COMPANY D ARRIVES IN BOISE IN FINE CONDITION AND ALL READY FOR EVENTUALITIES

Boys From This City Received With Enthusiasm in the Capital City—Boise Fairly Seething With Patriotic Fervor—Twin Falls and Buhl Boys Escorted by Band—No Plans for Leaving Announced as Yet.

(By Lent, H. E. Leighton, Special Times' Correspondent With Company D.)
BOISE, Id., June 22.—The boys arrived in the state capital in fine shape yesterday. Company D had 72 men, all of whom appeared as fine as fiddlers, and all tuned up for eventualities. Company K of Buhl, had 64 men on hand, and they were ready to take their share of the mess and do their duty whatever it might be. The Boise band met us at the depot and escorted us through the streets which were lined with enthusiastic citizens, all of whom appeared as patriotic as the man and woman who bore the brunt of the Revolutionary struggle, and possibly have been. In fact, the state capital was in a ferment of excitement, following the monster preparations parade held the night before which was led by the G. A. R., the Spanish

In the event of war with Mexico on Monday of recruits will be received at the office of THE TIMES for a Rough Rider regiment, which will be organized by Colonel Thomas Hamer, of St. Anthony. The work of enlisting at Buhl and at Filer will be in the hands of John Warren White, editor of the Buhl Pioneer, and Harry McKinley, a former resident of this city and Filer. Colonel Hamer was head of the Idaho regiment in the Philippine war, and Mr. White served there in a Ne-

General Gomez, Carranza Commander, Killed In Bloody Encounter With Americans

WAR MAY BE DECLARED ANY MOMENT

In bloody battle between American and Mexican soldiers near Carrizal, Mexico, forty Americans and twenty Mexicans were killed, the Mexican casualties including General Felix Gomez, a Carranza general. American report is that troops were ambushed while returning from scouting trip. Mexicans claim their messenger was fired on by American captain. Mexicans use machine gun, accounting for heavy American losses. Mexicans claim to have captured seventeen Americans. Will be taken to Chihuahua City. Believed that if attack was attempted to back up Carranza's edict by force, that war will result. General Pershing expected to avenge killing of soldiers by pursuit of attacking force.

EL PASO, Tex.—A detachment of American cavalry clashed with Carranza forces at Carrizal, about 90 miles south of El Paso, early Wednesday, both sides suffering heavy casualties, according to official reports received by Mexican military authorities in Juarez Wednesday night.

According to the report which the Mexican commander at Juarez, gave out a statement in which he announced officially that the Mexican command had taken 17 American prisoners. He also said that General Gomez' death had been confirmed, but said he had no official reports as to the number of casualties on either side. The Americans, both American and Mexican, the exact number of whom is not known here, were taken to Villa Ahumada.

Later General Francisco Gonzales, Mexican commander at Juarez, gave out a statement in which he announced officially that the Mexican command had taken 17 American prisoners. He also said that General Gomez' death had been confirmed, but said he had no official reports as to the number of casualties on either side.

The engagement took place on the Santa Domingo ranch, near the Mexican town of Carrizal, which is nine miles south of Villa Ahumada, the Mexican field headquarters in northern Chihuahua. The number of dead, American or Mexican, was not definitely known here Wednesday night. Whichever side began the engagement, the Mexicans had the advantage for they had provided themselves with a machine gun, and this is supposed to have done deadly execution in the ranks of the Americans.

Another case of a man being killed by a machine gun was reported from the Twin Falls County. A man named Smith, who was a member of the local militia, was killed by a machine gun while on duty. The man was killed by a machine gun while on duty.

TWIN FALLS BIDS GOODBYE TO BOYS

Large Crowd Turns Out to Early Morning Departure

Firm Handshakes and Cheerful Smiles Given Soldiers

Big Mass Meeting Held Tuesday Night And Tribute Is Given To Company D, I. N. G.

Twin Falls arose bright and early Wednesday morning to see the brave boys in khaki off for the trip to Boise and the border, and long before the train arrived a vast crowd had congregated, coming from all parts of the city and from the country round about. The "old boys" who had worn the blue in the '90's were on hand in a body, bearing "Old Glory," the wives and sweethearts of the departing troops stood by their sides, and before the train started their firm handshakes and cheerful smiles. Fathers and mothers, too, were there praying that the confident prediction of Captain P. W. McRobert, "We're coming back," might, in all cases be fulfilled. The long train pulled into the station and out of the cars Company K, of Buhl, all full of exuberance, for the crucial moment of parting had past with them and they were gay from the reaction. They came in cheering and heartily did the crowd respond. There was a last mixing, a last goodbye, as the band, or what was left of it, played patriotic airs. The G. A. R. gave three cheers and a tiger, while the Buhl contingent shouted "What's the matter with Twin Falls? She's All Right! Whose all right? Twin Falls! Buhl! Buhl!" and again, the echo coming back from the assembled multitude. The train pulled away, last lingering glances were thrown back, until the main street crossing was passed, when the boys turned hopefully to the future, fully prepared to meet all contingencies.

SHARP WARNING TO CARRANZA

"Gravest Consequences" Will Follow if He Carries Out Threats

DEMAND FOR WITHDRAWAL OF TROOPS FLATLY REJECTED

"United States Will Perform Full Duty." Must Demonstrate Ability to Protect Border.

WASHINGTON.—The American note flatly rejecting Gen. Carranza's demand for the withdrawal of United States troops from Mexico and rebuking the Carranza government for the "discourteous tone and temper of its last communication," was handed today to Eliseo Arredondo, the Mexican ambassador-designate.

FURNITURE BOUGHT FOR KIMBERLY HIGH

The school board has ordered furniture for the new high school and will have it on hand when the building is completed. The furniture is now practically in and work is being pushed.

Mrs. H. Atkinson, of Santa Cruz, Calif., moves this week for her home after a visit at the home of her son, B. H. Atkinson. She has been on the tract for the past three weeks, part of which time has been spent visiting in Eden.

Mrs. John Warren White of Buhl, is back from a visit in Boise and is now in quest of new patients.

N. W. Swearingen, back from Salt Lake City, where he went last week with Henry Seaver. Mr. Seaver returned to take treatment in the L. D. S. hospital for his eyes, which were injured some months ago by coming in contact with locust thorns.

The first Pleasure Film is now completed, and will be shown at a local theatre about the first of July, said James Tate, manager of the Pleasure Producing Co. "When this happens the people of this city will be treated to an entertainment which will be at once as good a production as is usually shown by the larger film corporations. This film has employed only local talent and has been staged and photographed by local men, using equipment secured by local capital. The enterprise is unique, because it is the first one of its kind to be organized in Idaho and when it has had time to organize, its activities will undoubtedly prove a very good advertising medium for Idaho and what Idaho offers. It will especially feature the Twin Falls tract, and as these films will be distributed throughout the entire country, it is a foregone conclusion that much good will come to this city.

The film is a two-reel, semi-western drama entitled "The Man of Sorrows," and from the standpoint of plot is especially strong. The acting of the characters is far better than was at first expected, and the show-going public will no doubt doubt enjoy a pleasant surprise when the picture is thrown on the screen. The cast included Mildred Conway, Loretta Walters, Mrs. J. R. Conway, O. G. Devery, John Johnson, James L. Tate, and Wm. L. Rogers, in the title role.

IDAHO THEATRE OPENS FRIDAY

New Picture House Ready For First Performance

UP-TO-DATE IMPROVEMENTS ARE FEATURES.

Ticket Seller, Fire Protectors, and Anti-Panic Locks on Exits, Installed in Theatre.

Tomorrow evening, Friday, June 23, is the date set for the grand opening of the Idaho Theatre, Twin Falls. The new picture house, in the new Sullivan & Wilkinson building on Main street, everything will be in readiness and a special program consisting of the seven-reel photo play,
"Poor Little Poppin," featuring Mary Pickford, together with a special orchestra, will be presented.

