Times' Special Correspondence.

A heavy thunder storm struck our vicinity last Sunday and while in sections it amounted to only a heavy shower, it broke with tremendous fury here, reaching almost to the water-spout climax, coming down in torrents. The rain fell in about five minutes in estimated at 1-1/2 to 2 inches. The lightning struck in several places, causing more or less damage, but the worst reported is the killing of three fine horses owned by Harley Schroll of the Oak corner district. Four horses were standing huddled together in a pool of water, when the bolt of lightning struck the first horse. The bolt passed through the first, on to the second, and on down to the fourth, killing each as it passed through their bodies. The fourth was stamined but eventually came to again but the shock leaves the horse valueless if it does recover. This is quite a loss to Mr. Schroll, who a year ago was married and has just started along the road of farming.

Meurs, Coppenhaver and Hussard, who were camping up near Halley and other points where fishing and hunting is good, returned home well pleased over their enjoyable trip.

Mr. Ritchie, the field man for the Amalgamated Sugar company, has been looking after the beet lands and overseeing the foremen employed in the different fields here.

Perry Moon and his wife and boy are guests at the Herbert Chandler home. They came out Tuesday from Twin Falls to spend the week end.

and Mrs. Harley Schroll and left a six and one-half pound buy over which the parents and friends are rejoicing.

Mrs. Herbert Chandler received a phone call last Friday telling of the recent illness of her sister, Mrs. Dodd, of Twin Falls, who was operated on for appendicitis in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schroll and baby Marie, were guests at the home of Mrs. Schroll's sister, Mrs. Bertin Clyde, of Twin Falls, last Sunday.

A party consisting of Charles Baker and wife, Charles Overfield and wife, and also Mrs. Percy Walshaw and son Edward, autted up to Nantua Sunday.

Mrs. Belle Schroll's little brother, Bruce, came from over the border, is visiting with friends and relatives here.

Dr. Eames and wife of Twin Falls, were guests at the Walshaw home last Wednesday.

The different beet fields are in fine shape for the coming crop, and are as fully matured as the young plants of last year were at the same time of the year. The sugar factory is growing nearer completion as the weeks go by, and will be finished in every particular for the fall's yield of beets. The smoke stack has been completed and also the warehouse. The walls are now rapidly laid with brick, and the cement tubs fully completed. It is said that there is a larger per cent by several thousand acres, of the beet roots and this year than over last, and the farmers are jubilant over the unexpected increase of 50 cents the ton on beets raised this year, this price not including the first raise of 25 cents at the beginning of the season. On Wednesday occurred the sale of the Walshaw place, at their home two miles east of Twin Falls. On account of the busy season, only a small crowd attended, and on account of the hay shortage, and also the shortage of other crops from our continued late frosts, the stock and other things sold brought poor prices. Mrs. Walshaw leaves for Provo, Utah, on Saturday morning, where she will join her husband and where they will make their home for some time to come, renting their present home in Salt Collins and family of the experimental farm near here. Mr. Walshaw still retaining the crop on the farm.

Grandma Wilson, who was on the sick list for a few weeks past, is about again, after an absence of several weeks in Twin Falls seeking medical aid.

Mrs. C. R. Vosberg arrived from southern Kansas last week, surprising her husband in regard to the exact date of her coming—a surprise greatly appreciated by Mr. Vosberg, who has been hatching here for some time.

F. R. Brown and wife, Will Gibson and family and Marian Berthold autted up to Oakley last Sunday via Hansen, Marion and Island. They report running over a huge rattlesnake while on the return, which was stretched across the road and which they judged to be between four and five feet in length.

A. S. Martyn and wife autted to Plier last Friday evening on business. Bert Johnson and party were campers last week, lurking the unsuspecting trout in the mountain slides.

Several of the members of the Wayside club attended the annual gathering of the different country clubs held at Water's grove last week. A crowd of about 250 was there to enjoy a good time and help empty the host of baskets filled with good things provided by the good cooks of the club.

Mrs. John W. Holland and daughter Nora, were Twin Falls shoppers last week.

