NEW STRIKE AT JARBIDGE CAMP

One Assay Shows More Than $2400 a Ton in Gold

ANOTHER MINE PRODUCES BEST GOLD ORE YET SEEN THERE.

Long Strike Changed Management—Much Activity in Camp—Road in Twin Falls County Finished.

(Special to Times.)

JARBIDGE, NEV.—A new strike has been made by the surprise group of claims which are located near the top of Bonanza ridge and not far from the Ajax claim on which Hedges and Donaghy opened a two-foot vein last year. The surprise claims are owned by J. G. Dufner, who made the discovery about two weeks ago, on what appears to be the apex of a new vein. Mr. Dufner has run in a cut on the vein and has a depth of about fifteen feet in the face and the vein has wide ends out in the bottom to three feet wide of good ore with some high grade spots which show the free gold very plainly. An assay of some of this high grade ore gave returns of over $4500 per ton. The assay of a sample across three feet gave returns of $2300 silver and $1485.54 gold per ton.

William Carbridge brought in from his Golden Sunset mine on Bear Paw mountain, a piece of quartz with free gold sticking out of it, which is easily the best specimen gold ore shown in the camp from any of the mines. Mr. Carbridge has been at work on his property for four years and is highly pleased with the showing. It is now making. Several engineers have been over to examine the Sunset ground and have all been much pleased with the surface showing and the improved condition in the tunnels and cuts which Mr. Carbridge has made along the vein. The vein or deposit is a mass of quartz stringers from a few inches to a foot in width alternating with a dyke rock that is plainly traceable on the surface for a long distance. The dyke rock is a grayish white to light gray and is a fine-grained material. It is a large stream of water at all seasons of the year.

The Jarbridge mine has changed management. George J. Shoup, who has been so successful in developing this property into a great mine, has so much other property on his hands that he has turned the management of the Long Hike over to J. H. Means of San Francisco. Work on Long Hike is being pushed with all the force they can get. Hold of the Long Hike, Success, Jarbridge Central and Dourne are all sort of good mines. Mr. Means is a very experienced miner and has built from the switch back on the Alpha road in Bonanza gulch, around the side hill to the No. 3 tunnel on the Long Hike. The mine is being developed to the delivery of supplies to the mine.

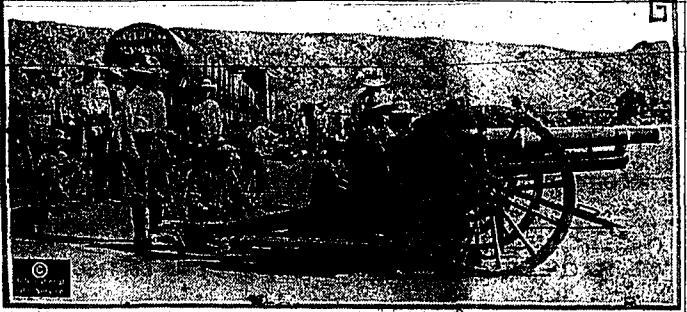

Mr. Shoup has bought the Alpha mine and has changed the name of the mine to the O. K. mine and is now running the mill on the ore from the O. K. mine. It is not the intention to stop any of the other mines, but will run the mill on the ore taken out in doing the development work. The face of the drift shows about six feet of fine ore. Mr. Shoup is very pleased with the showing on the O. K. that he will make the final payments at once.

Engineer R. M. Hill has reported favorably on several of the Jarbridge properties. As a result, Ernest A. Haggott of Berkeley, California, came in here and took options on several of the properties and started development work on them. He shaped them up, thoroughly sampled them and had additional reports made. He is very favorable showing that he has already turned the Starlight and Jarbridge Gold to Albert Hanford of San Francisco. Mr. Hanford has also taken option on the Success, El, Pick & Shovel and the Blister properties on Bonanza ridge. This is one of the most valuable groups of claims in the district and covers a large area of ground and includes several known veins with several proven ore chutes, water rights, power sites, and considerable good timber. N. M. Hill is in charge of the work for Mr. Hanford. They have opened, boarded up and are at both the Starlight and the Blister and have about twenty men working in each place and could use as many more miners if they were to.

Mr. Hanford has added his claims on near the head of the river and a force of men are working in the tunnel. The negotiations are under way to take over the Norman ground still further up the river, where Mr. Norman crossed.

THREE MORE MEN QUIT COUNTY JAIL

Harry Lyons, Tom Taylor and James Maloy Escapes From Court House While Helping Clean Up.

Two county prisoners, Tom Taylor and Harry Lyons, under sentence of confinement for illicit cohabitation, and James Maloy, under sentence of confinement for drunkenness, escaped yesterday, while James Maloy under sentence for habitual drunkenness made a getaway Tuesday, all from Jack Diamond who was working them and who never lost a man previously during five years experience in working county prisoners. As far as Maloy is concerned, he has always been a trusty, and has never tried to escape before during his numerous jail experiences for being drunk, and according to Mr. Diamond, he walked out of Taylor, who had served more than half of a six months' term, and Lyons, who was beginning a sentence for three months, were engaged yesterday in helping Diamond to clean up Judge Babcock's room. The carpet had been taken up and beaten and was being put back when Mr. Diamond went to empty a bucket of water, while the men were laying the carpet. He stepped into the kitchen-judge's room, and talked to Judge Ostrom and County Attorney Davies for about two minutes, while they were about a match. When he returned the men had gone, and he supposed that they had gone down stairs for the rest of the carpet followed them. Reaching the court house yard he discovered that they had fled. Sheriff Kendall was notified and a search made everywhere, but nothing has since been seen of them.

The practice of allowing men sentenced for misdemeanors to help around the court house has always prevailed and Mr. Diamond says that during his term as janitor covering five years, there has never been any attempt to break away, on their part. He says that not more than three minutes elapsed from the time of his going into the class of 25 new members who followed down stairs and notified the sheriff that the men were gone.

