Submarine Merchant Vessel Brings Cargo to Baltimore

WILL TAKE BACK LOAD OF NICKEL AND RUBBER.

Passes Through Virginia Capes and, Taking on Pilot, Proceeds to Baltimore and Anchors in Harbor.

BALTIMORE, Md.—The world's first submarine merchant marine, the German underwater liner, Deutschland, anchored below Baltimore Sunday night, after voyaging safely across the Atlantic, passing the allied blockading squadrons and eluding enemy cruisers watching her.

Sixteen days out from Bremerhaven to Baltimore, the submarine reached safety between the Virginia capes at 1:45 o'clock Sunday morning, passing in on the surface, covered by a heavy bank of dark clouds.

Three hours later, at 4:45 o'clock Sunday morning, the big submarine started up the bay with the German merchant flag flying, under her own power, piloted by a German.

Regarding his vessel as a merchantman, subject to no unusual restrictions, the skipper, who went up to Chesapeake, without waiting to notify local customs and quarantine authorities of his presence.

According to the latest reports Sunday night the cutter had not approached the submarine, and it is understood that she merely was ordered out to keep the strange craft under surveillance.

According to the accounts reaching here, the underwater liner's superstructure was visible in the water when she came in. Until daylight she showed no flag but the German merchant ensign was raised at anchor. Stories were circulated that British or French cruisers chased her at sea Thursday, but could not be confirmed.

DÉCLARATION OF LONDON ABANDONED

France Issues Statement Saying It Has Not Given Results Expected

ALLIES WILL GO BACK TO ORIGINAL RULES.

Memorandum Says Allies Will Continue to Observe Rigidity the Law of Nations.

PARIS—The French government, following the example of Great Britain, has abandoned the declaration of London as an interpretation of maritime international law.

A memorandum accompanying the decree states that the rules of the London declaration were adopted by the Entente Allies at the beginning of the war as being the most expedient but that experience has shown that they did not give the results expected either in securing to belligerents a full exercise of rights or affording adequate guarantees to neutrals.

In so doing, the memorandum concludes, the allies declared solemnly and property of neutrals and being ready to make compensation for any unjustifiable damage caused to a belligerent.

BOY SCOUTS PITCH WOOD RIVER CAMP

Thirty-one Members Leave Twin Falls Saturday

BOYS WILL GET NEXT TO NATURE FOR 20 DAYS.

Will Apply Camp Knowledge, Practice Drills and Will Follow Daily Program.

On a grass covered bank of the Wood river, 19 miles above Ketchikan, 21 live Boy Scouts have pitched their camp and are spending twenty days full of healthful excitement doing next to nature.

Early Saturday morning and during the day, seven auto loads of Boy Scouts left Twin Falls for their camp. Water was again turned into the ditches on the Salmon river tract last Saturday, for what may possibly be the last watering of the season. There remains at this time 35,770 acre feet of water in the reservoir, the gate height being 22.5 feet. The water is being drawn off the reservoir during the week of 11:10 acre feet, indicating that the run-off during the week has more than offset the amount of water drawn off, which was 1,019 acre feet.

As it turned out nobody was seriously hurt and complaining witnesses determined to drop the whole matter.

He was taken to the county jail and is being held for trial. Edwards is a well known man in Burley and is said to have been a member of the Burley High School. He is now being held in the county jail.

A. I. TROUT VICTIM OF BOLD THEFT

Robber Invades Room and Gets Away With $36

Officers Take Young Man Into Custody But Later Turn Him Loose After Investigation.

The story of a daring robbery whereby a thief lifted his trousers from where they were lying in his room at the Rogerson about 2 o'clock Monday morning, extracted $36 in cash from the pockets, left the trousers on the window sill with his watch on top of them and made an escape through the alley, is told by A. I. Trout, the owner of the trousers and the money.

Mr. Trout says that he was awakened by a noise evidently made by the thief jumping from the roof into the ash can at the rear of Murphy's cigar store, and that missing his trousers he at once rushed down stairs and informed the night clerk that he had been robbed. The clerk thereupon called a patrolman and took another look at the trousers and the money.

Shorty Kendall was notified and a general search of the city began. A man who was wandering around in the early morning was arrested. He told where he had a room and claimed to be a young farmer from the North Side, who was making his second visit to the Twin Falls hotel. He had been driven from his bed in the rooming house through the attentions of bed bugs who insisted on biting him. He was taken to the Twin Falls hotel and a search was made for the trousers and the money.

The case of the State against Burley and the case of the State against Glenn Frank, and the case of the State of Idaho against Charley Dunne and the case of the State of Idaho against Barney Hart with a broomstick, were both dismissed yesterday morning by Probate Judge Arthur W. Gayle, of the County Attorney's office. The matter might be perjured and the fans in both communities concerned. As it turned out nobody was seriously hurt and complaining witnesses determined to drop the whole matter.

TRACT FREE FROM INFANT PARALYSIS

Acting County Physician Sees Little Danger of Coming of Disease From East to Idaho.

"I have heard of no cases of infantile paralysis in this part of the country recently," said Dr. C. O. Weaver, acting county physician, when asked in regard to the danger of the disease coming from the East. "There were a few mild cases at Pilot last year, all of which, I believe, recovered," he continued, "and since that time I have heard nothing about it. The disease appears to be in a very mild form here when it appears at all and is not epidemic like it is reported to be in New York at present. The eastern experts are correct in saying that its origin is obscure, and that it is impossible to state definitely where it came from. It is a disease that is about all that can be said about it. I have treated a number of cases during my experience, and always with the best results. It is a disease which attacks children, in no instance did any brother or sister of the sick child contract the disease. They all recovered completely. I do not anticipate that the epidemic prevailing in New York will extend to this state."

