REFERENDUM CALLED ON VITAL QUESTIONS

National Chamber of Commerce
Submits Two Important Matters

WILL BE VOTED ON IN COMMERCIAL CLUB ON APRIL 25.

Merchant's Association Will Be Asked to Aid in Determining Validity of Price-Cutting Regulation.

Whether the federal government should assist the states in the matter of establishing vocational training, and whether further legislation should be enacted for the purpose of prohibiting alleged unfair competition involved in price cutting, are questions which have been submitted to the organizations affiliated with the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and which will be voted on by the members of the Twin Falls Commercial club on Tuesday, April 25.

The committee of the national body appointed to investigate reported unanimously in favor of federal assistance in the establishment of educational training, basing its recommendations on the hearing before the committee of education of the present congress. The arguments in favor of this measure are that vocational training is now provided for in but eight states, and that in most cases it is inadequate; that the national government having sole control of patents of invention which will promote useful invention and that such education can be secured through the states alone, unaided by federal appropriations; that the constitutionality of such legislation cannot be doubted since the national government has in the course of its history appropriated $46,000,000 for agricultural education and given donations of $300,000,000 of public land for education purposes; that the total amount required will be small, and that the management need not be taken away from the states and from the local districts.

Unlike the referendum on the Seaman's law, an optional referendum is urged against the law. They are substantially as follows: The national government cannot control the field of business without considerable supervision and interference with state and local management since in no other way can it determine whether money appropriated is properly used; such interference is contrary to the spirit of our people, who have always insisted on management of affairs being vested in state and local authorities; the whole scheme is of doubtful constitutionality; that if the amount appropriated is so small as to be of little value of the measure it would be practically worthless and would do more harm than good, since it would tend to

NEW FURNITURE STORE TO OPEN HERE SOON

A. H. Corbett of Lewiston, Buys the Old Smith Stand and Will Put in Stock.

A new furniture store carrying a full line of up-to-date stock, will be opened shortly in the old stand of the Smith Furniture company, at 235 Main avenue north, by A. H. Corbett, of Lewiston, who purchased the property Tuesday evening from Mr. Smith, for $2,250. The new proprietor left yesterday morning for Portland, to purchase the stock, and on his return while the plans are in transit will put a new front, with plate glass windows on the building and otherwise bring it up-to-date. Mr. Corbett has been looking around the state for a location for some time and finally arrived at the conclusion that Twin Falls was the place to enter business. The deal was made by Lindsey & Smith.

DEMOCRATS READY FOR THE SMOKER TONIGHT

Governor Alexander Arrives Today to Make the Main Address for the Occasion.

The local democrats are all prepared for the big smoker at the Masonic hall tonight. A large number of cards have been sent to Democrats throughout the county, with the intention to recall them to their friends and have these friends invite other friends. Besides that, everyone is urged to be present tonight. Governor Alexander arrived today and will be ready for the occasion tonight.

PARTS OF THE STATE HIGHWAY IN TWIN FALLS COUNTY.

Much has been said and written about good roads. But there is, after all, nothing so convincing as a few object lessons of what can be done in the way of road construction and maintenance. The above scenes are sections of the State Highway in Twin Falls county, between Buhl and the Ferry.

The roads pictured above are sections of the state highway northwest of Buhl, built and maintained by the co-operative efforts of the county and the state. The scenes illustrate:

- (1) Road construction in rock along the Snake river; note the substantial sign post, which shows the distance to Twin Falls.
- (2) An easy grade and turn on Buhl hill, but an expensive piece of road work.
- (3) Up-to-date road construction calls for permanent bridge structures.
- (4) No terrorizing culverts worry the tourists along this route.

TWO MILE LIMIT OF SOME LOCAL INTEREST

No Organized Participation From Twin Falls County in Meeting With Land Board.

That there will be no active participation by people from this county in the forthcoming meeting of April 22, before the land board, relative to the disbanding of the two-mile limit law, is the opinion expressed by President C. L. DeLong of the local organization of sheepmen. Mr. DeLong says that, while the question is of considerable interest to some ranchers in parts of the county, who are thus afforded a chance to retain pasture around their homesteads, and also of interest to those who bring herds from abroad, especially while they are getting to and from the common range, it is not likely there will be a representative present for either side from this county. The sheepmen's organization has been very much complacent to the extent that it would be convenient to take action with reference to the subject.

CITY EMPLOYMENT OFFICE A SUCCESS

Many Applicants for Jobs and for Men Have Wants Promptly Attended to at Agency.

A board advertising the city employment office was put up this morning by City Clerk R. M. Williams, on which hereafter the wants of men without jobs and employers without men will be noted. The office is starting out with a fine business, according to Mr. Williams, a number of men and women having been placed in good positions. There are plenty of applicants both ways, but there is sometimes difficulty in matching them. Nevertheless, the office is proving a success from the start. Men have been placed in different parts of the tract outside of the city. Mr. Williams says that when the harvesting and haying seasons are on, he looks for a greater patronage for the office.

EIGHTY NEW STRUCTURES IN CITY SINCE JAN. 1ST

Eight Business Blocks and Seventy-two Residences Either Begun or Completed This Year.

"While out driving with my family Sunday afternoon, the children, to amuse themselves, began counting the new residences and business structures in this city," said Arthur L. Swin today, "and we found that a total of 80 either have been commenced or completed since the first of the year. Of these, eight were business structures and 72 were residences."

MANY WILL GO TO BUHL SATURDAY

Effort Made to Have Every Auto in Big Parade

ALL MUST GET TO END OF LINE BY 1:30 O'CLOCK P. M.

Will Not Go From Here in Body, But Everyone Urged to Be on Time With Machine.

The people of Twin Falls will be at Buhl Saturday, with pennants if not with bells, and will endeavor to return that handsome complement paid to this city by the west-enders during the auto show last week. At the meeting of the committee held, who gathered yesterday afternoon at the Commercial club rooms to prepare for the reception of the Republican state convention, the matter of the Buhl Pioneer day was taken up, and it was decided that everyone urge everyone else to go, and to get on the ground by the time that the big parade is pulled off at 1:30. Auto owners are requested to all take a day off and be sure to get to Buhl in time for the parade. The substance of the program has been given in the columns of THE TIMES on several occasions and will consist of the parade, followed by a basket dinner and speeches by Governor Alexander and former Governor Hawley. There will be a ball game in the daytime and a ball game in the Buckaroos and lady riders will be featured.

There will be cheer rite on the railroad, and everyone will double up on the train which will carry the speakers of the day.

WAR DEPARTMENT GATHERING DATA

City Clerk Replies to Letter From Adjutant General Relative to Twin Falls' Resources.

City Clerk R. M. Williams this week sent data to Adjutant General P. H. Crow relative to the resources of the city of Twin Falls, and its manufacturing plants. The information asked related chiefly to the population, the amount of electricity and gas available and the number and character of the local manufacturing plants.

CLUB ARRANGES FOR STATE CONVENTION

Committees All Busy Putting Finishing Touches On.

CHAIRMAN ASHTON OF COMMITTEE ON ROOMS IS BUSY MAN.

Calls on Women to Help Out, as Part of Duties of American Citizenship. Royal Time Assured.

The final preparations for the entertainment of the Republican state convention are being made by the several Commercial club committees to which the work was entrusted, and the 600 or more guests will be sure of royal entertainment. Chairman Ashton of the committee appointed to look after rooms is the only man in trouble, as the spare beds in the hotels have been taken up, and there will be no place for some of the delegates to sleep unless every citizen with a spare room will consent to offer it to the committee. This will be done, of course, as soon as the situation is fully appreciated. A number of rooms have already been received and it is known that many more will be offered for listing as soon as the imperative need is realized. A fee of a dollar a guest per night is offered in order to cover the expense involved in making arrangements to take care of the extra guests. Chairman Ashton is more anxious about getting the rooms ready in time than he is over the eventual getting of them, as he wants to have everything arranged when the crowd begins to arrive on April 19.

