MAY BE SENT TO ANOTHER POINT

Indications at Camp That Transfer of Idaho Troops Is to Be Made

RECRUITING UNDER WAY TO INCREASE STRENGTH OF REGIMENT

Forty-five Idaho Boys' Feet Effects of Too Many Melons. No Idea As To How Long Will Be on the Border.

NOGALES, Ariz.—There is a persistent rumor here that the Second Idaho Infantry is to be transferred to another point on the border. Work has been ordered stopped on the regimental Y. M. C. A. building and this is supposed to be based upon the proposed change. There is no announcement of what the probable destination will be, if the Idaho men are moving.

The Southern Pacific railroad was to have a train over the Mexican Pacific road this morning which was to be a transfer of the Idaho troops. The transfer has been delayed by the unreasonable demands of the Mexican government, but it may yet be arranged.

Forty-five of the Idaho boys were on sick report this morning, principally from "melon trouble" caused by drinking too much ice water or eating excessively of the melons and fruits which are abundant here. No cases are serious.

With three recruiting officers now in the field, Adjutant General C. S. Moody and Lieutenant Max B. Garber, U. S. A., are bending all their energies toward rounding up the 800 men needed for the Second Idaho infantry regiment before the expiration of the day. No time limit on the recruiting has been set by the government, but the commander of the western department has made it clear that no waiver of the time limit is to be expected.

Officers detailed for recruiting duty have gone to "melon sections" and reports from them are expected to arrive within the next day or two.

Recruiting in Boise and adjacent territory is being taken care of by the adjutant general's office. Under a special arrangement, men living in towns not entered by the recruiting officers may enlist in Boise. Recruits who will signify their intentions of joining the regiment will be sent transportation to Boise after they have passed an examination at their home station. Here they will again be examined by Col. W. M. Wood, U. S. A., at the barracks to which they will be assigned. The recruits will be permitted to choose the company in the Second Idaho to which they wish to be assigned, but when one organization is filled to war strength recruits will have to make a second choice.

Adjutant General Garber is in possession of a letter from an officer of the regiment at Nogales in which it is said the government had apportioned $25 to each company of the Idaho contingent to be used for the purpose of building camp kitchens and mess halls. The kitchen and mess hall are to be housed under one roof. The structures will be of uniform size 15 feet wide and 64 feet in length with a partition between the dining room and kitchen. The buildings will be of skeleton form, with canvas roof and thoroughly screened.

This would indicate, it is said, that the regiment will be on the border for some time, and although neither Lieutenant Garber nor Adjutant General Moody will comment on the problem, it is the stay-the-Idaho-contingent will make on the border, it is known that they, as well as recruiting officers, expect to stay here for some active service in the south before being returned home.

CITY EMPLOYMENT AGENCY IS BUSY

Great Demand For Hands and Men Being Placed in the Fields by Agent Williams Daily.

"We are doing more business now than at any time since the office was established," said R. M. Williams, city clerk and ex-officio employment agent this morning. "We have calls for men from the farmers and stock raisers and people are busy with their hay." continued Mr. Williams, and they come here looking for men. "There are a number of farmers who want men by the month, while workmen generally prefer to work by the day at this season, so that they can drift on to some other place later when the busy season is over here. However, we are connecting a great many men with jobs."

AMERICAN TROOPS BREAKING CAMP IN MEXICO

A view of one of the American camps in Mexico showing the soldiers packing up equipment, taking down tents, and loading transports. All would appear bustle and confusion, but within a comparatively short time the site is cleared, wagons ready, and the troops lined up for the command to march.

BUHL COWTESTER AFTER NEW MEMBERS

Plan to Double Organization Within Next Thirty Days

MAY FORM ANOTHER ORGANIZATION WITH HEADQUARTERS HERE

Third Quarterly Report Read at Meeting in Twin Falls City Park Yesterday Afternoon.

Another cow tester for the Twin Falls tract within the next thirty days was one of the things planned by the Buhl Pioneer Cowtesting association at a picnic dinner held in the Twin Falls city park yesterday afternoon. Practically all the members of the cowtesting association and their families were present and enjoyed a big dinner. O. T. Koster, the official tester, presented the third quarterly report which showed a flattering condition of affairs. Professor Musser was introduced by President Gustav Kunze of the association, and made a talk on the benefits of the association in the education of the students in the agricultural branches in the schools. County Agent W. N. Birch made a short talk about his work.

The members were unanimously in favor of extending the association work. Whether the present organization will be doubled and two testers will be in connection with it, or whether there will be two separate organizations was not decided. All the members are on a campaign for new members and it is hoped to have enough to either double the old organization or establish a new one within thirty days.

Anyone desiring to get into the association should correspond with O. T. Koster, tester; Gustav Kunze, president; or C. E. Long, secretary, of Buhl, or with County Agent W. N. Birch, of Twin Falls.

The section house and the bunk house for the crew which will be put on the new section on the Hogerson branch will be completed and turned over to the painters tomorrow. As soon as they have been painted, the new crew will be organized.

The preliminary grading for the new depot has been completed and a car of ties has been unloaded for the siding.

SECRETARY BARKER REPLIES.

George R. Barker, secretary of state, has replied to the editorial in last Thursday's TIMES, under the caption, "Mr. Barker—Please Answer," wherein an explanation was demanded of his statement that the state could not enforce its contract with Carey act reclamation company.

Mr. Barker neither denies the statement attributed to him, nor does he make any attempt to sustain his assertion. He charges that the "chief desire" of the TIMES "is to get something on a Republican official," and says he does not have to get the "dope from any editor's viewpoint." On the subject in question, he asserts that the settlers on the Salmon river tract will have to agree to pay more money for their water rights—per acre—the company to pay for the eliminations, or the state must declare the contract forfeited, and suggests that the latter of these two alternatives is too doubtful a remedy to attempt.

Mr. Barker's statement was not received until late this afternoon, too late for publication in full in this issue; but it will appear in full in Tuesday's TIMES.

TO CONNECT NORTH AND SOUTH BY STATE ROAD

Movement to Construct Connecting Links in Highway System With Federal and State Aid.

There is already work in northern Idaho counties tributary to the north and south highway, a movement to bring about the construction of this connecting link between north and south Idaho, which is of paramount importance to Boise and to this part of the state. It is expected to result in the necessary funds being secured to build the highway, of the highway between Lewiston and Grangeville to Whitebird at a cost to Idaho county alone for the main road and lateral highways of $200,000, the amount that county expects to bond for. The southern connecting links are to be built through it, it is planned, combined under the name of the "Idaho highway" and to be built in the line of Washington and Adams counties. Once built along the latest engineering lines the north and south highway will be now the case in traveling between northern and southern Idaho and will witness the development of the automobile motor truck as a medium for transportation between these two at present separated parts of the state, never dreamed of before.

The movement to back the north and south highway now under way has already resulted in a number of conferences. It is understood that Idaho county has created the $500,000 bond issue proposed. The next legislature will be asked to make an appropriation so that Idaho can receive the "dollar" appropriation of congress which set aside $50,000,000 for highway construction. In order to secure part of this appropriation Idaho, as well as other states, is required to appropriate an amount equal to the amount the federal government has appropriated. The bill that part of the north and south highway from Whitebird south to New Meadows the state will have to provide the money.

MILNER CITIZEN ARRESTED TUESDAY

Telegram From Washington Charged J. R. Call With Forgery

SOME SPECIFICATIONS SET FORTH IN THE MESSAGE.

Attorney For Call Declares That Extradition Will Be Fought—Conspiracy Is Intimated.