The theatre building has been in construction since March 1, and in opening this theatre, the management feels that it is placing before the public the best and most up-to-date picture house in southern Idaho. No expense has been spared in providing every safety and convenience, and the promoters are confident that Twin Falls can feel justly proud of its new addition in the way of a theatre.

E. B. Williams, formerly of the Per-nina hotel, and J. F. Allen are the promoters of the Idaho theatre. They are busy superintending the finishing touches so that everything will be complete for Friday evening. Painters, carpenters, electricians and scenery men are quickly completing their work.

A large electric sign will attract the crowds to the large, roomy entrance lobby, finished in white. Rubber tiling is being laid to assure readiness and comfort to patrons. The box office at the left of the entrance is large and a $200 electrically run National Cash Register ticket-seller is being installed. The machine automatically prints number, date and price paid on tickets which are taken from opening in machine by patron. In addition to this, the machine makes it possible to sell, at any time, the price of tickets sold, the total of tickets sold in the house, and the grand total of receipts.

Another feature of the new theatre,
the fire-proof steel and asbestos operating cases. The ceiling, floor and walls of the operator's room consist of sheets of asbestos sandwiched between sheets of steel, making the room absolutely fire-proof. The various openings are automatically closed.

The room is fourteen feet by seven feet, and is located high and containing two Powers operating machines. The management claims these to be the best machines made, over 65 per cent of the picture picture houses in the United States using them.

These are motor driven machines run
by a Westinghouse generating set, guaranteeing a perfectly smooth projection on the screen. The machines are also equipped with special fire prevents connected with fusible links which operate in case of accident to limit burning area of film to the minimum, shutting off rest of film from danger. Liability of fire through overlooking of film, is thus greatly minimized.

The interior of the theatre is finished in brown and tan. All draperies are in the latest style and the effect will be rich and pleasing. The draperies will stretch across the rear passageway, and over the doors and windows.

The seating capacity will be 550.
Plenty of room is assured in the seats.
There are 19 inches wide, with a 30-inch space between rows, thus guaranteeing plenty of knee room and accommodation of persons in the row without necessity of standing.

The indirect system of lighting will be used in the auditorium. Sufficient light will be on to permit the easy
location of seats during a performance.
The light will come from eight
large bronze chandeliers.

The back wall of the stage is prepared with a special fire composition on which will be projected the platform. The harmful glare to the eyes usually present when seats are too close to the screen will be eliminated by having the screen on the back wall there will be no glare, thirty feet between it and the front seats.

"The orchestra pit will accommodate an orchestra of 12 pieces. This pit is equipped with a false floor, making possible the transformation into a regular city if necessary. The stage is set by 50 and has an arrangement of scenery sufficient to accommodate all vaudeville acts and special attractions.
Lighting comes from sixty 60-watt lamps. A switch board, which has been installed which is complete, including a dimmer, a feature which is the first of its kind in Twin Falls. This dimmer will make possible wide variations in lighting effects and is a convenience often required by traveling companies. The large dressing rooms are being completed under the stage.

The heating of the theatre will be by the vacuum system of steam heat.
For ventilation, the arrangement of the interior allows easy change of air.
At present six high power fans are installed for ventilation and later the mechanism of ventilation, naturally a change of air is made possible through opening in the floor of the auditorium.

For fire protection there are six sets of double doors, together with a double door and one single door exit on the stage. The house could be emptied very quickly in case of fire. A particular feature of the exits is the installation on each of the double doors of a set of Corbin's Anti-Panic door locks. These locks consist of a brass rod waist high across the middle of each door. When the door is closed these rods fasten the doors tight from the outside. In case of fire, however, a pressure of couple of pounds against these rods causes them to fly open. By the use of these locks it will always be possible to get out of the theatre in instances of danger.

MILLER EVANS TO GO TO GRANTS PASS, ORE.

Will Take Charge of Theatre—Is Versatile Gentleman and Will Make Good There.

Miller Evans, land agent, wit, poet,
and above all good citizen, leaves Saturday for Grants Pass, Ore., where he will assume the management of a theatre putting, raising shows, and moving pictures. Mr. and Mrs. Evans are prominent socially in this city and will be missed by everyone. Miller is an actor of the first class and of making good in any of them.
His original song, "The Mistakes of Moses," wherein he lampooned the chief executive of Idaho in a good-natured way, proved the real hit of the republican convention, bringing forth wild applause from the delegates. His numerous friends of the convention laughed until their ribs rattled. The unanimous opinion here is that the Grants Pass theatre is assured.

S. J. Donaldson, president of the Southern Idaho Producers association, and G. W. Mathes, auditor of the same organization, were here this week to visit J. E. Weaver, the local manager, with a view of preparing for the fight on the lumber mill, resulting from the introduction of that pest into the state in violation of quarantine laws recently. The moth has made no headway yet and it is hoped to prevent it from getting a footing.
J. E. Thorne will be in charge of the military band of Second Idaho during the activities on the frontier. "He contemplated organizing a band at Sand Point, but the development of the last few days have made that project impossible. The military band will be made up of members of the regiment.

RAFT RIVER LINE WILL BE BUILT

President E. E. Calvin Makes Announcement of Fact

FULLY CONFIRMS TIMES STORY
OF LAST JANUARY.

More Believed First Step in Anticipation of Building of Western Pacific Here.

A Salt Lake City newspaper announces as coming from President E.
E. Calvin of the Union Pacific system that the construction of a new line of the old Salt Lake & Idaho railroad has been authorized by him and that the cost of the proposed line will be in the neighborhood of $200,000. This confirms the statement made exclusively by THE TIMES last January that it was in possession of reliable information that this extension of the raft river branch would be constructed this year. It was pointed out at the time that this plan was plausible, on wonderful development of the country through which the line would extend. It is believed in railroad circles that this is the first step toward the building of the main talked of cut-off from Burley to Saline which would mean a saving of six hours on passenger and 16 hours on freight trains running to the Pacific coast. The move is generally taken to indicate that the Union Pacific is convinced that the Western Pacific system is a reality. The branch of the Twin Falls to Wells, as the new line it extended as anticipated would be of strategic importance in the securing of freight.

The indirect system of lighting will be used in the auditorium. Sufficient
light will be on to permit the easy
location of seats during a performance.
The light will come from eight
large bronze chandeliers.

CITY HAS RECORD IN NUMBER OF EIGHTH GRADE GRADUATES

Compared With Elementary Grade Enrollment, Number of Pupils Graduating Eighth Grade, Higher Than Other Cities.

During the last school year, one hundred and twenty-nine boys and girls graduated from the eighth grade of the high school. Of these one hundred and twenty-nine, forty-two graduated in January, 1916, at the close of the first semester of the school year. The remainder graduated at the close of the year in May, 1916.
Two classes comprise the largest number of eighth-grade graduates in any single school year in the history of the local schools. No other school sys-percentage of eighth grade graduates on the basis of the enrollment in the

TWO DRIVERS TAKEN UP
FOR CROSSING FIRE HOSE
Ben and James Harrison, who are hauling gravel for the state highway, were taken before City Clerk W. Hall Saturday afternoon, on complaint of Fire Chief F. A. Carlson, for damaging fire hose by crossing it with loading wagons. The fire hose was in the during the road blaze in the Troy laundry. No charge was entered against them, the men agreeing to pay for the damaged hose, which amounted to $50. Mr. Carlson is very earnest in his efforts to stop persons crossing the fire hose and states that the next time he will be dealt with more seriously.

Telegraph Business Is Barometer of Good Times

WEEKLY INCREASE AVERAGES 40 PER CENT. OVER LAST YEAR.

Money Transfer Has Doubled in Last Year, Says Local Telegraph Manager.

According to H. H. Hedstrom, local manager of the Western Union office, Twin Falls is enjoying unusual prosperity, a condition which seems to be more evident here than at outside points.

"The telegraph business," said Mr. Hedstrom, "is one of the most accurate business barometers in the country. People do not send messages during hard times unless absolutely necessary. There has been a marked increase in messages sent from Twin Falls during the past few weeks, and this is indicative of general prosperity in and around the city."

