investment, ask your banker if it is worth while and if he would make it, and if not legal question it carefully, and if he turns it down refuse it. Seventh: Never buy and sell what you do not see. Millions have been lost in buying lots on the installment plan, particularly in large cities. The promoter will make the profit, not you. These rules are simple, and easily followed. You won't go wrong if you heed them. They come out of bitter experience, and you should pay the same price for knowledge other men have paid? Get all you can—honestly, and keep it when once it is yours.

A SOUND ARTICLE.

"The people of this country have at length awakened to a realization of the fact that they are paying out of their own pockets either directly or indirectly every cent of the vast sum that congress appropriates each year," says former Senator Theodore E. Burton, in an article on our waterways in the January Munsey. "The article in question is a powerful and entirely commendable plea for the adoption of system in the expenditure of money for internal improvements."

The theory of internal improvements, like the theory of protection, originated with the Federalists, who borrowed both from European nations, and like protection it was given definite shape by Henry Clay, who did not foresee the "porkbarrel" method which was at once immediately injected into both systems. It was opposed by Jefferson on constitutional grounds, although that great Democrat favored a constitutional amendment permitting the expenditure of money for the purpose. It was later opposed on the same grounds by Jackson, whose keen practical mind grasped the fact that it might be made the foundation for a systematic looting of the people.

While it should perhaps be as superfluous as reference to the existence of the law of gravitation, the bald statement of the self-evident fact that Americans, directly or indirectly pay all taxes that go into the United States treasury, would perhaps have shocked some of the ultra protectionists if uttered a few years ago, when the comfortable theory was advanced that if a tariff of 110 per cent were levied, the foreigner would not only turn over all the proceeds of his sale, but would pay 10 per cent extra indefinitely for the privilege of getting people here to buy his wares. This theory which was easily popular after Cleveland asked a reduction of taxation in 1887 to put down the enormous surplus that had accumulated during his first term, by those who opposed such reduction, but is disappearing through the education disseminated by such men as Burton. The Ohio statesman stands no chance of being the Republican presidential nominee, but he is entitled to the honor of being a fair antagonist. His work on panics has earned him a worldwide reputation among scholars and it is one of the few books recognized as authority on both sides of the Atlantic. It might be remarked that it does not lay the blame for hard times at the door of the Democratic party.

Articles like the one under discussion avoid no road by all American voters. It is sound in principle and will lead to a better understanding of the great issues before the people demanding solution.

THE WAR CRY.

Just now invective is being directed against President Wilson just as it was formerly used against other famous presidents, because he failed to hurry this country into a war with foreign nations. President Madison, who had the war of 1812 because he endeavored to settle the dispute with England by means of diplomacy. England finally yielded some of the main points in controversy and decided to tacitly drop the others, but after this decision had been reached in London and before news of the change of policy there could reach this country, war was declared by congress. This struggle of nearly thirty years might have been avoided with just a little more patience.

When Grover Cleveland was president the second time, some politicians following the lead of the predatory Hearst, demanded intervention. The president, and Secretary of State Olney, had shown plenty of backbone in the Venezuelan affair, but this did not prevent their being made the target for intemperate attacks by party men. However, they had courage enough not to be swept off their feet by the clamor. President McKinley and Secretary of State Sherman followed in the footsteps of their predecessors for fourteen months and actually succeeded by diplomacy in making arrangements for satisfactory autonomy with Spain. The blowing up of the Maine, from whatever cause, aroused popular sentiment to such an extent that congress sent an ultimatum to Spain just at the time McKinley and Sherman were making final diplomatic arrangements with Madrid.

The effect of this ultimatum ought to be a lesson to those who say that an arbitrary stand will always secure the result desired. The Spanish foreign office felt that Spain could not yield with honor and accepted the challenge, thus destroying the work of two national administrations of different political parties.

President Wilson is being urged to take a course which would inevitably bring war, just as Madison, Cleveland and McKinley were. He will get the results desired by diplomacy as they would have done, if the nation is not pushed into a war by the designing or the partisan. It is up to the people to see to it that this last result is not accomplished.

THE PRESIDENT IN PANOLY.