J. R. Call, a farmer living on a dry claim near Milner, was arrested Tuesday evening by Deputy Sheriff Thompson as a result of a telegram from Seattle, Wash., asking that he be taken into custody and held on a charge of forgery alleged to have been committed there. Mr. Call is now in the hands of the sheriff awaiting the arrival of the papers asking extradition. The telegram failed to state whose name he was alleged to have forged and gave no particulars. Mr. Call claims that he has no knowledge of the circumstances and that the charge is untrue. He is interested in litigation over an estate of the value of $35,000 in Washington and expresses the belief that his enemies have put up a job on him.

Mr. Call has employed Attorney C. M. Booth who will fight extradition before Governor Alexander on the arrival of the papers with the Washington officer. Mr. Call, who was a former steamboat pilot, came here about eight months ago and took a claim near Milner. He is declared by people who know him to have conducted himself as an exemplary citizen since coming to the Twin Falls tract and they declare their disbelief in his guilt.

Mr. Call's family lives with him at Milner.

PRaise For Camp OF SECOND IDAHO

Nogales Paper Tells of Improvement Made Since the Arrival of Regiment.

The Second Idaho camp has been greatly improved since the regiment reached Nogales, according to the Nogales Herald, the daily paper published there. What was once a rocky hill, which had been a very bad place to make an invasion far inland, and a short time men enough could be congregated in the great centers in the country, is now a very clean army force that might be landed.

FORMER GERMAN IS AN ANTI-MILITARIST

Fred Newhouse Once Officer of Kaiser Favors Peace

SAYS WAR GROWS OUT OF HATRED OF OUR NEIGHBORS.

Declares Successful Invasion of America by Foreign Force Is An Utter Impossibility.

"I am opposed to militarism, and regret that this country at the present time seems inclined to follow the footsteps of European countries in establishing a big navy," said Fred Newhouse, of New York, a former officer in the German army, who is here looking over another private house in the Twin Falls area, in imitation of the nations of the old world, and I think they are wrong in doing so.

"What I mean is this: In old times the people of Europe were divided against one another and every man unit a wall around his house because he was afraid of his neighbor, who in turn was suspicious of him. You can go over Europe now and see these old walls around private houses there. They are the result of distrust of one another. Now that spirit is manifested among the nations. One nation grows and another and another and another and so in the course of time hatred and so in the course of time led to war. Here the people came to a new country. They needed one another and depended on one another, and so they built no walls against one another and no great armies against their neighbors, although they were suspicious of one another. You have no walls around your houses against one another yet, but do not be deceived. The spirit of the nations which people suspicious of other people abroad, makes them suspicious of one another at home, and the keeping up of walls against the outside world cause the growth of suspicion at home.

"I blame all the nations for the war abroad. Sunlight continued to grow and it was inevitable. To a great extent I blame the press of all countries. The press of one country abuses the people of the other and charged them with crimes and atrocities, finally the people who read the papers, began to believe all that was charged. Suppose that someone was to tell another person that someone had done a bad man and had signs on you and was being carried back and forth and things were misinterpreted. It would not be long until you and he would be fighting.

"If this is the case, if the nations in this country should begin abusing Spain today, and the Spanish papers should answer in the same way, war would possibly develop. The case is the same. Now people say that this country is likely to have war with Japan. That would be possible if the papers on both sides should begin to abuse each other. But why should Japan want to war with this country? She has more land in Asia than she can possibly develop. She has a very large labor force and she cannot get it here and could not get it if she should.

"The better babies contest, which is in charge of Mrs. John E. White, of Twin Falls, will be solely along scientific lines. The contest is open to all babies of ages ranging from twelve to twenty months.

New York Progressives Threaten Court Action

LEADERS CLAIMED TO HAVE DELIVERED PARTY TO REPUBLICANS

Endorsement of Hughes Will Be by Machine Control Alone Declares Bainbridge Colby.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Progressive leaders gathered here for the meeting of the state committee Saturday afternoon threatened to go into the courts if any action is taken to place the name of Charles E. Hughes or those of the Republican presidential electors on the Progressive ballot in New York state.

In spite of the threats of Progressive leaders, the indications are that Hughes will be endorsed.

Bainbridge Colby arrived here this afternoon and immediately issued a statement saying a number of former Hughes appointees were here trying to deliver the Progressive machinery to the Republicans. He said Hughes leaders among the Progressives were attempting to "garrote and coerce" others to follow them.

"It seems to be on the cards to try to force a Hughes endorsement," said Colby's statement, "the plight of that true gentleman and fine Progressive, John Parker, whom we have nominated for vice president, is recognized as sad, but it is dismissed with a shrug. Nothing but even duty—must be allowed to interfere with the attempt of the 'indorsers' to get next to the 'candidate' and to point with pride to what they have done."

"The same fatuous determination to do the worst possible, which has involved the national committee in country wide repudiation and exposed Mr. Hughes to the affront of having his communication to the California Progressives labeled 'without reading,' seems to actuate his friends here. I should call them his supporters and shouters—they can hardly be considered his friends."

REFORMS MADE IN RURAL ROUTES

Postal Service Has Been Extended to 658,000 Additional Families

PARCEL POST BIGGEST STEP TOWARDS UNIVERSAL SERVICE.

Petitions No Longer Necessary to Secure Routes. Inspectors Report on Feasibility of All Requests.

On the 17th of October, 1900, there died in the city of Lexington, a man who made his mark in public life and left the impress of his personality upon the records of his time.

William L. Wilson was the father of rural delivery, whose benefits no one can fully describe, for it is without question the most popular administrative measure of the government. For years there had been a growing discontent among farmers and the people in the smaller towns as the postal advantages afforded the cities and the more populous communities. On June 9, 1896, the sum of $40,000 was made available, and on October 1, 1896, the first experimental rural delivery was put into operation in Jefferson county, West Virginia.

At the close of business June 30, 1916, there were in operation 18,813 post offices throughout the country 43,877 rural routes. Up to and including June 30, 1915, 26,880 post offices were discontinued on account of the establishment of rural delivery, representing a saving to the postal service of $2,625,000 per annum and also a saving of $3,482,000 on account of the discontinuance of star-route service. The period of greatest activity in the rural service was from 1900 to 1905, the appropriations running from $450,000 in 1900 to $211,166,000 in 1905.

Steps Taken to Improve the Service.—This administration has recognized the value of the postal service to the people to a greater extent within this past year than for any similar period during the last decade. Mail facilities have been established and extended on mail routes in more than 100,000 localities, giving service to approximately 2,500,000 patrons heretofore denied this benefit. Six hundred and fifty-eight thousand families were added to the list from April, 1913, to April, 1916. The elimination of useless and wasteful methods have made it possible to do this and also pay out $4,000,000 more to employees at an actual increased cost of less than $1,500,000 per annum.

In the nature of things, the great desire of the people to obtain a benefit which the government could provide and the willingness of the government to give it and give it rapidly, conditions would develop which demanded both attention and consideration. If, therefore, it became evident in operation that by careful inquiry and investigation the greatest good to the greatest number must ever be the motto of wise and successful administration, and that the only way to win public approval when such motto governs their administrative acts.

The Policy of the Department.—It has been the policy and the purpose of this administration to make of the rural delivery, the parcel post, all that its most sanguine projects hoped to accomplish.

The postal department has been directed, the wisest counsels sought, and the greatest personal attention given.

The administration expects to greatly widen and still further improve this public benefit and advantage until all sections and all localities where rural

The time for filing nomination papers will expire August 5, a month before the time of holding the primaries and as there seems to be a lack of candidates for legislative office it is felt by the officers of the club that a public discussion would stimulate interest. The call was signed by Judge J. M. Burdett, president of the organization and A. R. Hicks, its secretary.