INJUNCTION ON COUNTY HOSPITAL

Dr. T. O. Boyd Will File Restraining Proceedings

ACTION WILL BE FRIENDLY TO TEST LEGAL RIGHTS.

Contract For Building Given Reed Company—New Bids Called For Plumbing and Heating.

The county commissioners will be enjoined today by Dr. T. O. Boyd from proceeding further with the construction of the county hospital, the contract for the construction of which was let yesterday to the W. G. Reed company for $25,574, on the ground that the board has no legal power to construct such institution. The proceedings are of a friendly character to determine the rights of the county in the matter under the laws of Idaho and the case will be tried at the earliest practicable moment.

Last week Dr. Boyd suggested to the county board that it purchase the Twin Falls hospital from him. The commissioners visited the institution Saturday and decided not to buy. Dr. Boyd informed them that he doubted their legal power to construct such a building as they had in mind and that in the event as they tried to do so he would invoke the aid of the courts to test the matter. Monday afternoon when the commissioners convened, Dr. Boyd telephoned to them and asked them to defer the acting on the bids for an hour. They did this. At the end of that time Attorney C. M. Booth appeared in his behalf and briefly informed the board that any action on their part would be a sign for the beginning of proceedings to restrain them. The board then passed the bids would be acted on and the contract awarded and that their only request was that any contemplated proceedings be delayed until after the next meeting of the board.

Mr. Booth replied that there would be no delay and left. The board then voted to award the contract to the W. G. Reed company. The board then passed the bids would be acted on and the contract awarded and that their only request was that any contemplated proceedings be delayed until after the next meeting of the board.

Average Increase for Last Six Months 125 Per Cent.

NO MONTH SHOWS LESS THAN 100 PER CENT. OVER 1915.

Extra Work Newsclippers, Increase in Force and Results in Bigger Salaries.

E. Sullivan.

Mr. Sullivan says that the business of the office month by month this year has shown an increase of from 100 to 140 per cent over the corresponding month last year, the increase for June, 1916, over June, 1915, being 125 per cent, which is about the average increase since January 1.

KIMBERLY PATRIOTIC IN PRESENT CRISIS

Idaho Call Gives Synopsis of Speeches and Tells of Enthusiasm That Was Aroused.

The meeting for the purpose of securing recruits was called to order by Reverend Stewart, of the M. E. church, and after singing "My Country 'Tis of Thee," he briefly stated the purpose of the meeting, says the Kimberly Call. "We are gathered here because Uncle Sam has called the boys to the defense of the flag," said Reverend Stewart, "and now is the time for us to throw aside our personal opinions, our political prejudices, and stand united for the country. He said that he had been asked what he would do if he was physically fit, "I replied that I was physically fit, and that if my country called me to go, and I only awaited word of my appointment as chaplain," said Rev. Stewart. Mayor Sweeley of Twin Falls, was then introduced.

Mayor Sweeley said he came before the people of Kimberly as the emissary of the governor of the state and president of the United States, to call upon the people to meet the need of the country. He said that the country needs men and it needs them now. He pointed out that other states had furnished their quota called for by the president and some of them more, and that Idaho must do her share. He said that Twin Falls had furnished about 100 men, and that if the state needed or that should be furnished by this county. Mr. Sweeley called attention to what has been done in Twin Falls in the way of making arrangements to provide the members of company D with the many things they will need after they get into active service. He took occasion to discourage any who might be thinking of waiting for volunteers to be called for, saying that no such organizations would be formed and that the present military units would be filled up.

Following Mayor Sweeley's talk Captain Longley of Twin Falls, was introduced. Captain Longley is a veteran of the civil war, and as he stood there, his figure erect, with hair as white as snow, he presented an inspiring sight. He spoke fervently of the present crisis, and called attention to the fact that it is a serious business we are in, and that the only way to prevent it from becoming more serious is to prepare. He spoke briefly of the glorious history of the United States and said that our achievements were due to the intelligence and devotion of our forefathers, which has always been a characteristic of the American people. He paid a fine tribute to Old Glory and true Americanism, and the loyal, true and devoted mothers who are willing to offer their sons in defense of the country.

Captain Longley closed his remarks and at the conclusion of his remarks he was given a hearty round of applause which was repeated with added vigor. Attention was called to the company D Association, recently formed in Twin Falls, and the statement was made that it was intended that all citizens of the county join it. An opportunity was offered as the audience left the hall to join the association and pay the initiation fee of one dollar. Quite a large number of Kimberly people joined.

HOG PRICES STILL SOARING TO CLOUDS

Cattle Also Maintain Advanced Rate—Sheep Movement Heavy—Wool Commanding Big Price.

The advanced price that hogs took Monday has been strongly maintained all week, says the Portland Livestock Reporter of Thursday. Buyers seem to have made no counter attack and on an even quality basis Monday's top has been usual all week.

The spread between prime lights and pigs has narrowed considerably, and best offerings of underweight classes are getting a much better clearance than a few weeks back.

As far as can be observed the California run of cattle seems to be over for the season. This season's run was larger than usual with quality fairly well above the average.

The light receipts all this week were made up entirely of northwest offerings.

The strength developed Monday was rather surprising, and has continued throughout the week.

Monday's prices were very far from what the price can be obtained for well put up stuff. Scatter of offerings of finished steers met with instant acceptance at the hands of buyers at prices well along with the prices paid several months back when quality was more abundant. Very few steers have been offered since Monday.

The sheep movement still continues more liberal than the first months of the year. The gain in receipts last month was the first for the present year and is being well maintained to date during this month.

More than 125,000 pounds of Central Oregon wool was sold at Bend on Friday at prices ranging between 21 and 31 cents per pound. The average price paid was about 24 cents per pound, which is the highest price that has ever been offered for local wool.

