

GRUBB DISCUSSES CROP ROTATION

Noted Agriculturist Praises Spud
and Sugar Beet

SAYS THAT THEY ARE GREATEST CROPS FOR ROTATION.

Relates Declaration in Regard to Persian Walnut and its Great Possibilities.

"I have just received a letter from W. S. Gilford, known widely as 'Sunshine Gilford,' from California, in which he says that the recent story published in THE TIMES on the successful development of the Persian walnut grown on the L. H. Porrine ranch is the best advertising literature ever written in regard to 'Twin Falls,'" said Eugene H. Grubb, agriculturist for the Southern Pacific Railroad company, from whom the data for the story was obtained.

"Mr. Gilford, as you know," continued Mr. Grubb, "was the agricultural manager for the vast Kuhn interests in this country, and while these interests finally went into the hands of a receiver, his knowledge of their business and of the conditions of the country in which their investments lay was so thorough that he was retained by the receiver. That he testified to the importance of the Persian walnut is an indication of the possibilities involved in their growth."

Mr. Grubb, who was in the country last week for the purpose of buying 600 head of stock and making arrangements for the care of his real estate interests, turned from the subject of walnuts to the discussion of agricultural conditions of ordinary agricultural land, and urged the production of more sugar beets and potatoes as rotation crops.

"Recently I was at a dinner in Denver with Lord Ogilvy, a leading authority on agriculture, who has charge of that department on the Denver Post," Professor Kurt Grunwald, consulting agriculturist and vice-president of the International Irrigation congress, and Professor, and President of the famous German expert and soil bacteriologist, who is the most highly-salaried consulting agriculturist in the world, and we all agreed that the most profitable and at the same time most educational soil crops for rotation are potatoes and sugar beets.

"They are educational because of the fact that they are hard crops and draw more particular attention to the best methods of irrigation, and that they are especially beneficial in improving the soil. Now, the country in southern Idaho is peculiarly fortunate in not having any of the diseases or fungi which destroy the potato elsewhere developed, and with the knowledge now available it is possible to keep the country free from such pests forever. Those at the dinner agreed that these enemies of the potato were rapidly destroying the usefulness of rotation crops for that purpose, but in that country they rotate potatoes and barley, which is virtually no rotation at all. The sugar beet, by reason of the tap roots, which extend in all directions, and both of the crops named add much organic matter to the soil. The crops are valuable, and will grow more so as time goes on, while their byproducts are useful for the production of pork and sheep and beef and all kinds of live stock."

Asked in regard to the crops which should be used for rotating with potatoes and sugar beets, Mr. Grunwald said that the subject was vast one. On a visit to the leading potato expert of Germany, he saw a map marked out showing the system of rotation to be followed for periods of 10 years. This showed the system that prevailed in that empire in regard to agricultural matters and the painstaking care with which experts worked to secure the greatest results. He closed by again advising the raising of the sugar beet and the spud, "rotating" crop in southern Idaho, and insisted that, considering its uses, the potato as grown on the Twin Falls tract would prove more profitable than any of the ordinary agricultural products. The absence of the diseases referred to above is especially worthy of attention; he believed Rye has proven to be the greatest European rotation crop, not by reason of any positive quality that it has for the enrichment of soil, but because of the inability of deleterious bacteriological growths to feed upon it. Hence they die for want of nutrition and the soil is left free from them. The only problem here is to keep them out, and this, with available knowledge, will be no great task, if such knowledge is applied.

"I am glad," said Mr. Ford, "because I interpret the honor as an expression of a majority of the voters that they wish to do as the majority recommended and the exploitation of the working man by the moneyed munitions interests."

"I believe that, if the people arising us to prepare get us into the state of preparation that they desire, they will find us in a war in a short time. The primary vote leads me to believe that the majority of the voters of Michigan feel the same way."

STATE DAIRYMEN AND STATE SWINE RAISERS TO MEET

At the time the Idaho State Dairymen's association and the Idaho Swine Breeders' association met in Boise last winter, the plan was suggested for the next meeting, that matter being left to the executive committee to decide, says the Buhl Pioneer.

Word has just been received by Secretary Bradley of the Buhl Commercial club, who was present and who made an effort to bring the next convention to Buhl, that the committee for both conventions had selected Buhl. This should be received by the many dairymen and stockmen here with enthusiasm, as it means that one of the largest and best farmers' institutes held in the state no doubt had much to do with the decision of the executive committee of the two organizations.

It has been suggested that a midwinter school should be held here, but the time of the convention, and it is probable that the farmers' institute will be held at the same time.

MILWAUKEE ROAD MAY TAP

TIMBER ON CLEARWATER

MILWAUKEE, Wis. The announcement made by A. J. Earling, president of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, when he was in Spokane two weeks ago that his company would extend its line 25 miles south from Elk river this season, has just brought to light that it is a feasible route. The line will be built in a southerly direction until intersecting the north fork of the Clearwater river, then follow that stream to Alouka, where it will intersect the Clearwater short line of the Northern Pacific.

The Milwaukee has a survey down the north fork, which is a feasible road along a water grade, and taps a fine body of white pine timber. The Clearwater Timber company has vast holdings in this region and a well-founded rumor is that this company is exerting its powerful influence to get the Milwaukee to adopt the north fork route to Alouka for its proposed extension.

The Episcopal Guild will meet Thursday, Mrs. Mrs. Dorey, 230 Eighth avenue East. Members and friends cordially invited.

FRAUD CHARGED IN SALMON RIVER CASE

H. C. Hansen Alleges Conspiracy to Cheat in Sale of Lands

ASKS $21,287 DAMAGES FOR ALLEGED LOSS AND $10,000 EXTRA.

Claims That Not Merely Were Alleged Representations False, But That Sellers Knew Them To Be So.

Charging that he was induced by willfully fraudulent representations made on and prior to June 2, 1908, by the defendants, acting together for the purpose, H. C. Hansen claims damages of $21,287 in a suit filed last week against The Twin Falls-Salmon River Land & Water company, The Twin Falls Investment company, limited, a corporation; D. C. McWaters, C. H. Hurst, J. B. Porrine, H. L. Hollister, George F. Sprague, and R. M. McDaniel. The charges of fraud are a cause of action, raises a new issue, as the claims heretofore did not include such charges. Of the amount asked, $10,000 is asked as punitive damages.

Mr. Hansen, personally and by his attorney, J. H. Wise, sets forth in the complaint in the case, alleged facts substantially as follows: That on or about April 30, 1908, the Twin Falls-Salmon River Land & Water company, entered into a contract with the state of Idaho in accordance with the terms of the Carey act; that they agreed to build the necessary dams, etc., for the reclamation and irrigation of the lands under the Salmon river project, all of which purposes were known to defendants and all of them; that in accordance with such contract they were to have the exclusive right to sell lands on such project for $40 an acre; that the Salmon-River-Canal company was organized to control the management of said system, all the stock in which operating corporation was to be owned and controlled by the Twin Falls-Salmon River Land & Water company; that on June 2, 1908, and prior thereto, on different dates, the defendants conspired and acted together for the purpose of inducing the plaintiff to buy 160 acres of land at $40 an acre; that they claimed that the Salmon river carried sufficient water to irrigate 150,000 acres, that there was then water enough available to irrigate 80,000 acres and that in no event would water rights be sold in excess of the amount which would insure two and three-fourths feet per acre; that the defendants represented that there were no adverse water rights on the Salmon river and no other land susceptible of irrigation; that the water rights were without fault and subject to contract; that the plaintiff at that time lived in Seattle, had no means of knowing the facts in the case, and relied on the representations of the defendants, with the result that he purchased 160 acres of land; that he cleared, fenced and improved the land so purchased which was worthless without water for irrigation, and planted crops relying on the representations of the defendants, suffering thereby a total loss of $21,287; that the said statements and representations of the defendants were made by them and each of them with the knowledge of their falsity and were made for the purpose of cheating, wronging and defrauding the plaintiff and to induce him to enter into the contract for the purchase of the land referred to, and which he entered without knowing the facts.

A copy of the decree recently filed in the federal district court by Judge F. S. McDaniel, in which the Vineyard Land & Live Stock Co. is awarded 12,500 acre feet is made a part of the complaint.