Emil Falk was over on the North side last week, taking a wagon load of machinery in preparation to moving over in the fall. He owns a fine farm there.

Wells are still being drilled over our neighborhood, several new wells being drilled during the last week, the water being found from 74 to 220 feet down.

Ira Nicholson and family went fishing last week.

Grasshoppers are becoming so plentiful here as to be a pest. The farmers report damages to clover crops and also to the berry crop. Several farmers are preparing to spray their clover fields this week.

There is a shortage of the blackcap berry crop here, caused by a blight, which in turn was caused by our late frosts.

Mr. Van Slor and wife of the Oak corner district, were shoppers in Twin Falls last Saturday.

John W. Holland, which furnishes the water to our smaller ditches, broke, causing some delay and worry among the irrigators, but the break was soon repaired by the efficient help of the Twin Falls Canal company.

Mrs. Gertrude Valentine was shopping in Twin Falls last week, as was Mrs. Hanson.

Will Shubert, from the Salmon tract, was a caller here with friends on Wednesday.

Mrs. Hanson and Mrs. James Teron, were shopping in Twin Falls.

LIGHTNING BOLT ENDS LIFE OF PIONEER JEROME WOMAN

BEROMIE, Ida.—During an electrical storm Sunday evening, Mrs. Wm. Cunningham, living a few miles from town, was killed by a bolt of lightning.

She was in an outbuilding which was struck. Her husband missed her, but did not realize the building had been struck. In searching, he found her in the bed. The first act of a physician was summoned, but death evidently came instantly.

An examination showed the bolt had struck the woman in the head. Her hair was disarranged. The bolt then ran down her body, and burst open one of her shoes.

The deceased was among the early settlers here, coming with her husband in 1909. She was about 50 years of age and leaves her husband, but no children. This was the first act of this nature in this section.—Statesman.

ANTI-CHOLERA MEETING HELD AT IDAHO FALLS

Dr. L. C. Henderson Conducts Meeting of Farmers to Stamp Out Hog Disease.

At the Idaho Falls Commercial club Saturday, a meeting conducted by Dr. L. C. Henderson of the local U.S. Bureau of animal industry, was held among the farmers of that locality for the purpose of organizing to stamp out hog cholera among their herds. The meeting was well attended and many of the largest hog raisers in the district were present, everyone expressing enthusiastically into the work of the bureau.

Ten school districts were organized and arrangements made to conduct weekly meetings in efforts to stamp out the disease in different animal houses. In addition to this, afternoon demonstrations will be given to the farmers in order to explain the serum preventive treatment for hog cholera. Dr. F. Whitney, assistant state veterinarian, will be in charge of the work in that district and will administer the serum furnished by the state livestock sanitary board to all affected herds at actual cost to the farmers.

Dr. Sullivan, of the local bureau, deploring the loss of the Twin Falls know that he wishes to keep in touch with them at all times so that the disease among the hogs may be kept down and if any new cases should appear he desires to be promptly notified so that they may be handled at once.

State News

To Add to Hospital—Work on the building of an addition and the remodeling of the Pocatello general hospital started yesterday afternoon, and excavation work for the addition has already started. The new improvements will cost approximately $25,000. The sum of $25,000 was donated by the county and the county, both giving $12,500 each. The money was more in the form of a loan than a gift, as it is the purpose of the hospital board to pay the money back when able, out of the earnings of the institution.—Pocatello Tribune.

Charged With Robbery—Dick Bass, an individual who was picked up by the officers this morning and is at present an inmate of the county jail, according to the police slip, is held under the serious charge of highway robbery. Bass, it is stated by the authorities, was seen driving in a company with another man, attacked a person one night on the east side of town in the neighborhood of the court house, and after severely beating him took money off his person.—Pocatello Tribune.