RELOADING OF SUBMARINE HURRIED

Expedite Departure of Deutschland With Cargo

DATE OF SAILING KEPT CLOSE SECRET.

Washington Convicted of Status of Boat But Will Consult Neutralizing Board Before Making Sailing.

BALTIMORE, Md.—That plans were set rapidly to reload the super-submarine Deutschland and slip her out quickly on her return voyage to Germany was learned yesterday by a special permit was obtained for continuing the unloading of the vessel Wednesday night, and it was expected that she would be ready by Thursday to take on a cargo of nickel and rubber.

No one in authority would say when the vessel would depart and the only positive statement in that connection was contained in Captain Koehn's declaration to the local customs officers that he expected to sail within 10 days.

The tug Thomas F. Timmons completed repairs Wednesday and took up a position directly in front of the Deutschland. When the Timmons entered drydock it was reported that the vessel's return to Germany was being retarded to return to the Virginia capes to convey into the Chesapeake, as she did the Deutschland, the submarine Bremen, which is said to be four days on her way to this country.

The air of mystery surrounding all discussion of the Deutschland's departure was deepened Wednesday by reports that her clearance papers may not be made public when filed, this preventing an advance notice of her leaving being obtained.

It became known today Wednesday that several conferences have been held here between representatives of the Ocean Navigation company and the Krupp steel company and Simon Lake inventor of the submarine. This purpose of carrying on undersea commerce between this country and Germany was said to have been invited to accept the position of consulting engineer.

ERROR CAUSE OF PAVING PROTEST

Report That City Would Put Paving Over Old Pipe Made Citizens Send in Objections.

A protest against the paving of Shoshone street was filed by 13 citizens at the meeting of the city council held Monday night for the purpose of hearing objections, but was not pushed on account of the fact that at least part of those who signed the protest were mistaken in regard to conditions. The idea got abroad that the plan was to put down the pavement over the old wooden pipe on Shoshone street, and still use this as a channel to carry water to the city. The councilmen explained that the plan for the water system now under construction was to carry the water in pipes on Second street north and Second street east, and that the practice of carrying water down Shoshone street will be abandoned. The objectioners present either declared themselves satisfied or took the matter in their hands under advisement. The protest was filed after setting forth the understanding of the protesters, declared that to put the paving over the old pipe would mean that continual leaks would necessitate repeated tearing up of the pavement with the result that conditions would be unsatisfactory and the cost of great expense under advisement. The protest was filed after setting forth the understanding of the protesters, declared that to put the paving over the old pipe would mean that continual leaks would necessitate repeated tearing up of the pavement with the result that conditions would be unsatisfactory and the cost of great expense under advisement.

Whether any further steps will be taken in regard to the protest, either to push it on other grounds or to withdraw it entirely is not known. During the discussion it developed that the cost of iron pipe has become so high on account of war demands that it is virtually prohibitive and that none can be obtained in less than eight or nine months. Even allowing for the shorter life, wooden pipe is pronounced much cheaper and can be obtained in one-third of the time, or less. This pipe will be largely used in the water system now under construction. The pipe is now on hand for extensions into the Golden Rule addition and for use during the cleaning of the reservoir.

SHERIFF'S OFFICE SHOWS BIG QUARTERLY INCREASE

Business During Last Three Months Has Nearly Doubled the Average Income.

The amount of civil business passing through the office of the county sheriff during the past three months has increased considerably. Contrary to expectations no protests of a definite nature were submitted relative to the unfortunate occurrence on the local fairground July 4, but to prevent recurrence of such a nature a resolution was unanimously passed to the effect that anyone in future who enters the fairground without a ticket will be summarily and indefinitely dismissed from the league. The clubs were found to be in good financial condition. BRITISH SOLDIERS

WIN BIG VICTORY

Gallantly Retrieve Lost Ground and Now Hold Entire Possession

BOTH SIDES SUSTAIN VERY HEAVY LOSS.

Army of the Crown Prince Gains Foot-hold in the French Line at Chappelle-Sainte—Desperate Battle Continues.

LONDON—Driven from a portion of the Mametz woods on the Somme front by a strong German attack last night, the British today not only retrieved their lost ground, but tonight are in possession of the entire wood. Similar success attended the British efforts in the Trones wood, where they were likewise pressed back by the German attack of last night. Today the Germans not only were forced to give up the ground they had taken, but were driven further back toward the eastern edge of the wood.

The French section of the Somme front saw no activity, but their comrades at Verdun were compelled to withstand one of the most terrific attacks yet aimed at their fortifications. Having reduced to ruins Fort Douaumont and captured Fort Vaux, the Germans today made a massed assault with 18,000 men against a foot-hold in the French line at Chappelle-Sainte, at the intersection of the roads leading to Verdun from Fleury and Chapple woods. The preliminary bombardment started at daybreak. It continued with exceptional fury until 10 o'clock, when from the village of Fleury and the Vaux and Chapple woods solid masses of German infantry poured across the "no-man's-land" between the lines and killed the French workers.

Stubborn resistance was offered by the French. The guns of the defenders inflicted "huge losses" on the attacking columns, according to the official report from Paris tonight.

The French statement asserts that the Germans were able to gain "only a little ground" at the Chappelle-Sainte, but adds that the battle continued the bombardment being very violent in the whole of the region from Fort Souville to Launoy.

The attacks of the Germans against Fort Souville (Donna Maria's hill) continued in the western front of heavy reinforcements.

Both attacks were made apparently without regard to the loss of life entailed, for the report from General Haig as well as the French war office statement states that the attacks were very costly.

A meeting of the directors of the Southern Idaho baseball league was held yesterday afternoon and matters pertaining to the past and coming season were discussed. HOSPITAL APPEAL

SOON TO BE FILED

Dr. T. O. Boyd Denies That He Is Party to Action

ATTORNEY BOOTH ACTING FOR OPPOSING TAXPAYERS.

Dr. Boyd Says He Told Board He Thought It Mistake To Operate His or Any Other Hospital.