POULTRY AND CREAM STATION AT KIMBERLY

Reo Russell Opens Business in Red Warehouse—Will Travel Through Country With Wagons

Confident of the possibilities of Kimberly as a future dairy and poultry center, Reo Russell has opened a Kimberly Produce Company headquarters in the red warehouse just vacated by the Idaho Seed company and will buy cream, poultry and eggs for cash, traveling through the country with a wagon and gathering up the articles named at the homes of the farmers. Mr. Russell says that some of the best farms on the tract, but that Kimberly is so far from market that many have heretofore refrained from keeping them. The distance from market has also discouraged some who contemplate keeping dairy cows. A good many people who have cows have expressed a desire to get the engine of the station and he believes that it will pay.

Later on Mr. Russell expects to move his office into the H. W. Mund office, next door to the warehouse.

History of the Origin and Realization of the Idea of the County Hospital

How the idea of having county hospitals for rural communities and small cities, as well as hospitals in the great centers of civilization originated and how it was first tried out, is told in an article in the Country Gentleman of July 1, written by Mary Hamilton Talbott. The plan, according to the article, is an "Iowa Idea," and when worked out by Dr. E. E. Munger, who first took up the movement in its behalf, it was found that under the laws of Iowa there was no provision permitting the construction of such edifices and it was necessary to secure the passage of a statute by the legislature before a hospital could be constructed or maintained. The substance of the article is told in the following paragraphs:

If hospitals are good for city people, why not for country people? Many of the reasons which have led to the establishment of hospitals in larger cities apply with equal force to small towns and the open country. There are a large number of homes in the country which are unsuitable for the care of the sick. The farmer's wife usually has her hands so full with her daily duties that illness in the home means a strain to which she is unequal. In every community there are accidents from machinery, and injuries from building operations, which need the best surgical care. Appendicitis is not at all unusual in the country, and every rural community can count up a number of cases which have resulted fatally, when a timely operation would have saved a life. Pneumonia has a long list of victims in every country; and statistics show us that typhoid fever, which needs expert nursing, is more prevalent in country towns and rural districts than in large cities. And also for motherhood in isolated communities. Every year nearly fifteen thousand mothers in the United States die in childbirth, and the lack of adequate care in the country districts is responsible for a large proportion of this mortality. The number of children who die in the rural districts from preventable causes is astounding.

"But what are country people going to do?" you ask. Build their own hospitals, follow the new world experiment—the new "Iowa Idea" in hospital establishment. Seven years ago there was started a fight for hospitals for the people of rural communities, the county hospital system, which is now giving the country people of Iowa the advantages of hospitals, and other states are following her example with the passage of new hospital laws.

Dr. E. E. Munger, a country doctor, whose practice brought him into contact with the great handicap under which his people labored when brought face to face with the need of hospital treatment—long and hard journeys separated most of them from the nearest hospital—conceived the idea that there should be a public hospital in every county in the state, supported by a county tax, except in those counties in which a city hospital was located. He found that, though authorities have determined that in a civilized community there should be one hospital bed within the reach of every 100 people, in his county there was only one bed to every 3000, and that eighty per cent of the population of Iowa live in rural districts and small villages. Since Iowa had no hospital law which authorized counties to build and maintain hospitals, Doctor Munger drafted legislation.

He drafted a bill, which was passed by the Iowa general assembly in 1909, providing that by vote of the people the county can levy a tax for the building, equipment and maintenance of a public hospital, to be governed by a body of seven trustees, three of whom are to be women, and guaranteeing to all physicians of the county equal rights.

At the next general election the question of the establishment of a public county hospital came up in seven counties, but in only one, Washington county, did the proposition carry. A one-mill tax for a period of four years was levied for building and equipping a general hospital. This amounted to $10,000. The Munger bill also provided that five per cent of the general tax could be set aside for maintenance; in Washington county this amounted to $1800.

Through the generosity of Mr. and Mrs. William Perry Wells, who gave seven acres for a hospital site, and of various organizations, churches and private individuals in furnishing the rooms, the entire appropriation for the hospital was spent on the building itself. This is forty by eighty feet, three stories and basement, absolutely fireproof. It contains nineteen private and two three-bed rooms for patients, all of which are fitted with every comfort, and the entire building is well equipped for service. This is the first taxpayers' county hospital in the world, and has more than justified its existence. It has been sought by hundreds of people and is at present almost completely booked.

The people are interested in this hospital, the women in various neighborhoods having organized the "Woman's Auxiliary" which aids the hospital board and superintendent in providing furnishings and supplies. It is necessary not only to have a hospital for which the sick may go, it is also necessary to have a place where is abreast of the times, where is informed in modern medical methods and practices. If there is no hospital where is the stimulus for a country doctor to study and work along scientific lines? The best workman will only tinker if his workshop is not fitted with good tools, but when he has the tools and the shop, and the stimulus of association with others of his trade, then he can do the best work. The same principle holds true with a doctor—his experiences, and opportunities broaden if he has a well-equipped workshop near by.

Led by the progressive people of Washington county, the people of Jefferson county built the second county hospital, established by a vote of the taxpayers, and gradually other counties are seeing the advantages of the Iowa county hospital law. The Munger idea is taking root. In other states, Indiana, Kansas, Texas and North Carolina have had county hospital laws; passed, and New York has a township hospital law which is very similar. South Dakota and one or two other states are drafting bills which probably will soon receive favorable action.

Akin to the community hospital movement is that of the community nurse. There are thousands of homes in rural districts where sick people can go into the home and inspect the home nurse in the proper attention and diet required, though she may not engage in actual bedside nursing. Although the Iowa aid county nursing service of the American Red Cross is gradually growing up to the present, nurses have been appointed in eight counties—many communities are now supporting their own visiting nurses.

Machinery is on hand for the establishment of a seed cleaning mill in the Denney & company warehouse near the depot, under the management of John W. Hardin, and the mill will be ready for operation when the clover seed crop begins to come in a couple of weeks hence. The new business will be operated as a branch of the Twin Falls Milling & Elevator company for the purchase of all kinds of grain.

The grain crop in the Kimberly neighborhood is in fine condition. The first grain of the season was a load of barley brought in last week from near Hansen by B. H. Bringle, who sold it to the Farmers Grain & Milling company. The mills in Kimberly are all getting ready for business. The Electric mills will open in about three weeks. The alfalfa mill for the grinding of feed will begin operations about the same time.

THEY WE PRESUME THE GOVERNOR KNOWS.

The governor has announced that when it comes to being familiar with all of the intricacies of the Salmon river problem he "takes his hat off to nobody in the state of Idaho."

Such being the case here are a few things about the Salmon tract he no doubt knows:

That the average annual run-off of the Salmon river has fallen considerably less than one-quarter of what the promoters estimated it would be; that it is not unreasonable to suppose that the acreage on that project for which there is sufficient water is properly somewhat less than one-quarter of what the promoters originally expected it to be; that the proper acreage would thus fall somewhere in the neighborhood of twenty-five thousand acres;

That the run-off of the Salmon river has averaged in the years for which government—not company—measurements are available, less than 110,000 acre feet annually;

That this amount of water is not sufficient to make available at the headgates of the entrymen on the 73,000 acres included in the segregation, nine acre inches of water per season, year in and year out;

That for half that acreage there is hardly enough water to make a decent grain crop; that the production of grain requires only about half as much water as grasses; that the success of every large irrigation enterprise in the world has depended upon the production of grasses as well as grains;

That 2-3-4 acre feet of water—much less than is delivered annually to the lands on the Twin Falls project—is generally accepted as being the minimum amount with which diversified farming can succeed; that there is that amount of water for hardly more than 25,000 acres;

That there is 2-4 acre feet of water—the amount Governor Alex.ander suggested the settlers accept as a compromise—for less than 30,000 acres;

That water rights for some 73,000 acres of land have been sold; that over 45,000 acres of this has actually been under cultivation at one time or another, and has been more or less improved; that about half of the remainder has undergone some, if but slight, improvement;

That one man's contract for water is apparently as good as another's; that there appears no legal means of confiscating one entryman's water for another; that there appears no legal means of condemning one man's rights on this project for the benefit of another; that the only means of reducing the acreage appears to be by barter, sale and trade, encouraged by such rulings and other methods as are practical;

That the moneys that might become due the company under its contracts with entrymen would hardly warrant an attempt by the company to obtain by purchase the rights of entrymen on the some 45,000 acres which would have to be taken up and cancelled to successfully reclaim the remaining lands.

