The rooms of the commercial club were crowded Saturday afternoon when President E. M. Sweeley of the Company D association, called the meeting to order and all were enthusiastic when it was learned that 300 shall be a community affair including every man in Twin Falls and vicinity, together with the purpose of encouraging such aid, comfort, and encouragement as may be extended to the brave boys who are on their way to the border to fight for America. The community was all one-way everyone being anxious to do something that would further the cause of American rights and those present went forth in a campaign which in gathering in momentum every minute since, until now the little badges may be seen everywhere. President Sweeley stated the object of the meeting. On Thursday night previously a meeting had been held at which he had been elected president and a movement inaugurated for the offering of such assistance as might be given to the boys at Company D. It was felt that every man in the community could spare a dollar for the purpose. Little badges were to be distributed and worn by those contributing and all contributing would be members of the association. The money raised could be used for necessities by the boys. At the same time an organization would be formed that could be called upon to assist in any way needed and could be called together at once. President Sweeley then named two men to be the executive committee of which he is ex-officio chairman, as follows: L. A. Wright, H. J. Felling, Dr. F. E. Spoor and C. M. Booth. Of these Messrs. Felling and Wright constitute the subcommittee on finance. Mr. Booth was called upon to further explain the objects of the organization and described the needs of the boys in simple eloquence and in a practical way. He said that there was much work to be done and done at once and all should be ready to assist.

"We are fairly swamped with letters from boys who have no street or route address, since three of our boys have been called to military duty," said Postmaster M. A. Strunk this morning, "and we would like to have people help us out by complying with the law in regard to street addresses. Some time ago, a similar request was made through the press of this city, with beneficial results and we were getting along nicely until Lieutenant Leighton, I. G. Friedman and M. A. Hensley were called to the colors. At the course, there were hundreds of letters and papers coming in without the specific directions required, but the boys were generally familiar with the addresses and handled them without great trouble. It was necessary to put in two new inexperienced men, P. H. Leighton and Glenn Stifford, and while they are doing splendidly, they are of no immediately practical value in mail distribution. They do not know where people live and will not take them a week or 10 days to be able to learn enough to be of any value whatever. I hope that people will appreciate the situation and take the trouble to drop a card to their newspapers and correspondents requesting that they put the number of their box or their route on all letters and papers sent. Yesterday's mail was partly delayed. Here are a pile of letters now without directions that I am trying to get to the boys. I am sure that the people will take the very slight trouble required to comply with postal regulations. For their own convenience, correspondents get their addresses."

That an effort will be made by Governor Alexander to secure the cooperation of Nevada officials in the elimination of the Twin Springs saloon; that preliminary steps are being taken to inaugurate a movement which may result in placing all who bring booze across the state-line in jail and all who act as carriers for them in the federal prison; that rewards will probably be offered in the near future for the arrest and conviction of all who bring intoxicating liquors out of neighboring states into Idaho on their persons and that no step will be omitted which will tend to stamp out the liquor traffic, are developments which will result from the movement to prevent bootlegging in this county, originating in Kimberly recently through the activity of M. E. Eden of that town.

Thursday Rev. A. Stewart of Kimberly, president of the Welfare League of that town, placed in the hands of Governor Alexander a petition signed by 1600 citizens of Twin Falls county, including the public officials and all the members of the bar association, who could be found on the day on which the petition was circulated, asking Governor Alexander to intervene with the federal government for the purpose of closing the Twin Springs saloon. A petition was also sent by the board of county commissioners, accompanied by a statement from Sheriff Frank M. Kendall to the effect that in his opinion 90 per cent of the liquor used in Twin Falls came from the saloon in question. In response Governor Alexander assured Rev. Stewart that every effort would be made by him to secure compliance with the desires of the people here. He said that as soon as the war immediately take the matter up and would do what he could. He also stated that if his efforts should prove without avail he would offer a reward of $250 for the arrest and conviction of all persons bringing liquor into Idaho in violation of the law. This will include those bringing it into the state in the federal government's name and those who matter is that this interstate traffic is in violation of the federal law relating to the bringing of intoxicants into the state. A more serious phase of the matter is that those who act as carriers for the men who will be liable, on conviction, to a term in the federal prison. The federal government has been investigating the law involved and has gathered some interesting information in regard to its scope.

Charged with maintaining immoral relations with his 14-year-old stepdaughter, Hiawatha Gardner, for the last five years, William Gardner of Artesian City, lies in jail, without bond, awaiting his preliminary trial which will take place Thursday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock. The arrest was made Sunday as a result of complaints made Saturday to W. H. Ormsby, probation officer, by residents of Murtaugh and Artesian City. The girl is alleged to have confessed improper relations with her stepfather to Mrs. Edna Gardner, who was working giving as her reason the fear that Gardner would attempt to maintain similar relations with her younger sister and saying that she wanted to frighten him so that he would not do so. Mr. Ormsby went to Murtaugh and Artesian City on hearing the complaints and made an investigation. He brought the girl down and questioned her, with the result that she made an alleged confession implicating Gardner.

The girl is said to have stated that her mother married Gardner when she was but two years old, and that the alleged criminal relations began when she was about eight or nine years old. Acting on the statements of the girl and other information which seemed to corroborate her story, Mr. Ormsby took steps to secure the arrest of Gardner. The defendant in the case is about forty years old and has lived about Murtaugh, Rock Creek and Artesian City for many years. His wife is still living and is the result of this marriage. She is said to be in a delicate condition at present.

Excursion trains and excursion rates on all regular trains were made effective from July 1st to July 31st. Joy, fun and jollity are the orders of the day. Everyone is expected to enter into the spirit of the occasion and guarantee themselves and everyone else a good time, and thus to send all visitors of the day home with expressions of delight at the hospitality of Twin Falls. Everything is being done to assure the success of each feature of the day. Though the committees were interrupted by the recent departure of the militia which took several members, others have been appointed to fill their places and the organization is complete.

The monster patriotism parade will begin promptly at 10 o'clock in the morning, headed by the members of the Grand Army of the Republic, followed by the "veteran chair," in honor of the departed militia boys who, if here, would have taken part in the procession. There will come the Boy Scouts, the Camp Fire Girls, the civic officers and organizations, the fraternal organizations, and then decorated floats and automobiles. In the automobile section it is desired by the committee in charge, that every auto in the county be represented, and an appeal is made to all owners to take part. Everyone is invited to participate whether the auto is decorated or not, although it is hoped their machine owners will decorate their cars appropriately.