That the statement that he would attempt to enjoin the board of commissioners from constructing the proposed county hospital at the time of signing the contract was incorrect, but that in the event the commissioners should construct such a building he would contest their right to operate the place as a hospital for the general public and would carry the matter to the court at Jan. 1917, was the declaration made yesterday by Dr. T. O. Boyd, who also stated that Attorney C. M. Booth had not appeared before the board at a price agreed upon either while he had not appeared before the board that if they were going to construct a hospital he would sell them but at a price agreed upon either or between themselves or by arbitrators, he also told them frankly that he did not believe that they had the legal right to operate such a hospital.

"I do not say that I will not be a party to proceedings preventing the commissioners from erecting the building," said Dr. Boyd, "but I have not decided to be a party to such proceedings. I told the board just what I intended to do in the matter. I informed them that I doubted their right to construct the building but that I had not then the intention of restraining them from doing so, but that I felt sure that the law would be on my side. I added that if they did build it, I would try to prevent their operating it as a general hospital and would carry the matter to the court of last resort in order to determine the question of law involved. I did offer to sell my hospital to them. I have been operating it here for years and have built it up with my own money and work and morally speaking if they are going to operate a hospital I believe they should buy mine. However, I do not believe that it is right to make me pay more taxes on it in order to help maintain a public competitor of such a nature. I was willing to sell the board my hospital at a fair price. As a citizen and taxpayer, I did not believe that the county should operate a hospital. I thought it would be poor business policy on their part, but if they were going to buy I would sell. I see no reason why it should not operate a drug store or a bank."

"The proposition is to build a structure for the county which will be a place for poor patients. The county has never had more than seven on its hands at any time and most of those not requiring hospital attention. Dr. Boyd said that the difference in cost of operation between what was needed for the county and the proposed structure would be considerable. He said that the construction of the new building would be only a little over $23,000, whereas, as a matter of fact, the cost of maintaining the existing building, including heating, etc., would cost $41,000. Attorney C. M. Booth stated that in appearing before the board Monday he had not been asked to make any statement as final arrangements had not been made with him in regard to the matter by those who are now his clients. He said that he was not a party to the action of the hospital. He said that Dr. Boyd was not among his clients for the purpose of opposing the construction of the hospital. He said that he was not a party to the action of the hospital. He said that he was not a party to the action of the hospital.

Some loose playing by the Burley team in the ninth inning of Sunday's game gave Twin Falls the chance to break the one-to-one tie in a contest which was a pitcher's battle from first to last. The score stood two to one in favor of Twin Falls.

In the ninth inning, Robinson, left fielder for the local team, drove a long fly to the left field fence. Stephenson, the Burley fielder, got under the ball but failed to catch it and the hit was good for two bases. Stephenson threw in to second base instead of third, permitting Robinson to advance to the third sack and the runner made home on a low throw by Corbin to third.

The game was featured by the good twirling of both Christian and Shanks, each allowing only three hits, and so the consistent fielding of Walters for Twin Falls, and Corbin, for Burley. In the sixth inning both teams scored on Burley made theirs from a base on balls, a sacrifice and a hit, while Twin Falls scored one on a hit, a sacrifice and a hit.

Earlier in the game Christian, by good pitching and handwork, pulled himself out of a hole that for awhile looked like a couple of points for Burley. Christian walked two, and a sacrifice advanced the men to second and third—Christian lightened, however, and fanned the next two men up.

RAFT RIVER BRANCH TO HAVE TERMINUS

Idaho Home Townsfolk Company Files A. Holes of Incorporation To Build Town.

BURLEY, Ida.—With a capital stock of $20,000 which according to the papers presented, is fully subscribed, I. B. Perrine of Twin Falls, L. Q. Bradley of Burley, and H. E. Babcock of Idaho, filed articles of incorporation for the Idaho-Townsite company Saturday, with the auditor and recorder.

According to Mr. Bradley, who is the active manager of the new corporation, the company is formed for the purpose of building a town at the terminus of the Raft river branch of the P. S. L. which it was announced definitely a few weeks ago would build this year's crops.

"The building of this branch," said Mr. Bradley, in speaking of the matter, "will bring about a great development in the Raft river country. It is a great big rich country, but the farmers over there have never had a chance for the grain they raise. They raised it was hardly worth hauling to the market. I believe the Sublet, Meadow creek and Hegler country is the best dry farming section in Idaho, and this new road will put them twenty miles nearer to market than they have been before. Aside from the dry farming lands on this branch there is a big area of well watered and well improved lands along Raft river and Casals creek, which will now be enabled to market their produce to advantage.

"There is still a little land to be had either by filing or by purchase of rights at a low figure, and the result of people to the section since the news has been announced that the road would build in has been heavy and shows the wide interest in the country."

REVEALING THE ISSUE.

"What issue now remains between the two political parties? Both have taken a firm stand for Americanism; both are committed to military and naval preparedness; both are in favor of conservation and the maintenance of the Monroe doctrine; both are in favor of the regulation of business and the development of the merchant marine. With respect to these various issues, the only difference is of form, rather than substance. The only issue upon which the two parties definitely divide is the tariff.

"The Washington correspondent of the American Economist, who attended both conventions in the interest of The American Protective Tariff League, found at Chicago, among nearly all the leaders of the party opposing the present administration, a belief that the tariff must become the major issue of the campaign. The longest plank in the platform of the protectionist party deals with the tariff. It follows the general lines of the tariff plank suggested by The American Protective Tariff League."

The above is taken from the Washington correspondence of the American Economist of July 23. As the article in which it is contained is the leading article of the week, and is run under the head "Tariff The Only Issue," and as the leading editorial of the same week is headed "The Issue Unchanged," and is devoted to a further elucidation of the same idea, it is safe to assume that the statements set forth represent the best judgment of this leading protectionist journal, which furnishes the greater part of the arguments along fiscal lines made use of by high protectionist speakers and writers.