That it has cost the entrymen who are farming on that project from thirty to forty dollars, and often more, per acre, to bring their lands under cultivation and to improve their holdings; that practically none of them have made even a low rate of interest upon their money; that practically none of them have had decent compensation for their labor; that nearly half of them have had to depend upon resources other than their Salmon farms for their living; that many have lost hundreds and even thousands of dollars in crop failures on that project; that their original investments are not even acceptable security for very small loans; that the farmers on the Salmon tract have, in many instances, squandered not only their all, but from three to five of their best years;

That what the promotion company lost it deserved to lose; that the promoters are fortunate—they are not in jail—for speculating with the lives, fortunes and happiness of hundreds of people, on the possibility of tremendous gains; that the state officials who countenanced such reckless promotion, fraud with such dire possibilities, are fortunate that no criminal code has been discovered that would meet out justice to them;

That the most the bondholders stand to lose in this situation is their principal and interest—no small amount to be sure, but not to be compared with the actual losses already sustained by the settlers;

That the governor of Idaho suggested recently, and the state land board approved the suggestion, that the settlers, in addition to the losses they have already suffered, agree to lose further in order that a fund might be raised to buy out a portion of the tract, SO THAT THE INVESTORS IN THE BONDS MIGHT REALIZE ON THEIR INVESTMENTS; that it was further suggested that the settlers, in addition to the losses already sustained, and the further losses proposed in order to buy up a portion of the tract, should consent further to lose a portion of their water IN ORDER THAT MORE WATER MIGHT BE MADE AVAILABLE TO IRRIGATE MORE LAND TO MAKE MORE MONEY FOR THE INVESTORS WHO BOUGHT BONDS;

That this has been the sole proposition submitted by a governor who proclaims that he knows all about the situation.

WHAT IS TO BE DONE ABOUT IT?

The entrymen have asked the State Land Board to bring action to annul the state's contract with the company; have given what will appear to most people as good and sufficient reasons why the state should adopt such a course; and ask it in order that conflicting interests on that project may be eliminated, and the state and settlers left free to co-operate to reduce the acreage, and successfully reclaim the lands retained.

The Salmon tract might thus become a source of pride to Twin Falls county instead of the sorry spectacle it now is.

WILL OUR STATE OFFICIALS ACT?

The action of the city council in authorizing the library board to close the deal for the Bonito lots for a library site meets with the approval of nearly everybody and terminates successfully a long campaign for a Carnegie library in this city. The only thing now required is to satisfy the managers of the Carnegie fund by means of an abstract that the title for the property purchased is flawless, and furnish satisfactory architect's plans, based upon the suggestions of the managers of the fund.

It is hoped to erect a $20,000 building; the city will be required to furnish $2000 annually, or ten per cent of the whole amount, for the maintenance of the institution. This will be used to defray expenses, annually estimated in a budget; the balance after current expenses are paid will be used to pay for base books.

While nothing definite is known in regard to the length of time it will take to get the money, W. E. Nixon, treasurer of the board, said yesterday that he hoped to be able to secure the funds within 30 days after the filing of the deed.

Two Days Starting MONDAY

JULY 31

Library was furnished to THE TIMES by Mrs. W. F. Pike, president of the board:

As Boston, that city of culture, is linked with the luscious baked bean, so, most fittingly, the Twin Falls public library. Early in 1908, Mrs. W. H. Barnes, a former resident of this city, and a Wellesley college graduate, began baking a few extra pots of beans each week which she took to Smith Brothers bakery where the young proprietors kindly sold them for her. When $10 was accumulated, Mrs. Barnes called together a few interested ones in Kennedy Packard's office where ways and means of starting a library were discussed. From this first meeting grew another and a Twin Falls library association was formed with W. Zeuss Smith as president. Other members were Mesdames Barnes, Packard, Hall, Morse, Humphrey, Pike, B. J. Ostrander, Robbins, Spangler, Messrs. Crater, Morse, Packard, Peiche, Bishop, W. H. Weaver, Ostrander, Jas. McMillan, Robbins, G. P. Sprague, Eldridge, Spangler, Dr. Pike, Dr. C. D. Weaver, Dr. Higgins, Rev. Gouley, Rev. H. W. Parker and the Misses Mary Gouley and Edith Young.

Rooms were rented upstairs in the Harder building on Main street and the ladies of the association and their friends took turns acting as librarians for the first year. A motley collection of books, some from the Y. M. C. A. library, some donated and a few new filled the few shelves. For the next four years or until 1912, this association by private donations, by the giving of entertainments and by soliciting from the townspeople and clubs and fraternal orders, kept up the expenses. The Twentieth Century club gave about $100 from a rummage sale. The fraternal orders paid for the magazine subscriptions for two years.

In 1910, the library moved into larger quarters in the Light and Power building. Two librarians handled the work from 1909 to 1911, but neither were trained. In 1911 Miss Dickson, a graduate of a fine library school, was secured and by hard work and untiring efforts did much to place the library on its feet. In the spring of 1912, the city found the work of enough importance to make a small appropriation and at the same time the county commissioners, having an unused room in the basement of the new court house offered it to the library at no cost. While the library remained in the court house, all books were free to county as well as city patrons, inasmuch as the county was helping support it. But when in August, 1914, the county needed the room and the library was forced to move into its present quarters, the city was obliged to increase its appropriation and bear all the expenses—therefore people living outside of the city limits from then on and still are obliged to pay for a card. If at any time the county can bear its share of expense the books will again be free to the whole county.

Miss Dickson resigned in August, 1915, and Miss Jessie Fraser, a trained librarian, took her place.

Two memorial collections of excellent books have been given since 1912. Through Mrs. J. L. Daube, a former resident, the Delwin Peiser collection of 900 books was placed on the shelves and a little later the Geo. Pooler collection was put in the library by the friends of Mr. Pooler, in his memory. Among the rare works now on the shelves is a set of the official reports of the commanders during the civil war, secured for the library from Congressman A. T. Smith, through C. L. Longley. A fine collection of historical relics owned by Dr. Wilson and valued at $500, is at the disposal of the library as soon as the Carnegie building gives it space.

July 17, 1913, the library board made application for a Carnegie library and on August 11, 1913, the $20,000 asked was promised as a deed to a proper site and the $2,000 annual appropriation for upkeep could be obtained from the city.

The present library board consists of Mesdames W. F. Pike and Susan Morse, W. E. Nixon, Stuart H. Taylor and Hal G. Blue. The two ladies were members of the original library association.

W. Zeuss Smith and Prof. Elliot, former Twin Falls residents, were board members who also worked hard to get the Carnegie library while they lived here.

GROWING FAMOUS WHILE YOU WAIT.

The road to notoriety for unknown foreign politicians is an easy one to travel nowadays. All they have to do to advance from the depths of obscurity to the pinnacle of fame is to say something, it does not matter much what, just so it contains an implication that American prestige has suffered much abroad. The Boise Statesman and others like it will do the rest.