A telegram received today by Arthur M. Bowen from his son Theodore, says that Company D will probably be mustered in today regardless of new enlistments, and will leave for Colton, Calif., on the border, Friday. The message also states that the enlistment under the federal law requiring six years active and retired service will not be enforced. This will, it is believed, increase enlistments greatly as many were holding out on account of this provision. This message confirms reports given out in Boise yesterday, in which it was indicated that a movement to the border would be ordered before medical examinations were completed. Similar orders appear to have been given to all militia regiments throughout the United States, the impression being that the situation on the border may demand immediate action. A telegram was received by THE TIMES this morning from Captain H. W. Wilson, regimental doctor, in which it was stated that he had been rejected up to that time. No names were given.

The work of enlisting good men attracted the most of the watching throngs. Lieutenant Sloc of Company K, left this morning with a man for Boise. Captain Hughes of Company D, has been on good news since in Rupert, Burley and other towns along the line. Rev. A. Stewart of Kimberly, is working hard and delivering several speeches every day. He spoke to a large audience at Kimberly last night, and 10 young men promised to report. He speaks at Murtaugh this afternoon, five to eight and Hanson tomorrow. It is hoped to get as many as possible to join before the troops leave for the border. However, the work is going on and those enlisting can follow to the border.

Captain Wilson, who spent a couple of days here, was enquiring about business, has gone to Boise to take his position with the regiment. Captain Wilson's name was not given on the list of those who were last week with the company, as he was not a member of Company D, but an officer of the regimental staff. This led to the rumor that he was not some part of that company might have been overlooked.

BOONE PASSES THE NAVAL EXAMINATION
Minor W. Bonwell of Filer, Chosen For the Army—Will Soon Be Given Examination.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Ronald Boone, who was appointed by Congressman Adam Smith as a student in the U. S. Naval Academy, has passed the physical examination and is now a full-fledged ensign. He will receive a four-year's training at the academy and receive his commission as an officer of the navy in 1920.

Congressman Smith has been given the privilege of naming a cadet to the U. S. Naval Academy. He has named Minor W. Bonwell of Filer. Mr. Bonwell will be required to attend the provision of the recent law, and has been nominated Minor W. Bonwell of Filer, for the U. S. Military Academy at Fort Logan, Colorado, for medical examination and then at the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., on July 10th.

Both these young men are graduates of the Twin Falls high school, and in view of the rigid examinations required to enter the government academies, speaks well for the thoroughness and high standard of the instruction which the young people of the Twin Falls country are receiving in the high school.

KIMBERLY MAN HURT IN BAD RUNAWAY
Load of Sage-Brush Catches on Fire and Frigates Tonn Which Drags Wagon Over Owner.

While trying to open the tugs to release his horse, a man of sage brush which was enveloped in flames Saturday, Earl Barnhill, who lives near Kimberly, was kicked by one of the horses, which became excited, then ran away and dragged the burning load over him, inflicting serious but not dangerous injuries. He was taken to the hospital by Dr. Dolph Felton, who took him to his home where he is recovering. The team was stopped by Mr. Barnhill's father-in-law, Mr. Quarty, and taken from the wagon. The load of sage brush was largely consumed and the rack damaged but the wagon was not injured.

Mr. Barnhill bought the brush from a neighbor, who was clearing his land and burning the debris to get rid of it. He headed up his rack, supposing that all the fire had been extinguished, and started for home. Having gone a short distance his attention was attracted by a puff of smoke, and a gust of heat and he looked back to see the whole load wrapped in flames. He sprang to the ground to unhook the horses, which became very excited and as he leaned over one of them kicked him, throwing him under the wheels. The animals then started to run, dragging the man over his head and shoulders and rendering him unconscious. A few minutes later Mr. Felton arrived and picked him up. No harm was done to the horses, and the consciousness a short time afterwards.

At eleven o'clock, special day light fireworks will be displayed upon the corner of the city hall. At 10 o'clock the hour the Boy Scouts and Camp Fire Girls will give away 60 gallons of ice cream to the children in the park. From 1:30 to 2:30 p. m. will be held the various field events planned by that committee. Races and contests of various kinds be staged and prizes are offered to the winners. At 3 o'clock there will be a baseball game at the ball grounds between Twin Falls and Kimberly. Other amusements in the afternoon will be John Robinson circus, which will give their parade at eleven in the morning. From eight to eleven o'clock a grand display of fireworks will be given at the court house, and during this time there will be a big street dance in a roped-off area in the two blocks in front of the court house and high school. The city band will furnish the music. Some time during the evening the fire department will give an entertainment.

Christopher, of Canyon county, was asked to resign from his office by the board of county commissioners, Tuesday afternoon, because of the result of the recent audit of the county books which a large shortage was found. Mr. Christopher when notified of the action taken by the board stated he would not resign so this will result in future proceedings being instituted.—Caldwell News.

Caldwell Buys Power Sprinkler—Wednesday evening the city council met in adjourned session with all the members present. The committee appointed last meeting to consider the auto sprinkler and flusher, reported in favor of the bid of the Auto Machine Co., Caldwell. It calls for a 1200 gallon machine, which will cost $4,000.00 on delivery of the auto, $1200.00 for the first year, $1200.00 for the second year and $1050.00 for the third year, and 7 per cent interest on deferred payments.—Caldwell News.

Related Mountain Floods—Four or five days starting the first of the week started the related flood waters of the Central Idaho streams to roaring down the channels. Lost river raised four feet in a few days and on Sunday morning water started over the spillway of the Mackay dam. The mighty Salmon is on the rampage and it is said that nearly all the bridges are in danger of going out. Water is in the roads along the river in places that have been high and dry for years. A cold rain started on Monday evening which has checked the floods.—Mackay Miner.

Boy Accidentally Killed—A shocking and sad accident occurred on the Painesville last Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Del Grubb, when their two sons, aged four and five, secured a shotgun while the mother was at a neighbors, and in some manner discharged the gun, the full bullet striking the four-year-old baby brother, full in the face at close range, completely blowing the little fellow's head from his body. The father, who was out on Sunday and the valley people turned out to show their sympathy and respect for the family in such an hour of grief.—Mackay Miner.