"There has been an increase of from $50 to $125 a week over corresponding weeks a year ago. The average increase is 40 per cent. Business in this office last week totaled $222, the total for the same week last year being $210."

Another factor indicating "good times," said Mr. Hedstrom, is the increase in money transfer by telegraph. This phase of the business has more than doubled in the last year. The cablegram business has also grown in volume.

The Western Union has in use a graph system by which the management is able to note the fluctuations in the business of each office. In the local office, said Mr. Hedstrom, the system shows that for the past two years business has been running on without fluctuation. The last few weeks, however, the increase has been marked and the turn-over is higher now than it has ever been before. The manager states that, a comparison of the local graph with those from the outside shows that business prosperity is centered about Twin Falls, and the money seems to originate here.

This general increase is noteworthy, standing June and July are usually the poorest months in the telegraph business. The increase has warranted the addition to the local force of one extra operator and an extra messenger-clerk, and Mr. Hedstrom says the company does not add to its force unless the business increases has every indication of being permanent.

Mr. Hedstrom is optimistic in regard to the fall outlook in the telegraph business. September, October and November are the heaviest months in wire traffic and he believes the already heavy business enjoyed by the local office, will see still greater increase.

HOW GASOLINE EXPLOSIONS FROM STATIC ELECTRICITY CAN BE PREVENTED

THE SAFETY FIRST department of the Oregon Short Line railroad has sent letters to all its employees, containing an article clipped from The Travelers Standard, urging automobile users to exercise care in generating power for their cars, and pointing out many dangers which may be averted by a little precaution. The advice, while directed to the employees of the railroad, is of interest to all automobilists.

It is as follows: For some time reports have been received of fires originating during the handling of gasoline when there was apparently no means of starting a fire. No persons near the gasoline were either smoking or carrying matches, and there were no open lights of any kind in the vicinity. To all appearances the fires "just happened, without any cause whatever. This, of course, is contrary to all experience, and, after considerable investigation the fires have been found to be due to ignition of gasoline vapor by sparks of static electricity.

In the interest of safety, so far as concerns accidents from the electric ignition of gasoline, official instructions to the following effect have been issued to the various police and fire departments in the state of Massachusetts:

1. In drawing gasoline from a pump into the metal of the car, should always be in electrical contact with the metal of the pump, so that any electricity that may be generated can pass off quietly through the pump to the ground. Wooden handles or other insulating substances on the balls of cans should be removed at once, so that when a can is hung by the ball on the hook all parts of the can will be in electrical contact with the pump. We know of two fires that have been caused by neglect of this precaution.

2. In filling the tank of a motor vehicle with gasoline from a pump, the driver should have the metal of the car in electrical contact with the metal of the tank, and also have the can from which the gasoline is poured kept in electrical contact with the tank, or the funnel. If it is necessary to cut the mouth of the can during the act of pouring, a piece of clean cloth should be folded over the mouth of the can used for this purpose, and the end of the chain should be allowed to rest in electrical contact with the tank or the funnel, and preferably with both of them. Blocks of wood or other insulating substances should never be placed around the filling hole of the tank to make the funnel stand upright during the process of filling, because they insulate the funnel from the tank and allow electricity to accumulate in the metal of the funnel, when it would otherwise pass off harmlessly as fast as formed to the metal of the vehicle. It has been observed that many stands on the rubber covering of the running board of a motor vehicle and fills the tank with gasoline from a can which he holds in the air, causing a spark and resulting fire, when the can is brought near any metal substance. Hence the necessity of the copper chain and of electrical contact with the funnel and the tank during filling. Neglect of these precautions has resulted in at least five fires.

3. In filling the tank of a motor vehicle with gasoline from a pump with a hose having a metal nozzle, it has been known to occur from frictional electricity generated by the passage of gasoline through the rubber hose, and collecting in dangerous intensity in the metal nozzle, from which it is discharged by means of a spark when the nozzle is brought near any metal substance. During the process of filling in this manner the metal nozzle should be kept in electrical contact with the car tank or the fuel with a metal fitting should be used. A bare copper wire passed through the inside of the hose and soldered to the metal of the nozzle at one end, and to the metal of the pump connection at the other prevents the accumulation of electricity in the gasoline inside of the hose, by conducting it off to the pump and the ground. At least two fires have been caused by neglecting these precautions.

Recent tests prove that as high as 500 volts can easily be generated by the forced passage of gasoline over non-conducting substances. Automobiles should also protect against accumulation of deadly gas (carbon monoxide) in garages from running engines, as it has produced fatal results, due to asphyxiation. If an engine is run indoors, care should be taken to provide ample ventilation to expel the gas.

RABIES—AN ANSWER.

Have just read the letter in THE TIMES by the "Doubter," and I have no doubt that if he were bitten by a bound or any other dog showing symptoms of the so-called rabies, the train couldn't go fast enough to carry him to Boise to receive the pasteur treatment. "Doubter" displays a wonderful amount of ignorance in put his own opinions before some of our most skilled physicians.

I can swear to what I have seen in any court in the land. Some of the rest of us have seen "poisoned" dogs also. I have read works on rabies also, and believe it to be a specific blood-poisoning transmissible to other animals, man included, in the same form as the one's having it. I feel "Doubter" forgot to read the last part of this. It being a confirmed bachelorette no doubt puts a dog's intelligence far ahead of a woman's or child's and prefers to believe his affection on a pack of hounds. . . . Yours, "WITHOUT A DOUBT."

Why Leave Machinery in the Rain?

It is proved that machines exposed to the weather rust three times as quickly as they rust out. In other words, out of every dollar you invest in a machine, rust gets three of them if you let it.

Some men use their barns to store their tools, but usually there isn't enough dry space. Why not keep it in a shed? It's the modern way.

THE BOOZE JOINT AT TWIN SPRINGS

An organized effort which originated in Kimberly, is being made to induce the commissioners of Elko county, Nevada, to revoke the license under which a saloon, just across the state boundary, fifteen miles south of Rogerson, is operated.

The officials of Elko county will be entirely within their legal rights if they decline to heed the request which it is presumed the governor of Idaho will make in response to the petitions which are being addressed to him by the people of this county. It is to be hoped, however, that as a matter of courtesy, and while not legally obligated, certainly morally obligated, Elko county will accede to the wishes of the people of Twin Falls county in this respect.

That the state of Nevada has not seen fit to enact a prohibition law or that Elko county prefers to be "wet" instead of "dry," are matters which pertain to the people of that state and county, and with which the people of Idaho and particularly the Twin Falls county have no disposition to interfere. In the absence of any national prohibition act the alcohol climate of Nevada is a condition that the Nevada people have a right to determine for themselves. No interference of any character with this right is contemplated by those asking the discontinuance of the Twin Springs resort.

It is because the Twin Springs institution was established and is maintained solely to interfere with the right of this county and the right of this state to discontinue the use of intoxicating liquors within the limits of the state and county, that the commissioners of Elko county, Nevada, are petitioned to dispense with this booze joint, which obviously is being conducted not for the purpose of supplying the demands of Nevada people, but solely to profit by an illicit trade from Idaho.

We are confident that if the matter is properly presented to the commissioners of Elko county they will cooperate with this county to the extent of refusing to license a saloon whose income depends solely upon a trade that violates the laws of a neighboring state. However, much the prohibition advocates of this county might like to see the liquor traffic in Nevada or Elko county entirely eliminated, they cannot go further in their requests to the commissioners of Elko county; nor do we understand that they propose to.

If Elko county will grant such a reasonable request it will go a long way towards improving the situation, lessening the illegal traffic in liquor, and making it possible for the officials of Twin Falls county to come somewhere near establishing the standard of "dryness" in this vicinity that the people want.

REJECTS SCHEME
FOR ADVERTISINGCommercial Club Turns Down
Herald PropositionMERCHANTS SAY MONEY BETTER
EXPENDED LOCALLY.Large Crowd Views Motion Picture
Taking at Shoshone Falls Wednesday Afternoon.