Mr. Ashton especially appeals to the women voters to take an interest in the matter, as part of the duties of American citizenship, and assist by throwing their spare rooms open to the guests of the city, whether agreeing with them politically or not.

Mayor E. M. Swadlow will welcome the visitors in behalf of the city when the big gathering meets in the Laverling theatre, which has been secured for the holding of the convention.

NO CHARGE FOR SILO EXCURSION NEXT WEEK

Care Offered by Twin Falls People—County Agricultural Asks All to Be Prompt.

"Several have asked us what charge will be made for the silo excursion April 19," said County Agricultural Birch to a TIMES reporter yesterday. "We are glad to say that through the generosity of the public-spirited citizens who have donated the use of their cars for the day, there will be no charge. It will cost you nothing to take the trip with us, and we will try to make it a pleasant and profitable day for all."

"As stated in this paper last week, Twin Falls people will leave the courthouse at 9:30 a. m. sharp, visit the silos southwest of Twin Falls and join the Flier people at the bank corner in Filer at 10:30 a. m. From there we will proceed west, visiting the A. A. Davis, C. H. Krogh and Gustav Kunz farms. Buhl people will join us here and the remainder of the morning will be spent visiting silos south of Buhl. We will proceed north and east, working toward Twin Falls."

"Buhl people will be given an opportunity to visit the silos southwest of Twin Falls in the afternoon. It is especially asked of Twin Falls people that they be prompt in the morning, as promptness in starting the excursion is of the greatest importance. As we of Twin Falls start first, let us be prompt. If any further information is wanted, telephone or write County Agricultural W. N. Birch or Secretary J. M. Bradley of the Buhl Commercial club."

MORE BOOZE SIEZED AT KIMBERLY DEPOT

Sheriff Kendall Captures Sufficient Checked From Salt Lake City—James Beckham Arrested.

A suit case containing 53 pints of whisky, was seized Sunday by Sheriff Kendall of this county. The liquor was checked from Salt Lake City. Later James Beckham, an itinerant, was arrested on the charge of having shipped the liquor. Asked in regard to the matter Monday and Tuesday by a TIMES representative, Sheriff Kendall stated that the state of the case was such that it was inadvisable to give out any information relative to it. Whether there is a conspiracy involving others, or not, is a question which the officers are evidently trying to solve.

PEACE PROGRAMS FOR SCHOOLS

May 18th Will Be Observed With Appropriate Exercises

ADDRESS OF SCHOOL PEACE LEAGUE IS SENT OUT.

Claim Made That Even In Present War There Is Evidence of Previous Work For Peace.

A copy of the address issued by the American School Peace League are being sent to the teachers of several districts in Twin Falls county by County Superintendent Bertha Neel, in order to arouse a spirit which will promote the observance of Peace Day on May 18, with proper programs. Miss McCoy, state superintendent, has urged such action by the several county superintendents. The substance of the address is that even in the present war there is evidence of the beneficial effect of peace agitation and education, inasmuch as the majority of the powers now in conflict proposed the submission of the differences involved in the Hague convention, and all show sensitiveness to charges that they are violating international law and that this sensitiveness should be developed into a social conscience which will preclude the possibility of war. The address follows:

To the Teachers of the United States: With two-thirds of the world at war, why should we observe Peace Day? For a dozen years past, the schools of this country and of other countries have set aside May 18th for the purpose of concentrating attention on the significance of the Hague Peace Conference. But with the threatened breakdown of civilization in Europe today, the manhood of our nation shattered, homes ruined, productive energy diverted to the one task of killing, does it not appear that the Peace Conference is out of joint with the times? Under the circumstances, would it not be well to suspend the customary reference to this observance?

Quite the contrary; the system of law which the Hague Conference and statesmen as the beginning of a new epoch in the development of international relations. This and the second Hague conference, which met on June 16, 1897, have forced the recognition of the principle that the

ALUMNI BANQUETED AT HIGH SCHOOL

Members Dine With Faculty at High School Cafeteria and Agree on Principle of Co-operation.

Superintendent Hal G. Blue entertained at a four-course dinner Tuesday evening about 30 guests, representatives of the various classes of the Alumni association. Owing to the large number of members of the alumni, it was impossible to accommodate them all at the high school cafeteria, which was the place where those whom he thought would be actively interested in again building up and reviving the old interests of the association, which since the past two or three years has been practically inactive.

The guests, who were seated around two long tables in the high school cafeteria, were served with a perfectly appointed dinner, prepared by the young ladies of the domestic science class, under the able direction of Miss Hunsate. The room was fittingly decorated with pennants, potted plants and flowers, and the music furnished by the orchestra.

Professor M. C. Mitchell, instructor in social sciences in the high school, gave the address of welcome. He said: "Relations of the Alumni to the High School," outlining in a measure the main functions of such an association. Professor Blue spoke on the much desired spirit of harmony and co-operation between the graduates of the high school and the officers who control it, and of the benefits derived from an educational standpoint. These addresses were heartily indorsed by the guests.

The matter was turned over to general discussion and much enthusiasm was exhibited by those present. Dave Carlson, who was appointed chairman for the occasion, outlined briefly the proposed plans of reorganizing the alumni. He then appointed committees to attend to the matter and to make preparations for a "mixer" to take place May 19, at which time will be welcomed to the Twin Falls Alumni association over 150 members. The committees are as follows: Entertainment committee—Misses Carmen Cox, Vesta Thorsrud and Wilton Peck; John Shamba and Elmer Bracken. Organization committee—Messrs. Devery, Fuller and Chaplin.

EUROPE NOT READY FOR PEACE YET

Rev. Charles S. MacFarland Describes Conditions

PEOPLE THERE GRADUALLY BECOMING LESS BITTER

Premature Intervention Would Hurt But Time For Moral Intervention Coming

In the article entitled "A View of Present Conditions in Europe," Rev. Charles S. MacFarland, general secretary of the federal council of Churches of Christ in America, takes the position that conditions are not yet ripe for anything like overture for peace, either political or non-political and that any movement of the sort at the present time would result only in harm and delay, but suggests that the time will soon come when there will be an opportunity for some kind of moral intervention. The article reviews military conditions which he finds are still hanging in the balance, and explains the tendencies toward a state of mind which will lead to ultimate peace. From the purely religious side, Dr. MacFarland approaches the subject from the point of view of a member of an Evangelical church, having only an indirect reference to the state. Protestant churches of most of the continent, and omitting from consideration, in this connection, the Roman Catholic church, which has within its membership the majority of the populations of Italy, Austria, Belgium, Portugal, and, nominally at least, France, and has a large percentage of the populations of Germany and the United Kingdom, and also ignores the Eastern Greek church, which predominates ates in Russia and the Balkans. Nevertheless the article is not confined to members of the Evangelical organizations except in so far as it relates to the attitude of their membership within the war-stricken countries, and the whole is a review of the situation by an observer who writes after a thorough examination of conditions. The most salient paragraphs of the article follow:

Not the least of the aid and accompaniments of the war is the estrangement and mutual bitterness between members of the evangelical churches, and the fact that this is the result of the demands of conscience in each case does not suggest its seriousness. In this connection, it is to be remembered that the churches in Great Britain, Germany, and other nations are largely state churches, and that the Protestant churches of France are of Huguenot descent, many of whose leaders are Albigians.

Any movement looking towards ultimate reconciliation and reconstruction need to be guided by those whose acquaintance with the political situation is intimate, and our desire for immediate reconciliation must be restrained in the light of these political conditions.