TALKS ON THRIFT

MARY'S KITCHEN SINK.

Mary is the wife of a country storekeeper. She keeps the house, takes care of the children and helps wait on the store. She works hard—harder than her husband, and he works harder than she should.

Up to the present they have had few of the conveniences of life. Water came from a pump by spring, and the housework was done under distressing conditions, owing to the greed of the landlord. He finally agreed to put in the improvements so necessary to human comfort, and Mary's life promised to become easier. The problem was where to put the kitchen sink.

Now Mary had a favorite rocking chair that had a mortgage on the corner. Next came the stove, then her kitchen cabinet. To put the sink in the corner would disturb the rocking chair, and that would never do. The stove and the cabinet could not be moved; therefore, it was resolved, after much deliberation—to put the sink in an adjoining room, in a dark corner 30 feet from the stove. This, of course, meant miles of walking every day for Mary, but she could find no other way. But a kindly-inclined friend, who could study a job, suggested moving the cabinet just one foot and putting the sink between the stove and the cabinet, where it belonged. It was done, and behold, Mary is a happy, rested woman.

Now, what is the moral of it all? Just this: Too many women walk too much on their jobs, which job consists in getting the housework done in the shortest time and with the least expenditure of energy. Why should Mary—why should any woman—walk half a mile in getting dinner? A pan in one place, a pot in another, flour, sugar and salt in another. Back and forth, to and fro, and for what? Wearing out shoes, carpets and nerves, just because the kitchen sink has not been put in its place. It's a fine art to have things handy. The thrifty workman studies his work, to see how he can cut it down, keeping tools in good condition, but near by.

A certain business man in New York cannot dictate a letter. He writes it out long hand, and has his stenographer copy it. His telephone is on the wall 20 feet from his desk, which is piled high with old letters and papers. He has to hunt to find things. He is wasting time, nerve force and patience, just because he can't get his kitchen sink adjusted right.

The problem of all business—from running a home to running a railroad—is to cut out waste of time and material, to get kitchen sinks where they belong. Lost motion is costly, it racks the machine, human as well as inanimate. Mary would have carried her kettle from the stove to the sink in the dark corner a dozen times in washing the dishes—now she doesn't carry it at all. She has solved her problem.

Your problem is the same in essence. Learn how to use the telephone, the typewriter, the carbon sheet, learn where to keep your tools as well as how to keep them. Study short cuts. Eliminate false steps. Do things the easiest (but the best) way. Save your strength for useful purposes. Study your job, whatever it be, for whether it be big or little, it has the problem of Mary's kitchen sink, and lucky for you if you get it in the right place.

CATTLE ADVANCE WELL MAINTAINED

General High Prices—Hogs a Shade Lower—Sheep Prices Still Away Up.

The advance in the North Portland market is very good evidence that fat cattle prices are soaring all over the country. Local buyers doubtless continue very strong until grass cattle are ready.

The strength of the market has not been unhealthily and spasmodic but all this season has shown a continued healthy growth with excellent price result.

Today the strength is very evident, although no actual higher price was recorded. Arrivals were not heavy outside of a few head of the stuff brought in with other stock. There was a consignment of steers from Silver Bow, Mont., over the Northern Pacific via Seattle.

During 1915 hogs sold at the record price of around eleven cents, owing to the general hog famine all over the United States at that time. Prices this year are above the local market at all recognized markets. The general conditions, however, exhibit a paradox since this winter's marketing has been the biggest winter's run in the history of the trade.

The previous high mark showed a demand that was only normal, while this year the demand is abnormal both at home and abroad.

Buyers were very much averse to paying the price for hogs Tuesday and were liberal with the "take off" for selling for $c. Quality was nothing to speak of, either. The receipts totaled nearly a thousand head.

A telephone market still prevails. The past month was one of record prices and small receipts with all indications pointing to a duplication of the March market this month.

If quotations are any indication of what a market would be if there were any arrivals so that an actual test could be made it is anticipated that prices would show up every week and in time with eastern markets.

The pig and wool of the sheep continues to help keep sheep prices on a high level. The average sheep sold and wool brings the killer very good money.

FILER HAPPENINGS

(From The Filer Journal.)

The Seventh Day Adventists have pitched their tent just east of Draker's furniture store and are prepared to take care of good-sized crowds.

The Filer Milling & Elevator Co. is building an addition to the residence property they own near the mill, on North street. The property is rented by B. M. Atkinson, who works for the elevator.

Filer young men should be careful about spending their machines when in Twin Falls. Roland Graves, Dale Chapman and Harold Moore were called on the carpet Monday and contributed a small fine for this indiscretion.

Ernest Davis has moved into one of his own houses, across the track, and Arthur Anderson, who has been occupying it, has moved into the J. W. Weaver house, on Yakima avenue. Mr. Weaver will return to his former home in Ohio.

Dr. Melvin A. Brannan, president of the University of Idaho, will deliver the commencement address for the high school this year. The date of commencement has not been definitely settled. Dr. Brannan is the peer of any speaker in the state, and the high school is very fortunate in securing him.

E. N. Stoughton of Pulask, Mont., has rented the building recently vacated by C. A. Love and will come here and open a general store of dry goods and groceries. He expects to be here by the 15th and be ready for business thereafter as soon as he can open and arrange the stock. He is an old hand at the business and will actively enter into the business life of Filer. His family consists of a wife and three girls—daughters.

The editor of this paper, let a contract yesterday to A. N. Holmes for a 27-foot addition to his brick building, occupied by the Filer pharmacy. Work will be commenced at once and pushed to a speedy finish. When completed, no other drug store in this section will be in the same class with this one. Messrs. Weaver and Hughes propose to fit up the place in a manner in keeping with the latest and best in their line in the country.

The first effort looking toward organizing a central high school district at Filer for surrounding districts was initiated at a meeting for that purpose last Monday evening. Not all the districts were represented, but all have signified their interest in the proposition, and as soon as the legal aspect of the organization has been ascertained and the details worked out, an other meeting will be held and every effort put forth to bring about and perfect the organization. The county superintendent was present and will lend her aid in seeing the idea consummated.

The Filer volunteer fire company has decided to put on a dance in the Filer hall on Friday evening, April 14. Every citizen owes the price of a ticket to these men who guard the town against the ravages of fire. Men who take time from their business or from their families to attend meetings, pay dues, keep the hose and other fire-fighting paraphernalia in fit condition should the occasion arise to save the property of the town. Because you don't dance ought not to be a legitimate excuse to tender the company the price of a ticket to help them in their laudable work. When the committee waits upon you, remember you are giving the dollar for your own protection and not as a profit to an individual. Help along the most important enterprise we have in town.

WIDOW WINS FROM

MINIDOKA—MRS. N. BROWN

MINIDOKA—MRS. N. BROWN has just been awarded 46 acres of land included in the Minidoka townsite. The townsite was located October 19, 1904, and included the land now claimed by Mrs. Brown, who did not enter it until 1907, when she personally cleared 15 acres with a grubbing plow. In 1907 she plowed another 10 acres and broke 25 acres in cultivation. The remainder being a pasture, and otherwise improved. Mrs. Brown's improvements consist of six houses which she rented and she had a stable and corral, the improvements being valued at $3,000.

Register Williams of the Halley Land Office, decided in favor of the town but holding that the town had slept upon its rights. The General Land Office reversed the decision.

GEROME STILL STRONG

FOR PICKLING

The dill pickle industry started with a bang and a sure go. The idea of the promoters was to secure about thirty subscribers to the extent of $5.00 per month for seven months, as a means of financing the undertaking. A paper to this effect was passed around and eagerly signed. In fact a number collected the privilege of signing and were about to be offered. If they did not get in on the movement. So more than thirty, and everyone a booster is behind the enterprise and more than $1,200 is subscribed. It is not expected that all of it will be called for. The land has been secured and there seems to be no reason why the venture should not be a great success, and perhaps grow into larger things.—Jerome News.

NATIONAL POLITICS ACTIVE.