The Twin Falls Commercial club and the Merchants association decided yesterday morning after long consideration, that they would not accept the offer of the Chicago Herald to give publicity to Twin Falls, for the consideration of $2000 to pay "for packing and shipping only," as the "Free Cure" distributors say, and that a sound and sensible campaign for improvement toward development of the Bruneau and other tracts would do more for the business interests of the city than the expenditure of a large sum of money on the movie crowds in the interest of a Chicago newspaper could possibly do.

Another argument brought forth against the advertising proposition was that this type of publicity would not reach the class of settlers who would be of value in the interests of this locality. As all the land at present is taken up there is no room for the less substantial farmer of the middle west.

The plan as originally described by Walter A. Foderick, advance man of the paper, to the newspapers of this county, was to have the Chicago Herald, President M. S. Beatty of the Amazon Film company to be used in motion pictures in 1000 towns and cities through the middle west, and the description of the towns, cities, and surrounding country by a special writer. For this service the newspaper was to be repaid in subscription. The club was also to have the privilege of placing an exhibit in a show in Chicago, fully described in these columns at the time. Mr. Foderick added that Walter D. Williams representing the paper, would further describe the matter on his arrival, Tuesday, June 26. Mr. Williams did. He arrived with B. A. Smith of Omaha, colonization and industrial agent of the Union Pacific, and President Beatty, Tuesday afternoon and told the matter before the club, mentioning the incidental feature of the $2000. The business men were skeptical. One man suggested that the sort of immigrants that would come were principally those who would add to competition in business and on the labor market rather than those who would develop the agricultural resources of the tract. Others objected to take the matter up with the Merchants association and Wednesday morning another meeting was held at which the proposition was definitely rejected.

The vote taken, however, had to be settled by the chairman, as those present were equally for and against the proposition to have the movie taken.

One of the largest stockholders in the Chicago Herald is said to be President Sears of the Sears-Roebuck company and it has been suggested that the method is another manifestation of his ability to get his business enterprises before the public.

A large number of Twin Falls people were present at Shoshone falls yesterday afternoon to attend the motion picture taking by the Amazon Pictures Co. Pictures were taken of the falls with its wonderful scenic beauty as well as, pictures of the Blue Lakes region.

The other act, shown on the Orpheum program was taken from the same source. It was seen at a high class vaudeville house. LILLIAN WALKER AT ISIS

IN "GREEN STOCKINGS"

Refusing to continue as the family drudge, because of her failure to "land a husband," Cella, the oldest daughter of a crafty capitalist and his wife, creates a fiasco out of her imagination. Prior to that time she was forced to wear green stockings at the wedding of her younger sister—an old English lord, who is working her entrance into spindrift.

Her announcement caused a decided change in the attitude of her family and friends toward her and she becomes the pet of the household. Suits appear, seeing hitherto unrecalled charms, pay her attention and her life becomes bright once more.

As a mark of devotion toward Cella, the name she calls her lover by, she is forced to pen him many tender letters. Without her knowledge, these find their way into the past, and eventually find their way into the hands of a Col. Smith, quartered in the South Africa. He is puzzled in the extreme but finds much delight in reading the letters and develops a great curiosity to see and talk with their author.

Such is the way the story of "Green Stockings" starts. The working out of this pretty comedy by Miss Walker shows her at her best and the story itself will prove intensely interesting.

In addition to Miss Walker, Ham and Bud are shown in a one-reel comedy, Friday and Saturday.

Mack Bennett says he is a little suspicious that some of the Triangle-Kellogg directors tried their last picture on the town with the opening of the trout season. Four of the fifteen directors working under the general supervision of Bennett turned in their pictures last week, then look

PATRIOTIC PARADE
ON JULY FOURTH

Everybody Get a Flag and Get
In Is Advice Given

THE GRANDEST PROCESSION EVER SEEN HERE IS PLANNED.

Prizes For Floats Representing the Patriotic, the Commercial and the Aesthetic Offered.

"Everybody get off the sidewalk and join the parade, carrying a flag, if you are an American we expect you," is the advice given out by the committee for the patriotic parade on July 4, which it is confidently believed will be the greatest event of its kind that ever took place in the history of Idaho. The details relative to the parade are being made so that everybody can take a part without being compelled to walk so far as to get tired.

The parade will begin at 10 o'clock sharp, and will be all over before the procession of the Robinsons' circus comes on at 11 o'clock. First will come the Grand Army of the Republic; then will come the "vacant chair," the company B. would have marched, had it been on hand instead of defending the country; the boy Scouts will follow. After them will come the Red Cross girls. The band will follow these, and after the band will come the city officers and the officers of the civic organization. These will be followed by the fraternal orders, the baseball teams, the floats, and the decorated autos. No auto without the flag or national colors will be allowed to take part. After all the proper time the whole populace will join in.

It is aimed to make the display of floats far and away the best ever seen in the city. There will be first and second prizes of $10 and $5 for the best and second best commercial display, and first and second prizes of $10 for the best and second best patriotic floats, representing love of country, and the best and second best floats representing the aesthetic. There will be a prize of $5 for the most humorously decorated float, representing the way that people who come to Twin Falls are tickled over the fact that they did come. Anything that will provoke a laugh in regard to anything, is wanted in this and may get the prize.

It is planned to have the "Star Spangled Banner" sung as the parade passes.

Adds New Department.—The Twin Falls Vinegar and Cider company has added to its equipment modern machinery for the manufacture of soda water. In its products, the company uses true fruit juices instead of artificial flavors. Elm Park well water, reported by the state chemist as being the purest water on the tract, is also used. Twin Falls is the company's brand name, and they have had printed an attractive label showing a red apple with the words of Twin Falls in colors in the center.

Case Under Adjudgment.—In the preliminary hearing held Wednesday of the case against R. E. Gregg, of Holter, accused of burglary by R. H. Lee, the case was taken under advisement by Judge Ostrom, and no decision has as yet been handed down. A second charge was made against Gregg, by Irla Fuller, who accuses the former of theft of a set of harness.

ON THE JUDICIARY

Ohio Supreme Justice Speaks on
"People and Their Courts"

LARGE CROWD HEAR HIM AT THE CHAUTAUQUE TENT.

Declares That Monopolies Are Behind
the Bosses in Controlling Hidden Government.

That the judiciary is behind the rest of our political and economic system in evolutionary development, that lawyers as a whole and judges as a whole are honest and able, but that many are wrapped in a web of technicalities which incapacitates them from seeing things in their large relations; that men of the peculiar type of mind which naturally takes the point of view of the monopolies and violators of laws, are placed on the bench as well as in executive and legislative positions, through hidden manipulation; that political bosses secretly in the service of big business, for the purpose of securing biased opinions honestly given, and that the people should take at least as much care to see that their legislators represent their views, were arguments advanced for a reform in judicial practice by Judge R. M. Wanamaker, associate justice in the supreme court of Ohio, at the Chautauque Tuesday afternoon.