One must venture with modesty any attempt at diagnosis, and all observations and impressions are subject to the mutations of a confused situation, in which the merest accident may upset seeming probabilities. The present moment is not the time for any definite political or semi-political (or even non-political) overtures for peace. A mistaken movement of just this time might work incalculable harm and delay. The movements which are less likely to do harm are those which are such as the League to Enforce Peace and the Organization Centrale pour une Paix Durable, whose plan is now under investigation by the commissions to study the situation. Anything, however, that aims to "stop the war" is injurious.

The general attitude in Germany has undergone a marked change, parallel, in the main, with the change of the Christian leaders, from the manifest spirit of bitterness at the beginning of the war to their present attitude of Christian reconciliation.

It is thought that the moderates are gaining in influence, that some of the severer elements in the state are inclining to moderation, that the possibility that there have been misunderstandings is an increasing consciousness, and that such considerations as these, together with political and economic conditions, are the causes of the present state of mind. The Christian leaders are the subjects of this higher motives and influences. How far will they influence the state and convince the people? That is a vital question.

France is invaded territory; the high spirit of her people is thoroughly aroused. It is not for the time being, at least dangerously near the sentiment of revenge, which she believes to be righteous justice and its necessary retribution. Her national mood would impose preliminary conditions which preclude even the idea of conference. The suggestion of anything of the kind is offensive, and she resents it. This, however, would be entitled to some discount were the issue clearly joined, and especially were she prepared to place confidence in the ethics of her foe.

England occupies a somewhat mediating position, and cannot afford to neglect the whole field. She would not guarantee of a very strong and guarded kind from Germany, and would be less likely to take any such position. Meanwhile the internal situations are subject to fluctuation. German leaders believe that England means practically to own Belgium, and to take Calais as a far recompense for service to France, and it is even rumored that some such feeling lurks in France herself. If true, this is a kind of, however, in France. Some of the Belgian refugees in England are alleged to have worn their welcome out. Still, if true, has naturally qualified active sympathy with the Belgian people as a whole. Socialists in all lands are more or less mercenary. The common people are becoming questioning.

There is, in England, a growing feeling that, in addition to the White, Blue and Yellow Bands of the diplomacy of the summer of 1914, one should know more fully the record of the various and suspicious, and perhaps, something more, of the and short-sighted diplomacy of the preceding decade.

How far have Germany's natural complaints been ignored and left to fester? How far has vacillation or evasion been misconstrued as perfidy and hostility? Other immediately important questions arise. How far shall we consider the situation of the Jews in Russia as not altogether unlike the Armenians in Turkey? How far may Poland and East Prussia be thought of in terms of Belgium? The answer to some of these questions might explain, even if it did not excuse or palliate, it would at least explain points of view not yet generally apparent.

The conference the ultimate defeat of Germany, if the war lasts long enough, admit the possibility that

Out Performs Them All

In our hill pulling contest Saturday afternoon on the Dodge and Buick hill, the DODGE OUTPULLED THEM ALL. THE BUICK OUTPULLED EVERYTHING IN THIS CLASS OF LIGHT SIXES.

The Dodge pulled the hill with seven grown passengers with a 50-foot start.

The Large, Seven-passenger King Eight pulled seven passengers up the hill with a 250-foot start.

The Buick Light Six pulled four passengers up with a 150-foot start.

The Chevrolet pulled one passenger up the hill with a 200-foot start.

The Grant Six just made it with the Triver with a 250-foot start.

We made a bonafide offer of $25.00 in cash for any four-cylinder car that would come out and follow the Dodge, but even this would not induce any of our four-cylinder competitors to bring out their cars.

Can't they pull the hill or won't their cars stand the test? The answer we will leave to the public. It is a settled fact that they will not for money, honor or anything else, come out and substantiate the big claims they make for their cars.

PLEASE REMEMBER THE BUICK AND DODGE CARS ARE MADE TO PULL AND WILL STAND ANY TEST YOU MAY SET IT TO GIVE THEM.

who can stand out so long that the others may weary out, and their minds also take account of the many possible complications or accidents which may upset their main contention. The further question becomes more and more in evidence. Will it not cost more than the end is worth? I feel sure that men are feeling this far more than they express it?

There is one question which, if answered of settlement or of adequate conference, might terrify all others to the immediate realm of agitation. It is this: Would all the nations of Europe and Russia guarantee that such a gradual limitation of armaments should be conceded and such a European federation of States established as would assure the peace of Europe? This, of course, would also involve changes in form of government, not only in Germany, but also in Russia and other countries. It might affect the present system of party government in Great Britain. Indeed, it is admitted that the conflict of Democracy and Autocracy is not altogether one whose line of division is identical with that which marks the line between Germany and the states. The question of the military system in Germany is not unlikely to be affected for the better by the association of Austria, which is not a military people.

This much may, I think, be affirmed: There is a disposition towards two truths: that economic justice or economic growth is essential to military means and force, and that militarism cannot be put out or exterminated by military means. These feelings are increasingly varying in all quarters, and this spirit will bear close watch in the next few months.

There may soon be opportunity for some kind of moral intervention. While it may need to be unofficial, or semi-official, I believe that the nations of Europe are really looking, or will look, to the United States. I am aware of the vehement utterances in all these nations to the contrary. But we must not take too seriously the outward attitude, more or less obtaining in all these nations, of dissatisfaction.

The one thing which has been our strongest asset of influence has been the relief work of America and the American churches. But it has not been adequate or proportional. I learned in conference with Edgar Rickard, Honorary Secretary of the United Relief Commission, that, while personalities like Mr. Hoover had rendered the greatest service, our contributions of money had been disproportionately as contrasted with Canada and Great Britain, although, of course, this is offset by our gifts of food and supplies.

We may ourselves believe and ask our Christian brethren of the nation to do the best they can of one another. We may by admitting our own share of blame for an un-Christian civilization, suggest, without offense, the wider distribution of that blame. We may, without intruding upon men's consciences, in the spirit of the publican, find ways of suggesting that peace and justice may best be approached by the churches, and especially the responsible Christian leaders of all nations, rising above the conflict (even though led in it by conscience) into a higher spiritual atmosphere.

make several states rely on the nation instead of on themselves. The other question submitted for the consideration of the organization relates to price cutting and to the right of manufacturers to fix a resale price which shall follow through the retailers to the consumer. There were two main reports submitted on this question, the majority favoring the right of manufacturers to fix the retail price and favoring federal legislation to prevent price cutting. This report is signed by seven of the 10 members appointed to investigate and recommend. Two of these, however, filed a supplemental report explaining their position. The minority report which opposes the sort of legislation recommended and declares it to be contrary to the spirit of American legislation and tending to foster trusts and the sort of monopoly which is repugnant alike to common sense and state law and to the constitutional provisions of most of the states of the union.

The majority holds that the right to make a resale price should apply to all merchandise trade-marked, branded or in other ways identified so that the consumer could know who his originator might be. It is recommended that the legislation suggested apply only in cases where competitive conditions exist, that is where the public has substantial opportunity in making a choice between one article and another, and not where a natural or artificial monopoly exists. It is contended that the right of the manufacturer to set the price has never been denied; that contracts for that purpose have been recognized as valid in the law; and that the courts, until recently when the supreme court of the United States modified this rule; that the producer of an article should be held responsible to the public, that he is responsible for its being a reliable article and that those obligations make it necessary that he have the power and opportunity to fulfill them, which cannot happen if the power to enter into an agreement fixing resale prices is granted to him, in order to enable him to protect himself from unjust competitive methods; and that, in any event, the price of an article in the market will stand, in the cost of producing, the profits of the producer, the cost of distributing and the profits of distributing. This method of argument rejects the definitions of the economists who hold that transporting and selling are part of production.