Filer Items

(From The Filer Journal.)

One of the most delightful social affairs ever given in Filer was the surprise party at the home of Mrs. W. P. Shinn last Friday afternoon. About fifty of his friends and neighbors gathered at the church and led by two ladies carrying the stars and stripes, formed a procession to the house. The following ladies were present: Mesdames Weaver, Pond, Bunce, Allen, Fugleson, Tanner, Timm, Reeves, Porter, Young, Schildman, Reynolds, Munyon, Beem, Bracken, Parson, Brennan, Geo. Patten, G. Patten, Holmes, Ed. Ripley, Miss Ripley, A. J. Ripley, Duquesne, Smith, La Monte, Dwight, Erhardt, Connor, Arms, Cedarholm, Reese, Showers, Macaw, Wilcox, H. Fisher, Ed. Fisher, L. McCleary, C. McCleary. These from Twin Falls were Mesdames M. G. Ripley, Frank Brown and Doolley.

A. N. Holmes, Filer's cement contractor, is doing a big job of cement work for the Filer Milling & Elevator Co. The job will take at least eight cars of cement. They are building a coal place on which to shovel coal from one 36x110-foot and a second house 36x20 to take care of the rapidly increasing coal growth in the territory. Few realize what the seed industry at this point means. Harvesters, they have had to ship the seed to Twin Falls for cleaning, but this item will be eliminated in the future.

Last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Shearer, Mr. and Mrs. Traut and the Tanner tribe filled lunch baskets and motored to Artesian City for an outing. The elements had it in for us, but had a splendid time in spite of the rain. Mr. Childs of the Natatorium, gave up his home for the party in which to spread their lunch, and his kindness made a bright spot in the outing. Artesian City is fast becoming a popular resort for motorists and a nice place for a trip is not to be found in southern Idaho.

Mrs. Geo. Leonard was called to Des Moines two or three weeks ago on account of the serious illness of her mother. A letter to George Tuesday brought this word that her mother died Sunday afternoon.

Judge Leonard has sold his farm to Sumner and Noad Musser for $26,000, and the place is worth every cent of it. The judge will take his wife to southern California and get her nicely located for the winter, after which he will return here to look after other interests, and possibly pick a place of land he owns near Twin Falls.

The Ladies' Aid will meet next Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 for a work meeting. It is hoped there will be a large attendance, as they have important business matters to transact.

Prof. Dooley was in town yesterday. He likes his work with the coal company, although the call comes strong for him to return to school work. We notice by a letter from some city in Montana that they want him there.

The United Stores Co. have just put a store at Twin Falls, and will probably put another at Pocatello. This is the company that J. E. Wood is with, and later on Joe may come to Twin Falls to take charge of the store at that place.

The Ladies' Aid will give an ice cream social on H. J. Weaver's lawn Tuesday evening, July 18. A musical program is being prepared that will continue through the evening. Ice cream, cake and coffee will be served. The public is cordially invited to attend.

H. G. Munyon and Grover Davis went to Twin Falls last night where the committee opened bids for the new grounds buildings. The exhibit building and rest room was awarded Higgenbotham, Ellis & Jamison. Grand stand and judges' stand, Jess Edwards, Barnes, Kimball & Bingham, Twin Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Whitney returned yesterday from Burley where they attended the race meeting with their running horses. The sorrel mare won her race the first day, Billy run last on the second day, and the sorrel mare 1st on the third day. Earl Munyon's horse took the first heat in his race and then went lame.

Geo. Smith, secretary of the Twin Falls county fair, is busy with many special prizes that will be awarded. The latest one is a purse of $35 for "milkmaids' contest." Twenty dollars will go to the best, $10 to the second and $5 to the third. The cows will be so selected on the grounds. This feature should prove an attractive one to the girls who know how to milk.

People who lived in Filer during the early years of its existence, will remember Rufus Gaskill, who run a drug store. H. G. Munyon received word last Friday that Mr. Gaskill had died in Idaho that day. Mr. Gaskill had many friends in the early days who will regret to learn of his death.

Carl Pielack is playing left field for the Kimberly team. He made home runs in the first two games he played. Carl is not only a splendid fielder, but is a pitcher of some renown. Another year when Filer has good grounds she will have a ball team that will make the whole tract set up and take notice.

State News

Accidentally Killed.—Albert Grubb, 3-year-old son of Dell Grubb, was shot and instantly killed by his brothers, John and Edward, aged 5 and 8, respectively, at their ranch home, near May. The three children, left alone in the house, got their father's .30-38 rifle and were playing with it when the accident happened.—Burley Bulletin.

Pontello Girl Killed.—A most deplorable accident occurred Wednesday evening about 6 o'clock at the east end of the viaduct on Center street when Helen Orr, an eight-year-old girl, was struck by an automobile and a result died in a few minutes from the injuries she received. The young girl had her skull fractured and died about thirteen minutes after she was picked up.—Pontello Tribune.

Lease Branch Line.—The Wilder branch was taken over Saturday by the Caldwell Traction company on a 99-year lease, and the first cars by the new company were run last week ago. For the moment the trip will be made in a handsome motor car, the property of the Oregon Short Line, but as soon as the material can be procured for the construction of the line, electric cars will be run. Six trips were made Monday and seven trips Tuesday, and many of the special rates to visit the Wilder and Greenleaf country.—Caldwell News.

Postoffice Redged.—Because of the decline in receipts since the completion of the dam, Arrowrock postoffice was reduced to fourth class at the beginning of the fiscal year, July 1. For several years, during the rush of construction work on the highest dam in the world this office did a large volume of business. The loss to the mailing privileges at the camp, the postoffice was the only medium of exchange. The money order and postal savings receipts were cut off all proportion to the class of the office and it was no doubt the biggest little postoffice in the United States. The present postmistress, Mrs. D. W. McQuinn, who opened the office December 11, 1911, has resigned.—Capital News.