To Make Sugarbrush Potash—According to a report lately received from Idaho Falls a new enterprise which should be of great importance to this section of the country if successful, is about to be launched. An organization has been perfected, and after a thorough investigation, those interested believe that potash can be manufactured from sugarbrush successfully, and that it would prove a good money-making scheme. It is proposed to form a company called the Western Potash company, and to give the scheme a trial. Indirectly if the scheme is found to be successful it would be of great benefit to the western country as a whole, as it would necessarily mean the clearing of thousands of acres of land.—Idaho Falls Post.

High School Finished by Fall—Pocatello's handsome new high school building, which was undoubtedly the finest in the state, will be ready for occupancy this fall. Contractor Murphy states that his work will be completed in seven or eight weeks.

The most noticeable feature in going through the building is the small amount of wood used in the construction. The building is absolutely fireproof, an item of considerable importance when it is remembered that the old high school was destroyed by fire. Even the window frames are of steel.—Idaho Falls Post.

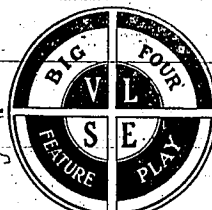

KEEN ENTUSIASM GREETED MAXWELL'S REDUCED COST

When the Maxwell Motor company announced July 1 the generous reduction in price on its touring car and roadster, the executives were prepared for a somewhat increased demand for the Maxwell product. But they were not prepared for the tremendous influx of business that followed on the heels of the announcement.

"The 1916 season was a most prosperous one," said E. S. Johnson, local dealer for the Maxwell company, "but if early indications count for anything, the 1917 season will surpass anything in the history of the automobile industry. There is no question but that the company's policy in standardizing their car and selling at a figure that would appeal to people of moderate means will be justified by the increased business."

Reports from the agricultural districts about the country indicate that farmers are intensely interested in the Maxwell announcement. One Iowa farmer wrote that he had always maintained that eventually it would be possible to buy a real automobile for the price of a good horse and buggy. He declared that a really high-class driving horse costs well over $300, while the buggy and equipment brings the cost up to a few hundred dollars additional. There he said, you have the same amount of money required to buy a Maxwell, a high-grade motor car, whose upkeep will prove far less than the upkeep of a driving outfit.

"The response to the 1917 announcement of the Maxwell from both cities and country has been exceptional and all the signs predict a record-breaking year."

CHAPTER XXXII.

It was a full hour later when he left her lying upon the couch in her own room, still lamenting that the "fuss" which she was making irked him far more than his physical loss. He permitted her to think that he meant to return directly to his office, but when he came out to the open he told the chauffeur in attendance to await him in front of Mr. Vertrees' house, whither he himself proceeded on foot.

Mr. Vertrees had taken the sale of his worthless stock as a manna in the wilderness; it came from heaven by what agency he did not particularly question. The broker informed him that "parties were interested in getting hold of the stock," and that later there might be a possible increase in the value of the large amount retained by his client. It might go "quite a ways up" within a year or so, he said, and he advised "sticking tight" with it. Mr. Vertrees went home and prayed.

He rose from his knees feeling that he was surely coming into his own again. It was more than a mere gasp of temporary relief with him, and his wife shared his optimism; but Mary would not let him buy back her piano, and so for a time—spring was on the way, she said. But they paid the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker, and hired a cook once more. It was this servitude which opened the door for Sheridan, and presently assured him that Miss Vertrees would "be down."

He went to the man to conceal admiration when he felt it, and he flushed and beamed as Mary made her appearance, almost upon the heels of the cook. She had a look of apprehension for the first fraction of a second, but it vanished at the sight of him, and the place was taken in her eyes by a sort of brilliance, while color rushed in her cheeks.

"Don't be surprised," he said. "Truth is, in a way it's sort of an business I looked in here. I'll only take a minute, I expect."

"I'm sorry," said Mary. "I hoped you'd come because we're neighbors." He chuckled. "Neighbors! Sometimes people don't see so much of their neighbors as they used to. That is, I hear so lately."

"You'll stay long enough to sit down, won't you?"

"I'll guess I could manage that much." And they sat down, facing each other and not far apart.