Hurpet To Buy Auto Fire Truck—Hurpet is to have a fire department as it is the largest city in the state, and the apparatus will be ready for fire fighting within a few days. The greater part of the improvement will consist of an auto truck, upon which will be mounted hose, chemical, nozzles, ladders, lanterns and other necessary equipment. One of the greatest needs of the department in the past has been for some method of getting to the scene of a fire more quickly than the horse carts could be pulled by hand or by mules, and this difficulty. The apparatus will be housed in a specially prepared building on the east side of the square, which is almost ready for the truck. The front is open and will have wide swinging doors, which can be quickly and automatically opened. It also was announced this week that an electric alarm system would soon be installed. There will be several boxes in different parts of the town and connections will be made with the telephone office so that central, when notified of a fire, can ring the proper warnings.—Rupert Record.

Better Than Ever.

The John Robinson Circus—the "Ten Big Shows"—as this mammoth tent show outfit is publicly heralded, is steadily wending its way hither from a long winding tour of the city coast and is scheduled to exhibit here on the afternoon and evening of Tuesday, July 4.

In the wake of the famous "white top" organization follows everywhere a steady stream of newspaper review comments. On the opening day's performance recently in Portland, the northwest's great morning daily, the Oregonian, had this to say editorially:

"There was a vast difference between the old John Robinson circus of sixty years ago and the John Robinson circus that showed itself yesterday out in North Portland. But the changes have all been for the better until it now looks like the top notch had been reached in equestrian, acrobatic and clown stunts."

"It is simply marvelous that riders can be so expert, that horses can be so well trained, that elephants and seals and monkeys and baboons can develop the wonderful intelligence shown by those in the ring of the John Robinson circus."

Here is the critical impression of the Evening Telegram of the same city: "It is a great show. That is the unanimous verdict of everybody who saw it. Judging from the size of the audience which crowded beneath the acres of canvas stretched on the old circus ground in North Portland, it looked just about as if everybody in the city was there."

"Every act in the show is of the highest order. There is a snap to the performances that is highly palatable. At times there is such a wonderful galaxy of performers as to be well nigh bewildering to the one who wants to miss none of the splendid program."

It is this same war everywhere. In every city and town where the John Robinson Ten Big Shows have exhibited, the opinion of the State of the newspaper critics have been unanimously flattering.

In this city, the Robinson Circus will pitch tents on the old tent site grounds and for the convenience of

DIPLOMATIC INCIDENTS.

The danger of taking in their ordinary sense words that have a technical meaning, when these words are used in an obviously technical sense, was well illustrated by the manner in which a widely read newspaper, that should have known better, treated the unconfirmed report that the administration was inclined to regard the slaughter of American troops in Mexico as an incident. That the man on the street unless put right might construe this to mean that the affair would be regarded lightly was not unnatural, but those gravely discussing questions of this kind, with a view of enlightening the public, should be more careful. The editorial, it is true, did not vouch for the truth of the report that the government of the United States would regard the matter as an incident; but if it had been true, it still would not have meant that the administration did not look upon it as a matter of the gravest moment. This is what should have been explained and was not.

We have had many grave incidents in the history of this country, some of which led directly or indirectly to war, some of which led to the brink of it, and some of which were affairs which were merged into a war which was already begun but which was not formally declared. The battle known as Braddock's Defeat was an incident internationally speaking. It preceded the conflict known as the Seven Year war or the French and Indian war by many months and was not in itself a signal for breaking diplomatic relations. Washington was attacked at Fort Mifflin by French troops and compelled to abandon the post two years before war was declared on either side. During that period the diplomats in both nations interested hoped to be able to avert the struggle and might have done so but for world wide complications extending into India and to the heart of Europe. The battle of Lexington, the battle of Bunker Hill and the siege and capture of Boston were incidents; all of which took place before the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, the first more than a year before, and had England faced about, would not have led to separation. The firing on an American ship of war by a British man of war before the conflict of 1812 was an incident. The firing on the Water Witch, an American ship in Argentine waters by government troops; and the killing of one of the crew, was an incident. The Virginia affair during the administration of President Grant was an incident which led to a demand that a salute be fired to our flag, and the later withdrawal of the demand. The firing on British ships by the Russian fleet at Dogger Bay during the Japanese war was an incident. All of these incidents led to long diplomatic correspondence, or to some sort of written exchanges. Some led to war and some did not.

Brewer, one of the most brilliant American writers on international law, in a recent work censures certain American editors for their loose use of words in describing certain delicate relations with Germany, as being misleading to the public. Evidently, the same caution or censure is applicable in their treatment of the Mexican situation.

THE CURSE OF MEXICO.

"Every Mexican leader is at once a patriot and a traitor," says Frederiek Starr in his great work on "Mexico and the United States." Starr explains that while having a certain loyalty to country which makes them fight its enemies, the people follow the individual rather than the principle, with the result that the leader is always tempted to put personal interest above national interest. Hence, he betrays his country and countrymen when crucial test comes, and generally does so under the guise of patriotism. The curse of Mexico is personal politics," says the same high authority, treating the same subject.

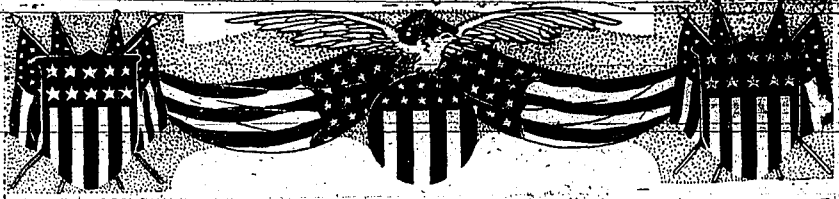

The truth of the opinions thus expressed are strikingly indicated by events in the unhappy country to the south during the past few years. Diaz was not wholly selfish, but he had great failings in that line. Madero was personally honest and patriotic but his relatives were far from being so. Huerta, Carranza, Villa and their subordinates are all of the same stamp. The insane idea of each is that he can rally the Mexican people to him and that they will stay permanently. As a matter of fact they will remain with any particular leader, only so long as he is winning. During the Mexican war there were 13 presidential changes, every big American victory being followed by a presidential change. Carranza is pursuing a course which will insure him his position until the first American victory of importance. Real patriotism which sacrifices self for country, can hardly be expected in a nation where the successful leader is the popular idol, who may be pulled down by a change in fortune. The temptation under such conditions for the individual to lay way wealth for the rainy day and look to himself first and country afterward is too strong for the humanity that is exemplified in the Mexican leader. In which matter he quite out-booses the American boss.