Confession to Murder.—Albert Metzner, a more than seventeen years of age, has confessed that he with another man, murdered Wilbur Breckenridge, one half mile west of Idaho Falls, at the New Sweden Irrigation ranch on the night of March 24, 1916. The other man who is implicated and the real instigator of the murder, according to the confession, has been known by several names. A. C. Bantz is thought to be his real name and was called "Bantz" by the authorities. He is a large, but the authorities have a good description of him and hope for his capture. On the night of the murder they went out and

The medal was awarded to Miss Johnson, who won by a very close margin, there being only one-eighth of one per cent. between Miss Johnson and Miss Bonwell. The other marking were equally as close.

Pike, Misses Agnes Hart, Harriet and Grace Bolger, Margaret Allen, Helen and Katherine Pitcairn, Leola Williams. Mrs. Pitcairn came late in the afternoon to enjoy the coming of the packages.

A Correction

Considerable annoyance was caused Robinson's store by a misprint in our issue for Thursday, the figure 8 before an s, having dropped from the page forms on the way to the press room, thus making the price of percale house-dresses read 8 cents instead of 88c.

QUALITY COUNTS

Florida Romance BY MR. and MRS. RUPERT HUGHES Novelized From the Motion Picture Play of the Same Name by George Kleine Copyright, 1916, by Adelaide M. Hughes

SYNOPSIS.

Pierpont Stafford, banker and railroad magnate, with his sixteen-year-old daughter, Gloria, is living at the Hotel de Ville. Gloria is a vivacious, willful young lady who chafes under the restraining hand of a governess, and who repeatedly escapes. Her childish capers cause young Royce and his friends to regard her as a nuisance. She falls in love with her, she steals from her room at night and in an auto plunges into the water where she leaves the car, becoming lost. The governess falls into the hands of the Seminole Indians. She is rescued and returned to her father who had offered a reward for her return.

THIRD EPISODE

Never before in all her luxurious young life had Gloria encountered the slightest hardship. The most exquisite of the niceties of existence had been hers as regularly as the breath she drew. So she had wondered of them and rebelled. And now she had found that adventure was not altogether pleasant, either. A primeval jungle inhabited by a primitive people seemed to say the least, distinctly uncomfortable.

Gloria felt it especially lucky that since she had to be rescued late had been polite enough to select a good-looking rescuer for her. The more she studied Mr. Freneau the better she liked him. He had a nice name, too—a nice, marriageable name.

The only fly in the ointment was the bad behavior of Dr. Royce. She had thought him charming. But now he looked and smelled.

Dr. Royce was grim, because he did not know just what he ought to do. He was confronted with a duty that he could not solve. It was like some obscure disease, hard to diagnose.

To speak up and denounce Freneau as a liar and thief was impossible. Royce had no proof that Freneau had played either the cad or the coward.

He knew only that Freneau must have seen him battling with the Indians, and a decent man would have come to the assistance of a fellow white. Even if Freneau had felt that he ought to put Gloria in the boat first, he might have come back to help Royce. But Freneau had left Royce to his fate. That was ugly.

Royce heard Pierpont Stafford say to Freneau: "My boy, you've earned the $5,000 reward offered. You've earned a million dollars."

Now Royce felt that he understood. Freneau had been coaxed into the overglades by that $5,000 lottery prize. He had won it; and it looked as if Freneau were expecting to win Gloria's love—the bargain. For Gloria was simply devouring him with her eyes.

Royce knew little about Freneau, and that little was not to his advantage. Freneau neglected his office, but neglected no opportunity for a love affair. Dr. Royce had come to Palm Beach at the private physician of old Judge Freeman, and he had plunged into a hot path, treated his wounds as best he could, shaved, and put on fresh clothes. Then he strolled out to order a new evening dress in a hurry from a Palm Beach tailor. He met Freneau, carrying his honors jauntily. Royce went to him and held him skewered with his eyes as he said:

"Look here, Freneau, haven't you a little something to say to me?" Freneau colored a trifle, but he stared back at Royce without discomfort and he laughed no less easily than usual.

"Why, no, old man; nothing that I know of—except that I suppose I ought to feel sorry that you arrived so late. But I can't feel sorry. I didn't even know you were there."

Royce glared at him, then laughed harshly and said:

"The diagnosis in your case is clear. You are hopelessly infected with yellow fever; but you are immune to all honorable confessions. Don't lose your head, though; and don't try any of your tricks on little Gloria Stafford."

Freneau laughed again, a more ugly laugh this time. "That seems to me to be Miss Stafford's business, and certainly none of yours."

"I'm going to make it mine," said Royce.

After Gloria had enjoyed all the redeeming influences of a tub, she had a shampoo, and in the linen and a silk frock, she found that her interest in Mr. Freneau was as keen as ever. She even felt grateful to Lois Freneau for flirting with David. She sat out on the ledge of the veranda and daydreamed.

When her father sauntered by and asked her what she was up to she answered:

"O, nothing! I'm just basking in the sun."

But when Pierpont came by that way a little later he found Dick Freneau basking in Gloria's most bewitching smile. They were Romeo and Juliet at Palm Beach, separated only by a low wall and a clump of rhododendrons. And they were reaching across that with his walking stick.

It was the first time Pierpont had seen his child in a flirtation. He did not like her in that employment. He took her by the ear and led her away. She protested at the indignity.

Pierpont let go her ear. He had always been afraid of her and unable to manage her. He was not afraid of Freneau, however. He went for her at once. He was about to begin with a stent—"How dare you speak to my daughter?" He paused, feeling that without Freneau's help he might have no daughter to be spoken to.