"Of course, it couldn't be called business, exactly," he said, more gravely. "Not at all, I expect. But there's something of yours it seemed to me I ought to give you, and I just thought it was better to bring it myself and explain how it happened to have it. It's this letter you wrote my boy."

He extended the letter to her solemnly, in his left hand; and she took it gently from him. "It was in his mail, after he was hurt. You knew he never got it, I expect."

"Yes," she said, in a low voice. He sighed. "I'm glad he didn't. Not," he added, quickly—"not but what you did just right to send it. You did. You couldn't act—any other way when it came right down to it. The ain't any blame coming to you—you were aboveboard all through."

Mary said, "Thank you almost in a whisper, and with her head bowed low."

"You'll have to excuse me for reading it. I had to take charge of all his mail and everything; I didn't know

"Don't be surprised," he said, "the handwriting, and I read it all—once I got started."

"I'm kind you did."

"Well," he leaned forward as if to rise—"I guess that's about as I just thought you ought to have it."

"Thank you for bringing it."

"He looked at her hopefully, as if he thought and wished that she might say something more to say. But she seemed not to be aware of this glance, and sat with her eyes fixed sorrowfully upon the floor.

"Oh, I expect I better be getting on to the office," he said, rising dejectedly. "I told—I told my partner I'd be back at two o'clock, and I guess he'll think I'm a poor business man if he catches me behind time. I got to walk the chalk a mighty straight line this afternoon—with that fellow keeping tabs on me."

Mary rose with him. "I've always heard you were the hard driver."

He suffered dejectedly. "Me? I'm nothing to that partner of mine. You couldn't guess to save your life how he keeps after me to hold up any end of the job. I shouldn't be surprised he'd give me the grand bounce some day, and run the whole circus himself. You know how he is—once he goes at a thing!"

"No," she smiled. "I didn't know you had a partner. I'd always heard—"

He laughed, looking away from her. "It's just my way of speaking of that boy of mine, Bibbs."

He stood then, expectant, staring out into the hall with an air of careless neutrality. He felt that she certainly must say at least, "How is Bibbs?" but he said nothing at all, though he waited until the silence became embarrassing.

"Well, I guess I better be getting down there," he said, at last. "He might worry."

"Goodbye—and thank you," said Mary.

"For what?"

"For the letter."

"Oh," he said, blankly. "You're welcome. Goodbye."

Mary put out her hand. "Goodbye."

"You'll have to excuse my left hand."

"I had a little accident to the other one."

She gave a plying cry as she saw. "Oh, poor Mr. Sheridan!"

"Nothing at all! Dictate everything nowadays, anyhow." He laughed jovially. "Did anybody tell you how it happened?"

"I heard you hurt your hand, but so—no just how."

"It was this way," he began, and both, as if unconsciously, sat down again. "You may not know it, but I used to worry a good deal about the fingers of my boys—the one that used to come to see you sometimes, after Jim—that is, I mean Bibbs. He's the one I spoke of as my partner; and the truth is that what it's just about going to amount to, one of the doctors if his health holds out. Well, you remember, I expect, I had him on a machine over at a plant of mine; and sometimes I'd kind of sneak in there and see how he was getting along. Take a doctor with me sometimes, because Bibbs never was so robust, you might say. Ole Doc Gurney—I guess maybe you know him? Tall, thin man; sets sleepy—"

"Well, one day I and ole Doc Gurney, we were in there, and I understood to show Bibbs how to run his machine. He told me to look out, but I wouldn't listen, and I didn't look out—and that's how I got my hand hurt, right to show Bibbs to do something he knew how to do and I didn't. Made me so mad I just wouldn't even admit to myself it was hurt—and so, by and by, ole Doc Gurney had to take a little medical measures with me. He's a right good doctor, too. Don't you think so, Miss Vertrees?"

"Yes."

"Yes, he is so!" Sheridan now had the air of a rambling teller and gossip with all day on his hands. "Take him on Bibbs' case. I was talkin' about Bibbs' case with him this morning. Well, you'd laugh to hear the way ole Gurney talks about that! 'Course he's just as much as a friend as he is a doctor, and he takes as much interest in Bibbs as if he was in the family. He thinks Bibbs isn't anyways bad at all; and he thinks he could stand the pace and get on it better with this machine than any other fellow I've seen there. Miss Vertrees—honest it would!"