Something of the same motive which has caused President Wilson to deliver in person and to read to the assembled congress his annual and other messages, is apparent in his announced program of making an extensive tour of the country for the purpose of speaking directly to the people on the question of national defense. It is an unusual proceeding, and by many will be regarded not only as undignified but also as a palpable play for popularity. A general election is coming on this fall, and President Wilson is the principal if not the only candidate of his party for the office of chief magistrate. Critics of his course, whether in his own party or in the ranks of his opponents will be quick to pounce upon his proposed plan as without precedent in our political history as a quite unnecessary and unworthy in an occupant of the presidential chair. It has almost become a fixed rule in propriety that even the nominee for the high office—and much more the incumbent—should hold himself in dignified seclusion during the campaign, and allow his lieutenants to do the "stumping" and "spell binding" for him.

There is no reason, however, either in good sense or good manners, why the president should not do his own talking to the electorate. While there may be arduous in his following who can more fluently roll off the cooling sentences, or more pleasantly tickle the ears of the populace, there is no sound command so respectful a heeding of the majority which does not invest his position is sure to have its effect, and the simple fact that he deems the question important enough to receive his personal championship, will win for the subject a more thoughtful consideration than could otherwise be secured. Of course there will be the suspicion that a measure of politics is mingled with the statesmanship, and the likelihood that partisanship and personalities may develop in the progress of the debate. But on the whole these are minor objections compared with the advantages which the proposition offers. No American ever attains a place of such loftiness that he cannot be profited by stopping down, among the people and explaining his policies with his own tongue and not the incumbent of or inspiring for office. If it fit it unless he has the courage of his convictions and the willingness to defend them.—Deseret News (Salt Lake City).

DAVIS CENSURES MANY IN SPEECH

had the young man shown the proper sense of propriety he never would have placed himself in the position of an appraiser of the lands. Turning to Democratic members, he said that this gentleman in entering office had appointed a prominent editor as his private secretary. Again the speaker would make a charge that there was a corrupt bargain, but proper sense of propriety would have prevented it. Governor from placing him in a position where anyone could even think that he was purchasing editorial support. This was the only official act of the Democratic member of the board that was criticized enough the speaker dwelt at some length on alleged misstatements of the governor while a candidate, notably an alleged statement that a certain Republican legislature had created the office of inspector "as if the people had not been stung enough already" when, as a matter of fact, the office had been created years before. He also censured the governor for denouncing the creation of what he called the "public utility commission," when, he said, the governor as a business man in Boise at the time then the commission was created had asked for its creation. Moreover, after election the governor had not asked the abolishment of this "useless" commission. All this according to the speaker, was not keeping good faith with the people.

The speaker then charged that some newspapers of the state had refused to print legitimate news unless paid for it and others had even sold their editorial columns. This was all wrong. A candidate had a right to pay for a signed statement or one marked "advertisement," and a paper had a right to accept money for such publication, but no newspaper had a right to demand money for the publication of legitimate news and no candidate had a right to pay for such publication. The speaker said that he had been "twitted" with receiving Democratic money for the Idaho Free Press. He had asked the editor of that paper to what instance the charge had reference, and the case of the publicity; then the candidacy of Captain Davis at American Falls by the Democratic newspaper had been cited. The speaker said that the Republican paper there had ignored his candidacy, while the Democratic paper had treated it as a matter of legitimate news.

Caplain Davis promised in some detail to avoid the commission of the transgressions which he had denounced in others. He then promised to reduce the expenses of the campaign by abolishing the position of private secretary. He said that other private secretaries at the state capital should be abolished and if they were, and their abolishment should start a movement for retrenchment which should extend to all the counties, so that all useless offices in the state and the counties should be abolished, the saving altogether would be, he figured, $200,000. He said some time ago a man came to him and told him that "they" meaning certain active politicians, had decided to have a caucus to elect a new candidate for the Republican primaries, and told him that if he would take the position of attorney general, he would have it and that "they" would get him in line for the governorship at the expiration of the term of a certain man who would be elected. He then said "they" intended to nominate for governor. If Davis would agree all would be well, otherwise "they" would vigorously contest to fight him. He said he told the politician that he would be in the race to the finish and that "they" could fight him as hard as they pleased. The speaker said, he would keep and would stay in the field to the end. M. J. Sweetey presided at the meeting.

SEAMAN'S BILL IS SUBMITTED TO CLUBS

Commercial Organizations Connected With National Chamber of Commerce to Pass on Measure.