The supplemental report, signed by two of the committee who signed the majority report agrees with the reasoning of the majority, but does not endorse the specific recommendation, holding that the important thing to prohibit is what is called predatory competition, that is, competition for the purpose of forcing rivals out of business. This supplementary report says substantially that further investigation should be made before endorsing any particular legislative measure and that it is possible that the power to give all-needed relief is already vested in the federal trade law, tending to prohibit predatory competition are suggested.

The minority in a long report denounces the facts and the legal conclusions set forth by the majority report and by the supplemental report filed by two members of the majority. It is contended that the privilege of fixing prices which the majority contends to have been permitted to the manufacturers of identified articles, as a matter of fact, granted by the courts, only to manufacturers of patented articles, and to publishers of copyrighted books, and that even in the latter case the ruling of the state courts was reversed by the supreme court of the United States. That while the purchaser from a manufacturer who agrees to sell at a fixed price should do so, yet this is not the object of the proposed law, which would also stop those who bought without such agreement from cutting prices; that the damage from price cutting is greatly overestimated; that while there is such practice as predatory competition, it is limited in extent and duration in competitive business and that its injuries to trade are insignificant, and need no legislation for correction; that the legislation asked so far from being in the interest of the small dealer and the public would result in the establishment of monopoly in lines where it does not now exist; and, lastly, that such legislation would be of doubtful constitutional validity.

The assistance of the Merchants' association will be asked by the commercial club in the discussion of the matter of the regulation of price cutting and of resale prices.

The following are the forms of the recommendations of the committee in all the matters referred to above, the all forms for voting favorably or unfavorably being provided after each recommendation:

The committee recommends federal appropriations for the promotion of vocational education in the United States.

The committee recommends that federal appropriation should be encouraged for the allotment among the states on a uniform basis and should bear a uniform relation to appropriations made by the states for like purposes.

There should be federal legislation permitting the maintenance of resale prices, under proper restrictions, on the manufacture of goods for sale at purchase, made and sold under competitive conditions. Federal legislation should take the form of an act to the trade commission act defining the conditions under which price cutting is an unlawful method of competition and authorizing the federal trade commission to prevent such price cutting in interstate and foreign commerce.

Facts

GET the facts on the operating cost before you buy any automobile. Find out the truth before—not after. And don't be satisfied with hearsay or a salesman's claims. The price of gasoline is high; so is oil and there is sure to be an increase in the cost of all tires.

So, what you want is the car that will give you most miles per gallon of gasoline, per gallon of oil and per set of tires.

Here are the facts proved by the Maxwell stock touring car that recently set the World's Motor Non-Stop Record:

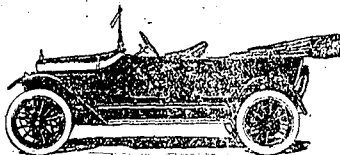

Maxwell World's Non-Stop Record Facts
Miles without a motor stop.....	22,023
Average miles per day (24 days).....	500.6
Miles per gallon gasoline.....	21.88
Miles per gallon of oil.....	400
Average miles per tire.....	9,871

Remember that this was a Non-Stop Endurance Record—in order to prove that the Maxwell car was exceedingly sturdy, reliable and trouble proof.

No attempt was made or could be made to save gasoline, oil or tires. So these figures merely indicate what would be possible under ordinary driving conditions.

Right now we have a Maxwell we can deliver to you. Let's not put it off. We know the Maxwell factory can't get half enough freight cars to carry their doubled output. Later on we may not be able to supply you. But we can NOW. Better phone us for a demonstration today.

TWIN FALLS BANK & TRUST COMPANY

Making Flour of Twin Falls Wheat

The Second of the HOME INDUSTRY SERIES, Which Will Appear in THE TIMES from Time to Time.
THE HOME OF IDAHO

"The soft wheat flour of Idaho has no superior in the world; we go up against the best in the Missouri valley country and make them hustle to equal us with their very best. The hard wheat raised on the dry farms of southern Idaho is as good as that raised in Kansas, while the hard wheat raised in the irrigation belt is an excellent quality for irrigated hard wheat," said C. R. Holland, head miller for the Twin Falls Milling and Elevator company, to a TIMES representative Saturday after a trip through the different floors and apartments of the big mill, which, by the way, is the largest flour mill between the Rocky Mountains and the Dalles, Ore.

Passing the big elevator, where 80,000 bushels of wheat can be stored all ready for grinding, and the old red warehouse, which is used for the holding of sacked wheat in emergencies, the reporter was shown the unloading places. On the depot side is located the dump for unloading the wheat hauled to the city from the surrounding country, while on the side next to the city is the spur track, on which cars of grain from the elevators of the company at Buhl, Filer, Holliester, Amsterdam and Burger are taken care of. There is a large electrical power machine used for emptying the cars, and a big freight car carrying 100,000 pounds is unloaded in an hour. In the basement there are lockers for the sacks. In order that no dust may touch them, and, except for texture, size and such incidental attributes, they might serve for ladies' handkerchiefs, so thoroughly is cleanliness observed. Here, too, are found driving shafts for machinery. On the first floor is located ten stands of double rolls for grinding, and it is here that the packing is done of the two famous brands, "Shone" and "Idaho," and the export brands. Three power packers for flour and a feed packer are used to take care of the product of the mill after the big rolls of flour are used exclusively for breaking wheat, and they get results, as may be inferred from the fact that they move rapidly, in spite of the fact that each of them weighs 840 pounds. They measure 10 by 42 inches. The smaller ones for grinding are 9 by 30 inches in size and move along merrily, "chewing" up the golden grain. But

This is only an intermediate process and as the visitor gets nearer to the top of the building he finds the wheat in a narrow chute, for the crusher and the grinder and the flour in the process of preparation for the ultimate consumer. Just before the wheat goes to the grinder it lies for at least 12 hours in one of the five big stone bins, with a capacity of 500 bushels, after passing through the crusher. When the blending is done, on the second floor are located the screening and scouring machinery. The wheat, which looks clean in the wagon, is a Pharisee, differing only from members of that hypocritical sect in the fact that it keeps its dirt on the outside and dirties itself for the casual observer by its very modesty of demeanor. Mr. Holland drives his hand into one of the machines and draws out a handful of refuse and, "You change your opinion about the native cleanliness of the cereal and get the idea that it must be a Russian who gets his habits from the proverbial Muscovite peasants. Here is the place where Mr. Holland says the average investigator of it is a Russian who becomes incredulous. Well, this is the dirt scouring place. It gets another cleaning later, but that is another story."

Then we are introduced to the electrical blenders, which are the prettiest things in the whole establishment, though they look dangerous for all their brilliancy. They are the latest of their kind and have been in place only three weeks. Ordinary air is taken up and cleaned through a screen, after which it is introduced to the running electrical flame, which burns out the oxygen. It is pumped into a mixing machine where it is run through the flour and turns it white. This is only done at the request of the purchaser and every sack of bleached flour is so branded. The same sort of flour that is used in the unbleached is used in the bleached. And next come the mixers. No, not like the Russian ones, but a sort of exclusively Siberian institution, however suspicious the name of the Miller may sound. The mixers, the thing that is used to mix flour and salt and phosphate and soda, so that the user doesn't have to apply anything but water to prepare for use. This brand is called "White" and is sold here? No, there is no demand for it. Neither is there for bleached flour nor for flour made exclusively from soft wheat. All these are made for the people of Dixie, whose tastes are different from those of the Northland. There is little wheat bread used in this state, so that the demand for hard wheat or blended flour does not exist to any great extent there. On the other hand, biscuits and what are much more commonly used there for these and the white bleached flour is the best. Where large quantities are used the demand is for the soft wheat flour already prepared. The United States government forbids the use of acids in bleaching, and the process used by the Twin Falls mill involves only plenty of fresh water. The difference between the whitest unbleached flour and the same product after being bleached is almost unbelievable.