The line of battle within the national Republican ranks is beginning to form. One faction, divided, ostensibly between numerous favorite sons, but really united in pushing Charles E. Hughes to the front at the psychological moment, favors making the tariff the issue of the campaign, and this element will control the preliminary work of organizing. The utterances of Senator Harding, who will be temporary chairman, and as such make the "keynote" speech, show him to be thoroughly committed to this policy. He desires as much as possible to keep preparedness and criticism of President Wilson's foreign policies in a comparatively insignificant position.

On the other hand, a large element nominally committed to the support of favorite sons, are really anxious to see Theodore Roosevelt nominated on a radical preparedness platform. Besides these, there is the La Follette wing that opposes preparedness and high tariff, and the Henry Ford wing that opposes preparedness, without taking any definite position on the tariff.

The fact is that the Democrats, while not all united, are in much better position. President Wilson favored the Garrison plan of a citizen-national army as a first choice, having the idea of strengthening the National Guard as a second choice. The National Defense league, backed by former Secretary Root, former Secretary Stimson and Colonel Roosevelt, regarded the strengthening of the National Guard as no preparedness at all. But the people looked at it differently. They wanted preparedness through the increase of the historic military forces, the regular army and the militia. The majority of the congressmen and senators, of both parties, saw it the same way, and when the president said that his first choice of means was doomed, he fell back on his second. Now, if he had insisted on the first, he would have failed to get it, and would have been assailed from both sides. The Hughes element would have denounced him for not strengthening the National Guard and for foolishly refusing to compromise. The Roosevelt element, which declared the Garrison measure a toy pistol, would have denounced him for failing to make a fight for a bigger national army. In that case, in fact, the rival elements would have had less trouble in getting together than they will now. The anti-preparedness Democrats prefer an increase of the fighting forces through a larger National Guard to an increase through a national force, or through universal service, and they are with the president on the tariff, hence to jump the track for either of the Republican elements would at best seem a little like jumping from the frying pan into the fire. The foes of the president are plainly worried over the situation.

WHO IS SANE?

(Salt Lake Tribune.)

Helen Fredericks was examined as to her sanity while in Salt Lake City.

The girl was taken back to Sioux City, Iowa, and tested again on her mental condition. SHE WAS DECLARED INSANE.

Thus the security of an eccentric person's liberty is safeguarded. In one state the mighty thing called the law gives an unruly girl a certificate of sanity.

Less than two weeks later, with practically the same testimony before it, a sanity commission in another state takes away the certificate and puts on that girl the brand of insanity.

In other words, science is thrown to the winds and it becomes a hit and miss affair whether a person with a temper runs free or is put behind the bars with jibbering idiots.

BUREAU OF ANIMAL INDUSTRY TO STAY

Letter to Congressman Smith From Secretary Houston Says It Will Remain in State for a Year.

A copy of a letter from Secretary Houston to Congressman Smith, in the Tribune, relative to the continuance of the bureau of animal industry station in this state will answer many inquiries in regard to the matter that have been asked by farmers in this vicinity. The letter quoted as a careful reading will reveal, does not state that the bureau will continue its work here, but simply that it will be continued in Idaho, intimating that changes may be made in its operations. It was reported some time ago that there was a possibility that the appropriation for such work might be discontinued, and the Tribune club became very active in petitioning that this not be done. As a matter of fact, the appropriation has not yet been made, but in view of the letter from the department its passage in some shape is regarded as assured. The people of the west end are giving the local business organization credit for calling the attention of the department to the matter. The story, as published in the Tribune, follows:

At the meeting of the Tribune Business Men's association during February a resolution was passed and forwarded to the department of agriculture at Washington, D. C., and to congressmen from Idaho to the effect that the federal station for the control of hog cholera in southern Idaho be retained for the coming two years. The resolution was passed during February of this year. It is believed that much good has come from the government aid in preventing the spread of hog cholera. Word has been received from the department at Washington and from the representatives in congress that the station will be retained, due in a large part to the resolution of the Tribune Business Men's association.

The letter from the secretary of agriculture follows:

"Hon. Addison T. Smith, House of Representatives. Dear Mr. Smith:—Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of March 21 transmitting a copy of a resolution by the Business Men's association, Tribune, Idaho, commending the work of the department in the control of hog cholera in the Twin Falls district under the supervision of Dr. Sullivan.

"It is gratifying to note that the work has met with general approval and has been of so much benefit to the farmers in that locality. Will you not extend to the association our thanks for their earnest co-operation in making the experiment a success, and advise them that it is the intention to continue the work in Idaho during the coming year, although it may be necessary to make some change in the plan of operation.

"The copy of resolution is herewith returned for your files. Very truly yours,

"D. F. HOUSTON, Secretary."

"THE ESCAPE" TO BE SHOWN AT THE ISIS, TEACHES STRIKING LESSON

BLANCHE SWEET IN "THE ESCAPE"

TAKING "The Escape," written by Paul Armstrong, as a basis, and changing few of the minor and none of the vital parts; D. C. Griffith, the noted producer of the silent drama in the film story of the book, has achieved another triumph, and those who have seen the picture before now the seven-reel production at the Orpheum last evening unanimously added their commendation to the praise that has been bestowed upon the picture, alike by the critics and laymen.

"The Escape," dealing with the subject of sex hygiene and proper mailing in the marital relations, is a delicate subject to handle, but Griffith handled it in a remarkable way. It required real genius to put "The Escape" across, but Griffith has done it, and the result is a wonderful lesson, full of vital truths and as an influence for good cannot be too highly commended. To absorb all the important details of the message conveyed by "The Escape," careful attention is necessary, but so cleverly is the plot unfolded that the interest of the spectator is held at high tension—is carried from scene to scene with a compelling attraction that spurs the perceptive and mental capacities to their highest efficiency, and the result is that the lesson of the picture is forced home with a blunt yet vital force that cannot be denied. Whether you desire or not, "The Escape" will set you thinking, and to think about the subject of this picture, so vividly presenting an all-absorbing topic, is to see the lesson it carries.

This picture will be shown again at the Orpheum this afternoon and evening and none should pass by the opportunity of seeing it. Last evening it played to capacity houses with the crowds thronging the streets in front of the theater, and so impressed were many that they are planning to see it again. See "The Escape," by all means.

UNIVERSITY GLEE CLUB WEDNESDAY EVENING

BUILT as offering the "entertainment" and "music for every taste," the University of Idaho Glee Club will appear in Twin Falls on the evening of Wednesday, the 19th, for a concert at the high school auditorium. The Idaho club has been successful in its tour this season and a real treat is said to be in store for Twin Falls music lovers. A number of features are being offered by this organization, said to be the best of its kind in the northwest. Three soloists and a reader, all artists, are being carried, and the club's work has been spoken of as exceptionally fine.

Miss Evelyn Cox, soprano soloist, possesses a charming, bell-like voice, which has a way of captivating audiences, and her stage presence, delightfully graceful, is altogether pleasing. The program she has received have been flattering in the extreme.

A quartet of syncopating singers is also being featured. Some unusual medleys have been worked up for the club's southern trip and will be presented in addition to the latest rag hits.

Perhaps the best of the club's original numbers is the Idaho "Alma Mater" song, a selection that contains all the spirit of the institution boasts. The "Mulligan Musketeers," another ensemble number, is a rollicking selection that always gets over the audience well. The Idaho club is said to possess all the buoyancy of amateur plus all the finish of professional organizations. Its program is without a dull moment, and the "disparagingly enjoyable" will undoubtedly be the verdict of Twin Falls people after the concert to be presented on Wednesday evening.

Tickets are being sold by high school students at 50 cents each. They may be reserved at the Skeels-Wilson drug store at 3 p. m. Tuesday, April 18, free of charge.

DOROTHY GISH IN A PLAY WHICH TELLS OF ROMANCE

Miss Gish, youngest star appearing on the screen, recently celebrated her 16th birthday. Her first appearance on the opening stage was made at the age of 4, as little Willie in "East Lynne." Then followed some years of school, mingled with appearances in melodrama. Her first essay in motion pictures was made with Biograph company, under the direction of D. W. Griffith. When he became director general of the Triangle Film Arts studio, he took Miss Gish with him. Some of the Triangle plays she has appeared in recently are "The Mountain Rat," "The Mystery of the Old House," "The Floor Above," "Silent Sandy," "The Newer Woman."