Judge Wanamaker takes the position that power everywhere, even in Russia, resides ultimately with the people. Men often fail to vote or otherwise neglect their duties and thus leave the law makers or law interpreters for failing to do their full duty. If people want laws honestly made and fairly interpreted it is necessary that they pay close attention to the operation of the machinery of government. This is what Abraham Lincoln, the greatest man of all history, advocated. Some years ago "Battling Bob" LaFollette, on examining the machinery of government in his own state, discovered that the people were not getting fair return in the way of grief for the most part into the hopper at the mill, he discovered that great interests were taking things out in the way of franchises and privileges and putting in fraudulent material instead. He discovered that great interests by means of hidden wires were taking away the power of government furnished by the people. He made the statement that there was a "hidden government" at work. Afterwards, Bryan and T. R. and others used the same expression. It was denied, but at the constitutional convention held last year in New York, Elihu Root, the ablest of the attorneys for trusts and big-business-made a great speech in which he said that during the past generation the government of the great state of New York had seldom resided in Albany where the governor and legislature and higher courts met, but for years had been at No. 49 Broadway, the office of Thomas C. Platt, Judge Wanamaker, however, contended that the boss was not the ultimate source of hidden government. He told an experience which he had when prosecuting attorney in Ohio. A Democratic politician tried to buy a franchise, without proper safeguard. Mr. Wanamaker discovered the facts and was about to start a prosecution. He was a Republican. To his surprise several eminent politicians and businessmen—all Republicans, came—and threatened him with defeat if he insisted on prosecuting the offense. A Democrat. They said that they owned both newspapers, both committees and controlled the situation and that they were interested in the churning of the illegal franchise and he must not prosecute the Democratic politician. He insisted and won his fight. He taught him, and his inter-experience confirmed him in his conviction, that the great interests were behind the machine and owned them. Judge Wanamaker paid a high tribute to lawyers as a whole for ability and honesty, and said that in the main the men who gave biased decisions were not intentionally dishonest. A man who makes a practice of criminal law becomes accustomed to looking at things minutely for the purpose of finding flaws. He may be absolutely honest and may become wealthy and famous, but he is developing a type of mind that sees things from a limited point of view. Elevate this man to the bench and he is still the same man. He interprets the law honestly as he interpreted it when in criminal practice. Similarly, a man who spends his life in the service of great predatory interests, looks at the law only from their point of view and when the bench sees things just as he saw them as a lawyer. Against all this Judge Wanamaker protested and insisted that the people should take care to discover the point of view of the candidate for the judiciary no less than the candidate for the legislature.

He cited a number of apparently absurd decisions given on technicalities, and to show that it was a matter of mental bias and not of corruption, cited the case of the Missouri supreme court which turned loose a penniless thief, who was caught stealing two shoes, because the indictment charged that he had stolen "a pair of shoes" whereas, he had inadvertently stolen two shoes for the same foot and this did not fit the opinion of the court.

He said that the laws delay also came in for a sound scolding, the speaker declaring that delayed justice ceased to be justice. He said that the Ohio supreme court had no amended its procedure that it was able to get to any case within two or three months and get rid of it, instead of waiting for years.

The address was roundly applauded by the large audience in attendance.

HEAVY RECEIPTS, ON

CATTLE MARKET

Prices Firm—Wool Up In London—Hogs Up Slightly and Sheep Strike An Easy Spot.

The past week has been a very heavy one in point of cattle receipts, the heaviest in fact for the year, says the Portland Live Stock Reporter. Over 5100 were received, the bulk of which were fairly good quality California natives. Even with a constant hammering of prices by buyers, southern shippers found this market much better than at southern points. The loss was from 25 to 35 cents on the California classes during the week.

Today's market was very slow in getting started. There were a number of loads of choice stuff on the market. Bulk of stuff was of inferior, graded and buyers were slow in bidding for them. As a result prices on this class were lower. A good run for today, over 1000 being received. Receipts of cattle this month, to date total 3791 against 2396 for the same time last year, or a gain of 1395 head.

An easy, low, in the market for sheep the past few days struck a soft spot today and nearly all classes show a weakness. A fairly liberal supply here today, about 300 head, were received.

A fair-size run of good quality hogs here for Friday's market sold on an even basis with the first of the week. The bulk of the hogs sold at $3.10, which was also the top. This week closed with a couple of cars of "yarders" on the market.

Receipts last week were 6761 head, against 7844 a week ago and 5402 a year ago. Receipts show an increase of 5101 head for the month, and 51,336 for the year at the week's close.

Today's hog run, about 3700 head, market sold in getting started. After buying started prices were about a nickel. Choice light hogs sold up to $2.85. Bulk of sales were around $2.10 to $2.20.

Most Western markets reported a break in hog prices of from 10 to 15 cents under the influence of rather heavy receipts.

The closing of the Colonial wool sales today on the London market, acted as the stopping-point of the steady price advance which marked this series when its beginning on May 20, in the British capital.

CHAPTER XXIII--Edith leaves for New York, and Bibbs, who has been told by Roscoe that his father that he is going to quit the business and go away with his wife.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Sheridan waited until he heard the sound of the outer door closing; then he rose and pushed a tiny disk set in the wall. Jackson appeared.

"Has Bibbs got home from work?" "Not 'till about 10, sir," replied Jackson.

"Tell him I want to see him, soon as he comes."

wasn't right in sending you there--I would just like to hear him! And you--that you moment of such a man's run about it? Ain't you?"

"I didn't go at it in the right spirit the other time," Bibbs said, smiling brightly, his face ruddy in the cheerful thought. "I didn't know the difference it meant to like a thing."

"Well, I guess I've pretty thoroughly vindicated my judgment. I guess I have! I said the shop'd be good for you, and it was. I said it wouldn't hurt you, and it hasn't. It's been just exactly what I said it would be. Ain't that so?"

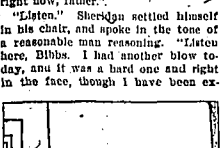

"Looks like it!" Bibbs agreed, gayly.

"Well, I'd like to know any place I been wrong, first and last! Instead of hurting you, it's kept the machine shop--physically. It's started you out to be the luckiest one of the whole family. Now, then, mentally--that's different. I don't say it unkindly, Bibbs, but you got to do something for yourself mentally, just like what's been done physically. And I'm going to help you."

Sheridan decided to sit down again. He brought his chair close to his son's, and, leaning over, tapped Bibbs' knee confidentially. "I got plans for you, Bibbs," he said.

Bibbs instantly looked thoroughly alarmed. He drew back. "I'm all right now, father."

"Listen," Sheridan spoke himself in his chair, and settled in the tone of a reasonable man reasoning. "Listen here, Bibbs. I had another blow to-day, and it was a hard one and right in the face, though I have been expect it's some little time back. Well, it's got to be met. Now I'll be frank with you. As I said a minute ago, I don't want to send you straight on up through the shop--a year or two, maybe--but I can't do it. I lost Jim, and now I've lost Roscoe. He's quit. He's laid down on me. If he ever comes back at all, he'll be a long time before he gets his legs under him. He won't be able to do anything. I can't count on him. I got to have somebody I know I can count on. And I'm down to this: you're my last chance. Bibbs, I got to learn you to use what brains you got and see if we can't develop 'em a little. Who knows? And I'm going to put my time in on it. I'm going to take you right downtown with me, and I won't be hard on you if you're a little slow at first. And I'm going to do the big thing for you. I'm going to make you feel you got to do the big thing for me. In return, I'm going to make an appeal to your ambition that'll make you dizzy!"

He tapped his son on the knee again. "Bibbs, I'm going to start you off this way: I'm going to make you a director in the Pump Works company; I'm going to make you vice president of the Realty company and a vice-president of the Trust company!"

Bibbs jumped to his feet, blanched. "Oh, no!" he cried.

Sheridan took his dismay to be the excitement of sudden joy. "Yes, sir! And there's some pretty fat little salaries goes with these vice-presidencies, and a pinch of stock in the Pump Works company with the directorship. You thought I was pretty mean about the shop--oh, I know you did!--but you see the old man can play both ways. And so right now, the minute you've begun to make good the way I wanted you to, I deal from the new deck. And I'll keep on handing it out bigger and bigger every time you show me you're big enough to play the hand I deal you. I'm starting you with a pretty big one, my boy!"

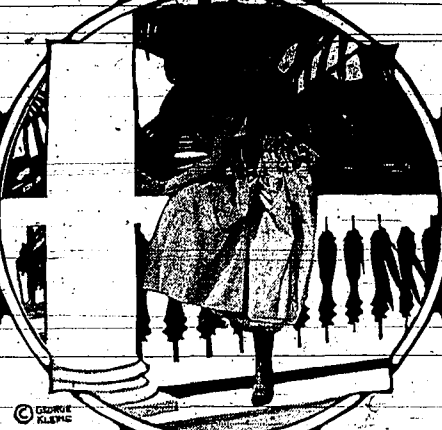

"I don't! I don't! I don't want it!" Bibbs exclaimed.