On the third floor there is a cleaner for the wheat which has already been scoured, and it is taken off the elevator, as it were, by peeling off the fine bran. You see, we are describing a double process as we go from floor to floor, to avoid more than one trip. One tells of the preparation of the wheat for the grinder and the other tells of the preparation of the ground flour for the user. On the same floor that the wheat gets its hide taken off there are five big bolters shaking like victims of old-time chills, each containing the different grades of things, making flour, white shorts, brown shorts and bran. All these but the first are later mixed with 10 per cent low-grade flour and converted into the one most popular feed ever devised for the raising of hogs and for stock generally.

The mill is behind 200 barrels in supplying the demand at present, and farmers often wait in rows with wagons to get the product as it is finished. Here, too, is some old-time machinery for bolting flour, through which the product is run after it gets through the bolters. Ordinarily there is nothing to take out, but as a precaution, test something might be wrong with some of the modern bolters, the other machinery is used so that nothing can escape. There is other machinery to take care of and get the flour out if the product is not in proper condition for the final bolting. On the fourth floor are a half-dozen big wheels that look like a number of wagon wheels with the tires off, spokes inverted and all wrapped up. They run a little, and then, as if to chastise them, a couple of shillalals swat them and they stop for a moment. They are just and warm air extractors, which keep the rest of the mill clean. The products run through them, but just how any work is a mystery to the uninitiated.

"Here is the most difficult part of the whole milling business," said Mr. Holland, as he stepped into the cupola where rotary machinery, in a covered tower, was industriously pumping wheat, into which a small stream of water was running. The grain was run out to one side of the small enclosure and dropped down on another rotary that carried it back and started it downward on the first gravity run. It looks simple, but it isn't. For this water has to be put in to just a certain proportion or things will go more or less wrong. It moistens the bran on the outside of the wheat which has been previously dried. The grain then goes into the big bins that are talked about a day ago, and the moisture is just enough and no more than sufficient to dampen the bran so that it will come apart and leave the wheat intact when it arrives at the machinery specially devised for that purpose. And that is the story.

Most of the outside shipments go to Georgia and Alabama; one shipment with a capacity of 7000 barrels, is devoted exclusively to flour for that section.

The first mill of the company was built in Twin Falls five years ago, with a capacity of 300 barrels a day. Manager L. L. Breckenridge, an Assistant Manager Edmund Cooper were on the ground during its construction and Mr. Holland came to take charge when it was completed. He was told that it would be no easy job, as there would be comparatively little to do; but the first year the mill ran all day and sometimes far into the night during the busy season. The next year it ran day and night and the third year doubled the capacity of the mill. They also constructed the big elevator referred to and a large clover seed mill across the railroad spur. The main mill is 40 by 60 feet. The elevators at the end are 60 feet long and from 21 to 40 the other way, detecting on account of the way the street runs. The main motor has 150 horse power and there are several smaller motors for special purposes, the largest of which has 36 horse power. The mill is heated by steam generated by a boiler in the basement. The enterprise is one of which Twin Falls is justly proud, and its continued growth and prosperity is appreciated by the people.

PEACE MOVEMENTS.

It is a singular coincidence that there should appear in the news columns of this issue three articles dealing with the promotion of peace, all approaching the subject from different viewpoints. The article by Dr. MacFarland treats the subject exhaustively from a point of view that is as nearly unprejudiced as it is ordinarily possible to get, and comes to the conclusion that we can best assist toward ending the struggle by more liberal contributions toward the suffering in Belgium and Poland and by a frank admission of our own human weakness, which will put us in shape for "moral intervention," should an opportunity offer. In his opinion, any sporadic movement toward interference at the present time must result disastrously.

In the address from the American School Peace league, the argument is that a glimmering of social conscience can be observed in the offer of many of the nations now involved to arbitrate their differences before the struggle begins, and in the disavowal of all of them of any unprovoked violation of international law. The remedy suggested is a fanning of these sparks of social conscience into a flame. The plan proposed for discussion at the meeting called for the high school Monday night by the Socialist local is the passage of the measure for the appropriation of $100,000 to be placed at the disposal of President Wilson for use in finding out ways and means for stopping the war aid for use in bringing it to an end after the means for so doing have been discovered.

One thing which is not distinctly stated in any of these projects, though, perhaps, inferentially contained in all of them, is more important to humanity than the mere securing of peace, and that is the advancing of social and economic justice in the settlement of the great struggle. That all economic troubles can be adjusted permanently by any treaty that may be entered into is too much to hope for, since the sum total of economic and social injustice manifested at any one time corresponds pretty closely with the sum total of the sin and weakness and moral ignorance of the individuals that go to make up society as a whole. No form of economic production and distribution, even though accompanied by a Democratic form of government will offset the inherent weakness of the individual human, but had economic systems accentuate the difficulties produced by such individual weakness, and it should be seen to in bringing this war to a close that as many of these obstacles to progress as can be found are eliminated, and that as much as possible is done to make the spiritual, moral and economic progress of the individual easier. This statement is, of course, general. The magnitude of the task suggested is hard to appreciate. But it is in the facing of the task frankly and the solving of it heroically that permanent peace can be hoped for in the future. Since the means of securing permanent peace are not in our possession or even in sight, it is well for us, while taking such steps as we can toward it, not to forget that we are living in a world where force is yet a great power, and to take care to maintain a reasonable preparedness in order that we may protect ourselves if others do not reciprocate in our peaceful overtures when differences arise which will involve us in war unless properly adjusted.

AUTO OWNERS CANNOT GET NUMBER PLATES

Demand for Idaho Outrigger Supply—Those Carrying Old Number and New Receipt Will Escape.

Auto owners who pay their license and who carry their old numbers as an evidence of good faith, will not be prosecuted until the arrival of more number plates from Boise. The supply seems to have run out and the state will not prosecute those who pay their license. As the city wants the number for the purpose of identification, the carrying of the old number and the production of the certificate of payment will be accepted until the supply of plates catches up with the demand. Those without any number or those with an old number have failed to pay their license fees will be arrested.

ARIZONA PEOPLE DO NOT HOLD VILLA RAID AGAINST CARRANZA

The people of southern Arizona desire to see Villa and his band exterminated, but are not hostile to the Carranza administration, is the statement of William Clark of Three Creeks, who returned today from a trip to Chihuahua, Ariz., where he visited relatives. He was accompanied on his return trip by his sister-in-law, Miss Wilson, who, after a short visit, on Three Creeks, will take a trip to their old home in Scotland. Chihuahua is a small place, 15 miles from Douglas and 20 miles from the border, on the El Paso & Southwestern railroad, and about 75 miles from Columbus. Mr. Clark says that there was great excitement there immediately following the raid on Columbus, but the presence of soldiers and the flight of the bandits has tended to greatly allay it.

SALMON SETTLERS TO INTERVENE IN TAX CASE

Engage E. M. Wolfe to Enter as Friend of the Court in the King Hill Case Before Supreme Court.

E. M. Wolfe of this city, representing C. B. Holdeman and a number of other Salmon settlers, will appear before the supreme court Monday, as friend of the court, intervening in behalf of his clients in the tax case of Iven A. Potest versus Owyhee county, now pending on appeal in the supreme court of Idaho. The question involved is the right of the state to tax Carey act lands on which the government has refused to issue patents. In the Bothwell case, previously carried before the supreme court of the United States, it was held by that tribunal that where nothing was lacking but the purely clerical act of issuing the patent, taxes might be levied. The contention of the King Hill settlers and of the Salmon settlers is that, as for different reasons the government will not issue patents, the reasoning in the Bothwell case does not apply.

The case was recently decided against the settlers of the King Hill project by Judge McCarthy in the district court of Owyhee county.