The facts quoted ought to be gravely considered by Progressives and others who oppose ultra protectionism, but who are being told that the real issue has to do with the attitude of the administration toward Mexico, or Germany, or something else. According to this note, authority nearly all the leaders opposing the administration considered the tariff to be the principal issue. The Economist waves aside all the bunk about the Republican party standing for Americanism more firmly than the Democratic party. It admits that there is no substantial difference between them on the question of preparedness. It does not make any quibbling efforts to prove that the Republicans will uphold the Monroe doctrine better than the present administration is doing. It does not even assume, as some critics of President Wilson do, that a change of administration would work advantageously in the matters of regulating business or of developing our merchant marine. The great interests of the people, as THE TIMES recently pointed out, whether the big interests shall get back their privileges or not. And according to the Economist the anti-administration leaders at Chicago agreed upon this proposition.

Moreover, it is interesting to note the interpretation placed upon the tariff plank in the article quoted. It is said to follow the general lines of the tariff plank suggested by the American Protective Tariff League, which is composed of the men who want the highest possible protection and of whom the Economist is the organ.

The Progressive party grew out of the insurgent party in congress, which broke with the Taft administration over the Payne-Aldrich bill, and which demanded lower tariff rates and tried, with the assistance of Democrats, to pass several measures reducing the tariff over the veto of President Taft. In view of the admission that the men in control at Chicago consider the tariff question the real issue, and that the leading protectionist organ in America assumes the position that on other issues the parties are at par, it might not be hard for the followers of the old insurgent forces to decide how to vote.

TALKS ON THIRTY.

SHE SPOILED HER DAUGHTER IN THE RAISING

Somewhere in the suburbs of New York lived a man and wife, happily married, with one child. The husband has a job that brings a fairly good income and the wife keeps the house and takes care of the baby. Both are well bred. He was a southern gentleman; she is the daughter of well-to-do parents, went to boarding school, is handsome and accomplished. She learned everything a girl should know but the one essential thing, how to make a home. Her mother had her maid. The daughter's clothes were always ready and her mending done. Her youthful years were spent in having a good time and learning the art of being a lady.

She married. Now she must run a home. She doesn't know how. Her husband gives her $125 a month for the house. Because she never learned to cook and can't afford a cook, they must take their dinners out. Therefore Mr. Husband comes home, takes care of the baby while Mrs. Wife rushes half a mile to a boarding house, eats her dinner in a hurry and rushes back; then he hurries half a mile to the boarding house and gets his faded dinner. Her generous allowance is gone when the month is up and it has brought no satisfaction. They have no "homey" meals together; they blame the baby—they ought to blame her mother.

Had this wife been brought up to be a woman instead of just a lady, she would take that thirty dollars they spend every month for boarding house dinners and get two meals a day for two that would make the boarding house dinners look like a ten-cent lunch. But she doesn't know how. She doesn't study her job. She can't save her energy. The time and effort spent in getting to the boarding house and back, the dressing, the annoyance and the worry would more than get the meal, and a better one, and clear it away. She doesn't never run a home. If she would rather be a woman, now it's too late—she's spoiled.

But it's not altogether her fault. She wasn't trained right. She is a queer ornament and not a thrifty wife. She can't manage. She can't plan. She can't save. She can just be sweet; but sweetest never runs a home. It's good for desert, but a home is made of loafcakes and potatoes and pies and puddings that "touch the spot," and the old saying is as true now as ever, that "the way to a man's heart is through his stomach," and lucky the woman who has found it out.

Don't, then, be a "lady" in the raising. Teach her to look upon housekeeping as an art—a science, worthy of a place in the school curriculum. Give her the essentials to the comfort and well being of a home. If the wife is a woman, who will be a lady, but she can be a lady and only a big girl.

Saturday night at the High School Auditorium, will be given an opportunity to the people of Twin Falls, to listen to a rival of Wm. J. Bryan, to hear Senator Wm. E. Borah, both of whom have a national reputation as orators. To day there is no man in public life who draws opposed Walter Thomas Miller in debate upon governmental topics. A treat is in store for those who enjoy keen satire, humor, and logic. Seats are selling at Skeels-Wiley Drug Store. 25 cents general admission, and ten cents more for reserved seats.

ATTRACTIONS FOR THE THEATRE GOERS

JOHN BARRYMORE HAS TRYING TIME IN FAMOUS PLAYERS' "RED WIDOW"

CAN you imagine John Barrymore in the crowd of a steamship, quaking with fear lest the crew and the authorities drag him down to the deck and clap him in irons? Can you picture him shivering in terror while the Russian secret police search for a Nihilist whom he has smuggled into their country on the pretext that she is his wife? Then imagine his feelings when the alleged wife of his bosom attempts to assassinate the czar! His head swims with visions of Siberia and he already feels the chill frost of the interminable snow falling at his toes and numbing his hands as gray-cloaked Cossacks drive him to work with their cruel whips.

But these are not at all terrifying adventures which the celebrated comedian experiences in the Famous Players Film company's Paramount picture, "The Red Widow," the adaptation of the great comedy success by Channing Pollock and Renold Wood, which is the feature attraction at the Idaho theatre Monday and Tuesday.

In fact, these are only his imaginary troubles. As a matter of fact, he has deceived his real wife and taken a Russian adventuress over the Russian border, and his wife, learning of his duplicity, has attempted to get past the border in pursuit of him, only to be held up and killed as an impostor! When the Russian lady has attempted the life of the czar and has been arrested, Barrymore has many explanations to make, but the worst of these is not to the Russian police. It is to his own wife, who, after languishing in jail, has emerged with a very definite idea of the shortcomings of her husband and with a fixed determination to correct those shortcomings with the greatest possible speed.

It is the role of George Hannibal Dunitz, the bustling, earnest, earnest, that gives Mr. Barrymore these priceless opportunities to display the wonderful fund of extemporaneous humor which has made his name famous wherever the human laugh has penetrated. Not only does the great comedian have an unlimited field for his humor, but he is supported by Flora Zabelle, the co-star of the original musical comedy production, who will be seen in her former role of Anna Varvara, the Russian bomb hurler.