THE LAND BOARD FIASCO.

"Of again, once again," seems to be the condition in which Hober G. Hale, acting register of the land department, finds himself in. Hober was fired, is now unfired, and according to current report must now extinguish himself. Hale was ousted June 6 and has since been on the outside a look-in, but Attorney General Peterson, who is a kind-hearted individual, decided that was not a polite way to treat folks, and that the proper thing to do would be to invite Hale back after throwing him out of the window and give him to understand that he must only say "howdy" and then "beat it." So the board reversed itself, Governor Alexander and State Auditor Huston voting against the reconsideration and State Superintendent McCoy, Secretary of State Barker and Attorney General Peterson for it.

All of which would be funny if it were not serious. Hale merited discharge or he did not. If he did, his reinstatement was wrong. If he did not, this reinstatement coupled with any understanding that he resign was an insult to him and no less an injustice than the original discharge.

The whole thing is an indication of how our state business is being conducted. The opera bouffe proceedings at Boise, serve only as a partial diversion of popular attention from conditions on the Salmon tract, and do not serve to distract attention among the people there from their woes. What is the matter with the land department of the state and the land board anyhow, beyond what is already palpable in its imbecile treatment of the Salmon? An unfeeling critic would be tempted by its frantic antics and its indecisions since the exposure of the Hastings case, to feel that there may be other indiscretions from which it would divert attention by its puzzling methods of procedure in dealing with its employees.

ROBINSON'S

Those brave ones who a while back said that we would have hot weather seem to be justified in their prediction. And those who said, "with your line of underwear you ought to do more than your share of the business in this kind of goods," seem to be right in their predictions also, for we surely are having a fine trade in Men's, Women's and Children's Summer Underwear, but that is not surprising when one considers the remarkable values we are giving.

PROGRESSIVES
ENDORSE HUGHESCommittee Adopts Advice of
Colonel Roosevelt

RHODE ISLAND MAN SAYS WILSON IS FAVORITE.

New York City Committeemen Send Protest Against Endorsement of Republican.

CHICAGO—By a vote of 32 to 8, the members of the committee to vote the national committee of the Progressive party yesterday, at the end of a stormy session, endorsed Charles E. Hughes for president, and the Paul Moose party practically went out of existence as a national political organization.

The fight in the committee to endorse Hughes was led by George W. Perkins of New York, James H. Garfield of Ohio, and Chester H. Rowell of California.

Colonel Roosevelt declined the nomination and urged the endorsement of Hughes.

The following states voted for the endorsement of Hughes on the roll call: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, District of Columbia, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Texas, Vermont, Virginia, Wyoming, Hawaii.

Many of the committeemen, in voting, took occasion to explain their vote. Harold L. Iken of Illinois, said that 70 per cent of the Progressives in his state would vote for Hughes. William Flinn of Pennsylvania, said that 85 per cent of the Progressives in Pennsylvania were for Hughes. Dr. Harris of Rhode Island, said that a majority of his constituents favored a third ticket and that President Wilson was favored by the Progressive party.

Among the protests against the nomination of Hughes was one from John J. O'Connell, chairman of the New York county Progressive committee. Mr. O'Connell's telegram, declared in part: "The national committee of the Progressive party, acting as a committee to fill vacancies, should not permit itself to be coerced or cajoled into doing that which the convention appointing it would never have done, namely, substitute the Republican nominees for our own, and those members of the committee who are real believers in the Progressive ideals and who are neither flatterers nor opportunists should protest the vote of any man who professes or has professed an intention to join any other party, for such a man debar himself from acting as a trustee for our voters."

MILITIA FARED
WELL IN BOISE

Boys Well and Ready When Called—Attended Church in Body Sunday Morning.

Ralph E. Lockhart, Special Times' Correspondent.

The Idaho regiment is now being whipped into shape for duty on the border. There are now more than 800 men in camp, which is all that are necessary for mustering. The medical corps is busy giving the physical examinations. A very small percentage of the men are being rejected. Out of 173 men examined June 24, only three were rejected. All officers that can be spared are on recruiting service in different parts of the state and most of them report very good results. No definite thing has been set for our departure towards the border. There are rumors of all kinds just as there are in all military camps. We pay no attention to rumors. We wait till we get an order from a superior then do as we are told.

None of the men of Co. D have been sick thus far. As they learn to take care of themselves, which they are rapidly doing, the danger from sickness will decrease. The camp kitchens and supply tents are inspected twice daily by the medical corps. All waste and refuse is burned. This being Sunday most of the men are having a very busy time. Companies attend church services in a body. Captain Willie Martin, chaplain, addressed the regiment on the subject of "Americanism." He spoke in part as follows: "The greatest privilege a mortal can have is that of being an American citizen. The United States is looked upon as being the representative nation of all that is best in civilization."

The Theatres

WONDERFUL STARTS

AT IDAHO THEATRE
Fashionable Palm Beach, Florida, and aristocratic Riverside Drive, New York City, figure prominently in "Gloria's Romance," the big motion picture novel that starts Wednesday matinee at the Idaho theatre. Billie Burke, the famous international stage favorite, has the leading role in this new motion picture, and it is expected she will score a triumph even greater as a film actress than she did while appearing on the speaking stage. Manager Williams of the Idaho theatre, had to outbid all competitors in order to secure "Gloria's Romance" for his patrons, so tremendous is the demand for the picture among theatre managers.

In the first two chapters of the story Miss Burke will appear in a Lucile frock, a suit of boy's clothes, some dainty palmamas, a 27½ negligee, the garb of a Seminole Indian, and, again, another Lucile gown. During the course of the production they will wear more than 40,000 worth of Henri Bendel, Lucile and Balmain frocks, besides a coat of Russian sable valued at $15,000, blue and gold and metal embroidered evening coat trimmed with silver fox fur, and a dinner gown trimmed with lace that was priced at $150 per yard.