STREET-CLEANING WILL CONTINUE ALL THIS WEEK

The work of cleaning up the streets and alleys was resumed today by Street Commissioner Porter and his forces, having been temporarily discontinued Tuesday on account of bad weather. Mr. Porter says that the cleaning of alleys will go on all week, but that the teams will not go over the same ground the second time. Next week prosecutions of those who have failed to comply will begin.

For the Girls

The spring time of the year and spring time in our hearts. The new time of the year, new joys, new life, and not the least—new clothes. Easter comes so late this year that the spring gown is in its loveliest style, the Easter bonnets in their most fetching array.

Easter Portraits

It's just the time for a portrait; every girl wants her picture taken in her new Easter dress. There's a logical reason, too; she is in the spring time of her life and the portrait made of her now will be cherished when her years of autumn come. We've so many little "home-effect" back-grounds, unusual and quaint, and suited to the grace of girlhood. You'll like them; we are sure of it.

the mothers of the young guests were invited to the dining room where a dainty two-course luncheon was served. The centerpiece was a pink birthday cake with one tiny candle.
The guests were Misses Marion Robbinson, Berolite Kenley, Ruth Weisner, Lydia Kelo, Virginia Carlson, Esther Jocelyn, Irma Hill, Josephine Baker of Burley, and Mrs. Wallace
Cooper.

For a number of weeks the Friday Evening Card club, composed of a number of High Ladies boulevard clubs and their friends, have enjoyed interesting meetings. At the end of the series of seven it was found that Mrs. H. B. Johnson, Mrs. A. Putzer and Mr. W. H. Karis had low scores, so these three members entertained the other members Monday evening.
Mrs. Karis took the party to the life theatre, then all adjourned to the Johnson home, where Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Putzer served a delicious two-course supper. Each guest was presented with a carnation as a token of the evening. All members were present and voted the losers splendid hosts.

Inclement weather on Tuesday caused the attendance at the Twentieth Century club meeting to be small, but much business was transacted, both unfinished and referred to the work of next year. The president, Mrs. Emes, announced her standing committees and it was decided that the rearranging of the committee of next Tuesday's meeting and elect. chairman. A financial report given to the club by Mrs. Swetlow showed splendid work for the past it is gratifying to the members that the club never has been in financial straits and is now in excellent condition.

Next Tuesday afternoon, under the supervision of Mrs. Murphy and Mrs.
Dwight, an operaette entitled "The Methodical Musicians' Club" will be given. Friends of the club are invited to be present. An admission of ten cents will be charged. The refreshment committee will be served by the refreshment committee.

On account of the Eastern Star meeting on the 25th, it was decided to cancel the home social which was to be given on the following Friday, April 28th. Tickets will be on sale for members and their husbands until the morning of the preceding Wednesday, when if any remain unsold, members may dispose of them to friends.

In announcing club events the play-which will be given by the club under the supervision of Mr. Wilfred Olson on May 1st, they have chosen is "The Drowsy" famous play, "The Butterflies," and are promising something especially good.

ROGERSON CAFE MORE POPULAR THAN EVER

Since the opening of Miss Karryn's singing engagement at the Rogerson Cafe, the eating capacity of the special dining room has been taxed to its utmost. With rare ability, Miss Karryn has entertained the guests of the popular cafe so pleasingly that many requests have reached the management in an effort to prolong the dainty little affairs—day in the city, and a pleasant announcement is that Miss Karryn will continue at the Rogerson, until May 1. Tables may be reserved by calling Mrs. Arrill on 711

Rising Costs confront everybody!

This is an era of ascending costs, a period of price advancement without parallel. No statistical chart is needed to prove this—the effect of higher prices is felt by everyone, and is of real concern to all. It is a time for thoroughly weighing values, a time for taking advantage of every opportunity that offers a genuine saving.

Certain-teed Roofing

lowers the cost of building

CERTAIN-TEED offers a substantial saving in roof construction, at this or any other time. It costs less to buy, less to lay, less to maintain and less per year of life. Because of tremendous production (the General makes one third of all the roof roofing made in America), and because of economies effected by enormous resources, modern machinery and favorably located mills, the General is able to make the best roofing at the lowest cost.

CERTAIN-TEED Roofing is the General's own product—from the raw materials to the finished rolls, it is made in the General's huge mills. It is made of the best quality roofing felt, thoroughly saturated with the General's own blend of soft asphalt and coated with an impervious covering of harder asphalt. This keeps the inner situation soft, and prevents the drying out process so destructive to ordinary roofing. That's why CERTAIN-TEED outlasts other roofing. It is guaranteed for 5, 10 or 15 years, according to type. Experience proves that it lasts longer.

CERTAIN-TEED is sold by responsible dealers everywhere at reasonable prices. Investigate it before you decide on any type of roof.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Sheridan's attempt to make a business out of his father's starting him in the machine shop ends in Bibbs going to a sanitarium, a nervous wreck.

CHAPTER II—On his return Bibbs is met at the station by his sister Edith.

CHAPTER III—He finds himself in considerable financial straits, and the "New House" of the Sheridans, who are Mary Vertrees looking at him from a summer home just down.

CHAPTER IV—The Vertreeses, old town family and impoverished, call on the Sheridans, newly rich, and afterward discuss them. Mary puts into words her parents' opinion with that she marry one of the Sheridan boys.

CHAPTER V.

It was a brave and lusty banquet and a noisy one, too, because there was an orchestra among some plants at one end of the long dining room, and after a preliminary stiffness the guests were impelled to converse—necessarily at the tops of their voices. The whole company of fifty sat at a great oblong table, a continent of damask and lace, with shores of crystal and silver running up to spreading groves of orchids and lilies and white roses—an inhabited continent, evidently, for there were three marvelous, gleaming buildings; one in the center and one at each end, white marbles wrought by some inspired craftsman in sculptural idiom. They were models in miniature, and they represented the Sheridan building, the Sheridan apartments, and the pump works. Nearly all the guests recognized them without having to be told what they were, and pronounced them "Idiosyncratic."

The arrangement of the table was visibly bizarre. At the head sat the great Thane, with the flower of his family and of the guests about him; then on each side came the neighbors of the Thane, sitting down to vast and solid tables—superintendents, cashiers, heads of departments, and the like—at the foot, where the Thane's lady took her place as a consolation for the less important. Here, too, among the Thane's friends and relatives, sat Sheridan, a meek Banquo wondering how anybody could look at him and eat.

Nevertheless, there was a vast, contenting sense about the table, with the eating, incessantly. It rose over the throbbing of the orchestra and the clatter and clinking of silver and china and glass, and there was a mighty bubble.

And although the interstices of this clamorous Bibbs could hear the continual booming of his father's heavy voice, and once he caught the sentence, "Yes, young lady, that's just what I did for me, and that's just what I do for my boys—they got to make two blades of grass grow where one grew before!" It was his familiar flourish, an old story to Bibbs, and now joyfully declaimed for the edification of Mary Vertrees.

It was a great night for Sheridan—the very crest of his wave. His big, smooth, red face grew more and more radiant with good-will and with the simplest, happiest, most boyish vanity. He was the picture of health, of good cheer, and of power and of good cheer. He dominated the table, shouting jocular questions and milleries at everyone. His idea was that when people were having a good time they were happy; and his own addition to the hubbub increased his pleasure, and, of course, met the warmest encouragement from his guests. He kept time to the music continually—with his feet, or pounding on the table with his fist, and sometimes with a pointed knife upon his plate or a glass, without permitting these side-products to interfere with the real business of eating and shouting.

"Tell 'em to play 'Nancy Lee,'" he would bellow down the length of the table to his wife, while the musicians were in the midst of the "Toreador" song, perhaps. "Ask that fellow—if they don't know 'Nancy Lee.'" And when the leader would shake his head apologetically, he would shout to the shriek from Mrs. Sheridan, the "Toreador" continuing vehemently. Sheridan would roar half-remembered fragments of "Nancy Lee," naturally mingling some blurt with the air of that uxorious tribune.