His ears were quick to accomplish his ends with the weapon of the checkbook. He drew the weapon now and a fountain pen and said:

"By the way, there's that reward. It will give me great pleasure to pay it over."

He wrote after "Pay to the order of the name 'Richard Freneau' and the amount 'Five thousand and no hundredths dollars—$5,000.' Freneau's fingers trembled to catch the fortune, but his brain advised him to play for higher stakes. He put away the temptation with a proud smile.

"It is reward enough to have been able to be of service to Miss Stafford. If Gloria had not adored him before, that chivalrous speech would have won her. It quite disarmed Pierpont. With his checkbook ruled out, his best weapon was gone. But he blustered all the harder. "My daughter is a little girl. I won't have her fooling time away with you. She must get her education first. She is hardly more than a child."

"Oh, papa!" Gloria cried. Pierpont went on: "And she's going to school at once. We start north on the next train."

"Then Mr. Freneau will come north, too, and we shall see each other all we want to. For we love each other, don't we, Mr. Freneau?" Desperately! Don't we, Mr. Freneau?

Mr. Freneau's answer was blurred. Pierpont studied the two young people. He had his own opinion of Freneau. It was formed on brief acquaintance, but he was a judge of men.

"You love each other, eh? Desperately, too? Well, well! Now, look here," he said, after a quick balancing of his mind, "of course you both know that Gloria is too young for either of you. She must prepare herself for the solemn responsibilities of life and graduate at a good finishing school. Now, if you will wait, and not see each other or write to each other, till then, and if I still love you, then, then, I will not oppose your marriage. I'll do all I can to make you happy. Is it a bargain?"

Freneau had not the courage to refuse the demand in the cold eyes of the millionaire. To be accepted as his son-in-law at any time was a marriage—prospective. He hesitated to give his own in exchange for it.

"When he had promised there was nothing left for Gloria to do but promise also."

"For five years, then," said Pierpont grimly. "You promise not to bother each other or speak or write—for five years."

"I promise!" said Freneau quickly. "From tomorrow," said Gloria with equal grimness.

"The train leaves very shortly," said Pierpont, and led her in to superintend the packing.

Freneau walked away in a daze. Yesterday he was a broker's clerk. Today he was the son-in-law elect of one of the country's wealthiest men. What were five years to him?

Five years sounded unimportant to Gloria, too, at the moment. She would love that young man forever.

Five years is a long time, and many things can happen in the eighteen hundred odd days and nights.

Freneau hated Royce, for he rarely liked the people whose property he was stolen.

Gloria was gone and Lois was gone, but an attractive youth like Freneau was not left alone in such multitudes of women as gathered at Palm Beach with no more serious purpose than escaping the cold drafts of the North and the torments of boredom in the South.

He spent so much time gathering up applauses from fair women that when the season closed at Palm Beach his firm gave him his full liberty.

He had done nothing, they wrote, to encourage them to pay him further salary. He had to go next to places where he had only his winning personality as capital. He found money rather hard to impress, but there was always some woman foolish enough to believe in his beautiful eyes.

Some of them were rich and some of them were as poor as poor Nell.

She Did Nothing More Violent Than to Hold a Chaffing-Dish Orgy. Now and Then in Her Room.

Track, the daughter of Gideon Track, a canal-boss captain. He met her in a cheap boarding house, where he paid his landlady nothing much except his promises and some extravagant compliments.

His heart was very shabby in his affair with Nell Track, and deserted her cruelly because, at a critical time and he got a tip on the market and sold it to a broker, who gave him a share of the proceeds.

He was tired of poverty that he went to New York and anticipated his promise. But Gloria and her father were abroad on a summer vacation, and Freneau was thrown on his own other tip and sold it to a broker named Frank Mulry.

Mulry knew the value of such a partner, and he encouraged Freneau to learn from financiers' wives and daughters what could be learned otherwise. In the course of time Freneau made himself so important to Mulry that he was taken into the firm as a silent partner. At length, through a most confidential tip, he got in as a partner, and was the very next day on the market and cleaned up so much money that Mulry was glad to take him into full partnership as the senior member of the firm.

When he saw the legend, "Freneau & Mulry, stock and bond members of the stock exchange," on the door and on the letterheads Freneau felt so important that he did not care what Pierpont Stafford or his daughter thought of him. He was the young Napoleon. One of these days he would buy and sell Pierpont Stafford.

His success enlarged his acquaintance, his attractiveness, and his temptations. He was on the crest of the wave when he met Lois Freneau again. He was studying the diamond crop in a jeweler's window and wondering just what place offering he should buy for a certain person whom he had recognized elsewhere in a previous raid on the market and cleaned up so much money that Mulry was glad to take him into full partnership as the senior member of the firm.

Each stared at the other with eyes ready for flirtation. Each recognized the other as a former Palm Beach comrade.

"Why, Mr. Freneau!" was Lois' exclamation. Her language was not so brilliant as her eyes.

"Why, Miss Freneau!" was his equally brilliant answer. The same thing was true of him.

"But I'm no longer Miss Freneau," said she.

"I'm still Mr. Freneau," said he.

"I'm now Mrs. Stafford."

"Stafford? Stafford?" The name sounded familiar, said Freneau.

"Bursly you haven't forgotten David Stafford, your old rival for my young affections?"

"Of course not," said Freneau. "I've never forgiven him for cutting me off. How long have you been married?"

"Oh, for an eternity—two years."

"Really? You don't look it at all! But that's long enough for you to come and take tea with me somewhere, isn't it?"

"I suppose so. Anyway, I'm dead tired and in need of a pick-me-up. It's so stupid shopping all day. And my husband has already been married long enough to be quite frank about my extravagance. But what else is there for me? He is at the office all day and he travels a good deal. He's ambitious to outdo his father in business."