The full company spent more than three weeks at that aristocratic resort in getting the scenes in which appear many notables of the world of fashion, who brought a great lack-to-work before a motion picture camera.

Stage settings of real lumber are being used in many of the scenes of "Gloria's Romance." The director found that the use of actual lumber instead of mere compo-board, covered with wall-paper, such as is ordinarily used in picture studios, would give much better photographic effects—the shadows are genuine and an opportunity is afforded for matching all interior decorations perfectly.

MOREY ALIVE WITH TROOPS

Captain Left in Sand Rallies and Escapes

GIVES ACCOUNT OF BATTLE AT CARRIJAL

Letter on Body of Captain Boyd Tells of Steps Leading to the Fight in Mexico.

FIELD HEADQUARTERS, via radio to Columbus, N. M.—Captain Lewis S. Morey, wounded in the Carrizal fight, is safe, after his daring stand against the Mexicans and heroic sacrifice to save his men. This report came in here tonight to General Pershing from Major Jenkins's column of the Eleventh cavalry, which is scouting the desert for survivors.

Nine more of the little group who faced the withering machine gun fire of the Mexicans probably must be added to the list of American dead, according to the report. The belief has now become almost confirmed that they wandered out on the desert and perished.

From Major Jenkins's report and the notebook of Captain Morey and Captain Boyd, which have been recovered, the facts of the fight are just about as they have previously been stated.

Captain Morey fell to the sands and believed himself dying. It was then he wrote his report, and giving it to the soldiers with him, ordered them to leave him, and, if possible, save their own lives and deliver his account of the battle to General Pershing.

After the soldiers had departed, Morey, in some unaccountable manner, managed to rally strength enough to reach the ranch of an American man-

Gloria Romance BY MR. and MRS. RUPERT HUGHES

Novelized from the Motion Picture Play of the Same Name by George Kleine

Copyright, 1916, by Adelaide M. Hughes

FIRST EPISODE

Lost in the Everglades.

"Racker remarkable, isn't it," said the sick old lion, Judge Freeman, "that the most expensive hotel and the most luxurious resort in the world should be only a few miles from an almost impenetrable wilderness inhabited by Indians that the United States army could hardly dislodge?"

"Yes, it is odd," said his young doctor, "but the prices here are almost as impenetrable as the knife grass of the everglades. And as for Indians, the United States army couldn't dislodge some of these millionaire squaws from their nobility."

"I'm afraid my daughter finds it so," the Judge agreed. "Here we've been for two whole weeks and Lois doesn't know anybody who is anybody—except Pierpont Stafford's boy, and I'm afraid he's only flirting with her."

Doctor Royce had not been engaged to prescribe for Miss Lois Freeman's ambitions, so he changed the subject. "It's hard to hear that there is a billiard in New York today when you look at these flowers and see those half-dressed mobs wallowing in the surf."

The Judge gave a jump and gasped. "Good Lord, hear that scream! Some woman is being murdered!"

Royce checked him with a gesture and a smile.

"Sit still, Judge; it's only Gloria Stafford having another battle with her governess."

The Judge settled back into his blanket, grumbling: "The little devil—always in hot water."

Doctor Royce came to her defense with a cautious warning: "They're driving her with too tight a rein. She's too big hearted and brave and wise to be treated as a child much longer."

The old man sighed: "No fathers with modern girls to raise are pretty helpless cattle. I can send a criminal to the chair, but I can't punish my daughter; she does what she pleases, and it rarely pleases me. And Pierpont Stafford can run a string of banks and make a railroad system out of his hand, but that girl of his has him—I believe they say 'buffaloed'—or is it 'Pittsburghed'—isn't that Pierpont out there in the surf now?"

"With I could go in. Do you think I might?"

The doctor shook his head: "You run out on the jinks and play a little golf among the palm trees. Tomorrow I may let you have a dip."

"I don't feel quite up to golf."

"Go on; don't disobey. You're worse than—than—" Another scream from the corridor gave him the missing word. "You're worse than Gloria."

He hit the Judge from his chair, thrust a bag of golf clubs into his Pierpont was handsome—much too good looking for his own good or the good of any girl or woman he focused his eyes upon. Pierpont was a big fellow and he was great fun, but David Stafford the son of Pierpont Stafford would be high finance—something tremendous.

The Judge, his father, kept his eyes on his nose more than on the golf ball, and landed in the bunkers with regularity. He knew that his daughter was sure to come mischief, but he was up to it was not the innocent mischief of the obstreperous Gloria.

Gloria Stafford, exultant in her bathing suit, was like a black figure came to life—very much to life as she stood outside her door, her hands on the knob against her governess, who tugged in vain at the opposite knob. Then Gloria let go, and the governess went staggering backward across the room, while Gloria with absolute of laughter made her way out and down the corridor and out to the beach.

The beach being no less than Palm Beach, she dodged among throngs of the well known, the musty people, who were making their way, though more sedately, to the surf. It was twelve o'clock, the fashionable bathing time. To be seen in the water more than half an hour earlier or more than half an hour later was socially fatal.

The governess followed the fugitive in hot haste, but Gloria sought refuge in the crowded ocean. She dived and stayed under as long as she could, but Miss Sidney descended her at once and gazed violently, commanding her to come back. Gloria merely bobbed her pert little bonnet and swam in toward her father. Miss Sidney persisted and Gloria gave her father a push, saying: "You go make her let me alone. Tell her she'll be sorry if she doesn't."

The capitalist floundered out with the apologetic manner of an overgrown schoolboy, for even he was afraid of the governess. And he was not very impressive for a bathing suit. He made his way to Miss Sidney's presence and mumbled: "Would you mind if Gloria had her morning swim, please?"

"The governess explained to him, as if she were talking to another child, that since Gloria had positively refused to work out her problem in algebra she had been forbidden to go into the water. Nevertheless she had defiantly rebelled, secretly arrayed herself for the bath, and fled. It would never do to let her have her own way."

"Er—um—I see," said Stafford. He bowed meekly and returned with still less courage to face his daughter.