Two other members of the original production, again to be seen in their roles which they made famous on the stage—George E. Mack appearing as Popova, and John Hendricks, playing the czar.

With John Barrymore in the leading role and three members of the original cast appearing in support of the comedian, "The Red Widow" is a photoplay adaptation, which permits or infinitely more elaborate presentation of the entire story, should prove one of the greatest comedy hits of film history.

"ISLAND OF SURPRISE" AT 1916

MONDAY AND TUESDAY

On Monday and Tuesday evenings the Idaho Falls show Cyrus Townsend Brady's latest success, "The Island of Surprise."

If you were a man, cast upon a desert island, with two beautiful women—one a blonde, the other a brunette—both professing to be your wife, what would you do? If both of these women were madly in love with you—one professing her love in passionate appeals the other with quiet entreaties—what would you do? Would your conscience bid you to turn?

And this is only a part of the plot created by Cyrus Townsend Brady in "The Island of Surprise."

Dorothy Arden (Eleanor Woodruff) in private secretary to Godfrey Lovell, a Wall street crook. His western daughter has a daughter named Dorothy (Zena Keefe). Lovell and his partner are desirous of arranging a match between their children. Lovell's son, Robert (Mr. William Courtenay), falls in love with his father's secretary and marries her. He does not tell his father. On account of ill health the father decides on a sea voyage. He is accompanied by his business partner (Anders Randolph), his secretary and other members of his staff. Robert does not know that his newly acquired wife will accompany them. He has meanwhile met Miss Cassella (Zena Keefe) and jealousy and suspicion are aroused.

The two women and Robert go ashore on a lonely island.

While there the yacht is driven out to sea by a storm, leaving the three stranded on the island of surprise. In a landlocked Robert is injured and temporarily loses his memory. Dorothy, his wife, tries to call to his mind his marriage to her, but Miss Cassella, thinking Dorothy is bluffing claims Robert as her husband. The three are in dire stress when a band of savages attack them, but Dorothy's forthright enables a torpedo boat destroyer to become aware of their plight. After an exciting battle, the mariner land and rescue the trio. A reconciliation takes place between Robert and his wife.

In addition to this feature film, the program includes a vogue comedy.

WM. S. HART IN PLAY

OF THE GREAT NORTHWEST

William S. Hart, admittedly America's premier interpreter of rugged frontier types, has the leading role in "The Primordial Lure," a Triangle-Inco production of Vingie E. Roe's celebrated novel of the same name, adapted for the screen by J. G. Hawks, of the Inco staff. It will be seen at the Orpheum theatre Thursday and Friday.

"The Primordial Lure" is an absorbing drama of life in the great Canadian Northwest. It recites the stirring romance of Angus McConnell, a young Scotch-Canadian factor, and Lois Le Moyne, daughter of a French settler at the post. It is replete with thrilling encounters with the Blackfoot Indians, and teems with a love interest rivaled in its appeal only by the picturesque beauty of the story's background.

Hart has the role of McConnell and he has invested it, it is declared, with rare power. While the part is unlike that of "Blaze" Tracy in "Hell's Hinges" or Steve Denton in "The Arvan," it has provided the noted actor with the same opportunities for forcible characterization.

A small, though not cast appears in support of Hart. It includes Margery Wilson as Lois Le Moyne and Robert McKim as Richard Sylvester, the villain of the story. The production was directed by Hart, under the Inco supervision.

LOCOMOTIVES CRASH IN MOVIE TRAIN WRECK Two Pullmans Burned.

A Pullman day coach, and a Pullman sleeper and two locomotives are destroyed, give movie fans a real thrill in the Vitaphone's latest release, "The Island of Surprise." The scenes of the railroad wreck were taken on near Philadelphia, joining the country estate of J. B. Duke, the tobacco king.

The locomotives were placed by Director Paul Scardon facing one another on a single track and sent headlong toward one another. The crash destroyed both engines, which toppled over into the coaches.

It was on this mass of wreckage that the actors were posed, and the scene taken with Lovell, the hero, rescuing the girl whom he is supposed to marry.

This railroad wreck is but one of the many scenes that make this Vitaphone feature one of the best films produced under their trademark. Featured in the production are William Courtenay, long a favorite on the legitimate stage; Eleanor Woodruff, Zena Keefe and other prominent Vitaphone stars.

The story is one of the best written by Cyrus Townsend Brady, whose novels and plays are among the best examples of their kind in present-day literature. The character of Lovell, secretly married, who suffers an injury to his head that causes him to forget the episode of his wedding, is drawn with a mastery of dramatic understanding, that makes the tense situations plausible. The roles of the two girls are other examples of Dr. Brady's splendid stage-craft and imagination.

BEAUTIFUL ISLE OF SOMEWHERE BRIGHT (Hattie Brown)

A soul took flight at the close of day; It fluttered and lifted from earthly clay. Then paused with sorrow in leaving here— Loved ones the soul had cherished dear.

Then it smiled to a call from the other land, And angels taking a faltering hand, Guides mother to the realms of light, To the beautiful isle of somewhere bright.

Like a tiny child in the midnight gloom, Afraid to walk in the darkened room, Trembling at shadows the night had made, When a loved voice whispered, "Be not afraid."

Then her face lights up with quickened love, 'Tis the voice of the Saviour from heaven above, Quelling, comforting: "All is well." As earth tolls out her farwells knell.

Hand in hand, Master and child; Back to the Saviour, humble and mild, Again with the love of ones crossed over, Across the billows to peaceful shore.

Metaphors I hear the sweet refrain Of angels singing the songs near, Guiding mother to realms of light, To the beautiful isle of somewhere bright.