Owen Moore, leading man in "Betty O'Grady," was born in Ireland and came to this country when 11 years old. He was educated in Toledo, Ohio, but made his theatrical debut in New York. His first work on the legitimate stage was as leading juvenile. He entered motion pictures under the direction of D. W. Griffith. He is young, handsome, athletic, and the husband of Mary Pickford.

THEBA BABA HUMAN AND WANTS LOVE

For the avowed purpose of correcting the impression which she believes the public has formed of her, Theba Bala, star of the William Fox production, "Destruction," and known to millions as "the vampire woman of the silent stage," is about to launch a newspaper campaign the cost of which will run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. Miss Bala takes exception to such phrases as "the woman with the most beautifully wicked face in all the world," "the lambs of femininity," "the torpor of domesticity" when linked with her name. She denies their applicability in that connection.

"Even if it takes every penny of the money which I have earned," says Miss Bala, "I am willing to spend it if by so doing I can alter the public's opinion of men. How would you like to be called a 'vampire woman' and despised by all of your sex if you were really and truly the exact opposite of that type? At first I didn't mind the appellation, but now I do—I mind it very much."

"A YELLOW STREAK" AT THE ISIS WEDNESDAY EVENING

Lionel Barrymore, one of the most gifted actors of the stage or screen, is starred in "A Yellow Streak," a marvelous five-part feature picture produced by the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., for release on the Metro program, which will be shown here at the Isis theatre on Wednesday evening. Irene Howley, the talented and beautiful young actress, is featured with Mr. Barrymore. Miss Howley has won success on both the stage and screen, appearing in the all-star cast of "The Moth and the Flame," and in support of Harold Dawn in "The Heart of a Lion." In vaudeville she was known as "The Manhattan Girl." An excellent supporting cast appears in "A Yellow Streak," including Dorothy Dwyne, Nina Welch, William Cowper, William Davidson, J. H. Goldworthy, A. A. Broese, Martin J. Faust, and others. The production is another notable achievement of William Nigh, the well-known Metro director.

Boone) and Red Jocelyn (Clair Casnon).

Crown Prince Throws Several

UNABLE TO "BREAK THE LINE" ANYWHERE.

Last Remaining Mine Crater Captured by Kaiser's Troops Retaken With Additional Trenches by British.

Without a pause, the German crown prince, taking advantage of the evacuation of the Bethincourt salient by the French and the occupation of that position by the Germans, has thrown several divisions against the new French line, but as far as has been unable to break that line at any point.

The bombardment of the whole front west of the Meuse is of increasing intensity on both sides. Germans moving down along the Haucourt-Bethincourt line attacked the French positions south of the Forges brook. Here they had to face the full fury of the French guns, which cost them heavy losses. The French front along the strategic sector extending from Le Mort-Homme to Commercy remained unmoved and further attempts to take French territory failed.

The French still hold their positions in the Callette wood, which has been the scene of heavy fighting, and against which German attacks have been directed daily. From the Deina River to the lower Strips there has been sporadic fighting between the Russians and the Germans. Considerable activity by the German forces has also been shown. Near Kontors, in the Perfect marsh region, a German attack, launched by means of boats, broke

RECRUITING OFFICE IS OPENED IN THIS CITY

Effort Made to Increase the Forces of United States Army—Many Advantages Suggested by Officers.

First Sergeant V. R. Bell of the United States Infantry and Corporal James Riley of the United States Cavalry have opened a recruiting station in room 8 of the Bank and Trust building, and are prepared to tell the young men of the advantages of joining the army at this time, when there is a demand for 20,000 to fill the regiments now provided for, and when there promises to be a demand for 25,000 shortly to provide for the additional forces about to be added. Sergeant Bell has established four recruiting stations within the last three weeks, the others being in Pocatello, Idaho, and Ogden and Denver, Utah.

Speaking of the matter to a TIMES representative, Sergeant Bell said: "The opportunities for advancement in the army are the best now and within the following months that the history of this country has afforded. The hardy western men, invited to an outdoor mode of life have been found to make excellent soldiers, especially in the cavalry service, as they are used to riding and the exceptional inducements at the present time are bringing many ex-soldiers back to the service. "The Salt Lake office sent out three men Monday and one on Tuesday. Another is waiting for authority to join the quartermaster corps in Mexico, and still another had to give up his army note to the bureau of mines where he holds the position of government stenographer.

One of the applicants applying for service in Mexico, the government paying the transportation and other expenses, thereby giving the men an opportunity to see some foreign country. It is hoped that the Twin Falls office may furnish a number of applicants for the cavalry, as so many cavalrymen are being called in the chase after the bandit Villa. "Corporal Riley will be in charge of the local office.

TO RE-ENTER THE PACIFIC STEAMSHIP SERVICE

Pacific Mail Steamship Company Announces Re-establishment of Sailings Between Filer and the Orient.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Re-establishment of trans-Pacific service by the Pacific Mail Steamship company between San Francisco and the Orient will be inaugurated on June 17, when the company's new liner, Ecuador, is scheduled to leave this port for Honolulu, Yokohama, Kobe, Shanghai, Manila and Hongkong.

Announcement to this effect was made here Monday night from the office of the Pacific Mail Steamship company by J. H. Reaser, vice-president and general manager. The decision, which was reached Monday, will restore to the Pacific coast the house flag of the company, which was a familiar sight there until last August, when it was lowered from the steamer of the Mongolia, which, with four other vessels of the former fleet, was sold to the Atlantic Transport company, when the company decided to discontinue its service to the Pacific coast under the provisions of the new seamen's law.

Besides the Ecuador, the company will arrange regular sailing schedules for the steamers Colombia and Venezuela.

Returning from the Orient, the Ecuador will touch at the same ports as on the outward voyage, with the exception of Manila, and will arrive in San Francisco on August 28. All the vessels will fly the American flag.

The Pacific Mail Steamship company is the oldest trans-Pacific steamship line. It instituted the first regular service around Cape Horn; ran the first "side wheeler" across the western ocean. Its trans-Pacific service was discontinued on November 4, 1915, when the seamen's law became operative.

DEMOCRATS MAKE BIG GAINS IN CHICAGO

Complete Returns Show That They Outvoted the Republicans by More Than 20,000 Votes.

CHICAGO.—Complete returns in yesterday's aldermanic election show today that the Democrats made decided gains throughout the city and that they outvoted the Republicans by more than 20,000 votes. The Democrats elected three new city councilmen and their candidate for the municipal court bench, Leo J. Davis.

The vote cast yesterday was 47,443, 14,771 for the Democrats. The women voters fell considerably below expectations. The Republican vote of 158,912 was 28,553 less than last year, when William Hale Thompson was elected mayor by a majority of 147,477. Democrats polled 210,028, or 41,033 less than last year. Socialists received 45,779 votes, or 21,327 more than last year. Progressive and other scattering votes totaled 12,615.

The total women's vote yesterday was 64 per cent of registration and the men's vote 88 per cent of registration.

Almost complete returns of the local option election held in various Illinois towns and townships yesterday indicated today that between 360 and 400 towns will submit to the voters in the near future, and that former dry territory which before the prohibition victories in 1913 sheltered about 350 saloons again will permit the sale of alcoholic.

SCHOOL BOARD BUYS THE ASHTON CORNER

Decides Difference in Price to Be Insufficient to Warrant Condemnation Proceedings.

The school board at its meeting last night decided to pay the price of $4250 for the Ashton corner, owned by its owner, William Ashton, rather than go into court to endeavor to condemn the property for $4000, the price offered. A delay of one month would result in a greater loss interest than the difference involved, besides the incidental delay in beginning construction and the uncertainty of the judicial decision. The plans for the school have been drafted by Burton E. Morse.

MAY INCORPORATE TOWN OF KIMBERLY

Based on Building Movement Call Starts Crusade

PREDICTION MADE THAT THIS WILL BE GREAT YEAR.

Imposing List of Buildings Under Construction or Contracted For in the Town.

"As the town is going forward in such a substantial way, why not make a real town by incorporating instead of just a cluster of buildings here in the country?" says the Call. "Surely Kimberly has advanced to the point where she should join the sisterhood of town on this tract."