A widow with a woman-child of sixteen is pathetic enough at best, but Gloria was so offensively sixteen; so eagerly alive, and so unconsciously pretty that her father was dismayed by a mere glance at her. His anger was sure to melt in a shamefaced smile.

In the meanwhile Gloria had made the most of her stolen moments and with swift overhead strokes had put a number of gleaming breakers between her and the shore.

She turned just in time to see her father beckoning to her with his bent imitation of the stern parent. She knew that the governess had cowed him, and she did not wish to humiliate him by her own disobedience.

So she swam back through the heads floating on the water like apples floating in a bathtub. When the engaged governess asked her by the wrist Gloria tried to pull her into the froth. But the governess was too big for her and she hauled Gloria out of the water and she hauled Gloria out of the water into a hard world of dry sand and drier mathematics.

Gloria slipped along in a white race, a storm brewing behind her eyes. She was not often sulky and never morbid. She was made up of joy, sunlight and mischief, all the fresh and sweet of life. But she loathed being told to do things or not to do things, forbidden, commanded—in a word, bossed. She was poised at the nameless stage between childhood and girlhood. She was not what you would call a yet but a better spirit than it is possible for her to be kept "in." She was tired of being snubbed.

Her brother David, some four years her senior, made life increasingly intolerable for Gloria by his freedom from the superior, worldly airs he assumed for her especial torment. In earlier years they had been very near to each other, and now it was bitter to Gloria's proud soul to watch David come and go and to watch dancing every night, and sitting apart, with Lois Freeman, whom Gloria did not like because her brother did.

Oh, yes, David could stir his head off, but her father turned white and her governor turned blue if Gloria so much as glanced a lover in a novel or suggested that she might have one herself at some time in that future—which she was waiting for—as the next installment of an exciting serial. Gloria was woman enough to resent restraint and child enough to be capable of making a tragic blunder if she ever broke away.

Gloria issued a declaration of independence as soon as she reached her room. It began with "I'm too old to have a governess!"

"Thank!" Miss Sidney snapped. "You're more than welcome!" Gloria snatched back: "I want one thing understood. This is the last time I'll stand being treated as a child. I'm not one. At my age my grandmother was the mother of my mother, and if you don't change your treatment of me I'm going to run away and marry the first man I meet."

"People who are always going to do things never do them," said the governess, with the primness of a copy-book. "But if you're so old and wise suppose you prove it first by doing your algebra lesson. It's very simple."

"They never made my grandmother learn algebra," Gloria protested. "They never taught her to run an automobile either."

"That's another thing. My brother has a car of his own and I haven't even a pushmop. Half the girls of my age have their own motors. I can run one as well as any of them. It's a shame that my father won't buy me one."

"Perhaps if you learned your lessons he might reward you with a car." This rainbow of hope brought the end of the storm. Gloria beamed and ran to slip out of her bathing suit and into her lace-trimmed frock. The governess almost smiled as she wrote the problem on the blackboard she used for Gloria's lessons. When Gloria came back Miss Sidney pointed to the figures.

"It's very simple, my dear," she said. "You have only to multiply a by b by c."

"But—"

"Work it out yourself, dear, and call me when it is finished."

Gloria stared at the problem and felt herself slipping back into childhood at a breakneck speed. She had no more idea what it all meant than a newborn babe. She put on all the bit of tortoise shell spectacles, but they made her look younger than ever and gave her no help. She could see that foolishly, but she could not see why anyone should be so slow what would happen if you did such a foolish thing as to multiply it by itself.

When the blackboard blurred before her eyes she moved to the window and stared at the glittering marionette of the crowd. Everybody was at play except Gloria, people in bathing suits, yachting flames, golf togs, tennis dresses, bicycle clothes, motor gear. They streamed along the walks, the sand, the piazzas, and in wicker chairs, or rolled along in "automobiles."

By and by Gloria saw Lois Freeman coming in from the lagoon. When David Freeman snatched up Lois decked her father at once. Gloria did not like the way she glared Mr. Freeman. Lois used the same languishing expressions Gloria had seen her working off on David.

Gloria wanted to run out and warn poor Mr. Freeman that Lois was a deceitful mink. Mr. Freeman had a lovely, trusting eye; it was a crime to lure him on. Gloria meditated. "They say he's a broker—what's that? I wonder what a broker breaks—hearts probably, if Mr. Forman is a sample. Oh, dear, this awful algebra!"

She stood pointing at life in general and study in particular. She turned back to her task and stood in so melancholy a posture that Doctor Royce, passing her window and seeing her, paused to stare at her for a moment as if she were a painted figure in a painted scene. He thought she was painted splendidly well. She was so pretty that she made his heart ache. It ached for himself and then for her poor little prisoner. He tapped on the window.

Gloria turned and recognized her visitor. Her eyes twinkled with affection. She said like Doctor Royce David had graduated at David's college; they were members of the same fraternity.

"It ought to be out here in the sun," Doctor Royce suggested.

Gloria was shocked at the idea. She pointed to the blackboard. "I'm in jail for a thousand years. It will take me at least that long to do this hateful problem."

Royce could not enter her room to go to the blackboard, so he asked her to bring the blackboard to him. She fetched it joyously and gave him chalk and said: "There isn't any answer, though."

He was too polite to say, "Why, this is the easiest thing in the world," but he showed that it was for him by the speed and smiling ease of his chalk work.

In a moment the riddle was solved. Gloria understood it a little less than before, but it meant a release from captivity, and she was so entranced that she hung her arms about him and gave him a rousing kiss and called him "a wonderful, marvelous, angel man."

To her it was a kiss of childish gratitude for the help of older wisdom. She hurried the blackboard back to the wall and began to copy the doctor's neat figures in her own scrawl.

But Royce stood quivering with the unexpected attack. He knew that it was a young girl's kiss given in confidence and ignorance, and it was therefore sacred. But he could not help feeling a thrill of prophetic hope.

Gloria Slipped Into High Speed and Sped Away.

Soon she must grow up to womanhood—and she must love someone, and why not him? She was very rich, but her own future was gorgeous in his dreams, and Gloria was the most gorgeous thing in his gorgeous dreams.