This is a peculiar climate and oils should be refilled to suit conditions in these mountain states. That's why our experts are "on the ground" to make lubricants that do "make good." The Skinner Boy Shovels Snow

Then Comes His Reward

LOOK here, young man, I want to tell you something," said Mrs. Skinner the other morning to her first and only son as he came down to breakfast yawning and rubbing his eyes. "This is Saturday, and I have got the whole day's work for you. You want to huddle with your breakfast and get at it."

"But, mother, dear—"

But she interrupted him by saying: "Mother, dear, won't you with me, this time. It began raining about the time you went to bed last night, and after a time it turned into snow, and there's a foot and a half of the beautiful all over the ground. Your work will be to shovel off the sidewalk and path."

After a slow breakfast, mingled with sighs and groans and a tear or two, that Skinner boy finally forced himself away from the table and out of the house. There was snow up to the knees, and he waded through it and down to the carpenter shop. When the snow shovel was put in his hands he did not return home at once. He found the tracks of a cat going the other way, and he thought he would follow them and see if the feline got home safely. He was four blocks from home when the door of a house opened and a woman beckoned to him to come to the steps. When he had plowed his way there she said:

"You are a dear, good boy, and I know it."

"Yes, yes," replied Humphrey.

"And I am a widow with a sprained ankle, nine cats and a parrot, and how is my sidewalk to be cleared of this snow?"

"You will have to hire a man and give him a dollar," she suggested.

"But how am I to do it? I have got just a cent in the house, and the policeman won't spare me if he finds this snow on the walk. When I saw you coming along I said to myself that you had a kind heart. I said to myself that if I gave you the 6 cents you would have them to see a saw."

"But I can't, my dear boy," protested Humphrey. "You see I have to clean my own sidewalk, and that will take me all day and mebbe a whole week."

"But listen to me, my dear boy," interrupted the widow. "I told you I had nine cats and a parrot inside here. How would you like to see a fight between them?"

The parrot can almost lick the whole nine. You just ought to see the for-and-fenther-ty! If you should clean off this snow I should feel bound to call you in and let you see a row."

Humphrey stood leaning on his snow shovel and gave the matter his best thought for a long minute. He had never seen a fight between nine cats and a parrot. He couldn't miss such a sight—he just couldn't. He made up his mind and said:

"And gimme the 6 cents to boot?"

"Till do it. But you must shovel and shovel and shovel till the snow is all off."

That Skinner boy threw off his overcoat and went to work. The snow was wet and heavy, and every load he lifted weighed at least twenty pounds. He dug a big hole down to the ice and was sweating away when a woman came along carrying a jug in her hand. She did not make a straight course in the deep snow. She couldn't. She lurched this way and that, and she would have fallen except that just as she reached the boy she made a grab at him, and both went down. It was hard to say whether she or the jug or the Skinner boy was under or on top, but one thing soon became certain. The jug had been broken by the fall, and the quart of molasses which it held bubbled into the air.

"Tidy me down," will you?" shouted the woman so that she could be heard a block away. "Tidy me down and like enough break both my legs, and there is all my molasses wasted, and I can't have any on my pancakes this morning. Take that, and that, and that!"

And she cuffed and punched and pulled hair and left poor Humphrey in a dazed condition and half-covered with molasses as she got to her feet and waded off.

Humphrey had worked for another hour when the widow came out and said:

"I guess you had better run home, little boy, for one of the cats has swallowed the 6 cents, and the parrot says it is not his day for shoveling. You are a dear, good boy, but you don't seem to know just how to clear off a sidewalk."

And when poor Humphrey reached home, dragging the snow shovel behind him, his mother was ready to say and to do, and what she said made him dodge into the corner of the room and beg for mercy, and what she did made his back red hot for the rest of the day.

CHAPTER XXX.

Sibyl and Roscoe were upon the point of leaving when Bibbs returned to the new house. He went straight to Sibyl and spoke to her quietly, but so that the others might hear.

"When you said that if I'd stop to think I'd realize that no one would be apt to care enough about me to marry me, you were right," he said. "I thought perhaps you weren't, and so I asked Miss Vertree to marry me. It proved what you said of me, and disproved what you said of her. She refused."

And, having thus spoken, he quitted the room as straightforwardly as he had entered it.

"He's so queer!" Mrs. Sheridan gasped. "Who on earth would thought of his doing that?"

"I told you," said her husband, grimly.

"You didn't tell us he'd go over there and—"

"I told you she wouldn't have him. I told you she wouldn't have Jim, didn't I?"

Sibyl was altogether taken aback. "Do you suppose it's true? Do you suppose she wouldn't?"

"He didn't look exactly like a young man that had just got tired of his fine with his girl," said Sheridan. "Not to me, he didn't."

"But why would—"

"I told you," he interrupted, angrily. "He isn't that kind of a girl. If you get to have proof, well, I'll tell you and get it over with, though I'd pretty near just as soon not have to talk a whole lot about my dead boy's private affairs. She wrote to Jim she couldn't take him, and it was a good, straight letter, too. It came to Jim's office, he never saw it. She wrote it the afternoon he was hurt."

"I remember I saw her put a letter in the mail box that afternoon," said Roscoe. "Don't you remember, Sibyl? I told you about it—I was waiting for you while you were in there so long talking to her mother. It was just before we saw that something was wrong over here, and Edith came and called me."

Sibyl shook her head, but she remembered. And she was not cast down, for, although some remnants of perplexity were left in her eyes, they were dimmed by an increasing glow of triumph and she departed—after some further fragmentary discourse—fully elated. After all, the guilty had not been exalted; and she perceived vaguely, but none the less surely, that her injury had been copiously avenged. She bestowed her contemptuous glance upon the old house with the cynicism as she and Roscoe crossed the street.

When they had gone, Mrs. Sheridan indulged in reverie, but after a while she said, unthinkingly, "Papa, you think it would be any use to tell Bibbs about that letter?"

"I don't know," he answered, walking moodily to the window. "I been thinking about it." He came to a decision. "I reckon I will." And he went up to Bibbs' room.