Sheridan looked perplexed. "What's the matter with you? Didn't you understand what I was telling you?"

"I know, I know! But I can't take it!"

"What's the matter with you?" Sheridan asked.

Idan was half amazed, half suspicious. "You had a good reason?"

"I've never been quite so sane in my life," said Bibbs, "as I have lately. And I've got just what I want. I'm living exactly the right life. I'm earning my daily bread, and I'm happy in doing it. My wages are enough. I don't want any more money, and I don't deserve any."

"Damnation!" Sheridan sprang up. "You've turned Socialist! You been listening to those fellows down there, and you--"

"No, sir. I think there's a great deal in what they say, but that isn't it. Sheridan tried to restrain his growing fury, and succeeded partially. "Then what is it? What's the matter?"

"Nothing," his son returned, nervously. "Nothing--except that I'm content. I don't want to change anything."

"Why not?"

"Bibbs had the incredible folly to try to explain it," he told his father. "I can. I know it may be hard to understand--"

"Yes, I think it may be," said Sheridan, grimly. "What you say usually is a little that way. Go on!"

Perplexed and distressed, Bibbs rose hesitantly. He felt himself at a disadvantage. He was a sleeper clinging to a dream--a rough hand stretched to shake him and wake him. He went to a table and made vague drawings upon it with a finger, and as he spoke he kept his eyes lowered. "You weren't altogether right about the shop--that is, in one way you weren't, father. He glanced up, apprehensively. Sheridan stood facing him, expressionless, and made no attempt to interrupt. "That's difficult to explain," Bibbs continued, lowering his eyes again, to follow the tracings of his finger. "I believe the shop might have done for me this time if I hadn't--if something hadn't helped me to--oh, not only to bear it, but to be happy in it. Well, I am happy in it. I want to go on just as I am. And of all things on earth that I don't want, I don't want to live a business life--I don't want to be drawn into it. I don't think it is living--and now I am living. I have the healthful toil--and I can think. In business as important as yours I couldn't think anything but business. I don't--I don't think making money is worth while."

"Oh, no!" he cried.

Sheridan took his dismay to be the excitement of sudden joy. "Yes, sir! And there's some pretty fat little salaries goes with these vice-presidencies, and a pinch of stock in the Pump Works company with the directorship. You thought I was pretty mean about the shop--oh, I know you did!--but you see the old man can play both ways. "I don't! I don't! I don't want it!" Bibbs exclaimed.

Sheridan looked perplexed. "What's the matter with you? Didn't you understand what I was telling you?"

"I know, I know! But I can't take it!"

"What's the matter with you?" Sheridan asked.

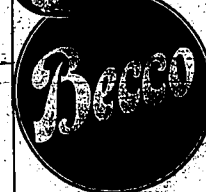

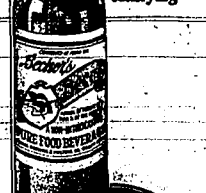

"You had a good reason?"

"I've never been quite so sane in my life," said Bibbs, "as I have lately. And I've got just what I want. I'm living exactly the right life. I'm earning my daily bread, and I'm happy in doing it. My wages are enough. I don't want any more money, and I don't deserve any."

bigger and dirtier and noisier. Wasn't the whole country happier and in many ways wiser when it was smaller and cleaner and quieter and kinder? I know you think I'm an utter fool, father, but after all, though, aren't business and politics just the housekeeping part of life? And wouldn't you decide a woman that not only made her housekeeping her ambition, but did it so noisily and dirtily that the whole neighborhood was in a continual turmoil over it? And suppose she talked and thought about her housekeeping all the time, and was always having additions built to her house when she couldn't keep clean what she already had, and suppose, with it all, she made the house altogether unpeppery and unlivable."

"Just one minute," Sheridan interrupted, adding, with terrible courtesy, "if you will permit me? Have you ever been right about anything?"

"I don't quite—"

"I ask the simple question: Have you ever been right about anything, whatever in the course of your life? Have you ever been right upon any subject or question you've thought about or talked about? Can you mention one single time when you were proved to be right?"

He was flourishing the bandaged hand as he spoke, but Bibbs said only, "If I've always been wrong before, surely there's more chance that I'm right about this—it seems reasonable to suppose something would be due to bring up my average."

"Yes, I thought you wouldn't see the point. And there's another you probably couldn't see, but I'll take the liberty to mention it. You were bawling all your life. Pretty much everything I ever wanted you to do, you'd let out some kind of a howler, like you are now—and yet I can't seem to remember once when you didn't have to lay down and do what I said. But go on with your remarks about my city."

"I don't want to be part of it," said Bibbs, with unwelcome decision. "I want to keep to myself, and I'm doing it now. I couldn't, if I went down there with you." He'd swallowed into his mouth.

"I don't care for money enough to—"

"No," his father interrupted, still dangerously quiet. "You've never had to earn a living. Anybody could tell that by what you say. Now, let me remind you: you're sleeping in a pretty good bed; you're eating 'caviar' pretty fair food; you're wearing pretty nice clothes. Just suppose one of these noisy housekeepers—me, for instance—decided to let you do your own housekeeping. May I ask what your proposition would be?"

"I'm earning nine dollars a week," said Bibbs, sturdily. "Is that enough, I shouldn't mind at all."

"Who's paying you that nine dollars a week?"

"My work," Bibbs answered. "And I've done so well on that clipping machine I believe I could work up to fifty cents an hour, or even twenty a week at another job. I could be a fair plumber in a few months, I'm sure. I'd rather have a trade than be in business—I should, infinitely!"

"You better not about learning a pretty damn quick!" But Sheridan struggled with his temper and again was partially successful in controlling it. "You better learn a trade over Sunday, because you're either going down with me to my office Monday morning—or you can go to plumbin'!"

"All right," said Bibbs, gently. "I can get along."

Sheridan raised his handsardonically, as in prayer. "O God," he said, "this boy was crazy enough before he began to earn nine dollars a week—and now his money's gone to his head! Can't you do nothing for him?" Then he sang his hands apart, palms outward, in a furious gesture of dismissal. "Get out of this room! You got a skull that's thicker than a whale's thigh-bone, but it's cracked spang all the way across! You're cracked! Oh, but I got a fine layout here! One son died, one quit, and one's a loon! The loon's all I got left! Well, mister, look no more loon-cracked and crazy or what over you and I'll take you with me Monday morning, and I'll work you and learn you—yes—and I'll lay you out if I got to—until I've made something out of you that's fit to be called a business man. I'll keep at you while I'm able to stand, and if I have to lay down to die I'll be whispering at you till they get the embalming fluid into me! Now go on, and don't let me hear from you again till you can come and tell me you've waked up, you poor, pitiful, dandling, blinking, sleep-walker!"

Bibbs gave him a queer look. There was something like reproach in it, for once; but there was more than that—he seemed to be startled by his father's last word.

CHAPTER XXV.

There was a sleep that evening, with a whooping wind, but neither this storm nor that other, which so immediately threatened him had place in the consciousness of Bibbs Sheridan when he came once more to the presence of Mary. All was right in his world as he sat with her, reading Maurice Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird and the Salamander."

And while the zinc etcher held out to bring him such golden nights as these, all the king's horses and all the king's men might not serve to break the spell.

Bibbs read slowly, but in a reasonable manner, as if he were talking; and Mary, looking at him steadily from beneath her curved fingers, appeared to discover no fault. It had grown to be her habit to look at him whenever there was an opportunity.

It may be said, in truth, that while they were together, and it was light, she looked at him all the time.

When he came to the end of "The Blue Bird and the Salamander" they were silent a little while, counting together; then he turned back the pages and said:

"There's something I want to read over. This:

"You would think I threw a window open on the dawn. . . . She has a soul that is like a bird's. . . . She takes you in her arms like an ailing child and without saying anything you know she is for everything. . . . I shall never understand it all. . . . I do not know how it can be, but my knees bend in spite of me when I speak of it."