He paused to chuckle, and stole a glance at her. She was gazing straight before her at the wall; her lips were parted, and—visibly—she was breathing heavily and quickly. He feared that she was growing furiously angry; but he had led to what he wanted to say, and he went on, determined now to say it all. He leaned forward and altered his voice to one of confidential friendliness, though in it he still maintained a tone which indicated that ole Doc Gurney's opinion was only a joke he shared with her. "Yes, sir, you certainly would be lushed! Why, that she man thinks you get something to do with it. You'll have to blame it on him, young lady, if it makes you feel like startin' out to whip somebody! He's actually got this theory; he says Bibbs got to gettin' better while he worked over there at the shop because you kept him cheered up and feelin' good. And he says if you could manage to just stand him hangin' round a little—maybe not much, but just sometimes—again, he believed it'd do Bibbs a mighty lot of good. 'Course that's only what the doctor said. Me, I don't know anything about that; but I can say this much—I never saw any such a mental improvement in anybody in my life as I have lately in Bibbs. I expect you'd find him a good deal more entertaining than what he used to be—and I know it's a kind of embarrassing thing to suggest after the way he's acted in over here that day to ask you to stand up before the

GAS AND GOSSIP

We have with us today Gloystein Bros., who labor patiently by day and sleep well of nights. What makes them sleep so well is the fact that they have secured the well-known "Excelsior" motorcycle, or motorcycle, as they call it, and the way this machine is giving satisfaction is very pleasing to them.

In addition to this they carry a full line of parts and general necessaries, and make a specialty of repairs, and have worked up a very nice business by careful and conscientious work.

Many a young fellow about town, if he but knew the comfort, speed and convenience of an "Excelsior" would be riding on one of these and passing the big auto's on the road with ease, instead of riding in a horse and buggy with his best girl on Sunday night and buying her ice cream cones.

When you want repairs, or a good motorcycle, see Gloystein Bros.
They will see to the rest.

boy come and see you sometimes, once more. Could you?"

"You don't understand," she clasped
her hands together in a sorrowful gesture. "You must talk plain. Bibbs heard that I'd tried to make your oldest son care for me because I was poor, and so Bibbs came and asked me to marry him—because he was sorry for me. And I can't see him any more," she cried in distress. "I can't!"

Sheridan cleared his throat uncomfortably. "You mean because he thought that about you?"

"No, no! What he thought was true!"

"Well—you mean, he was so much in—your mean he thought so much of you?" The words were inexpressibly awkward upon Sheridan's tongue; he seemed to be in doubt even about pronouncing them, but after a ghastly pause he bravely repeated them. "You mean he thought so much of you that you just couldn't stand him around?"

"No! He was sorry for me. He cared for me; he was fond of me; and he'd respected me—too much! In the most way he loved me. If you like,

and he'd have done anything for me,
for me, as I would for him, and as he knew I would. It was beautiful, Mr. Sheridan," she said. "But the cheap, bad things one has done seem always to come back—they wait, and pull you down when you're happiest.
Bibbs found me out, you see; and he wasn't 'in love' with me at all."

"He wasn't? Well, it seems to me he gave up everything he wanted to do—it was fool stuff, but he certainly wanted it mighty bad—he just threw it away and walked right up and took the job he swore he never would—just for you. And it looks to me as if a man that'd do that must think quite a heap of the girl he does it for!
You say it was only because he was sorry, but let me tell you there's only one girl he could feel that sorry for!
Yes, sir!"

"No, no," she said. "Bibbs isn't like other men—he would do anything for anybody."