Then he reproached himself for the new dream and at the thought of the years that must roll over Gloria's sunlit head before he could even pay court to her. And in those years what dangers might she not encounter—angers to her health, her soul, her happiness? He longed to protect her through them all.

He saw that Gloria had already forgotten him. She had copied his work and she was rubbing out his calculations. He wondered if that were prophetic, too.

When Gloria had the blackboard all shipshape she bowed to the governess to come and see her triumph. Gloria regretted the deception; but what other refuge has the weak from the strong?

Miss Sidney raised her eyebrows and doubtless suspected that Gloria had enjoyed the study of a list of the English kings. Gloria did not mind that, for she hid a stolen novel inside the page and read something far more important to her than ancient history—modern romance.

If Gloria had not learned a lesson of any importance that day, neither had her elders.

When dinner time came at last Gloria's maid allowed her to select her newest Paris gown for dinner. And it was a pleasant dinner, on the veranda, with the twilight drawing round like soft curtains, the lamps glowing over, where in the tropical verdure like the moon, and the glimmering of the spinning—everywhere along the walks.

There was music. The dancing was beginning a little distance away. Gloria tried to sneak a sip of tea, but she was so busy looking at the waiter's coffee, but she was so busy that she took the cup away. But except for her everything was beautiful and tender; the very atmosphere was full of pleasant reveries. And when Miss Sidney had to look at her, she said to herself with the insulting word: "Bodiment!"

Gloria pretended not to hear her and talked vigorously to David. But he only laughed an older brother's laugh and looked another cigarette. And when he sat to her and nestled in his arms. He hugged her close, but she could tell that he was afraid of that gorgeous governess.

"Daddy, darling, let me go to the dance," Gloria said. "Just 'twas a dance." He shook his head. "Two! One!" He shook his head. She knew that the governess had given him his orders.

David snifled. "Little girls aren't allowed to mingle with grownups at a dark."

Gloria choked for words and threw him one glance. If looks were snakes in the eye he would have had a good one. But he only laughed the more. Then her father hardened his heart and gave her a run-along-now kiss.

She went along, but she did not run. Once more the rebellion began to simmer in her brain.

Her helplessness was her chief grievance. How could a young girl defend herself from a big governess and a big maid, a dainty-dainty father, and a brute of a brother? She was pondering while her maid took off her dinner gown and hung it up and handed her her sleeping suit. A pretty time to go to bed with all Florida calling to her under the moon!

She said her prayers with an absent-minded lack of conviction and called to the governess and the maid put out the lights and left her. But they did not put out the moon.

The governess had a prosaic soul and she fell asleep in spite of the moon. She dreamed of the pleading call of all outdoors—she even snored!

Gloria could stand everything but that. She stole from her bed and tipped to the governess' room to shake her and beg her not to play that tone on her nerves any more.

By stealing the governess' cloth slippers neatly placed on the bedside rug, Gloria plinned them there, whisked back into her own room and, flinging off her bedgown, slipped into her dinner gown again. She dressed in the dark and got away safely from her room.

She was afraid to face the brilliant lights and the crowd, but she found a nook on the piazza where she could peep in at a window and watch the whirling couple. The tune set her heart to waltzing and she was so famished for a dance that when old Judge Freeman came into sight she asked him to waltz with her. He shook his head and said:

"I'm sorry, my child, but I've been sent to bed, too."

She felt sorry for him, but she wished that people would stop calling her "my child."

She peeked at the ballroom again and watched the rivalry of David and Mr. Freeman for the dances of Lois Freeman. The two men were jealous of each other. David was furious, and Gloria was glad of it.

After a time David had a great scheme. Never dreaming that Gloria was just outside the window, within hearing distance, he asked Lois if she would not enjoy a little moonlight spin in his room. She said she would. David said, "Wait right here," and left the ballroom. But Lois did not waste any time waiting. She beckoned Mr. Freeman and told him that she had a headache and could dance no more. The dance before midnight, Gloria knew that she was killing time till David could get to the garage and back.

She heard David's car coming. The lights almost revealed her on the piazza, but she slipped away. She slipped into the entrance and ran into the hotel for Lois.

Then Gloria's inspiration came. She would save David from that stren and she would get a bit of moonlight for herself.

She dashed across the lawn and, stepping into her car, commanded it to obey her wild will, and away it went like a magic carpet.

Her practiced hands and feet knew the steering wheel and the clutch and the brakes and all, and there was a rapture beyond words in her power, her liberty, her speed. At last she was being obeyed and not obeying. This feeling mounted until she was almost and here her down moonlit lanes, shadowed with palms and beautiful strange trees and shrubs of exotic shape and perfume.

The road ran along the sea and the waves lashed with white foam. Out in the haze she saw a great full-rigged ship fogging along the gulf stream. But she was in a better ship.

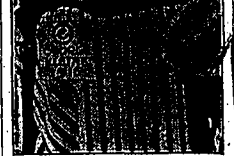

She could imagine the bewilderment of David and Lois when they stepped out the next morning and found that somebody else had clandestinely escaped with the car. She laughed aloud at the picture.

She could imagine that governess smothering the racket of her own anorak and getting up with a start, then deciding to see if Gloria were still in jail. She could see her putting her foot into her slippers and going kerd! Gloria shrieked at this vision. It would pay her off for some of those cuffs on the ear that she had given Gloria. Gloria had been too good a sport to tell on her, but she had not forgotten them.

She could imagine the governess picking herself up and running barefoot into Gloria's bedroom—the empty cage whence the bird had flown. She could see the panic she fell into as the funny sight she made in her corset and she dashed out into the corridor and hunted for Gloria's father to give the alarm.

Gloria proved how far she was from having outgrown her childhood by the things that amused and justified her flight. She was a child, but she had possessed herself of this perilous engine. She was flying at forty miles an hour along almost deserted roads, cutting through sleeping villages, little lanes in a jungle that closed more and more gloomily, threateningly about the road. She had no idea of the time or the distance. She only knew that at any time she was free. At last she was ruling something.

Then abruptly she lost control of her magic steed. It ceased to obey the wheel. It wavered this way and that with terrifying uncertainty. The steering gear had broken.

With a sudden sharp swerve the car shot from the road and out upon the beach. Paralyzed with amazement more than fear, Gloria was carried across the sand straight into the sea. She rushed toward her as to the ocean were hungry for her. But the wheels sank in the wet sand and the breakers did not capture Gloria. Almost drowned her in their warm flood, however, and she made haste to extricate herself and climb out.