He stopped and looked at her. "You boy?" said Mary, not very clearly.

"Oh, yes," he returned. "But it's true—especially my knees!"

"You boy!" she murmured again, blushing charmingly. "You might read another line over. The first time I ever saw you, Bibbs, you were looking into a mirror. Do it again. But you needn't read it—I can give it to you."

"A little Greek slave that came from the heart of Arcady?"

"I'm one of the hands at the Pump works—and going to stay one, unless I have to decide to study plumbing!"

"No," she shook her head. "You love and want what's beautiful and delicate and serene; it's really art that you want in your life, and have always wanted. You seemed to me, from the first, the most beautiful person I had ever known, and that's what you were waiting for."

Bibbs looked doubtful and more wistful than ever; but after a moment or two the matter seemed to clarify itself to him. "Why, no," he said. "I wanted something else more than that. I wanted you."

"And here I am!" she laughed, completely understanding. "I think we're like those two in 'The Cloister and the Hearth.' 'I'm just the right-hand man to the great master painter, Denny, who followed that gentle Gerard and told everybody that the devil was dead.'"

"He isn't, though," said Bibbs, as a hoarse little bell in the next room began a series of—proved to be the signal to come. "He gets into the clock whenever I'm with you." And, sighing deeply, he rose to go.

"You're always very prompt about leaving me."

"There's one little time in the twenty-four hours when I'm not happy. It's now, when I have to say good night. But now's the bad time, and I must go through it, and so—good night. And he added with a pained vehemence of which he was little aware.

"Good night!"

"Do you?" she said, rising to go to the door with him. But he stood motionless, gazing at her wonderingly.

"Mary! Your eyes are so—" He stopped.

"Yes," but she looked quickly away. "I don't know," he said. "I thought just then—"

"What did you think?"

"I don't know—it seemed to me that there was something I ought to understand—and didn't."

She laughed and met his wondering gaze again faintly. "My eyes are pleased," she said. "I'm glad that you miss me a little after you go."

"But tomorrow's coming faster than other days, if you'll let it," he said. She inclined her head. "Yes, I'll—let it!"

"Going to church," said Bibbs. "It is going to church when I go with you?"

She went to the front door with him; she always went that far. They had formed a little code of leave-taking, by habit, neither of them ever speaking of it; but it was always the same. He always stood in the doorway until he reached the sidewalk, and there he always turned and looked back, and she waved her hand to him. Then he went on, half-way to the new house, and looked back again, and Mary was not in the doorway, but the door was open and the light shone. It was as if he meant to tell him that she would never shut him out; he could always see that friendly light of the open doorway—as if it were open for him to come back, if he would. He could see it until a wing of the new house came between, when he went up the path. The open doorway seemed to him the beautiful symbol of her friendship—of her thought of him; a symbol of herself and of her ineffable kindness.

And she kept the door open—even tonight, though the sheet and the snow swept it up, her bare throat and arms, and her brown hair was blown with tiny white stars. His heart leaped as he turned and saw that she was there, waving her hand to him.

He did not know that the storm touched her. When he had gone on, Mary did as she always did—she went into an unlit room across the hall from that in which they had spent the evening, and, looking from the window, watched him until he was out of sight.

The storm made that difficult tonight, but she caught a glimpse of him under the street lamp that stood between the two houses, and saw that he turned to look back again. Then, and not before, she looked at the upper windows of Roscoe's house across the street. They were dark. Mary waited, but after a little while she closed the front door and returned to her window. A moment later two of the upper windows of Roscoe's house flashed into light, and a hand lowered the shade of one of them. Mary felt the cold then—it was the third night she had seen those windows lighted and that she had lowered, just after Bibbs had gone.

Bibbs stopped at his last look back at the open door—and, with a thin mantle of white already upon his shoulders, made his way, gasping in the wind, to the lee of the sheltering wing of the new house.

A stricken George, muttering hoarsely, admitted him, and Bibbs became aware of a paroxysm within the house. Terrible sounds came from the library: Sheridan cursing as never before; his wife sobbing, her voice rising to an agonized shriek of protest upon each of a series of muffled detonations—the outrageous thumping of a bandaged hand upon wood—then Gurney, sharply imperious, "Keep your hand in that sling! Keep your hand in that sling, I say!"

"Look!" George gasped; delighted to play herald for so important a tragedy; and he renewed upon his face the ghastly expression with which he had first beheld the ruins his calamitous gesture held before the eyes of Bibbs. "Look at a laminal statue!"

Gazing down the hall, Bibbs saw heroic wreckage, seemingly Byzantine—painted colossal fragments of a shattered torso, appalling human and angelic and avowed heaps of magnificent strewn among ruins; palms like the spall of a barbarian's battle. There had been a massacre in the oasis—the Moor had been buried from his pedestal.

"He hit 'at ole laminal statue," said George. "Pow!"

"My father?"

"Yes, sir! Pow! He hit 'er! An' you ma run tell me rit doctuh quick 's a kin telephon—she sho' you 'as got a blood-vessel. He ain't takin' on 'tall now. He ain't nothin' 'tall to what he was—while ago. You done miss it, Miss Bibbs. Doctuh got him all quit' down, to what he was. He hit 'er! Yes, sir!" He took Bibbs by the coat and proffered a crumpled telegraph form. "Here what come," he said. "I pick 'er up when he done stompin' on 'er. You read 'er, Miss Bibbs—you ma tell me tulin 'er ovah to you soon 's you come in."

Bibbs read the telegram quickly. It was from New York and addressed to Mrs. Sheridan.

"Sure you will all approve step have taken as was so wretched my health would probably suffer severely Robert—I'm sure—sincerely—Bibbs—Sheridan thought best have quiet wedding absolutely sure you will understand wisdom of when you know Robert better an happiest woman in world are leaving Florida will write address when settled will remain till spring leave to all father will like him too when he knows him like I do he is just—"

TALKS ON THRIFT

THE STAR OF THRIFT.

The world had forgotten how to be poor. It was ashamed to practice thrift. Wealth had been increasing prodigiously without saving. The advent of machinery and the increased efficiency on the part of men had been creating wealth faster than it could be consumed. The homely virtue of thrift had disappeared. Nobody had to save.

When capital was required, it was created, not by saving or by cutting out waste, but by creating more of it. The farmer did not cultivate his land better than the rest of the world, but he aspired to better living did not economize, but worked harder. The miser had become but fiction.

A generation or two ago everybody carried a purse. It was a lot of both to spend a nickel. But the old wallet has disappeared and we now have "change pockets," and wear it out frequent journeys thither. We have been a race of wastrels, and have justified our waste by our power to earn.

Everybody has been so rich that the world thought it could fight on stored capital. Why save a few hundred millions to pay for a war that costs billions? It would be a brief struggle at best. Why not pay for it on borrowed money? Only recently has it dawned on the people of Europe that the war was a robbery of new capital, been destroying the old in suicidal amounts and only close economy and thrift living on the part of all can save the world from bankruptcy.

The governments first borrowed all they could; but realizing that they had soon exhausted their credit, their powers turned their attention to taxation and to thrift. This process has been sobering and heroic, and masses of Europe are being everywhere in Europe to meet the rising cost of war by thrift plans. These methods involve sacrifice, heavy taxes, and a willingness to do without, and involve far-reaching economic changes.

Having adjusted itself to thriftless conditions, the world cannot suddenly depart on considerable damage. For instance, if everybody should stop going to the movies it would save a lot of money, but disrupt and bankrupt thousands of firms and cut down the income of other thousands relying on this industry. We could do without many things, but the sacrifice would be costly to someone. With no surplus income, as a people, the millions of Europe cannot begin to save without destroying more than they save.

They cannot, strictly speaking, save at all. They can only stop spending except for necessities and spend for war, but that is merely a conversion of wealth. Germany has been adopting extreme measures, and has been limiting the consumption of luxuries. Great Britain has a thrift campaign on, and all unnecessary imports will be curtailed. But habits are not changed in a day and the efforts of spendthrift nations to be thrifty are pathetic.