No external bubbling contributed to this effervescence; the Sheridans' table had never borne wine, and more because of timidity about it than conviction. It was the rule, and certainly no wine could have inspired more turbulent good spirits in the host. Not even Bibbs was an ally in this night's happiness, for, as Mrs. Sheridan had said, he had "plans for Bibbs"—plans which "must" come to fruition, and some things that had gone wrong.

So he pointed the table and boomed his echoes of old songs, and then, forgetting these, would renew his friendly rallies, or perhaps, turning to Mary Vertrees, who sat near him, round the corner of the table at his right; he would become autobiographical. Gentlemen less naïve than he had paid her that tribute, for she was a girl who inspired the autobiographical impulse in every man who met her—it needed but the sight of her.

The dinner seemed, somehow, to reflect about Mary Vertrees and the joyous host as a play centers about its hero and heroine; they were the rubicund king and the starry princess of the spectacle—they paid court to each other, and everybody paid court to them. Down near the sugar pump works, where Bibbs sat, there was audible speculation and admiration. "Wonder who that lady is—what's her name with the old man?" "Must be some heiress." "Heiress? Golly, I guess I could stand it to marry rich, then!"

Edith and Sibyl were radiant; at first they had watched Miss Vertrees with an almost benign mystery, wondering what she meant, "sweet Sheridan's pastoral garbles—and other things—would have upon her, but she seemed delighted with everything, and with him most of all. She treated him as if he were some delicious, foolish old joke that she understood perfectly, laughing at him almost violently when he bragged—probably his first experience of that kind in his life. It enchanted him.

As he proclaimed to the table, she had "a way with her." She had, indeed, as Roscoe Sheridan, upon her right, discovered just after the feast began. Since his marriage three years before, no lady had bestowed upon him also because they were next-door neighbors at table, and it's dull times ahead for both of us if we don't get along." Roscoe was a droll young man, all stocks and bonds, and "he had brought up to believe that when a man married he 'married and settled down.' He knew that young married people might have friendships, like his wife's with Mr. Lamborn, and he himself never "dried"—they were always very matter-of-fact with each other. Roscoe would have been troubled if Sibyl had ever told Lamborn she hoped he was amiable.

"Yes—we're neighbors," he said, awkwardly, "I live across the street." "Why, no?" she exclaimed, and seemed startled. "Your mother told me this afternoon that you lived at No. 12." Sibyl's deep color came into her cheeks.

"No," he said; "my wife and I lived with the old folks—the first year, but that's all. Edith and Jim live with them, of course."

"No," he said, the deep color still deepening as she turned from him and saw, written upon a card before the gentleman at her left, the name, "Mr. James Sheridan, Jr., and from that moment Roscoe had little enough to say for wondering what he ought to reply to her disturbing coquetry.

Mr. James Sheridan had been anxiously waiting for the dazzling visitor to "get through with old Roscoe" and give a bachelor a chance. "Old Roscoe" was the son of the father, and was been the steady wheelhorse of the family. As their father habitually boasted, both brothers were "capable, hard-working young business men."

Physically neither was of the height, breadth or depth of the father. Both were young business men's mistakes, and they could have sat for the lithograph of young business men wearing "flit suitings in dark mixtures."

Jim, approving warmly of his neighbor's profile, perceived her access of color, which increased his approbation. "What's that old Roscoe saying to you, Miss Vertrees?" he asked. "These young married men are mighty forward nowadays, but you mustn't let 'em make you blush."

"Am I blushing?" she said. "Are you sure?" And with that she gave him ample opportunity to make sure, repeating with interest the look of her depth of the father. Both must be mistaken, she continued. "I think it's your brother who is blushing. I've thrown him into confusion."

"How?"

She laughed, and then, leaning to him a little, she said, confidentially, as she could make it, under cover of the uproar, "By trying to begin with him a courtesan I meant for you!"

This might well be a style new to Jim; and it was. He supposed it a nonsensical form of badinage, and yet he took his breath. He realized that he wished what she said to be the literal truth, and he was instantly snared by that realization.

"By George!" he said. "I guess you're the kind of girl that can say anything—yes, and get away with it, too!"

She laughed again—in her way, so that he could not tell whether she was laughing at him or at herself or at the nonsense she was talking; and she said: "But you see I don't care whether I get away with it or not. I wish you'd tell me frankly if you think I've got a chance to get away with you?"

"More like if you've got a chance to get away from me!" Jim was inspired to reply. "Not one in the world, especially after beginning by making fun of me like that."

"I mightn't be so much in fun as you think," she said, regarding him with sudden gravity. "Well," said Jim, in simple honesty, "you're a funny girl!"

Her gravity continued an instant longer. "I may not turn out to be funny for you."

"So long as you turn out to be anything at all for me, I expect I can manage to be satisfied." And with that, to his own surprise, it was his turn to blush, whereupon she laughed again.

"Yes," she said, placidly, not wholly lacking intuition, "I can see you're the sort of girl that would laugh the misfortune you see a man really means anything!"

"Laugh?" she cried, gayly. "Why, I should be a matter of life and death. But if you want tragedy, I'd better put the question at once, considering the mistake I made with your brother."

He Pounded the Table and Boomed His Echoes of Old Songs.

so protracted a full view of brilliant eyes, and with the look, his lovely neighbor said—and it was her first speech to him—

"I hope you're very susceptible, Mr. Sheridan."

Honest Roscoe was taken aback, and "Why?" was all he managed to say.

She repeated the look deliberately, which was noted, with a mystification equal to his own, by his sister across the table. No one, reflected Edith, could imagine Mary Vertrees the sort of girl who would "stare" at a married man—she was obviously the "opposite of all that." Edith defined her as "thoroughbred," a "nice girl" and the look given to Roscoe was astounding. Roscoe's wife saw it, too, and she was another whom it amused—though not because its recipient was married.

"Because," said Mary Vertrees, replying to Roscoe's monosyllabic, "And

For the moment Sibyl gave no sign of having heard him, but seemed interested in the clasp of a long "rope" of pearls, a loop of which she was allowing to swing from her fingers, resting her elbow upon the table and following with her eyes the twinkle of diamonds and platinum in the clasp at the end of the loop. She wore, many jewels. She was pretty, but her hair was not the kind of prettiness to be looked with too suspicious accessories, and few jeweled dresses are dangerous—they may emphasize the wrongness of the wrong wear.

"If said Miss Vertrees seems to be staring pretty strong with Jim," repeated Mr. Lamborn.

"I heard you." There was a latent discontent always somewhere in his eyes, no matter what she threw upon the surface to cover it, and just now she did not care to cover it. He looked sullen. "Staring—any stronger than you did with Edith?" she inquired.

"Oh, keep the peace!" he said; crossly. "That's of, of course."

"You haven't been making her so tight this evening—precisely," said Sibyl, looking at him steadily. "You've talked to her for—"

"For heaven's sake," he began, "keep the peace!"

"What, what have you just been doing?"

"She!" he said. "Listen to your father-in-law!"

Sheridan was booming and baying the surface to cover it, and just now he was louder than ever, the orchestra having begun to play "The Rosary" to his vast content.

"I count them over, in-a-tun-te-dum," he roared, beating the measures with his fork. "Each hour a pearl, each pearl a tear—tun-te-dum—What's the matter of all you folks? Why'n't you sing? Miss Vertrees, I bet a thousand dollars you sing! Why'n't you?"

"Mr. Sheridan," he said, turning cheerfully from the ardent Jim, "you don't know what you interrupted. Your son isn't used to so rough a way, but I think he was about to say something important."