"Some time ago The Call predicted that the year 1916 would be the greatest year in the history of Kimberly, and the activity here at this time indicates that the prediction is going to be fulfilled."

"Work is now under way on the Swearingin & Wilson building on Main street, opposite the Kimberly Hotel, a large force of men are working on the foundation for the new bank building and Old Fellows building and by next week work will undoubtedly be under full swing on the new blacksmith shop and garage to be erected by W. A. Gill opposite the bank corner, the hardware building in which Swearingin & Wilson are located is being moved south of its old location and will be moved up against the Turner & Chubb building, occupied by Wilson Brothers' general store, to make room for the big store building that firm will erect adjoining the Swearingin & Wilson building. It is also rumored that the Consolidated Wagon & Machine company is negotiating for the purchase of two lots on which they will erect a building with a fifty-foot frontage, and the Idaho Seed & Produce company is considering the erection of a large seed warehouse, on a site to be selected."

"As has heretofore been stated in The Call, Wilson Brothers and Swearingin & Wilson will each erect a building with a fifty-foot frontage and a depth of one hundred feet. Excavation for the Swearingin & Wilson building is now completed, and the basement walls are being put in this week. As soon as the old warehouse building is moved work will start on the basement of the Wilson Brothers building. Both buildings will be finished to completion."

"Both buildings will be equipped with a modern heating plant, will contain running water and in every way will be equal to any buildings of like size on the tract. Wilson Brothers will have a large, commodious rest room for ladies with all modern conveniences. Red brick will be used in the construction, with white brick for trimmings."

"Kimberly can now boast of a cafe second to none in the county—and, in fact, it has been a good restaurant ever since Mr. Rice has been here, as is indicated in the constant increase in his business. But Mr. Rice realizes that Kimberly is constantly growing, and he proposes to keep abreast of the times. During the last week or ten days he has been quietly changing the interior of his place, adding a little here and there until he now has quite a cosmopolitan appearing place. He has put linoleum on the floor, new shelving for his canned goods and rearranged the whole place to give constantly increasing business demanded that additional help be added, and he was fortunate in securing the services of H. F. Williams, an experienced chef who has recently been with the Kirkpatrick Cafe at Piler. Mr. Williams needs no endorsement from The Call—his work speaks for itself."

"Ernest White, of Twin Falls, was awarded the contract for the new bank building and the Old Fellows building, and will doubtless erect the Turner & Jones building and the Tilley building, which are to be built in connection with the other two buildings. Mr. White has a large force at work this week cleaning out the basement and making the necessary repairs and changes in the foundation. The new bank building and the Old Fellows building will be two-stories, 25-foot frontage with a depth of 80 feet, and the Turner & Jones building and the Tilley building will probably be but one story."

"Ernest White also has the foundation work on the new garage opposite the bank, and Olds & Overbaugh, of Bull, have the contract for the work above the ground."

"W. H. Summers has bought several lots adjoining the livery barn on Main street and has been busy this week moving the shed on the south side of the barn to the rear of those lots. Mr. Summers was non-committal as to his plans, but said they would be matured in the near future and that some sort of an imposing structure would be erected on his lots in the fall."

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Sheridan's attempt to make a business man of his son Edith is starting him in the machine shop and Edith is going to a sanatorium, a nervous wreck.

CHAPTER II—On his return Edith is met at the station by his sister Edith.

CHAPTER III—Edith finds himself in a strange and unusual situation in the "New House" of the Sheridan family. Mrs. Sheridan is looking at him from a woman's point of view.

CHAPTER III.

It was gray stone, with long roofs of thick green slate. An architect who loved the middle "Gothic" motives had built what he liked. It was to be seen at once that he had been left unimpeded, and he had wrought a picture out of his head into a noble and exultant reality. At the same time a landscape designer had played so good a second, with ready-made accessories of screen, arched vista, that at already whatever look of newness remained upon the place was to its advantage, as showing at least one thing very clean under the gray sky.

Altogether, the new house was a success. It was one of those architectural successes which leave the owners' selfishness in privacy; it revealed nothing of the people who lived in it save that they were rich. In our swelling cities rich families, one after another, take title and occupy such houses as fortune has and fall—their mark the high tide. It was impossible to imagine a child's toy wagon left upon a walk or driveway of the new house, and yet it was—Edith might have called it "beautification."

What the architect thought of the "Gothic of Naples," which hung in its vast gold-revet of roocco facing against the gray wood of the hall, is to be conjectured—perhaps he had not seen it. "Edith, did you say only eleven feet?" Edith said, standing at it, as the white-haired twin of a Portinari porter helped him to get out of his overcoat.

"Eleven without the frame," she explained. "It's splendid, don't you think? It's the best thing up here. The hall was full of gloom before. No gloom now," said Edith. "This statue in the corner is pretty, too," she remarked. "Mamma and I bought that." And Edith turned at her direction to behold, amid a grove of tubed pilars, a "life-size," black-bearded Moor, of a plastic composition painted with unapproachable gloss and brilliancy. Upon his chocolate head he wore a gold turban in his hand he held a gold-plated spear; and for the rest he was red and yellow and black and silver.

"Hallelujah!" was the sole comment of the returned wanderer, and Edith, saying she would "find mamma," left him blinking at the Moor. Presently, after she had disappeared, he turned to the colored man who stood waiting. Edith's traveling bag in his hand. "What do you think of it?" Edith asked, solemnly.

"Grand!" replied the servant. "She might hard to do. Dues' git it, all her wrinkles. Yessuh, she might hard to do."

"I expect she must be," said Edith, his glance returning reflectively to the black ball beard for a moment. Is there a place anywhere I could live down?"

"Yessuh. We got one new spare room all fix up to you, suh. Right up stairs, suh. Nice room."

He led the way, and Edith followed slowly, stopping at intervals to rest, and pulling a heavy increase in the staff of service since the exodus from the "old" house. Maud and scrub-women were at work under the patient, patient direction of another Pullman porter, who was profoundly enjoying his own affectation of being harassed with care.

"Everything got look up an' span for the big doin's tonight," Bibbs' guide explained, chuckling. "Yessuh, we got big doin's tonight! Big doin's!" The room to which he conducted his leading charge was furnished in every particular like a room in a new hotel. Edith found it pleasant—though, indeed, any room with a good bed would have seemed pleasant to him after his journey. He stretched himself at immediately, and having replied "Not now" to the attendant's offer to unhook the bag, closed his eyes wearily.

White-jacket, racially sympathetic, lowered the window shades and made an exit on tiptoe, encountering the other white-jacket—the harassed overcoat—in the hall without. Said the emerging one:

"He mighty shaky, Mist' Jackson. Drop right down an' shet his eyes. Eyeballs all black. Huh, folks gotta go."

CHAPTER III.

"You Look a Great Deal Better Than What I Expected."

same as anybody else. Anybody not me. I'll change it—this color—say—No, suh! Let's keep 'em money. I keep my black skin an' keep 'em the ground!"

Mrs. Jackson expressed the same preference. "Yessuh, he look tuh me like somebody already laid out—"

He fell silent at a rustling of skirts in the corridor. It was Mrs. Sheridan hurrying to greet her son. She was one of those fat, pink people who fade and contract with age like drying fruit; and her outside was a true portrait of her. Her husband and her daughter had long ago absorbed her. Edith fired all day with her mother, as daughters do; and Sheridan so held his wife to becom' unbecom' as she had long ago become unconscious of her existence as a thing separate from him.

Mrs. Sheridan's manner was hurried and inconsequent; her clothes rustled more than other women's clothes; she seemed to wear too many at a time and to be vaguely troubled by them, and she was putting a skirt down over some surely lateral dissection at the moment she opened Edith's door.

At sight of the recumbent figure she began to close the door softly, withdrawing, but the young man had heard the rustling of the skirt and the rustling of skirts, and he opened his eyes. "Don't go, mother," he said. "I'm not asleep. He swung his long legs over the side of the bed to rise, but she set a hand on his shoulder, restraining him; and he lay flat again. "No," she said, bending over to kiss his cheek. "I just came for a minute, but I want to see how you seem. Edith said—"

"Poor Edith!" he murmured. "She couldn't look at me. She—"

"Nonsense!" Mrs. Sheridan, having taken the light at a window, came back to the bedside. "You look a great deal better than what you did before you went to the sanatorium, anyway. It's done you good; a body can see that right away. You need fattening up, of course, and you haven't got much color."