"Well, you 'goin' back on what you said?" he inquired, brusquely, as he opened the door. "You 'goin' to take it back and lay down on me again?"

"No," said Bibbs.

"Well, perhaps I didn't have any call to accuse you of that. I don't know as you ever did go back on anything you said, exactly, though the Lord knows you've let down your end enough. You certainly have!" Sheridan was baffled. This was not what he wished to say, but his words were unmanageable; he found himself unable to control them, and he uttered an abusive word in spite of him. "I can't say I expect much of you—not from the way you always been, up to now—unless you turn over a new leaf, and I don't see any encouragement to think you're 'goin' to do that if you go down there and show a spark of real 'gumption. I reckon the whole office 'll fall in a faint. But if you're ever 'goin' to show any, you better begin right at the beginning and begin to show it to-morrow."

"You better, if it's in you!" Sheridan was sharply pronounced. He had always been able to say whatever he wished to say, but the future seemed to him a vast unknown. He told Bibbs about Mary's letter, and to his own amazement he found it impossible to do anything except to scold like a straggledriver. "You better come down there with your mind made up to hustle harder than the hardest workin' man that's under you, or you'll not get on very good with me, I tell you! The way to get ahead—and you better set it down in your books—is the way to get ahead is to do ten times the work of the hardest worker that works for you. But you don't know what work is, yet. All you've ever done was just stand around and feed a machine a child could handle, and then come home and take a bath and go to bed. I tell you you're up against a mighty different proposition now, and if you're worth your salt—and you never showed any signs of it, yet—got any signs that stick-out enough to bang somebody on the head and make 'em sit up and take notice—well, I want to say, right here and now—and you better listen, because I want to say just what I do say—I say—

He meandered to a full stop. His mouth hung open, and his mind was a hopeless blank.

"You Don't Know What Work is, Yet."

Bibbs looked up patiently—an old, old look. "Yes, father, I'm listening."

"That's all," said Sheridan, frowning heavily. "That's all I came to say, and you better see 't you remember it!"

He shook his head warningly, and went out, closing the door behind him with a crash. However, no sound of footsteps indicated his departure. He stopped just outside the door, and stood there a minute or more. Then abruptly he turned the knob and exhibited to his son a forehead liberally bearded with perspiration.

"Look here," he said, crossly. "That girl over yonder wrote Jim a letter—"

"I know," said Bibbs. "She told me."

"Well, I thought you needn't feel so much upset about it." The door closed on his voice as he withdrew, but the conclusion of the sentence was nevertheless audible. "If you knew she wouldn't have Jim, either."

And he stamped his way downstairs to tell his wife to quit her sister and not bother him with any more fool's errands. She was about to inquire what Bibbs "said," but after a second thought she decided not to speak at all. She merely murmured wordless assent, and verbal communication was given over between them for the rest of the afternoon.

Bibbs and his father were gone when Mrs. Sheridan woke, the next morning, and she had a dream. She missed Edith, and she worried about what might be taking place in the Sheridan building. She felt that everything depended on how Bibbs "took hold," and upon her husband's return in the evening she asked upon the opportunity to ask him how things had gone. He was noncommittal. What could anybody tell by the first day? He'd seen plenty go at things well enough right at the start, and then blow up. Pretty near anybody could show up fair the first day or so. There was a big job ahead. This material, such as it was—Bibbs, in fact—had to be broken in to handling the work Roscoe had done; and then, at least as an overture, he must take Jim's position in the Realty company, as well.

He told her to ask him again in a month.

But during the course of dinner she gathered from some disjointed remarks of his that he intended to lunch together at the small restaurant where it had been Sheridan's custom to lunch with Jim, and she took this to be an encouraging sign. Bibbs went to his room as soon as they left the table, and her husband was not communicative after reading his paper.

She became an anxious spectator of Bibbs' progress as a man of business, although it was a progress she could glimpse but dimly and only in the evening, through his remarks and his father's at dinner. Usually Bibbs was silent, except when directly addressed, but on the first evening of the third week of his new career he offered an opinion which had apparently been the subject of previous argument.

"I'd like you to understand just what I meant about those storage rooms, father," he said, as Jackson placed his coffee before him. "Abercrombie agreed with me, but you wouldn't listen to him."

"You can talk, if you want to, and I'll listen," Sheridan returned, "but you can't show me that Jim ever took up with a bad thing. The roof fell because he hadn't had time to settle and on account of weather conditions. I want that building put just the way Jim planned it."

"You can't have it," said Bibbs. "You can't, because Jim planned for the building to stand up, and it won't do it. The other one—the one that didn't fall—is so shot with cracks we haven't dared use it for storage. It won't stand weight. There's only one thing to do: Get both buildings down as best as we can, and build over. Frick's the best and cheapest in the long run for that type."

Sheridan looked sarcastic. "Fine! What we 'goin' to do for storage rooms

SURETY COMPANY EXPERTED

TO SETTLE ALLEN DEFICIENCY
100,000—The Surety Company only sought its case for the purpose of, causing true and accurate proof to be made of the amount for which it was liable, said Jesse B. Hawley, attorney for the company, on Saturday in speaking handed down in the district court of Idaho.

"It is likely that no attempt will be made to appeal the case," he continued, "though I cannot make a definite statement on that point. A small part—only of the total judgment might be questioned by us if an appeal should be made."

The bonding company attorney can give no definite information as to the exact date upon which the $150,000 judgment would be paid if it was decided to refrain from carrying the case to the supreme court.

The judgment, when paid, will probably be made over to the state in a lump sum. The money will more than cover the Allen deficiency and will also take care of the bank of Nampa deposit.

out 52 feet of quartz and vein matter last year, some of which showed good values in the past.

A controlling interest in the Jarbidge Central Co. has been taken over by R. N. Hill and E. B. Harris, who are in charge of the development work in a shaft and tunnel. Bonan and Curley sunk the shaft fifty feet on a good vein, which they found last year. This vein has been opened on the Lorraine and the LeBelle. The tunnel is being run to cut the Succinea vein.