No human being saw that strange apparition, unless it were Father Neptune, and he must have thought it was Venus rising from the sea again—time in a very fashionable, but a most dinner gown.

Gloria was only the more excited from this new experience. She sat a moment on the car, then jumped and needed a wave to the shore.

She found herself in a wilderness of sand dunes and mysterious bushes. She plunged among them, thinking less of making her way home than of exploring a little deeper this Eden to which she had stumbled.

She did not know what dangers lurked about her. There were multitudes of serpents in this Eden—cold, fierce rattlesnakes under the most beautiful flowers. Beneath the moonlit waters of little bays were hungry alligators; under the unwary feet the quicksand might open; the paths ended suddenly in entanglements of tall sword grass that slashed the skin at touch.

And deep in the fastnesses were the remnants of the Seminole tribes—half-breed and white man—who baffled them till pale-faced traders overcame the Indian vilas. The men had never forgiven the whites and they regarded their intrusions with hatred.

As children scamper into blood-curdling danger with laughter, so the child Gloria danced through Paradise not knowing that she was lost in the everglades.

arms and ordered him off. The Judge pleaded: "You'll play with me? Will you?"

"Not much! You've had enough of me for today. Here's your daughter, Miss Lois, let me introduce you to her. Take him round the hula once, won't you?"

Lois played with more grace than gracelessness. Her thoughts were on the two strikers to her bow. She had to content herself for her first work at Palm Beach with the attentions of Richard Freeman, a young broker in charge of a branch office at the Royal Poinciana. But recently she had caught the eye of David Stafford, and she had tried to hold it that people should be for America first, last and all the time. He announced that he would speak in behalf of recruiting at Kimberly Monday night, Murtairgh Tuesday afternoon, Filer Tuesday night, and Hansen Wednesday afternoon. He predicted the rallying of the people to the flag and country. A. R. "Outrander" followed with a brief talk in which he pledged his support.

The telegram of Governor Alexander in which he said that Rough Rider and other similar organizations would not be organized outside the regular militia, was discussed by Mr. Booth, who urged the concentration of enlistment work along the lines begun. The meeting was unanimously of the opinion that the first duty was to fill the Idaho company.

James Bice, a G. A. R. member, was called upon and said that he had no hesitation in pledging the co-operation of the 25 members of the G. A. R. post. This announcement was received with cheers and applause and the members of our "voice" and "singing" members with the full rights of membership. Mr. Bice suggested the bringing in of "Old Glory," which was done amid great enthusiasm. He said that before the civil war men were recruited by sending out a drum corps and speakers and he felt confident that the young men would respond again as they did before to the call.

Resolutions Repudiate Candidate of Republicans

DECLARE HIM NOMINEE OF TIME-SERVING MACHINE BOSSES.

Demand That a Straight Ticket Be Placed in the Field and Send Back
Committeeman to Chicago.

SALT LAKE CITY—After a five hour discussion Saturday night, the Utah Progressive committee voted unanimously against endorsing Charles E. Hughes for president, declared that he was the candidate of a pernicious band of time-serving bosses, that a republic governed by boss rule cannot long continue, that in the interest of good government it will be necessary to perpetuate the Progressive party, and that Colonel Roosevelt should refuse to run. Hiram W. Johnson, Raymond Robbins or Victor Mordock should be nominated to fill the vacancy and that Committeeman A. T. Moon, who had just returned from Chicago, be instructed to go straight back to the meeting Monday and tell the national committee how they felt about the matter.

The attitude of the Utah Progressives, which will be conveyed by Mr. Moon to the Progressive national committee, is set forth in the following resolutions adopted by the meeting: Resolved, by the Progressives of Utah, that National Committeeman A. T. Moon be sent back to Chicago to the meeting of the Progressive national committee called for June 26, 1916; that he be and is hereby instructed to vote and use his and the influence of the 25,000 Utah Progressives to place a Progressive national ticket in the field; that, in the event that Colonel Roosevelt will definitely decline to run, he shall vote and use his influence for the nomination for president on the Progressive ticket of Hiram W. Johnson or Victor Mordock or Raymond Robbins.

That he shall make known to the Progressive national committee that he and the Progressive party of Utah are unalterably and bitterly opposed to any endorsement of Hughes and Fairbanks, or Hughes and anybody, and to any coalition or amalgamation with the Republican party; that we are opposed to the Republican party on its record since 1909, and by reason of the manner in which it is governed by a handful of pernicious, self-appointed, self-perpetuating and self-serving bosses; that we believe in the continuance throughout time of this republic; that no republic governed by a despotism can long continue; that it is our belief that Hughes as president would be controlled by these Republican bosses in every essential act, and, in being thus governed, could not possibly do anything for which the Progressive party stands; that we believe will live as a dominant force to compel corrective legislation and as a menace to crooked politics and the encroachments of the inviolable government, even though it should not elect a candidate in the next generation.

WESTLEY K. WALTON,
Chairman of Progressive Party of Utah.

N. A. ROBERTSON, Secretary.

When the Progressives had foregathered at Mr. Livingston's office Mr. Moon told them what he had been doing in Chicago and since the national convention. Mr. Moon said he had gone to Oyster Bay and had a conference with Colonel Roosevelt, at the latter's suggestion. What was said between them, particularly what the colonel told him, Mr. Moon did not make known for general consumption.

Both before and after the meeting Mr. Moon declined to be "invited" into an interview. "I have nothing to say now," he said. "Wait till I come back from Chicago."

Mr. Moon told the Progressives that he had come home to attend to personal business matters and that he had left his proxy with a fellow committeeman whose views coincide with those of the Utah Progressives—a fellow words, opposed to an endorsement of Hughes and in favor of a Progressive national ticket.

The Progressives discussed Mr. Moon's statement and many vouchsafed the opinion that Utah ought to have its own representative at the national committee meeting in Chicago Monday. Mr. Moon promptly offered to return at once. This proposal met with the hearty approval of the meeting, but as Mr. Moon had already been under heavy personal expense attending national sessions, it was decided that the party would bear all the cost of his trip back to Chicago.