"So am I," said Freneau.

They were bustling away merrily when they found seats in a tearoom where dancing was the main business, with tea as an excuse. Freneau did not even take tea. He was not particular about excuses. He urged Lois to dance with him. But she saw several people she knew, and she declined. Also, she slipped away early.

She knew enough to be elusive. They met again, however, at a less conspicuous tearoom. Then she danced with him.

And all this while Gloria was cherishing her ideal of Freneau and working hard to make herself worthy of him. And her brother was cherishing a trust in Lois and working hard to live her the luxuries she exacted with increasing greed.

Five years was a long time for Gloria, too, but not so long as she thought herself. Her girl soul did not feel the emotional demands of a grown woman. She could put Freneau's picture on her bureau and find satisfaction in paying it worship.

In the school she had discovered a new world. She sought her way to the captaincy of a basketball team as if it were the presidency of an American republic. She learned to fence well and to box a little. She even took an interest in some of her text books.

She thought she was very wicked, but she did nothing more violent than to hold a chaffing-dish orgy now and then in her room.

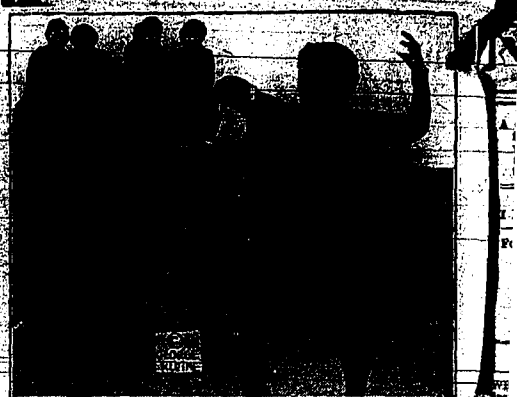

Gloria had few sorrows of importance, beyond the occasional disappointment of talking to her photograph. When she was after the honeymoon, Freneau gave her. The chief of her disappointments was her brother's marriage to Lois. She never had liked Lois and had never understood her charm.

Lois had taken little interest in winning the approval of women. She had played a part in winning even David's serious interest. She never cared for him, but she could not resist the wealth and prestige of his name. She was bitterly disappointed in him when after the honeymoon was over he expressed his unwillingness to live on his father's money and vowed that he would earn his own way by his own energy. The life of travel and the variety that Lois had planned was taken from her.

Gloria had a staunch little heart and she kept her word to her father. She kept faith, too, with her fiancé five years removed. She fell into the habit of talking to her photograph. When she was tempted to forget that she was a solemnly betrothed young person she would find strength in his image to be austere and to deny her self of the gayeties of the school or of her companions in the gayest of the places where she spent her vacations.

It was a quiet and bitter irony that the eyes in Freneau's photograph should have had so pure an influence. While his own eyes were devoted to chasing such evil spells.

Unconsciously Lois revenged her husband on Freneau, for while Freneau was causing Lois to forget her duties to the partnership with Frank Mulry. He spent time and money on Lois that should have been devoted to the intricate stratagems—not to say treasons, and, spoils of Wall Street.

He and Mulry in the flush of their early successes had spread out—had established branch offices in Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis and Pittsburgh. While the girls set their way these branches served as so many hands to gather in shekels. But when the hard times came upon the financial world they served as so many mouths to feed.

The office of Freneau & Mulry became one of those dismal places where the payroll is a weekly agony and where the watchword is "everything going out and nothing coming in."

When Freneau at last awoke to realize that bankruptcy instead of prosperity was likely to be his portion he turned back to his work with a desperate energy. And now Lois found that he was as fierce an office man as her husband. He had engagements when she was lonely.

She naturally imputed his neglect to some other charmer. She could not believe him guilty of overwork. She grew jealous and their meetings were fewer.

She kept his telephone busy to make sure that he was at his desk. She began to annoy him. He wished to be rid of her, but she would not be illud.

It was during this crisis that Gloria marked off the last month of her five years' ordeal. She was ambitious enough to go on and finish her course and get her diploma. She compressed her last year of schooling into half a year and graduated all alone in midwinter.

She dashed into her room at college for the last time, with her solemn mortarboard askew on her head, and her black gown flying from her shoulders, and in her hand her parchment diploma (in Latin that she could nearly translate). She looked like a little Porfiria for a moment.

She threw her diploma in air and her mortarboard flew. She whipped off her black robe and began to juggle school books, letting them fall where they fell. She danced a jig over her scholarly past and made haste to pack her trunks and dart out to meet her father when it became a "farewell."

The journey to New York from school was as long as the journey to New York from Palm Beach had been years ago, only then she had been traveling away from her romance, now toward it.

When her father met her at the train she hugged him almost to suffocation, then asked him how dear Mr. Freneau was the last time he saw him.

"The last time I saw dear Mr. Freneau was at Palm Beach," said Pierpont, who had almost forgotten his name and had hoped that Gloria had forgotten it entirely.

As soon as she reached the house on Riverside drive and embraced the old servants and shook hands with the new, Gloria took her father into his library and asked him for Mr. Freneau's telephone number. She had found "Freneau & Mulry" in the book already, and she said: "Do you suppose that that Mr. Mulry's Freneau is my Mr. Freneau?"

"I don't know, I'm sure," Pierpont said. "But it wouldn't be very correct to telephone a busy man would it?"

"I suppose not," Gloria admitted. "Where's a pen? I'll write him."

"How long has it been since you wrote him last?" said Pierpont anxiously.

"Why, I've never written him at all," Gloria answered, shocked. "I promised, didn't I?"

Pierpont kissed her brow with a profound pen. Then he ventured to say, "Don't you think it would be nicer if you waited for him to look you up?"