Sheridan grinned. "Perhaps not so much as you think, nowadays," he said.
"For instance, I got kind of a suspicion
he doesn't believe in 'sentiment in business.' But that's neither here nor there. What he wanted was, just plain and simple, for you to marry him.
Well, I was afraid his thinkin' so much of you had kind o' sickened you of him—the way it does sometimes. But from the way you talk, I understand that ain't the trouble." He coughed, and his voice trembled a little. "Now here, Miss Vertrees, I don't have to tell you—because you see things early.
I know I got no business comin' to you like this, but I had to make Bibbs go my way instead of his own—I had to do it for the sake o' my business and on his own account, too—and I expect you got some idea how it hurt him to give up. Well, he's made good.
He didn't come in halfhearted or mean; he came in—all the way! But there isn't anything in it to him; you can see he's just shut his teeth on it and goin' ahead with that in his mouth.
You see, one way of lookin' at it, he's got nobble to work for. And it seems to me like it cost him your friendship, and I believe—honest—that's what hurt him the worst. Now you said we'd talk plain. Why can't you let him come back?"

She covered her face desperately with her hands. "I can't!"

He rose, defeated, and looking it.

"Well, I mustn't press you," he said, gently.

At that she cried out, and dropped her hands and let him see her face.

"Ah! He was only sorry for me!"

He gazed at her intently. Mary was proud, but she had a fatal honesty, and it confessed the truth of her own; she was helpless. It was so clear that even Sheridan, marveling and amazed, was able to see it. Then a change came over him; gloom fell from him, and he grew radiant.

"Don't! Don't!" she cried. "You mustn't!"

"I won't tell him," said Sheridan, from the doorway. "I won't tell anybody anything!"

NOGALES' WEATHER IS SIMILAR TO IDAHO

Report By Meteorologist Shows No Great Climate Variation in Two Places.

The Idaho regiment is well located in a healthful section with a climate not so very different from that of Southern Idaho.

According to a summary prepared by Edward L. Wells, meteorologist of the weather bureau, the following comparisons are made:

Nogales is 3830 feet above sea level,
or about 1100 feet higher than Boise.
The normal annual temperature is 62 degrees, or about 11 degrees higher than that of Boise. The difference in temperature is more pronounced in winter than in summer. The normal temperature for July at Nogales is 80 degrees, as compared with 73 degrees at Boise. In 1914, the last year for which a record is available, the highest temperature at Nogales was 101, on June 27.

The normal annual rainfall is 13.64

inches, or 83 inch greater than that of Boise. More than half the annual rainfall ordinarily occurs in July and August, but the rainfall is irregular, and heavy rains are sometimes experienched in other months.

In 1914 there were 200 clear days,
and 76 days partly cloudy. Measurable amounts of rain fell on 73 days
during the year.

SUNDERLIN SAYS STATE SHOULD ACT

Candidate for Attorney General Talks of Carey Act Problems

PROBLEMS RIGHTLY THOSE OF THE STATE FOR SOLUTION.

Settlers Think State Should Not Evade Issue Because No Legal Remedy Exists When Moral Obligations Are Evident.

"The state should be active, not passive; aggressive, not lukewarm; its legal machinery should be vigorously operated for the honest and impartial solution of the state's Carey act problems. Such is the opinion of Charles A. Sunderlin, of Burley, candidate for attorney general. This candidate states plainly that the fact that the state is not legally responsible for the failure of some of its Carey act projects does not blind him to the realization that the state is morally responsible for the condition in which some of the Carey act projects find themselves, notably the Salmon river project in Twin Falls county."

"Sometime ago," writes Mr. Sunderlin to THE TIMES, "I received a copy of your paper containing an article pertaining to conditions on the Salmon river project and especially pertaining to the death of one of the settlers. Only a few days ago I received a letter from the secretary of the settlers' association relative to the same project, and requesting a statement of my position. Herewith I am enclosing a copy of my letter, which I feel should be of sufficient interest to your people for publication."

Mr. Sunderlin's letter follows: "I am in receipt of your favor of the 15th inst. relative to conditions surrounding the Salmon river Carey act project and matters pertaining to Carey act projects generally in the state of Idaho. Permit me to say, Mr. Sunderlin, that I am glad to hear from you in this matter, and am pleased to have the opportunity of giving public expression to opinions long entertained by me on these matters so vital to the state of Idaho and its citizenship."