A month ago some Frenchman of whom nobody had ever heard before, stated that America had lost standing because of her neutrality. At once he becomes a noted diplomat. The implication is scattered abroad that the previously unknown represents foreign opinion and oceans of ink is spilled over the alleged deplorable condition of our reputation. Again last week another foreigner made an easy reputation in the same way.

Yet these same papers that are so eagerly searching press reports for this sort of "copy," would class as "ignorant foreigners" any of our citizens who would quote Hearst and such men as representative of American thought.

THE RIGHT WAY TO THINK.

Under the heading "Should be Put on Blacklist," the American Economist denounces the Saturday Evening Post and other independent journals for failing to adopt the ultra protectionist point of view, and calls attention to the need of a little pressure from manufacturers who advertise in such publications.

"Fine, isn't it?" College professors and text book writers, too, should have their thought piloted in right channels by gentle persuasion, the Economist thinks.

Incidentally the Economist is for Hughes. Says he is "right" on the tariff question.

At the present rate of withdrawal the run-off of the Salmon river for the current year will be exhausted by today or tomorrow, and it is doubtful whether from this time on the height in the reservoir will be maintained by the flow of the river.

Took Some 'Slits'—That the Shoshone grade is an excellent toboggan is the opinion expressed by D. M. Deaton, M. L. House and P. L. Koller, who returned yesterday from a fishing trip, making part of the distance ahead of schedule and in violation of the speed limit. Just after they started down the grade, something went wrong in the "innards" of the car and part of its restraining machinery ceased to function. The car started down the hill, and House, thinking it overloaded, made a leap for life and liberty. Pilot Deaton, however, was not deterred, and, after a reverse, tried dropping her to a slow gait which worked. He then switched the machine on the rocks where he bumped the bumper, and quite a distance, until it was slowed down enough to run it into a sand bar. Keller stayed with Deaton throughout the perilous trip.

Master John Milner entertained ten little friends on Monday, July 24, the occasion being his fourth birthday. The guests amused themselves by fishing in an improvised fish pond, each one receiving a favor for his efforts. After this was finished they went out in the lawn where ice-cream and cake was served by his sisters, Miss Mary and Miss Truth. John cutting the birthday cake himself, and presenting each boy with a small box of stick candy.

A most delightful all-day picnic had last Sunday when a party of four—Mrs. Milner, her mother, and two girls, went to the Clear Lake. Before their return by moonlight in the evening, the picnicers had a wienie roast.

After the party were Gertrude Smith, Helen Strobeck, Raba, Sanger, Mary Pringle, Ruth Beam, Corinne Taylor and Man.

Mrs. Ernest White was hostess at a handkerchief and stocking shower last Tuesday in honor of Miss Thelma Senior, a bride of the coming month.

The afternoon was spent in playing cards and dancing, after which a dainty luncheon was served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Sizer and Miss Souther.

Several vocal selections were given by Salomon in the course of the evening and were much enjoyed by the guests.

Those present were: Misses Thelma Senior, Margaret, Gladys, Dwight, Veva Ames, Margaret, and Mildred Conway and the Messrs. Girdner, Couder, Larson, Salomon, Johnson and Hart.

The members of the Blue Lakes Boulevard club with their families and friends enjoyed a picnic and ice cream social Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Dougherty.

There were about eighty-five persons present and the evening was spent in singing and readings. One number worthy of special mention was a reading and song by Miss Puckett. Mesdames Dougherty, Bush and Darrow were the hostesses for the evening.

connected on Catalina Island, off the California coast, there is a shipwreck in which both Mr. Farnum and Miss Furry figure. The excitement as produced on these viewing the picture is no less than that of the actors, who were in real personal danger during the making of this part. The heroine's other lover becomes a slaver of the coast, and the plot includes some thrilling adventures of the male star with the sea-coast outlaws on the rocky cliffs of Catalina.

The scenes of the little fishing village are most accurately portrayed. The village was built for the purpose by Director Oscar C. Apfel, and the fishermen and fishermen are shown true to type. The picture plays like a happy ending, the wronged fisherman finally winning his first love and the villain being properly exiled from their lives.

The "Battle of Hearts" is to be shown at the Idaho Theatre Friday and Saturday.

WILLIE COLLIER, JR.
STARS AS BOY BUGLER

A new star of the Triangle program is Willie Collier, Jr., son of the famous Broadway fun maker, Win. Collier, who has been appearing in Triangle plays for some months. The younger Collier, a boy of 14, has the leading role in "The Bugle Call," a drama of frontier life by C. Gardner Sullivan, to be seen at the Orpheum Theatre next Monday.

The boy actor has the part of Little Billy, ten-year-old son of Captain William Andrews, commandant at the military frontier post of Fort McPherson, and is dearly beloved by every one in the place. He has one ambition in life, which he has confided to his very good friend, Sergeant Hogan, and that is to become a good soldier. He already has taken one step in that direction by learning to play the army bugle. To prove that he can play it, he one night rouses the garrison by blowing the alarm.

It is only because he is a good soldier that he can receive with equanimity the news that his father is going to marry again, for he cannot bear the idea of any one taking his dad's place. But when the wedding takes place he hides away in the stable with his pony and his dog, and keeps his misery until Hogan tells him that a good soldier never cries.

Soon after the wedding his father is called to quell an uprising of the Sioux Indians forty miles away, and his new mother is left in his care. She tries in every way to win his affection, for his attitude hurts her, and she does make him care more than a little. Then Fort McPherson itself is attacked by the Indians. The garrison, with most of the men away, is far outnumbered, and they are about to surrender, while Billy, bearing in mind his father's admonition to take care of his stepmother, takes her through a secret passage underground and hides her in a cave in a distant hillside. Suddenly he observes the wavering of the fighting men at the pallade. Believing himself of his bugle note to lead the Indians to believe that his father and the regiment are returning, he blows the charge from a knoll outside the fort.

The outcome of the bugle call is the big thrill of the film.

INCE BUILT ARMY POST FOR "THE BUGLE CALL"

In order to provide the proper atmosphere for "The Bugle Call," the Triangle Inc. feature in which Willie Collier, Jr., stars, Thomas H. Ince had constructed at Inceville an army post consisting of twenty buildings. The structure was a practical duplicate of one of the old military posts of Montana, which was the vortex of many of the Indian wars of frontier days.

Much swift and sensational action takes place about this place. It is attacked by Indians and a desperate battle rages, in which the crafty strategy of the Redskins is said to be faithfully illustrated. They also make a number of sensational falls.

"DAVID GARRICK"
AT IDAHO THEATRE

When this story opens David Garrick had just begun the reformation of the stage that was to win him undying fame. A great man and an intimate of the aristocracy he was slowly winning back the standing of the profession from its ill-repute.

Much sought after by maidens with illustrious names Garrick had just experienced the emotions of the passion he so well portrayed.

One night while playing "Romeo" at Drury Lane theatre he saw in a box a beautiful girl with whom he instantly fell madly in love. The attraction was mutual. Garrick picked up and returned to her the handkerchief she dropped as she was leaving in her sedan chair. But try as he would he was unable to learn her identity and after weeks of search through all London finally despaired of finding her.

One day Simon Ingot, a wealthy London tradesman, who insisted that his business was of great importance, called upon Garrick. He inquired of Garrick his yearly earnings and in great persuasion after a cold answer asked Garrick to leave England, telling him that his daughter, who was to wed Squire Chivy, had fallen in love with him. Garrick, who had already refused, asked to be rather stay in England and offered instead to cure the girl of her romantic folly. Garrick gave his word and said that he would marry no man's daughter unless the man asked for the honor with his hat in his hand and thus re-assured the bankrupt was pleased.