Gloria gnawed the end of the penholder thoughtfully, and then sighed with all the impatience of youth in the shackles of conventionality.

"I suppose so," she said, and she went and wondered how she could manage delicately to attract Mr. Freneau's attention without seeming to be very correct to telephone a busy man would it?"

"By the way," said Pierpont, "there's a big gala performance at the Metropolitan Opera house tonight, a special benefit for some war relief. Would you like to go?"

"You like to go?" Gloria with school-girl elegance.

At about that time Freneau was just putting down the telephone in his office. Lois had called him to say that she learned to fence well.

Her husband was taking her to the benefit and she hoped that he would be there. She had something important to tell him. Everything she had to tell him was immensely important nowadays to her—and immensely unimportant to him.

The thing that agitated Lois was her knowledge that Gloria had come back to New York and was still in love with the memory of Freneau. Lois was in an anguish of fear and jealousy and she wanted to compel Freneau to swear that he would forsake her for Gloria.

Freneau was oblivious of this, but he had no intention of keeping his promise to Lois till Mulry, who had overheard Freneau's end of the conversation, said: "Come along. I got along for a couple of blocks. You can have one of them. We might meet somebody who might give us a line on the market."

So the Remoulette Freneau went with his Palestinian partner. They had the promenade of the boxholders, wishing to be seen in expensive company.

Glancing over the balustrade, Freneau caught sight of Lois mounting the stairs with her husband. She was looking for him, and she smiled back at her with stunted grace. He did not notice that on the other stairway of the big double stair Pierpont Stafford was coming up with a vision of young Loveliness at his side. He did not know Gloria saw him. He did not see her clutch her father's arm and almost swoon with delight.

He might have observed all this and still have suspected that the girl was his Freneau's reading, reading that had been the promenade of the boxholders, wishing to be seen in expensive company.

The Gloria who marched up the broad steps of the Metropolitan was a young lady of twenty, one with her hair up, her head full of knowledge, and her features changed as the old "Gloria" when it became a "Freneau."

Her costume was the latest thing from Paris, still Paris in spite of the war. Gloria could hardly climb the steps to the level of Freneau. Her father was a young man, she said, she left her father's side and hurried to Freneau's. He did not hear her or know that she was at his elbow, trembling with rapture and trying to keep from crying his name aloud and seeking for the arm that had saved her from the Indians. She caught and he did not hear. At last she ventured the terrified deed of touching his sleeve with her finger tip. He turned and she murmured:

"Mr. Freneau, I believe!"

He turned, saw that a most exquisite creature had addressed him, wondered who under the sun she was, lifted his hat, made a violent pretense at remembering her perfectly, having lost her name the day before, and said: "Why, hello! I'm so glad you got here."

He put out his hand, but he was away before he could clasp it. He had thrust her arm into her father's and hurried him along toward the door of their box while Freneau whirled and stared.

Mulry stared, too, and muttered: "Good Lord, who's the new peach with old Pierpont?"

"It must be his daughter; it's Gloria!" Freneau gasped.

"His daughter! Do you know her?" "Know her?" Freneau said. "Well, rather. I'm engaged to her."

"Engaged in a way!" Mulry repeated. "Well, marry her quick. Her old man's money will come in mighty handy."

Freneau leaned against the balustrade and stared so hard and recast his plans so rapidly and with such enthusiasm that Lois not only touched his arm but pinched it fiercely before he noticed her. Then he stared at her with a cold indifference that told her that he was not listening.

Meanwhile Gloria was sitting on a little gold chair in a box like a prison cell, and she was battling her eyes to stay away from the tears that came pell-mell. She was watching her little white-gloved hands and trying not to sob aloud. "He doesn't remember me! He doesn't remember me!"

abundant opportunity to see the influence of Freneau on the judge's daughter, Lois. It was not a wholesome influence.

On the long ride back to Palm Beach they passed the spot where Gloria had left her brother's racing car in the ocean. They paused to look at it. Several men and a team of mules were struggling to drag it out of the water.

When they reached the Royal Poinciana Gloria passed through a throng of welcoming friends, and Freneau received congratulations innumerable. Royce sneaked off to his room and

BIG CREEK BOY BITTEN BY DOG

Three Year Old Son of L. E. Joslin Slightly Scratched

ANIMAL KILLED, AND HEAD SENT TO DOISE FOR EXAMINATION.

Several head of stock died of Rabies in vicinity recently—Thought Dog Was Not Mad.

The three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Joslin of Big Creek, was bitten by a dog belonging to Mrs. M. Cameron Friday near his home. The animal was killed by Deputy H. G. Jackson and the head shipped to Boise for examination to determine whether it was affected with rabies or not. Should an examination show that the animal was mad, the boy will be sent to Boise for treatment.

Mr. Joslin came to Twin Falls Saturday and consulted with Dr. C. D. Weaver, who is acting county physician during the absence of Dr. Woods in California on a vacation. Dr. Weaver said that the boy was not severely lacerated and that as the dog had shown no symptoms of hydrophobia either before biting the little fellow, or afterwards, he thought that the chance that he was mad were very remote and that he believed the danger to be slight. He added, however, that no chances should be taken and that the head should be forwarded at once for examination.

Several head of stock died of rabies in the same neighborhood recently which caused some uneasiness in regard to the possible condition of the dog. Deputy Jackson shot three other dogs, believed to have been exposed in the vicinity of the day on which he killed the Cameron dog.