The first referendum in which the Twin Falls Commercial club has been asked to participate since it became connected with the National Chamber of Commerce is in regard to the Seaman's law, originally known as the La Follette bill, passed unanimously by the last congress and signed by President Wilson. The amendment, suspension and of which there has been considerable agitation, being the subject of four questions bearing on the subject submitted, on each of which the organization is to pass favorably or unfavorably. The vote must be in no later than March 11. A meeting to consider these questions was announced this morning. There will, it is understood, be certain resolutions offered touching legislation in regard to the national guard, presented at the meeting.

The questions to be passed upon are as follows: 1. The committee recommends that congress should be asked to suspend at once sections 4, 13 and 14 of the Seaman's Act which discriminate against American ports and American ships and which are relics of the American commerce, until such time as by international agreement the requirements of these sections can be equally applicable to the shipping of all nations. 2. The committee recommends that the Seaman's Act, dealing with desertion should be repealed and to foreign vessels, and that the state department should seek to have arranged some system of arrangement for desertion from foreign nations abolished. 3. The committee recommends that congress should be asked to request the president to withdraw at once the United States has given regarding the abrogation of treaties. 4. The committee recommends that a federal shipping board should be created. Speaking of the referendum feature of the chamber of commerce, secretary of the chamber, yesterday said that it was most beneficial since it gave the commercial organizations of the country an opportunity to express their opinion relative to the great questions of public policy, thus giving congress a chance to learn what the business community really had to say on commercial organizations (think of matters of legislation).

FILED HAPPENINGS
(From The Filer Journal).

Several footballs made the trip to Buhl Saturday night and were rewarded by seeing Filer trim Buhl to the tune of 22 to 28. The game was fast and hard played. The first half was Buhl's with a score of 23-14. Filer's defense was loose and Buhl scored easily. Hubbard, their star forward, gathering seven field goals. In the second half, Fisher went to guard and Showers to forward and the game turned. Hubbard failed to score a single field point. Beer shot five goals, Showers and Graves added 9 points more.

Filer people will recall a young man by the name of Lee Bryan White, who worked around town a little last summer. He went from here to Twin Falls where he wrote a number of checks without having any money to meet them in the bank. He then slipped into Oklahoma where he formerly lived, and brought him back. He entered a plea of guilty before Judge Barker, who sentenced him to 2 years term from 1 to 14 years in the penitentiary. The young man was not considered very strong mentally when he was here.

All the latest kinks in garage building. A trainload of sheep leaves here today for Chicago. The shippers are H. H. Schildman, W. H. Deimeler and Lincoln Bros. Mr. Schildman will visit it his parents at Warsaw before returning.

An Opportunity for Advertisers

A RELIABLE newspaper is always the best and cheapest advertising medium known to business. It publishes all the news that is "worth while," is read regularly by several thousand people; and its advertising reaches the greatest number of readers with the least expense possible. Results are therefore certain if the article or proposition advertised is meritorious; and a reliable newspaper will endeavor to discourage the use of its columns for the circulation of anything that it can not recommend to its readers.

TIMES ADVERTISING is especially productive because it has the right sort of a circulation. It is read regularly TWICE-A-WEEK by people who are interested in their own community; because all local activities, the things of greatest interest to the people of Twin Falls county, are entertainingly and authoritatively reported in THE TIMES; the happenings in all sections of the state are given its readers; and events of world-wide interest are to be found in its columns.

The people want and read a COMPLETE NEWSPAPER, and they find it in THE TIMES. They want their news while it is news so The Times is published TWICE-A-WEEK.

THESE ADVANTAGES are at your service—TIMES ADVERTISING secures them for you.

POCATELLO MAY GET FORD

ASSEMBLING PLANT
POCATELLO.—From present indications Pocatello is to become the location of a big assembling plant of the Ford Motor Car company for this section of the northwest territory, says the Pocatello Tribune.
C. E. Gordon, territorial representative for the Ford people, has been in the city for several days, looking over the situation, securing data regarding land, facilities, shipping rates and the like, and has conversed thoroughly with business men regarding the project, and is convinced that Pocatello is the ideal location for general distribution for the territory that is now covered by either Portland or Denver, and has points of superiority over Salt Lake, which is making a bid for the assembling plant.
Mr. Gordon, it is understood, has turned in the recommendation to his eastern connections, with the recommendation that Pocatello be selected for the establishment.