"I'll say something important to him if he doesn't!" the father threatened. "Should say the same," he shouted. "Should tell me I was mighty slow if I couldn't get ahead of Jim. Why, when I was his age—"

"You must listen to your father," Mary interrupted, turning to Jim, who had grown red again. "He's going to tell on how when he was young—"

He made those two blades of grass grow out of a teaspoon, and you could see for yourself he didn't get them out of his sleeve!"

Edith looked at him, and then she said, "Look here, young lady!" he roared. "Some of these I'm either going to slap you—or I'm going to kiss you!"

Ideals and Enterprise

Ambition is never satisfied with existing conditions; it continually strives for the ideal.

Enterprise cannot be content with the accomplishments of today; it must needs accomplish bigger things on the morrow.

Enterprise is ambition in action. It is the force that carries the ambitious toward the goal of their ideals.

Our Company is a company of ideals.

We have ideals of construction standards, ideals of service efficiency and ideals of our duty to the public.

To the enterprise of our army of five thousand ambitious men and women, with the ideals of their Company ever before them, is due the credit of building, maintaining and operating the comprehensive telephone system which serves the people of the Mountain States.

It is this enterprise that has connected 280,000 telephones together, from which originate over a million exchange messages every day, and more than six and a half million long distance messages every year.

establishment of suitable law is an essential to the realization of peace. Moreover, the achievements of these conferences have impressed the world with the possibility and the desirability of "making the practice of civilized nations conform to their peaceful professions." The hope of civilization lies in the progressive effort which has given to the family of nations the germ of an international law making body. Law is the only substitute for war.

The present is not a time for hopeless dejection, in spite of the momentous struggle across the water which seems to demonstrate the overturning of international law. Upon close examination we see signs of very great progress. Almost all the European powers proposed recourse to the Hague tribunal or to a conference of interested powers to avoid war, and when this was not successful, every intelligent government, without exception, published its reasons for going to war, according to the Hague convention. This appeal to the public opinion of mankind has no historical precedent. Never before have the nations upon such a broad scale sought to justify their actions at this bar of this tribunal.

Our task is to strengthen public opinion, which is the only practicable sanction for international law. Nothing stands for offers the only hope to war-stricken Europe. This common tribunal is the only light upon the horizon, and it is the duty of us all to keep this light burning. The opening of the first Hague peace conference on May 18, 1899, without doubt, the starting point and the center of international progress. This conference is described by international jurists as more conspicuous in the present war than the sensitiveness of the belligerents to the charges of violations of treaties and the establishment of law of nations. No breach of international law in this war was unnoticed. The combined action of modern powers, represented chiefly by the Hague conference, has developed this sense of responsibility—a great step in world progress; and it is not a mere supposition to expect that one outcome of the peace settlement conference will be the recognition that violation of international law is a legal injury to every nation. The present activities should develop into conscience, so that the peace which ends this unfortunate war and the means taken to prevent the violation of its terms will make a new era in international relations. This peace, which follows the peace of Westphalia in 1648, the Peace of Utrecht in 1713, and the treaty of Vienna in 1815, the three celebrated cases of combined European action should usher in an era of law which, as Mr. Root says, will "constrain nations to conduct based upon principles of justice and humanity."

This should be the great step forward. This is the only compensation for the terrible interruption of the processes of civilization. Should not the celebration of Peace Day this year clothe with new significance the meaning of arbitration, mediation, investigation, and conciliation for preventing & destructive warfare? One might well include in this observance a description of the permanent court of arbitration at The Hague and show its effectiveness in settling the fifteen important cases which have been taken before it since 1902. The formation of a real world court, so nearly accomplished at the second Hague conference, should also be emphasized as an ideal for which the world has hoped and waited. A Peace Day observance in the schools this year offers a great opportunity to take note of these solid foundations of law and order, and above all to point out the underlying spirit of nationality, strife, and especially have the teachers of this nation—a nation founded on democracy—universal brotherhood and good-will which has brought the world to the present stage of civilization. In order this spirit persists will civilization achieve its ideals.

Of all the institutions working for the unification of mankind, the school comes first. On this point the administrator, education in this critical time rests the responsibility of preserving and advancing those ideals for which all civilized nations strive, and especially have the teachers of this nation—a nation founded on democracy—universal brotherhood and good-will which has brought the world to the present stage of civilization. In order this spirit persists will civilization achieve its ideals.

REFERENCE WORK AT LIBRARY ARE BOUND

All Magazines of Reference Back to 1910 Are to Be Preserved—Have Index Catalogues.

The work of binding the reference magazines in the Twin Falls library is now under way and copies of the Atlantic for the past five years and of the Outlook for several years are now ready. The North American Review, the Review of Reviews and the Literary Digest will also be bound as far back as 1910 against. Reference index books, which furnish means for readily finding any article in any of the magazines, are on hand. Six volumes of Verner's Spenser, ten volumes of Irish Literature, 20 volumes of the Young Folks' Library and a banquet book have been added to the library.

GREAT EFFORTS MADE FOR PEACE MEETING MONDAY
The Socialist and some other citizens who have become interested are making an effort to get out the largest crowd possible to the meeting Monday night in the high school auditorium, where a program has been made to endorse the bill introduced by Congressman Meyer, London, of New York, for the appropriation of $100,000 to endeavor to secure peace.

CARD OF THANKS.
We desire to extend to all the kind friends who offered assistance and sympathy during our recent bereavement our heartfelt thanks.

NAMES OF NOTE IN CAST OF NEW BILLIE BURKE PLAY

Thomas H. Ince is probably the most prodigal of that trio of motion picture producers—Griffith-Ince-Bennett—for whom the Triangle Film Corporation is named. Nothing is too expensive for Ince when he conceives an effect and starts to carry it out.

For instance, he decided that he wanted Billie Burke to star in a Triangle picture under his direction. And he obtained her signature to a contract in spite of the young star's determination to appear under her husband's management after she had left the Frohman fold. Then he provided a bungalow, private yacht and fast motor for her exclusive use. He spent lavishly on his production, even to the point of building an entire Scotch village in Santa Ynez canyon.

Following a consistent course, Ince then selected an exceptional cast of supporting players for Miss Burke. The role of the Scotch uncle was assigned to William H. Thompson, the veteran character actor, sometimes called the dean of the American stage. William Desmond, for many years associated with the best of American stage productions, became the Scotch "unclester," who eventually wins the love of the American heiress, transplanted to a Highland setting. Charles Ray, remembered for his fall from the bridge in "The Coward," played the fickle whose love for the weaver's lass furnishes the real dramatic situation of "Peggy." Gertrude Claire, the Ince "mother," appeared in a typical role and numerous Scotch types were portrayed by capable Icelandic players.

"Peggy" will be shown at the Orpheum theatre one night only, next Monday.

The Theodore Lorch company presented for the second time in Twin Falls the splendid dramatization of "Today" Wednesday evening. The play was worthy of much better attendance than it had and Twin Falls should consider itself fortunate in having an opportunity to see these excellent plays presented by so capable a company.

A Faithful Car

Men and women nowadays who buy automobiles, rightly demand dependability. They want a car which they know will serve them faithfully.

The new Case 40, the latest of a line of successes, meets this demand. It is deliberately built as a 100,000 mile car.

The New Case 40—$1090.

As you study the new Case 40, you must be impressed with its simplicity. A close examination will CONVINCE you conclusively that this new Case 40 will add to our world-wide reputation for building only the very best products in each of our extensive lines. We are living up to the principles established by the founder of this company in 1892.

The comfort of this car is unusual. Remember its wheelbase is 120 inches and its cantilever springs are attached to the rear axle in a way that is exclusive in Case cars. By it the springs do only spring duty. For lines, comfort, power, endurance—this car at $1090 is an opportunity. We will be glad to point out its superiorities, or to send you BY MAIL an illustrated description.