Garrick upon arriving at the dinner was presented to Ingot's daughter and was deeply shocked to find her to be the girl of the handkerchief he had seen. Although cut to the heart at the misery he was causing her, he fulfilled his promise by pretending to find her heavily and scandalously engaged.

Lord Barry Garrick's intimate friend and one who took all things into consideration, having long conversation with Garrick, now justly bantered Garrick on the outcome of the affair.

But thinking the joke too good to keep carried to the Nag's Head tavern and the story soon circulated. Chivy's brain befuddled with drink, hastened to carry the good joke

A William Farnum Feature "BATTLE OF HEARTS"

Showing this popular actor in his most powerful role

William Fox's latest release, "Battle of Hearts," the great story of those who go down to the sea in ships, carries with it a mighty object lesson of what perseverance, personal bravery and initiative will do. The film story's groundwork is found in those three attributes.

The photodrama deals with the folk of a fishing village, with rivalry in love, courage of a high order and the triumph of real love. Its setting demanded isolation, and Catalina Island, far off the Pacific Coast, was chosen for a portion of the scenes. Immediately arose the problem of how to build, in the very heart of a desolate waste, a fishing village, true to type.

Enormous supplies were needed, and a huge lighter was towed and sea roving tugs were chartered. The lighter was loaded with all manner of supplies, from large galleons to tacks, to say nothing of half a dozen beds of geraniums lugged along to add a touch of color. But more was to be done. From San Diego to Seattle the coast was combed for fishing vessels. A dozen were located and ordered to rendezvous in a landlocked harbor of the island.

Then began activities by torchlight. Stage carpenters, painters, artists, swarmed onto the location and as though Aladdin with his magic lamp housed the job the village rose to completion. Store windows were dressed, cottage windows took on the tints of age and even the geraniums seemed to take root in feathery soil. The village was ready and awaited the coming of William Farnum, the story, Miss Edna Furry, the leading woman; Oscar C. Apfel, director of the production; and a host of others who were to paint the picture.

Camera men set up their instruments, the village street broke into lines and gaily children played, housewives discussed the prospects of the season's catch and the making of the picture was begun.

ing in the Santa Monica mountains are declared to be the most thrilling ever filmed for a Hart production.

Supporting Hart in this production are Roy Laidlaw, Charles K. French, William Bray and George Stone.

Dal Clawson, one of the staff cameramen of the Triangle-Ince force, established himself as one of the most intrepid photographic experts in the film fold this week when he went aloft in an aeroplane to obtain some scenes.

Clawson's feat was performed at North Island, where he went with his director, Charles Qiblyn, to film part of "Somewhere in France," in which Louise Glaum soon will be presented as star on the Triangle program. The cameraman showed no trace of nervousness, his associates claim, but readily climbed into one of the government bi-planes and photographed the earth below him as the army birdman sent the machine soaring to dizzy heights.

linings of coal-tar, asphalt, sulphurous acid, oil of vitriol, and the other familiar things the men liked to breathe and to have upon their skins and garments and upon their wives and babies and sweethearts. The growth of the city was visible in the smoke and the noise and the rush. There was more smoke than there had been this day of February a year earlier; there was more noise; and the crowds were thicker, yet quieter in spite of that. The traffic policemen had a hard time; for the people were independent; they retained some habits of the old market-town period, and would cross the street anywhere and anyhow, which not only got them killed more frequently than if they clung to the legal crossings, but kept the motormen, the chauffeurs and the truck drivers in a state of profane nervousness. So the traffic policemen had hurried lives; they themselves were killed or injured, with a certain periodicity, but their main trouble was that they could not make the city safer, that it was so continually and mortally perilous to go about their city. It was strange, for there were probably no citizens of any length of residence who had not personally known either someone who had been killed or injured in an accident, or someone who had accidentally killed or injured others. And yet, perhaps it was not strange, seeing the sharp preoccupation of the faces—the people had something on their minds that could not get to bother about dirt and danger.

Mary Vertrees was not often downtown; she had never seen an accident until this afternoon. She had come upon errands for her mother connected with a thorough refurbishment; and as she did these, in and out of the department stores, she had an instant consciousness of the Sheridan building. From the street, anywhere, it was always in sight, like some monstrous geometrical shadow, lurid-colored and rising limitlessly into the swimming heights of the smoke-mist. It was quaint and grimy and repellent; it had nothing but strength and sleekness in that consciousness of Mary's great structure may have partaken of beauty. Sheridan had made some of the things he sold emphatic enough to remain with her. She went over and over them, and they began to seem true. "Only one girl be could feel that sorry for!" Gurney says, he's got you on his brain so bad—"The man's clumsy talk began to sting in her heart. The song was begun there when she saw the accident. She was directly opposite the Sheridan building then, waiting for the traffic to thin before she crossed, though other people were risking the passage, darning and hitting and dodging paralytically. Two men came from the crowd behind her, talking earnestly, and started across. Both wore black; one was tall and broad and thick, and the other was taller, but noticeably slender. And Mary caught her breath, for they were Bibbs and his father. They did not see her, and she caught a phrase of Bibbs' mellow voice, which had taken a crispier ring: "Sixty-eight thousand dollars? Not sixty-eight thousand dollars? It started her queer, and as there was a glimpse of his profile she saw for the first time a resemblance to his father.

She watched them. In the middle of the street Bibbs had to step ahead of his father, and they were separated. But the reckless passing of a truck, beyond the second line of rails, frightened them. They were both black, one was tall and broad and thick, and the other was taller, but noticeably slender. And Mary caught her breath, for they were Bibbs and his father. They did not see her, and she caught a phrase of Bibbs' mellow voice, which had taken a crispier ring: "Sixty-eight thousand dollars? Not sixty-eight thousand dollars? It started her queer, and as there was a glimpse of his profile she saw for the first time a resemblance to his father.

He Hurled Himself at Bibbs.

ened a group of country women who were in course of passage; they were in front of Bibbs, and he moved backward upon him violently. To extricate himself from them he stepped back, directly in front of a moving trolley car—no place for absent-mindedness, but Bibbs was still absorbed in thought, concerned with what he had been saying to his father. There were shrieks and yells; Bibbs looked the wrong way—and then Mary saw the heavy figure of Sheridan plunge straight forward in front of the car. With absolute disregard of his own life, he hurled himself at Bibbs like a football player shunting off an opponent, and to Mary it seemed that they both went down together. But that was all she could see—automobiles, trucks and wagons closed in between. She made out that the trolley car stopped jerkily, and she saw a policeman breaking his way through the instantly condensing crowd, while the traffic came to a standstill, and people stood up as if on tiptoe, and clapped upon the bells and tried of wheels not to miss a chance of seeing anything horrible.

Mary tried to get through; it was impossible. Other policemen came to help the first, and in a minute or two the crowd was more than enough. The crowd became flint, dispersing—there was no figure upon the ground, and no ambulance came. But one of the policemen was detained by the clanging and clashing of a played hand.

"What is the matter?" Mary cried. "Where are they?" Mary cried. "What? Old Man Sheridan? I reckon he wasn't much hurt!" "Dad son?" "Was that what the other one was? I seen him knock him—oh, he's not had of I guess, lady. The old man got up, and he was all right, and he fender showed the old man around some, but I reckon he only got shook up. They both went on in the Sheridan building without any help. Excuse me, lady."

Sheridan and Bibbs, in fact, were at that moment in the elevator, ascending. "Whisk-broom-up in the office," Sheridan was saying. "You got to look out on these corners nowadays, I tell you. I don't know I got any call to show, because I want to go after you old. That's how I happened to run into you. Well, you remember to look out after this. We were talking about Mr. Bibbs' sixty-eight thousand dollars for that sixty-nine-year-old. His little knock in fact rather told it that way, and I don't know but—"

"No," said Bibbs, emphatically, as the elevator stopped; "he won't get it. Not from us, he won't, and I'll show you why." He followed his father into the office anteroom—and convinced him. Then, having been diligently brushed by a youth of color, Bibbs went into his own room and closed the door.