"CLOSING NET" AT IDAHO WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY

In "The Closing Net," Edward Joseph's Gold Rooster play, adapted from the novel by Henry C. Rowland, appears a girl with an important part, that of "Leontine," the beautiful crook, who does some remarkably good work. Madeline Traverser is her name, and she is the daughter of Richard W. Trelgoun, who was the proprietor and manager of a repertory company which toured the United States and England for twelve years. Miss Traverser can boast of a rather unusual racial mixture in her veins, her father being of Cornish descent and her mother of French and Russian parentage. She was born in Boston and went on the stage at the age of fifteen. Among her numerous good engagements was one doing leading business with Rose Stahl in "The Chorus Lady," both in New York and London—the original cast of "Jehovah and His Brothers," and with Colman and Harrie "Seven Keys to Baldpate."

Miss Traverser has a personality of pronounced charm—and judging from her work in Father's "The Closing Net," she will be seen in feature productions again.

World Film corporation presents the five-part photoplay, "Camille," the story of the famous novel of the same name. Camille is the popular name of Marguerite Gautier, "the lady with the camellias," who is queen of the underworld. She is beautiful and absolutely unscrupulous in the gratification of her passions. A wealthy lover, de Varville, is at her feet, where he places his fortune, amounting to millions of course. Camille takes his money—but spurns his love.

lover on top of the house; but the anchor from the plane tumbles a quantity of bricks down on father. They escape, however, and when the father tries to follow their course with a telescope, they shoot a number of fireworks and lead the old man to believe he is viewing an eruption of the heavens.

The anchor continues to dangle, and a colored evangelist is caught up while he is preaching. His congregation thinks he has gone to heaven. The young man pulls in the anchor and makes the preacher marry himself and the girl. Then he throws the pool fellow out of the airship. He lands in a tub of whitewash, and returns to his congregation, which believes he has come back to them as an angel.

There are a number of other funny twists to the story, but this excerpt will be sufficient to make the point that this looks like something worth waiting for. Walter Edwards is directing.

It is so vital to the plot of "Reggie Mixes In," the new Triangle play starring Douglas Fairbanks, to include a rich uncle who dies in a foreign land leaving his wealth to the leading lady for the sake of a happy ending, that when he fails to die in time, Reggie Mixes In, prepared a fake announcement of his demise and sends with it a few thousand dollars out of his own pocket.

GIVE EXHIBITION-RUN OF INITIAL PRODUCTION

Pleasure Producers Show First 900 Feet of "The Man of Sorrows"

Before a number of their players and invited guests, Sunday afternoon at four o'clock, the Pleasure Producers held an exhibition of the first nine hundred feet of their initial photo-drama production, "The Man of Sorrows." The exhibition run was made at the Elks Theatre at which show-house the film will be placed before the public on Friday and Saturday of this week.

Although all the film has not as yet been received from the factories, making it impossible to form a connected picture of the whole, enough of it is shown to give an idea of what the finished picture will be like.

The section received is not assembled and there are parts somewhat indistinct, which will be cut out of the finished picture, but the producers of the picture say that the remainder of the film will be received in the next day or two and that plenty of time will be left to complete assembly of the different parts and place the whole upon the screen for the Friday and Saturday performance. The producers of the picture are enthusiastic in regard to the film and feel sure that the public will be equally pleased with their first production. Many and serious difficulties had to be overcome in their first attempt but they feel that under the conditions met with the result is highly encouraging.

A particularly good picture was taken of Shoshone Falls, which is used as a background for one of the love scenes and will also be used by the Pleasure Producers in a scene of the Twin Falls, upon which is super-imposed the words Pleasure Films, in black letters.

THOUT FLY FOR TWIN FALLS COUNTY'S STREAMS

The state game department's fish car will start on its trout fly distributing trip today, leaving Pocatello, Idaho, at 10 o'clock, for the Twin Falls, where it will arrive at 10 o'clock. It will be restocked before going up the Mackay river and will also take to the water before coming west. There are more than 4,000 trout to be distributed and the streams of Boise and Pocatello receive their fish from the Twin Falls. The tributaries to the fall and fork of the Boise river, are particularly favored in the game department's plans.

H. C. Lage Thinks That More Cattle Should Be Kept

SAYS DAIRY PRODUCTS SHOULD ALL BE STANDARDIZED.

Is Laying In Supplies For Caring For Herds of Salmon Coming Next Year.

"I think that you have a splendid agricultural country here and that in many ways your development is wonderful, but it strikes me that there should be a greater number of livestock raised and that the country should produce more standardized dairy products than it does, commensurate with its natural resources and productivity," said H. C. Lage, secretary and treasurer of the Northby Fisheries Supply Co., of Seattle, who accompanied by his wife and daughter, is here visiting E. H. Gates, while on the way back from a business trip east.

"This is my fourth trip here," he continued, "and my improvement every time. But it seems to me that this is such a wonderful dairy and stock raising country that much could be done that has been accomplished along that line. I suppose that you have creameries and cheese factories here making standard products, but it seems to me that there should be more cattle so that the production of standard butter, cheese and milk products would be much greater. I believe in the highest standard of the highest standard. The famous 'Ivan's' dairy at Davenport, Iowa, always commands better prices than its competitors because it maintains the highest standard at all times. The standardization of apples in parts of the northwest has had similar results."

Yes, Seattle is prosperous. There is an immense shipping trade with the Orient. Vast quantities of ammunition go through that port to Asia and thence through Siberia to the war zone. This adds much to the regular business of the city.

I was back to St. Louis and other points buying supplies for the big run of 'sockeye' salmon which comes up next year. You know the 'sockeye' makes a great drive up the rivers every four years. Of course there are a few coming up with the other salmon every year, but the big run comes in four year periods. The salmon after hatching in the fresh water, goes to the sea and remains four years coming back, it is said, to his own river. The 'sockeye' is more for his deep red flesh, which makes him the highest priced of the whole salmon family. Fishermen generally like most kinds as well or better, but most of them are for the 'sockeye' because of great demand when the big run comes.