"For the past decade, nearly, I have been deeply concerned with irrigation matters in this state, and united in bonds of sympathy with the aspirations of the struggling settlers on our uncompleted irrigation projects. I have long had the ambition to be of some service to them and the people of my state."

"The great problem of Idaho today is found in connection with the work of the state land board, and the greatest task of the state land board is to meet and successfully solve the many problems involving our Carey act projects. I do not believe these big problems should be solved by the state land board entered into with Carey act companies and the representations which the state indirectly made, that these lands were owned and settled upon. The honor of the state of Idaho is at issue, that this commonwealth should preserve inviolate the rights and equities of the people generally of the state of Idaho will be subserved. The responsibility is upon the state of Idaho."

"The state is in fact acting in a fiduciary capacity for every Carey act settler; and for it was through the contracts which Carey act land board entered into with Carey act companies and the representations which the state indirectly made, that these lands were owned and settled upon. The honor of the state of Idaho is at issue, that this commonwealth should preserve inviolate the rights and equities of the people generally of the state of Idaho will be subserved. The responsibility is upon the state of Idaho."

"I am unalterably convinced that the state of Idaho should in a large way make it the business of the state to solve these problems. Although there is no legal responsibility, there is nevertheless a moral responsibility of even greater importance, that the state should do everything reasonably possible for the uplift of those who settled through indirect representations of the state itself on irrigation projects that have not been successfully reclaimed and irrigated."

"I believe that the state should do something more than merely acquiesce and indirectly assist in the solution of these problems; for I am strongly moved to the conviction that these problems are quite as much, if not more, those of the state than the settlers. The state, therefore, should be active, not passive; aggressive, not lukewarm. The legal machinery of the state, therefore, should be vigorously operated for the honest and impartial solution of these problems."

"Already thousands of settlers on Idaho's uncompleted irrigation projects have abandoned their homesteads and equities, and departed from the state; thousands of other settlers, destitute and impoverished, are still holding fast to their claims, with the lingering hope that the state will sooner or later take such action as will definitely determine their rights and equities. To retain these settlers on their homesteads, to make them part and parcel of a greater Idaho citizenship, to inculcate in their hearts a greater regard for the nobility of the commonwealth, let the state assume the responsibility with which it is rightly charged, and proceed expeditiously, firmly and fearlessly, to an early settlement of these controversies."

"For the purpose of reclaiming vast areas of desert lands under the Carey act, contracts were entered into by and between the state and Carey act companies. Generally speaking, these contracts may or may not have designated the exact amount of water that would be delivered to the lands proposed to be irrigated; but even so, there is the unwritten provision upon which the Carey act is based, that the construction companies must have for reclamation purposes sufficient water for the proper amount of irrigation of the land. Anything short of such a supply of water would be a fraud upon the entryman and the government."

"Of course, we should assume that the state justice in these matters should adhere to the binding force of all contractual obligations, and should act fairly, impartially, and honestly, to the state and the rights and equities of all parties concerned shall be properly and adequately protected."

"I am in the office of an attorney general, for which I am a candidate at the Republican primaries. I have said: 'The office of attorney general calls for a lawyer capable of large constructive service. There is a great work to be done in welding together the conflicting interests that are represented on our uncompleted irrigation projects, besides the regular and ordinary legal work. The harmonious solution of our irrigation problems is a way that will preserve every reasonable right of both the settlers and construction companies will go far in re-establishing prosperity and financial stability in southern Idaho.'" been furnished with a dressing table, chairs and large mirrors. A kitchen has been installed for banquet and lunch purposes and will be equipped with a large electric range. A soda fountain is on the way from the east and will be put in as soon as it arrives.

The large well lighted lodge room, with a hardwood floor is at the rear, decorated with appropriate emblems suitable for handsome mounted Elk heads. For the convenience of guests during a dance a balcony has been installed, where spectators may be seated or card tables placed. V. H. Ormsby is the exalted ruler of the local lodge, No. 1183, and he has expressed his determination to do everything he can to make this one of the strongest chapters on the coast. "It is my desire," said Mr. Ormsby, "to make the lodge here one of the biggest and strongest chapters for this sized community, and to build it up both morally and socially."