In contrast with the plight of Europe, the United States is the only lending nation on earth, now having surplus capital. It is the only country that can really save—whose thrift is not forced. Not only because of our unique position, but because if cultivated now, thrift will make us the biggest moneyed factor in the world.

Thriftness was never fashionable, but ought to be always. Europe's loss must be our gain, and our gain will be lasting only as we make the habit lasting. Europe must learn how to be poor again, while we must learn how to be rich. But we cannot afford to be too rich, losing our heads for riches while Europe's poverty pays the bill. Every dollar you save now helps along in the good work. America's star of thrift is nearing its zenith.

SCARCITY OF GASOLINE REPORTED AMONG JOBBERS. WASHINGTON, D. C.—Independent oil jobbers testified before the federal trade commission that they were unable to buy gasoline from the refiners except in small quantities and that in spite of the increasing prices of the last year their actual profits had been no greater than in former years.

In many cases, they declare, jobbers were forced to turn from refiners at higher prices than they were then receiving from their customers, depending for their profits on the increase which came before the refiners could deliver their orders.

All of the witnesses agreed that they had been unable to buy from the Standard Oil companies within the year, and were told that Standard Oil concerns had to withhold their produce from their regular customers.

SHOSHONE PAYING BEFORE COUNCIL

Intentional Ordinance Is Passed Tuesday Night

JULY 11 LAST DAY FOR MAKING WRITTEN PROTESTS.

New Water Rules Adopted and Inspector Ordered to Provide For Cleaning Reservoir.

The estimated cost of paying for Shoshone street under the petition was given as $3,500. The intentional ordinance given property owners the right to protest, the date for such protests being set for July 11, on or before which date protests in writing must be on file with the city clerk. The ordinance is published elsewhere in these columns.

The charity ordinance was for the purpose of relieving sudden calls which require attention before the matter can be handled by the county commission. The money for this purpose was placed at the disposal of Chairman F. P. Bracken, of the finance committee.

Water Inspector Porter reported that the reservoir had not been cleaned since the time when memory of man runneth not to the contrary, and that there was no sufficient evidence going to show that it had ever been cleaned. He said that in order to clean it properly it would be necessary to run a pipe around the reservoir to the low line canal, connecting with the 18-inch pipe leading to the city. The work would cost about $1,700. The council ordered him to buy and install the pipe and clean the reservoir. The new rules governing water users provide more stringent regulations for shutting off water where the rent is not paid on or before the 15th day of July, and also for the enforcement of rules governing the case where more than one person uses the same tap.

These rules are published in this issue, officially. The city council met in adjourned session last night after the gathering at the chautauqua tent and transacted considerable business including the granting of leave to Ed Johnson to go in a modern electrical gasoline tank to his garage opposite the library on Shoshone street; the passing of an intentional ordinance for the creation of a paving district on Shoshone street; the adoption of additional rules governing the use of water; and $100 for emergency charity work; authorized Water Inspector W. F. Porter to purchase pipe necessary for use in the decennial bath of the reservoir, and granted license privileges to the Fourth of July committee.

The first petition of Mr. Johnson for privileges to put in a tank on Shoshone street was refused on the ground that the city had adopted the policy of refusing such permits for the big trade parties. It was changed to a request for the right to bury such tank at the end of a concrete alley 40 feet from the reservoir and the matter was granted. A service station will also be constructed by the company. City Engineer J. A. Bybee made a partial report on the Golden Rule addition paving.

SHARP WARNING TO CARRANZA

War or peace rests with Gen. Carranza. The position of the United States is clearly set forth in the review the apparent hostility of Carranza to prevent border raids and to keep the obligation he owes the world by the preservation of order in his dominion.

TWIN FALLS BIDS

GOODBYE TO BOYS

Utamen and the speakers for the occasion. It is estimated that 1500 people were present.

Promptly at half past seven, music by the city band was heard outside the tent, and as the seventy members of the local militia filed through the crowd to their seats, reserved at the front of the tent, they expressed pride and admiration for the boys by rising to their feet and cheering. Another cheer was given when several veterans of the Civil war arrived with the colors.

The speeches were simple and short, but all the more expressive of the feeling of the occasion because of this. Mayor Sweeley was first to speak and he expressed his gratification at the sight of the large number of people present.

Representing the people of Twin Falls, Mayor Sweeley paid tribute to the members of the local militia for their enthusiastic and prompt manner in which they responded to the call of the president.

"This mobilization means more than a gathering of our young men to the defense of our flag," said Mr. Sweeley. "It is a crystallization of the country's patriotism and gives evidence that in time of need all are willing to contribute to the general cause."

Mr. Sweeley called upon S. P. Atterton, a veteran of the Civil war, as "most capable of expressing the spirit of the occasion." Mr. Atterton in a rousing address assured the volunteers of the hearty support of the citizens of Twin Falls, and predicted that under stress of battle, if it should come, the home boys would acquit themselves bravely and proudly.

The mayor then giving a few words of pleasure at the manner in which the business men had responded to a call to increase the treasury of Company D, presented Captain P. W. McRobert a check for $320, the sum subscribed in a few hours work by liberal spirited men in town. Captain McRobert responded for Company D, and thanked the citizens for their thoughtfulness and support, and made promises for the members of Company D that they would do everything in their power when called upon to strengthen the confidence placed in them by the people of Twin Falls.

Mayor Sweeley next bespoke the needs of the Company in various ways and outlined the plan of organization to help the men obtain complete equipment. He said that 200 additional bands, for use in hot weather, and 100 kit bags to hold each man's possessions, were needed and called upon the patriotic women of the city to volunteer their services by sewing these bands and bags so that Company D might be assured of being the fully equipped company in the state. It was found that only about one-fifth of the woolen material required for the bands could be procured in the city, and an order of 200 yards is now on its way from Chicago, by express. This delay will hold up the work for a couple of days, but by that time Mr. Sweeley says the complete organization of those who will handle the outfitting work will be perfected. No special organization of Red Cross service here is yet thought-out, but will be later.

Captain Longley was last called upon and in his usual interesting manner gave reminiscences of his own war time experiences, and gave a glowing tribute to the American mother who he said, "gave out the traditional Spartan mother, when the time came for making a sacrifice of her sons on the altar of war."

Captain Longley gave warning to the men of the many trials and temptations which beset the path of the soldier cut off from all the ties of home and parents, and in a final blessing on the soldier, he said: "I know that you will be true to your country and your flag, but also be true to those loving mothers, wives and sisters left behind. Be true to yourself and your God, and God be with you."

A word of appreciation was given by Mr. Sweeley to Mr. Erickson, of the Chautauqua, for the kind donation of the tent for the occasion. Mr. Erickson then replied that the Chautauqua system was always glad to do its share in an event of this kind, and he introduced the International Operatic company, who sang "The Solids Chorus" from the opera "Faust," a song quite appropriate to the occasion.

With three rousing cheers for Company D, the meeting broke up. The members of Company D of Twin Falls, who left for Boise Wednesday morning, are:

First Lieutenant C. H. Krongol, Second Lieutenant R. E. Leighton. First Sergeant C. G. Dorey, Quartermaster J. H. Smith, V. E. Golden, A. B. Rounds, A. E. Wenzel, Corporals S. Pendleton, T. Town, F. Foss.

"THE BELOVED VAGABOND"

Truly a wonderful five-part play, an adaptation from the book by the same name. A noteworthy, beautiful picture in story, acting, settings and photography; the whole is a pure delight. If we should fill the entire page with fine oratory about its quality, we are sincere in saying we could not praise it too much; if you paid five times the admission of our regular schedule, it is our candid opinion you would say it was well worth the price. It contains none of the sensational stunts which are usually required to make a costly feature; yet, this picture cost over $25,000 to produce; it is a high-class work of art; it portrays a quaint character and a simple romance so artistically that you cannot help but enjoy the production; it is one you will remember a long time.