He was more shaken than he had allowed his father to perceive, and his side was sore where Sheridan had struck him. He desired to be alone; he wanted to rub himself and, for once, to think of his own thinking. He knew that his father had not "happened" to run into him; he knew that Sheridan had instantly and instinctively—proved that he held his own life of no account whatever compared to that of his son, and left Bibbs had been unable to speak of that, or seem to know it; for Sheridan, just as instinctively, had swept the matter aside—as of no importance, since all was well—reverting immediately to business.

Bibbs began to think intently of his father. He perceived, as he had never perceived before, the shadowing of something enormous and indomitable and unchangeable, not to be broken by the will of nature's very self; laughing at the lightning and at winds and mutilation; conquering, irresistible, and blindingly bold. For the first time in his life Bibbs began to understand the meaning of being truly this man's son.

He would be the more truly his son, however, though as Sheridan said, Bibbs had not come downtown with "his money" or "his money." He had given his money to his father, and he wanted the money, simply, for Mary Vertrees in her need. And he shivered with horror of himself, thinking how he had gone to her to offer it, asking her to marry him—with his head on his breast, and his hands in his pockets, and his mouth open, and he would accept him! He had not known her; the knowing had lost her to him, and this had been his real awakening; for he knew now how deep had been that shudder when he so dreamily admitted the superiority of "friendship." The sleep-walker had awakened to bitter knowledge of love and life, finding himself a failure in both. He had made a burnt offering of his dreams, and the sacrifice had been unforgotten. He had hurt Mary. All that was left. It was the work he had chosen, but at least he would not fail in that, though it was indeed no more than "dough" in his mouth. If there had been anything to work for.

the voice of the god, Bibbs. And the voice summoned Bibbs as it summoned all its servants. "Come and work!" it seemed to call. "Come and work for me, all men! By your own age and your desire I summon you to work for me yet a little, with what strength you have. By your love of home I summon you! By your love of woman I summon you! By your type of children I summon you!"

"You shall be blind leaders of the blind to everything but Me, your Master and Driver! For your reward you shall gaze only upon my ugliness. You shall give your love to your lives, you shall give your love and worship of my ugliness! You shall perish still worshipping Me, and your children shall perish 'moving no other god!'"

And then, as Bibbs closed the window shut, he heard his father's voice booming in the next room; he could not distinguish the words, but the tone was exultant—and there came the thump! thump! of the muffled hand. Bibbs guessed that Sheridan was bringing his father and the blindness to some visitor from out of town.

And he thought how truly Sheridan was the high priest of Bibbs. But with the old, old thought again, "What father! Bibbs caught a glimpse of faint light. He saw that Sheridan had said that he struggled and conquered, and must all his life go on struggling and inevitably conquering, as part of a duty imposed on his own. Sheridan acted blindly—but was the impulse blind? Bibbs asked himself if it was not to be who had been in the greater hurry, after all. The tide must be before the vase is placed, and the Acropolis was not crowded with marble in a day.

Then the voice came to him again, but there was a strain in it as of some huge mass struggling to be born of the turmoil. "Ugly I am," it seemed to say to him, "but never forget that I am a god!" And the voice grew in consciousness and in dignity. "The highest should serve, but so long as you worship me for my own sake I will not serve you. It is man who makes me ugly by his worship of me. If man would let me serve him, I should be beautiful!"

Looking once more from the window, Bibbs captured for himself—in vague contours of the smoke and fog about the roof—a gigantic figure with feet pedaled upon the great buildings and shoulders disappearing in the clouds, a colossus of steel and wholly blackened with soot. But Bibbs carried his fancy further—for there was still a little poet lingering in the back of his head—and he thought that up over the clouds, unseen from below, the glimmers of his hands in the clean sunshine; and Bibbs had a glimpse of what he made there—perhaps for a fellowship of the children of the children that were children now—a noble and joyous city, unbelievably white.

It was the telephone that called him from his vision. It rang fiercely. He lifted the thing from his desk and answered—and as the small voice inside it spoke he dropped the receiver with a crash. He tried to violently as he picked it up, but he told himself he was wrong—he had been mistaken—yet it was a startlingly beautiful voice; startlingly kind, too, and infinitely like the one he hungered most to hear. "Who?" he said, his own voice shaking like his hand. "Mary." He responded with two hushed and incredulous words: "Is it?" "There was a little thrill of pathetic laughter in the instrument." "Bibbs—I wanted to—just to see if you—" "Yes—Mary?" "I was looking when you were so nearly run over. I saw it, Bibbs. They said you hadn't been hurt, but I thought, but I wanted to know for myself." "No, no, I wasn't hurt at all—Mary. It was father who came nearer it. He saved me." "Yes, I saw; but you had fallen. I couldn't get through the crowd until you had gone. And I wanted to know." "Mary—would you—have minded?"

he said. There was a long interval before she answered. "Then why?" "Yes, Bibbs?" "I don't know what to say," he cried. "It's so wonderful to hear your voice again—I'm shaking, Mary—I don't know what to say anything except that I am talking to you! It is you—Mary?" "Yes, Bibbs!" "Mary—I've seen you from my window at home—only five times since I—since then. You looked—oh, how can I tell you? It was like a man chafed in a cave catching a glimpse of the blue sky. Mary, won't you—let me see you again—near? I think I could see you really forgive me—you'd have to."

"I did—then." "No—not really—or you wouldn't have said you couldn't see me any more." "That wasn't the reason." The voice was very low. "Mary," he said, even more tremulously than before. "I can't—you couldn't mean it was because—you can't mean it was because you—care?" There was no answer.

"Mary?" he called, huskily. "If you mean that—you'd let me see you—wouldn't you?" And now the voice was so low he could not be sure it spoke at all, but if it did, the words were, "Yes, Bibbs!" But the voice was not in the last instant; it was so gentle and so slight, so almost nothing, it seemed to be made of air—and it came from the slowly and incredulously he turned—and glory fell upon his shining eyes. The door of his father's room had opened. Mary stood upon the threshold. THE END.

IN MAXWELL TOURING CAR
Automobile field days of the future, where other events besides stunts and tests are in order, will probably come on their programs the following: "Running broad jump for motor cars. Pursue, $1000, etc." Twenty thousand persons at San Diego's big exposition were thrilled to the spine recently when Jack Little, moving picture "stunt" pilot, took a Maxwell touring car and leaped the gap twenty feet to provide a spectacle most of these present had never enjoyed. The record leap of the day was forty feet, and when both the daring driver and car reached the ground and rolled on their way without a halt, Little received a cheer that echoed clear to the Mexican boundary.

The "leap the gap" stunt was inaugurated by Charles Irwin, manager for the Ford Motor Car company, which handles the Maxwell line in San Diego. The exposition officials had approached Irwin to get his ideas on a real motor car thriller for a big holiday here. "Why not get Jack Little down here from Santa Barbara and let him duplicate that leaping pig leap across a chasm?" asked Irwin, but at first he was "turned down" by the conservative San Diegans. It was too daring, they thought, they might stand the strain once or twice, but to repeat it, three times in one day—not a chance.

Irwin was persistent, and in the end he won his point, and Little and his car were advertised far and wide in a new "death chamber."