"No," he said. "I haven't much color."

"You look a great deal better than what I expected."

"Edith must have a great vocabulary," he chuckled.

"She's too sensitive," said Mrs. Sheridan, "and it makes her exaggerate a little. What about your diet?"

"That's all right. They told me to eat anything."

"That's good," she said, nodding. "They mean for you just to build up your strength. That's what they told me the last time I went to see you at the sanatorium. You look better than what you did then, and that's only a little time ago. How long was it?"

"Eight months, I think."

"No, it couldn't be. I know it ain't that long, but maybe it was longer 'I thought. And this last month or so I haven't had nearly even time to write more than just a line to ask how you were getting along, but I told Edith to write the weeks I couldn't, and I asked Jim, too, and they both said they would, so I suppose you've kept up pretty well on the home news."

"Oh, yes."

"What I think you need," said the mother, gravely. "Is to lie up a little and take an interest in things. That's what papa was sayin' this morning, after we got your telegram; and that's what'll stimulate your appetite, too. He was talkin' over his plans for you."

"Plans?" Edith, turning on his side, shielded his eyes from the light with his hand, so that he might see her better. "What?" He paused. "What plans is he making for me, mother?" she turned away, going back to the window to draw down the shade. "Well, you better talk it over with him," she said, with perceptible nervousness. "He better tell you himself. I don't feel as if I had any right to go into it, and you better get to sleep now, anyway." She came and stood by the bedside once more. "But you must remember, Edith, whatever papa does is for the best. He loves his son, and he wants to do what's right by all of 'em—and you'll always find he's right in the end."

He made a little gesture of assent, which seemed to content her; and she rustled to the door, turning to speak again after she had opened it. Edith got a good nap, now, as he to be laid restful up for tonight.

"You—you mean—?" Edith stammered, having begun to speak too quickly. Checking himself he drew a long breath, then asked quietly, "Does father expect me to come downstairs this evening?"

"Well, I think he does," she answered. "You see, it's the house warming," as he said, and he said he thinks all our children ought to be around us, as well as the old friends and other folks. It's just what he thinks you need—to take an interest and live up. You don't feel too bad to come down, do you?"

"Mother?"

"Well?"

"Take a good look at me," he said. "Oh, see here!" she cried, with brisk cheerfulness. "You're not so bad off as you think you are, Edith. You're on the mend, and it won't do you any harm to please your—"

"It isn't that," he interrupted. "Honestly, I'm only afraid it might spoil somebody's appetite. Edith—"

"I don't you—this child was too gentle," she interrupted, in turn. "You're a plenty good-looking enough young man for anybody!—You look like you've been through a long spell and begun to get well, and that's all there is to it."

"All right. I'll come to the party. If the rest of you can stand it, I can!"

"I'll do you good," she returned, rustling into the hall. "Now take a nap, and I'll send one of the help to wake you in time for you to get dressed and come down."

Edith lay in bed, and he went to sleep right away, now, Edith.

He woke—refreshed; stretched himself leisurely—as one might have a care against too quick or too long a pull upon a frayed elastic—and getting to his feet, went blushing to the window and touched the shade so that it flew up, letting in a pale sunset.

He looked out into the lemon-colored light and smiled wistfully at the next house, as Edith's grinning phreos came to mind. The old Verreux country mansion. It stood in a broad lawn which was separated from the Sheridans by a young hedge; and it was a big, square, plain old box of a house with a giant oak tree in front.

A cupola, faintly had been spared for a long time, and no one could have put a name to the color of it, but in spite of that the place had no look of being out at heel—and the sword was as neatly returned as the Sheridans' own.

Directly opposite the window the Verreux lawn had been graded so as to make a little knoll upon which stood a small rustic "summer house."

It was almost on a level with Edith's window, and not thirty feet away. Probably the "summer house" was pleasant and pretty in summer. But now in this light it was desolate, the color of dust, and hung with haggard vines which had lost their leaves.

Bibbs looked at it with grave sympathy, probably feeling some kinship with anything so desolate; then he turned to a cheval glass beside the window and paid himself the dubious tribute of a thorough inspection.

Throughout this exact process his manner was profoundly impersonal, but finally he appeared to become pessimistic. He shook his head solemnly; then gazed again and shook his head

ROOT AGAIN TURNED DOWN

Empire State Delegation Will Support Hughes at Convention

REPUBLICANS LEANING TOWARD T. W. AS CANDIDATE.

Gardner-Cushing May May Cause Dispute as to Backs of the G. O. P. Weeks to Withdraw.

NEW YORK.—National political importance was seen here tonight in the resolution of Frederick C. Tanner as chairman of the New York state Republican commission.

Tanner was re-elected this afternoon, after one of the sharpest fights in the history of New York politics. These results are seen by leaders of various factions in the party:

"Virtual endorsement of Supreme Court Justice Hughes as the choice of the New York delegation for president."

The defeat of a second attempt to obtain endorsement for the candidacy of former Senator Edith Ford.

Defeat of William Barnes, Jr., of Albany, in his attempt to dominate the delegates and direct the party at the national convention, and consequently a victory for Governor Whitman and his followers, who are avowedly Hughes men.

Senator J. W. Weeks, Massachusetts, Republican aspirant for presidential honors, but who has never been seriously considered, may be ready to step aside in favor of Roosevelt.

That the construction placed by Roosevelt adherents tonight on the fact that Charles G. Washburn, generally known as Weeks' campaign manager, with George Van L. Meyer, former secretary of the navy, and known heretofore as Weeks' booster, had a lengthy conference with Colonel Roosevelt tonight, at his residence Meyer cannot interpret to Roosevelt as the Republican candidate.

"It is my belief," Meyer said, "with world conditions as they exist today, that Mr. Roosevelt will be the psychological Republican candidate and that Republican sentiment is rolling up in that direction. The experience in the past, his extensive knowledge of affairs and of men, not only in this country but abroad, makes him the most available man for the Republican cause."

"As to Massachusetts, I am not in sympathy with the Gardner-Cushing movement."

In view of Mr. Roosevelt's statement, it was started without his knowledge and consent, and their activities have created a feeling of distrust that might jeopardize the Republican candidate's re-election as governor, and even complicate or embarrass Senator Lodge's re-election, which is of vital importance to the state and even to the nation."

As Senator Weeks, preparing to withdraw in favor of Colonel Roosevelt, Washburn was asked:

"I have not been in Washington lately, and most of the news comes from there," the former Massachusetts Republican said.

"I have nothing to add to the Tribune statement," Colonel Roosevelt said. "In that statement I said that I disapproved of any factional fight in either my district, Massachusetts or elsewhere, and that any such factional fight was begun without my knowledge and would be continued without my acquiescence."

He stood and how stand on that statement in Massachusetts as well as all other states. While in Boston I did not see any man interested in either side the primary contest."

The famous Root-Barnes-Roosevelt dinner was held March 31. It gave foundation for the belief among Roosevelt's followers that Root, who presided at Chicago four years ago and was among those charged by Roosevelt with the theft of the Republican nomination, and rendered fidelity to his former enemy. To Weeks' aspirations for a Massachusetts delegation at Chicago next June seriously menaced by a recent statement from the four candidates for delegates at large announcing their support of Roosevelt, the colored look on the aspect of "another" movement between the Bull Moose and the Republicans.

NEW RESCITATORY SERUM

DISCOVERED AT JOHNS HOPKINS

BALTIMORE, Md.—Experiments are being made by specialists at Johns Hopkins university hospital, which, if successful, will greatly aid in the resuscitation of persons apparently dead from drowning or asphyxiation. The new treatment is the injection of a serum to stimulate the blood to such an extent as will form a reaction on the heart. This will keep the person alive until the apparatus performed some time ago to clear the lungs can be put into use.

The serum, the experimenters will not divulge at the present time, has been used on dogs, and a number of experiments have proven successful. However, there have been after effects, such as high blood pressure or laceration of the arteries.