FATAL GUN ACCIDENT

IDAHIO FALLS—George G. Twitchell, 23 years of age, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Twitchell, of Pocatello, Blaine county, was shot to death at Pocatello yesterday by the accidental discharge of a rifle which he had been examining.
Monday, Twitchell, with a companion, was in the barnyard when he noticed a rifle hanging by the trigger guard from a wagon. The weight of the gun on the trigger discharged the cartridge. The heavy bullet struck the young man at the top of the left shoulder, passing downward through the body, tearing its way through the lungs, inflicting a mortal wound.

THEATRICAL NEWS

LORCH COMPANY DELIGHTS CAPACITY HOUSE

DIFFERENCE in a marked degree from the general run of stock companies that take to the road, the Lorch company which opened at the Lavington theatre for a week's run last night, excited over the promises of its present stage. Perhaps the latter gentlemen, being a native of Twin Falls, exercised more caution than press agents generally do, or else he just wanted to give the theatre goers of his home town a little surprise.

Without going into the special merits of the individual members of the cast of "Hill Wanted," Monday evening's offering, the most striking thing about the company is the fact that it consists of all talented actors. At least this much may be said of those appearing in the first performance. The ordinary stock company that goes on the road, usually consists of a "leading" man, or "woman," as the case may be, supported by a collection of would-be actors that reflect the brilliancy of the "lead" only by contrast. There was nothing of this in the Lorch company, and even if it must be said in the interest of truth that Mr. Lorch himself was not the center of all interest and admiration, it is very much to his credit that he associated with himself a cast that fits the play out of the general run of "harpistomers" and puts it on the level of the best road productions that occasionally tour this section. That the large audience that witnessed the opening production appreciated the entire company was evident from the frequent and generous applause given to each of the members of the cast.

SISSON WILL SPEAK TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES

State Commissioner of Education at Gathering at Buhl on February 8 and 9.

The office of the county superintendent, under the management of Miss Noel, is making special efforts to interest all in the forthcoming meeting of the school trustees at Buhl which will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, February 8 and 9. Those attending will also have a chance to get in touch with the agricultural extension school directors. In a letter written to J. W. Paris last week Dr. E. O. Sisson, who is to attend and lecture on the general subject of education, his letter follows:

Buhl, Idaho, Jan 23, 1916.
Mr. J. W. Paris,
Buhl, Idaho.
I have received your letter of the 20th, and program of the meeting of the school trustees. I am delighted to know that the trustees meeting is to be held at this time and that I shall be able to be present. I have already attended this school year's trustees' conventions in fourteen different counties; I expect to be present at five in the extreme north in March. We find that these meetings with the trustees are among the most profitable experiences we can have, so far as the state office is concerned, because in them we get in the closest touch with actual conditions through out the state.

I shall be glad to speak in the evening, as arranged, I shall be the topic in "Rural Schools" but I assume that it will be alright for me to treat the subject in a rather general way—not excluding the interests of our larger communities.

I shall plan to come on the noon train Tuesday. I should like an opportunity some time during the meeting of addressing the trustees briefly on some matters of common interest to them and to the state office.

Cordially yours,
EDWARD O. SISSON,
Commissioner of Education.

If you can't call and give us your listings, mail them to us. O. E. Evans and Co., 223 So. Shoshone St.—Adv.

After the operetta, the crowd went to the gymnasium, where a basketball game between Twin Falls H. S. and Piler H. S. was to be played. The game was fast throughout, and showed good team work by the local boys. This item was not well developed by the opponents, who lost places to make baskets by attempting too much individual play. Piler boys made a great number of shots from great distances, but failed to score by them. William Leiser was easily the star of the sportspedited event, since entering and although this is his first year on the varsity basketball team, his work was excellent. His specialty is throwing baskets from directly beneath the basket. When Twin Falls got the ball, a pass was generally made to Leiser, who was usually good for two points.

Ernest Osterander, captain of the team, did not have his horsehoof with him during the first half, and was not able to "throw in" any baskets; but he came back strong for the second half.

and made a number of sensational throws.
MacCracken and Howberry did good work in defending their goal, both being strong on intercepting passes. Bristol, "the human telegraph pole," had things his own way at center, and made several baskets.
The showing made last Friday indicates that we have a strong team to represent us, and a number of good boys to help them out. Dwight, who was called on to take Leiser's place during the last few minutes, showed good form, and is a promising young player.
The game was interrupted frequently by the umpire, who could not pass up an opportunity to show that he knows the rules. Mr. Bracken officiated a referee and gave both teams a very square deal. The final score stood 61 to 48.