"I want to make this a home for the Elks," in every sense, a place where the brothers may come to relax and forget their worries and troubles. We want to build up friendships and associations and to have the Elks and their members closely together and so carry out the highest aim of our order."

PIONEER CLUB OF KIMBERLY ACTIVE

Large Meeting Held Last Week In the Public Park

PLANS FOR BETTER AND MORE BEAUTIFUL TOWN DISCUSSED.

Many buildings in course of construction to be finished on or before September 1.

"The Pioneer club of Kimberly, consisting of the women of the community organized for social, civic, and other purposes, held a picnic in the park last Thursday afternoon, for the purpose of enjoying a dinner and discussing matters of general business in the cool shade. The care of the park is one of the duties that the organization has assumed. Many plans for the betterment and beautification of the city was talked over. Mrs. B. H. Atkins retired from the presidency and Mrs. R. W. Wilson was elected in her place. There were 50 members and 20 guests present. The club will give an entertainment in the auditorium Friday night, July 21, at which a lot of entertainers under the leadership of Mrs. H. J. Perkins, will be present and present a varied program. The admission fees are announced at 25 cents and it is stated that the program will be finished before the beginning of the week's dance."

September 1 will be a red letter day in Kimberly history if all the plans announced at the meeting are carried out. It was announced that all the new buildings will be occupied by that date and that the city will be in full bloom. The Wilson Brothers' block, the Swearingin and Jones block, the Kimberly Bank block, the E. W. Filley block, the warehouse and elevator of the Idaho Seed company and the new high school, will all be finished and occupied on the date named; barring accident. The brick work has been finished on most of the buildings and inside work is progressing on some of them."

Mrs. Yost and family were called to Almo this week on account of the tragic death of Mrs. Yost's mother and infant sister. A party had been at a picnic in the woods and were returning when a team became frightened and threw the woman and child to the ground, inflicting injuries that speedily proved fatal.

Rev. Leach, former pastor of the Kimberly Methodist church, will occupy the M. E. pulpit Sunday morning and evening.

Ed Claiborn and C. M. Stone were in Jerome Tuesday.

M. E. Eden left Tuesday for a trip to the North Side.

That Kimberly was able to hold the champions at Shoshone down to a two to nothing score in what has been pronounced the best league game of the season, is looked upon as a sign of hope by the local fans, who hope to push up a notch or two and head the league for the second half of the year.

Stull Swearingin and family, Miss Warner and J. W. Swearingin, are on a fishing trip to Holey.

Mrs. J. F. Swearingin and Mrs. Will Behel have left for their homes in Illinois after a visit with W. C. Swearingin.

The Otto Kreger and Thompson families and the Steelmill families, are among those away fishing this week.

Miss Nellie Hickerson of Wendell, visited W. C. Swearingin and family this week.

Dr. J. N. Davis, who returned this week from a trip to the east where he took postgraduate work along with vacation, is having a Ford fixed for a Pullman in the Village blacksmith shop. He is having the back sawed so that it can reverse and a bed can be made on it.

Bert Silvers, Charles Upton, H. E. Wopd and Arthur and Russ Wilson, with their families, accompanied by Frank Cagle, left this morning for a fishing trip to Ketchikan. S. T. Butler, a Chicago capitalist, was in the country this week and declared himself delighted with Kimberly. He made arrangements with Senator O. G. Zuck to extend loans for him, saying that he knew of no place with better prospects.

Mrs. Mowens and daughter Ruth of Omaha, and Mrs. H. E. Wood of Nebraska, are visiting Mr. Russ Wilson.

Contrary to previous announcements, Rev. B. F. Shoemaker will fill at least one more appointment in the Christian church. The services July 30 will be conducted by him. The church will have a resident pastor next year, but final arrangements for this have not been made.