According to the physicians, if the serum can be perfected, and there is every indication that it can, the serum can be injected several hours after the drowning.

The physicians are now engaged in trials to overcome or prevent the excess of blood pressure.

ADJUTANT GENERAL CONFIDENT

PEDESTALIC VICTORY IN STATE

Adjutant General P. H. Crow was in the city for several days last week on business. He said to THE TIMES while here that he was confident of the re-election of General Alexander and the carrying of the anti-Preston bill. General Crow stated that he was not an official business and therefore not here at the expense of the state, so, while he talked with members of the National Guard, he did so informally. While here he said his residence to P. R. Cox.

certainly to agree with her, and regret-

"Papa! Oh, oh!" and Miss Vertees was fain to apply a handkerchief upon her eyes. "I'm glad you made up! I wouldn't have missed it!"

Mrs. Vertrees shook her head. "I suppose I'm very dull," she said.

"I didn't see anything amuse-ing. They're not ordinary, and the house is altogether in bad taste, but we enjoyed that, and that's all."

"Papa!" Mary cried, breaking in.

"They asked us to dinner!"

"What?"

"And I'm going!" she shouted, and was seized with fresh paroxysms of frenzy. "I'll never let them see me there! never not any of them but the daughter—and just barely met her—"

"What about you?" interrupted Mr.

Vertrees, turning sharply upon his wife.

She made a little face as if positive

now that what she had hated would not agree with her. "I couldn't!" she

said. "I—"

"Yes, that's just—just the way she looked when they came here!" she said, choosing. "And then she—she realized it, and tried to turn it into a coquette, and she didn't know how, and it sounded like—like a squeal!"

"I suppose," said Mrs. Vertrees, much injured, that Mary will not forget this time at my funeral. She nukes fun."

Mary jumped instantly and kissed her. Then she went to the mantel and leaning—leaning—upon it, sized thoughtfully at the buckle of her lace, twinkling in the daylight.

"They didn't notice anything," she said. "So far as they were concerned, mamma, it was one of the most country ever couched."

"Who were they?" asked her father.

"Whom did you see?"

"Only the mother and daughter."

Mary answered. "Mrs. Sheridan is dumpy and rusty; and Miss Sheridan is pretty and pushing—dresses by the fashion magazines and talks about

New York points that have their pictures in 'em. She tutors the mother, but not very successfully—partly because her own foundation is too flimsy and partly because she began too late.

They've got an enormous Moor of painted plaster, or something in the hall, and the girl evidently thought it was to her credit that she selected it."

"They have oil-paintings, too," added

Mrs. Vertrees, with a glance of gentle pride at the Landseers. "I've always thought oil-paintings in a private manner the worst of taste."

"Oh, if one owned a Raphael or a Titian!" said Mr. Vertrees, finishing the implication, not in words, but with a wave of his hand. "Go on, Mary. None of the rest of them came."

"You didn't mind, did you?"

"No, I'm sure you didn't."

"He paused and adjusted a lump of coal in the fire delicately with the poker. "Or one of the sons?"

"Mrs. Sheridan crossed his, at that,

with a dash of utter comprehension.

He turned instantly away, but she had been too long in the room."

"No," she said, "no one except the women, but mamma inquired about the sons thoroughly."

"Mary?" Mrs. Vertrees protested.

"Oh, most admirably, too!" laughed the girl. "She came, too, and help me remember to look at me when she did it!"

"Mary Vertrees?"

"Never mind, mamma! Mrs. Sheridan and Miss Sheridan neither of them could help me, and I'm sure to look at me—especially at the same time. They all three kept looking at me and talking about the object. Mr. James Sheridan, Jr. Mrs.

Sheridan said his father is very am-pleased with me, and that Jim is right outmost. Another of the sons, youngest one, they didn't seem to consider quite one of themselves, somebody. The other brother is the middle

one. He was in the street, where that young black sheep of the Lamborns,

Robert, goes so often. Papa?"

She stepped nearer to him so that he had face her, and his eyes were troubled as if he were about to cry. "I'm trouble deep within her own, but she kept their surface merry with laughter.

"Papa, Bibbs is the youngest one's name, and Bibbs to the best of our information—is a funnier. Roscoe is married. Papa, does it have to be

Jim?"

"Mary!" Mrs. Vertrees cried, sharply. "You're outrageous! That's a perfectly horrible way of talking!"

"Well, I'm close to twenty-four,"

said Mary, turning away, but not able to like anybody yet. "I ing up her follow—furn—with a gesture of flying grace as she sped.

When she came down, at twenty minutes after seven, her father stood in the hall, at the foot of the stairs, waiting for her second through the dark. He looked up and watched her as she descended, and his gaze was fond and proud—and profoundly dis-turbled. But she smiled and nodded gaily, and when she reached the door, put a hand on his shoulder.

"At least no one could suspect me tonight," she said. "I look rich, don't I,

papa?"

She did. She had a look that wondered all friends called "rich." A head taller than her father, she was as straight and jauntily poised as a boy athlete; and her brown hair and her brown eyes were like her mother's, but for the rest she went back to something of her father's.

She made a little face as if positive

now that what she had hated would

not agree with her. "I couldn't!" she

said. "I—"

"Yes, that's just—just the way she looked when they came here!" she

CONFESSES RAPE CHARGE IS ACQUITTED BY JURY

Confession in Gooding Case Is Barred Because It Was Not Given Voluntarily.

GOODING, Ida.—Glenn Sayre, charged with the crime of rape, was acquitted by a jury after one of the most virtually contested criminal trials ever held in Gooding county, says the Gooding Leader. The crime with which Sayre was charged was committed on October 28th, since which time he has been confined in the Lincoln county jail at Shoshone.

Mrs. J. T. Batten was the victim of this assault. Sayre, whose parents lived near the Batten place, was employed as a farm hand on the Batten farm and the assault was committed during the temporary absence of Mr. Batten.

After his arrest Sayre made a confession, in which he admitted that he was the man who entered Mrs. Batten's room on the night of October 28th, and on the strength of this confession and the other evidence he was held for trial in the district court. In the district court, however, this confession was not admitted in evidence, the court holding that it was not a voluntary confession. This greatly weakened the case of the prosecution.

After his arrest Sayre made a confession, in which he admitted that he was the man who entered Mrs. Batten's room on the night of October 28th, and on the strength of this confession and the other evidence he was held for trial in the district court. In the district court, however, this confession was not admitted in evidence, the court holding that it was not a voluntary confession. This greatly weakened the case of the prosecution.

DEMOCRATS SELECT STATE DELEGATION

...to make recommendations for appointments, and often also to advise the other administrative or even legislative matters.

"I have certain definite views in regard to party policies and the duty of a national committee which I believe in and which I would endeavor to follow if I am chosen. I have no hesitancy in declaring myself, for I am not in accord with the Democrats of Idaho on these matters. I do not want to represent them.

"The matters of appointments the responsible party machinery should be the responsibility of the party and not the county committees. Upon them the responsibility and they best know who are loyal, competent and trustworthy. No party, especially a minority party, can hope for success upon the basis of good government and public service. And in your political appointments, your local committees are best able to pick out the best men. Men should not be given appointments because they have rendered service to factions or groups or individuals, but on their merit as active and worthy servants of our cause. Democracy stands today as the representative of the highest type of public service. It is the duty of the man who in his precinct or his county is a loyal worker for the party's success is the one upon whom the most trust for national and state matters.

"I do not know what the chances of my success may be. It is easy to make large claims, but claims amount to nothing. Most of the delegates to the Idaho will be uninterested and unimpressed with the claims of any one man. I have received assurances of support from many sources, some of them unqualified from friends of Mr. Elder as well as others.

"We frequently hear of factions in the Democratic party, but I hope such is not the case. Of course, we have factions, but rivalry is a long distance from faction. In Idaho we are unanimous for President Wilson and unqualified for his policies and unqualified for his policies and unqualified for his policies. We are unanimous for Gov.

...Alexander: These are the main things.