Several other deals are under way and things as a whole are looking very favorable for an active and prosperous year in the Jarbidge district.

Twice Falls county has fixed the road in fine shape to its county line; the Jarbidge men have cleaned off the Grapen grade and fixed the bridge at Hot Hole and the teamsters have done some work at other points so that the road into camp from the north is in pretty good shape. Most of the freight is coming in now on auto trucks and lots of autos are coming and going all the time. The road to Death has just been opened through two 40-foot snow drifts. If the conditions do not get busy on the new road down the river, the companies will build it themselves as it is quite necessary to have this road finished soon.

The road over the summit of the Humboldt range, around the head of Coon creek and Copper basin, is a fine auto road and is one of the most picturesque pieces of road in the country, with deep canyons below and rocky crags above, and above the whole surrounding country, a most extensive and magnificent view can be had; 150 miles to the north can be seen the rugged peaks of the Saw Tooth mountains, while 100 miles back off them is the Bitter Root range; to the west are seen range after range, the Independence range, the Owyhee mountains, the Pine Forest range and still farther, at least 100 miles away, are the peaks of the Sierra Nevada range. To the south is a beautiful panorama of mountains and valleys.

LITTLE ALARM OVER INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Only One Case Reported to State Health Officers This Year—Is Quarantined in Boise.

There is no reason to feel particularly alarmed either in Boise or in Idaho with regard to the epidemic of infantile paralysis, which has New York, as well as some other cities, in the east, in its grip, says the Capital News. While one mild case of this disease has developed in Idaho, the health officers have acted promptly and strict quarantines have been put into effect. Neither the state county nor city officials are alarmed at all, although several conferences have been held to take such precautionary steps as are necessary.

Dr. Ralph Falk, secretary of the state board of health, said that the board had taken no action but as secretary he had held a conference with Health Officer Caton and the matter of strict quarantine had been discussed.

In 1910 there was an epidemic of infantile paralysis in Idaho. Since then there have been only occasional cases of the disease in various parts of the state. There is nothing unusual, said Dr. Falk, in the appearance of this disease in Idaho. Asked if a comparison had ever been made showing that infantile paralysis in the intermountain country is less severe than the disease in the east, Dr. Falk said he had never heard of such a comparison being made or that such a statement was correct.

A local market developed very strong, especially in heavy steers. Unusually demand for this class is very slack at North Portland, but today buyers are keeping dealers very busy to supply the demand.

Sheep receipts this morning were entirely an Oregon affair, for the most part coming from east of the mountains. Morning sales of lambs showed as high as $3.25, ewes at $5.00, and some very fair yearlings at $5.00.

In the west, record prices are being paid for wool. The record price of this season in Montana is 31 1/2 cents, for the Andrus clip, of 35,000 pounds, which was paid by a representative of Holloway, Jones & Donald. Large quantities of wools are selling in the west at 31 and 32 cents, and one large Boston house reports that they are selling very rapidly there. In the vicinity of Great Falls, Montana, wools are selling anywhere from 28 to 31 1/2 cents. These sales are made on fine, medium and half-blood staple clips. The presence of tender wool is more marked as the shearing progresses. This breaking tendency is due to the severity of last winter when the thermometer registered 40 degrees below zero.

Steele quotations are: Choice grass, $4.00@4.50; fair to good, $3.75@4.00; common, $3.50@3.75.

SILOS RAPIDLY GAINING IN FARMERS' FAVOR

Heavy Score of Ada County Ranchers Will Join Rank of Silage Feeders This Fall.

MERIDIAN—According to Ada county farm agent F. L. Williams, the silo building season has started. Charles Monlux, living near Perkins station, is reported to be the first rancher in the county to start construction of a new silo.

That many other ranchers are planning to follow the example of Mr. Monlux is evident.

Mr. Williams estimates that from 15 to 18 silos will be constructed in Ada county this summer. This will mean an increase of about 25 per cent. over the present silo census.

That the silo excursion conducted the latter part of April by Mr. Williams and project agent H. A. Ireland is bearing results seems evident. About 50 farmers and dairymen participated in the excursion, which visited about a score of ranches where silos are in successful use. The investigations conducted that day showed forcibly the advantages of the silo in this section of the state.

By way of arousing further interest, agent Williams has just sent out a circular letter on the subject of silos. Among the arguments he gives in favor of the silo and the use of silage are these:

"The silo makes intensified farming possible through the fact that more livestock can be raised and fed, and the soil enriched through the use of manure. The silo not only increases the farm income, but decreases farm labor."

"The silo is no longer an experiment. That silage is one of the best foods that can be fed is a conceded fact. The addition of silage makes a better balanced ration, insures better health, a larger milk flow, and in the case of beef cattle a more rapid increase in weight. It lowers the cost of butter fat from 5 to 8 cents per pound, and beef production from $1 to $1.50 per hundred pounds. It enables the farmer to produce a larger tonnage at a smaller

HIGH PRICES ALL ALONG THE LINE

Hogs and Cattle Upward; Sheep Strong and Wool Brings Record Figures This Week.

Hog receipts were a little heavier this morning than at any time last week, says the Portland Live Stock Reporter. Last week's market closed on a strong basis with $3.50 as top and with the bulk not much under that figure. Salesmen seemed very much satisfied with the present situation. Today's receipts were 3200.

Hog values soared skyward after trading got fairly quiet. The top did not seem to be a true price on an exceptional load of swine, but was fairly representative of the general market. Eight-slayers, the top with the bulk fairly close to that figure. This advance was 20 cents over last week's close.

The past week has shown that cattle buyers are anxious and are willing to pay for anything that shows up with finish. The week-end market showed the usual sort of cows that did not materially effect prices either way.

Today's receipts were fairly large. The situation at an early hour, except in the few words was—Good cattle strong, with medium stuff steady.

Some of the best steers brought as high as $3.50. Best cows were well in line with steers and altogether the market was rather a lively affair.