"I am in the fight to stay. I am in it all the suggestion of my friends of Twin Falls county and because I feel that I can be of service to the party and the state. If I am chosen I will be the servant of the party and not any group, faction or individual. It will be a new deal and a square deal. I will use every effort to bring all Democrats together—to encourage the organization of active committees—to drive no Democrat out of the party—to devote my political activity to making Idaho Democratic, not for one year but for years to come. Idaho needs some changes—needs more officials, new policies, and, above all, a new land board—these can come only by Democratic success. If I am defeated—well—I'll still be a democrat, and my home will be in Twin Falls, Idaho."

ARTICLE BY PRIEST FREELY CIRCULATED

Oregon Short Line Gives Story Published in New West Magazine Widely.

The Twin Falls country gets a large share of the space used in the recent article, entitled "Grain Does Not Gilt," but "The Gold in Idaho," by Joel L. Priest, published in the December number of the New West Magazine of Salt Lake City. The article has just been republished in pamphlet form by the Oregon Short Line, and thousands of copies are being spread into the city and surrounding towns. The result is that it will doubtless attract many to the south side tract during the next few months. The parts relating to this city and surrounding towns tell about the operations of the Twin Falls mill, the vast profits of clover yields and the big potato crops. The following are some excerpts:

"An industry that has grown into prominence in the last few years, and that is steadily pouring more and more of that desirable commodity—ready cash—into the bank accounts of the farmers, is that of seed growing. Some of the seed yields on the Twin Falls tract this year read like fairy

...stories. Some, alas, on investigation, have proved to be fairy stories. I propose to tell nothing that has not been carefully verified, for the plain truth will be difficult enough for those unfamiliar with conditions to believe.

"A few weeks ago F. A. Bukholder drove up to the office of the Twin Falls Mill and Elevator company with a wagon load of white clover seed. It was good, clean seed, grown on 15 acres of land. When Mr. Bukholder drove away, his wagon was empty, but he carried in his leather wallet a check for upwards of $3000.

"William Vogel, living near Buhl, last fall bought 100 acres of improved land for $115 per acre. Eighty of the 100 acres were in alkali clover. Mr. Vogel of Salt Lake bought the seed from that 80 acres and he gave Mr. Vogel a check for $10,500. Fairly good return on the investment, was it not?

"Amos Howard of Buhl went into the seed-growing business with all his might. He owns 320 acres, half in red clover, the other half in alkali. His seed has been sold for $115 per acre. A remarkable feature about Mr. Howard's performance is found in the fact that this was the first crop harvested on his land. It was cleared of sagebrush and broken a year ago last fall.

"It was stated by seed buyers who cover the Twin Falls south side and the north side projects that at the time this is written, November 1st, more than $1,000,000 had been paid out for seed in those areas this year. By the time the entire crop has moved the total will be augmented by not less than $250,000 more. Is it remarkable that the farmer who has moved territory are becoming enthusiastic over their seed possibilities?

"The movement of potatoes from Idaho is just beginning. Due to various causes, such as the late wet spring, which caused some of the seed to rot in the ground, decreased yields and other causes, the potato crop will not be as large this year as in other years. Still, not less than 8000 tons of the celebrated Idaho spuds will go out to the markets of the country within the next few months.

"Idaho Falls, as usual, will be the principal potato shipping point. Other stations, such as Blackfoot, Shelley and Twin Falls and Rigby, will come in with large quotas.

...Buhl News

(From the Buhl Herald)

The Buhl highway district completed the fill at the Deep Creek bridge on the state highway at noon Monday. Messrs. Smith & Green, one of the contractors on the high line enlargement, did the work under the supervision of Road Overseer Harry Smith. W. A. Holt supplied the commissary. Approximately 2000 yards of earth were moved from the site and hauled from a distance of over 100 feet at a cost of a little less than 17 cents per cubic yard. The contractors generously donated $250 for the work. The width of the grade is 30 feet and the fill will be protected by rip-rap before winter to prevent damage by the spring flood. The highway authorities wished to remove the central bridge. This will be strenuously objected to by the Buhl highway commission, as experience has shown that the present waterways under the bridges is hardly sufficient during the spring thaws.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Flumer of Pocatello arrived in Buhl the first of the week with a view to locating here in business, and it is more than likely that they will open a restaurant and hotel rooming house. At least, that is their intention if they can find a suitable location, or if they can purchase the property of one of the present owners.

Mr. Flumer formerly lived in Pullman, Wash., and he is a contractor and builder. Mrs. Flumer has had considerable experience in the hotel and cab business.

Allie Gross, a sheepherder for the Bob Rogers ranch of sheep, was arrested last Sunday evening on complaint of Mr. Baxstaller, who lives this side of the Arthur grade, on this side of the river, and the holder was brought before Judge Milner, where he was released on bond. The complaint was for trespassing on the Boxstaller ranch with the sheep. However, Mr. Rogers came down the following Wednesday and the case was settled out of court. Mr. Rogers paying for the damage claimed to have been done by the sheep.

E. L. Goodsell, who attended the state horticultural meeting at Twin Falls last week and who is representative of the Fruit Growers' company of New York, wrote a letter to the secretary of the Buhl business men's association, asking that the apples were selling from $2 to $2.50 per box. That includes the fancy grades of Winesap and Spitzenberg and other varieties.

BULL COWTESTERS REPORT FOR MARCH

Falling Off in Production Due to Empty Silos.

INCREASE IN DEMAND FOR SHORT-HORN CATTLE IN BUHL.

Many Prefer to Raise Beef Cattle, Though Demand for Milkers Also Increases.

(By JOHN BRADLEY.)

Nig, the grade Holstein owned by A. A. Stauffer, the same cow who in the February work won first place in the honor roll of the association, held her place again in March. But in the vernacular of the street she only held it by the "skin of her teeth," as Buttercup, a new member of the association, a grade Jersey owned by C. F. Smalley, came within eight-tenths of one point of wresting first honors from her grasp. As it was, Nig's record for the month was 60.6 pounds of butterfat for the month, while Buttercup produced 58.3 pounds of butterfat, a record for the month with just one point to spare, a member of her own herd, Princess, also a grade Jersey, having 58.7 pounds of butterfat to her credit. Ruby, a grade Jersey owned by A. Carlson, was a close contestant for top honors, her production being 58.1 pounds of butterfat for the month. This was the first month in which Mr. Smalley's herd has been in the association, and, needless to say, he is the champion herder, which was said. The other new member of the association is the herd of Hatfield & Bower, who entered 21 cows and taking the place of the Chaffin herd, which was said. The race for first place in March between the Holsteins and the Jerseys was a pretty one and will put everyone on their mettle for the April records.

Silos Empty—Records Go Down.

It will be observed in a study of the records of the 70-cows which made the honor roll in March that there is a decided falling off in the butterfat production all along the line, and this is explained undoubtedly by the fact that the silos are running empty and also that a number of the dairymen have reached the poor hay in the stacks. If there has been wanting any argument in favor of silos and ensilage, that argument has certainly been produced by this falling off in the butterfat production, and there is now no observing stockman but who is willing to admit the extreme value and importance of having a sufficient capacity and well-filled silo, and I might remark right here that the silo excavation planned by County Agricultural Birch for April 10th next, should be taken in by every farmer who can possibly arrange to go. The silo is the certain need in this tract of the stockman, whether he be a dairyman or whether he be producing beef cattle. Jacob Schneider will plant 50 acres of corn for ensilage purposes and tells me that he considers one acre of corn in the silo worth three acres of sugar beets. Mr. Schneider will use his ensilage for feeding sheep. With all due respect to the wonderful alfalfa grown in the Twin Falls tract, it is foolish to not give consideration to a better balanced ration. I can recall quite well that my grandmother baked a most excellent quality of cabbage and I liked it, but I can also recall how much I enjoyed the "light" bread which I ate when I visited some of the better-fitted homes where "light" or wheat bread was baked. The silo provides the supply of succulent feed at the time of year when it is not available in the growing pastures, and ensilage connected with root crops will not only lower the cost of feed per animal but also increase the flow of milk, produce the better-finished beef steers and the better-finished hogs. I believe it is a perfectly safe prophecy to say that the day of silos has passed forever in the Buhl country. There are a great many more men taking up the production of beef cattle and more men "light" or wheat bread is baked.