Both sides of the chasm—good every announced thrill. A runway was constructed, a "gap" dug out—and not an accident or a hitch in the program was recorded. The Maxwell went up the runway at high speed, leaving the approach at a fifty mile an hour gait, and alighting on the other side on an even keel. With each attempt the distance of the leap was increased, until finally the last trial showed the car alighting a full forty feet beyond the point where its wheels had left the runway on the other side of the gap.

NOGS GO UP A SHADE ON MARKET

Best Porkers Are a Dime Higher While Others Are Steady—Sheep Steady and Cattle Lower.

About 600 head of hogs were here to open the trading Friday, says the Portland Live Stock Reporter of Monday. Everything sold early as there was a keen demand. One choice lot sold at $10, 10 cents over the previous day's price. Market closed strong Saturday with only a few loads from the valley here. The heavy runs seem to have abated, at least for a while. Last week only 420 head were received, which was one of the lightest of the year. The lightest of the week's receipts of the year, today 2500 head were received. The market opened briskly and all offerings went on a 5 to 10-cent higher basis. Quality of today's hogs as a rule is good. Tops sold at $9.10, which was also the bulk price. Several loads of prime heavy hogs were here and sold early for the top, $9.10. Pig trade was nominal. Bulk of pigs went at $7.60, with some sales reaching as high as $7.75 and $8.00.

About 100 head of cattle were here Friday from valley points. All was of medium and fair quality and bulk was taken by feeders. There was nothing in Saturday outside of a few "dairy maids." Last week's total receipts were one of the heaviest ever received here. Over 2600 head were received against 1700 the week previous. Today's market opened with about 800 unloaded. The market was brassy from the start. Prices on prime cattle were from 10 to 25 cents lower. Some early sales, though, were line with last week. All the trading done Friday and Saturday was in the feeder division outside of a few head of pretty good killers. Sales showed a wide range. Most everything went from $4.00 to $5.25. Today's market was rather a long drawn out affair. Some early sales were in line with last week but most stuff is selling on a 15 to 25 cents lower basis. There was nothing that brought over $8.00 today, which was for a load of prime medium weight. Prime heavy cattle were not in evidence this morning.

Friday and Saturday saw only a light offering of sheep on the market. They were mostly of poor quality and sold at steady prices. Sheep house values have remained unchanged for nearly a month.

Only a moderate offering today. There were but a few head of good stuff here, most everything being of inferior quality. All sales were steady.

Steer quotations are: Prime light, $7.00 to $7.75; prime heavy, $7.75 to $8.00; good $6.50 to $7.25; common to fair, $6.50 to $6.25.

Heifer quotations are: Choice spayed, $6.00 to $6.50; good, $5.50 to $6.00; other varieties, $4.00 to $5.00.

Bull quotations are: Choice, $4.25 to $5.00; good, $3.75 to $4.25; medium, $3.00 to $3.50.

Stock quotations are: Best selected, 350 to 1000 lbs., $5.00 to $5.75; choice stock heifers, $5.00 to $5.50; good to choice stock cows, $5.00 to $5.50.

General quotations are: Jersey heifers, $10 and up; good grade Holsteins, $8.50 and up; good grade Durhams, $7.00 to $8.00; good Jersey, $6.00 to $7.00.

Hog quotations are: Prime light, $9.10; prime strongweights, $9.00 to $9.10; good to prime mixed, $8.50 to $8.85; tough heavy packing, $8.00 to $8.50; pigs and skips, $7.50 to $8.00.

Sheep quotations are: Choice lambs, $8.25; common lambs, $5.50 to $6.00; choice yearlings, $6.00; good yearlings, $5.00 to $5.75; choice wethers, $5.75 to $6.00; common wethers, $4.75 to $5.25; choice ewes, $5.00 to $5.25; heavy ewes, $3.25 to $3.50; common ewes, $2.50 to $3.00.

don. I will suggest though that the best way to avoid war would be to endeavor to cultivate peace. I mean for the press to speak with good-will toward foreign nations, wherever possible. I am a great admirer of Henry Ford and William Jennings Bryan. Their plans may not always work out but if the press of the country would speak in a friendly way toward the spirit that they show, the people would find that it would not be necessary to embark on a militaristic career. "I served in the German army in common with all other able bodied Germans. I was an officer but I will not tell you what position I held, because it is war times and what I might say might be misunderstood and misapplied. I went over to Germany in 1914 and was there six years when the war broke out, or at least, I worked for a French house for six years, but was in this country when the trouble began in Europe. I at one time contemplated becoming a French citizen but had become convinced that

METHODISTS MAKE BUILDING PLANS

Necessary Money is Pledged to Insure Modern Structure

BUILDING COMMITTEE APPOINTED AND GIVEN FULL AUTHORITY.

Old Building Will Be Used As Annex to New, and Separated From It By Movable Screen.

At the completion of a canvass during which the pledges for the necessary $30,000 had been secured, the Methodist church at a meeting Monday night finally determined to proceed with their plans for the construction of a new church and appointed a building committee to carry out the program. The members of the committee are Rev. C. L. Bent, H. E. Rounds, A. Estling, Charles H. Hushaw, D. Moffatt, E. L. Ashton and F. L. Johnston. It is expected that the contract will be let within a few days.

The two lots on Shoshone street, adjoining the present church building, have been purchased and the new structure will be extended on them. It is planned to utilize the present church building by taking out the west wall and inserting a screen between it and the new building, so that the present auditorium can be added to the new one without occasion of demand. The new building will be of the modern type.

compulsory military service was wrong and as the French government required three years service, I did not transfer my allegiance, but hope to become an American citizen.

"You can't have universal compulsory military service, I think that is wrong. I do believe in a gymnastic training for everybody, including the physical drill of the soldier, but not with arms, with which I think would suggest war with or hatred for our neighbors. But this gymnastic exercise could be given in such a way that it would not give rise to the hatred of those taking it, but would be of substantial value if needed for defense. I believe in that kind of physical training but not in compulsory military training as such.

"No, I cannot say, what effect the 'No' doctrine would have on the relations of the world abroad. No, I cannot say your question in regard to the extent to which economic causes enter into the war abroad. But I am convinced that the tendency here toward militarism is a mistake. I know of no better illustration of my idea than the one I gave you first, that you have no walls around your houses and you get along with your neighbors, but you are adopting a policy that will lead to the building of walls."

TWIN FALLS NINE DROPS GAME TO RUPERT, 5 TO 1

East Enders Land on Hart in First Innings and Pile Up Three Runs.

STANDING OF TEAMS.
	Won.	Lost.
Burley	2	0 1000
Twin Falls	1	1 500
Shoshone	1	1 500
Jermore	1	1 500
Rupert	1	1 500
Kimberly	0	2 000

All the teams in the league but Burley and Kimberly, batted in the five hundred series in last Sunday's exchange of games in the second series of the baseball schedule. Burley kept percentage steady by blanking Kim Kimberly 4 to 0, the latter team seemingly finding it hard to break a habit. Jerome broke Shoshone's long list of games without a defeat, a generously scored but close 10 to 1 game. In the first season's leaders on the heavy end of a 12 to 1 score.

Twin Falls dropped her game to Rupert 5 to 1, a long jump from the previous game played in Twin Falls in which the locals romped away with the game 6 to 0, but the east enders had little difficulty in landing on Hart's deliveries in the first frame and before the umpire had the three outs, Rupert had the game nicely tucked away with three tallies. Twin Falls tightened after this inning but the set-back was too great and the local boys couldn't recover. Twin Falls made her lone score in the fifth. Frambach pitched a good game for Rupert, while another feature of the game was the long hit by Watson over the left field fence, good for a two-bagger. If the hit had been good for five more feet it would have been a home run. The batters were: Twin Falls, Hart and Butler; Rupert, Frambach and Hansen.

The exhibition game played between Twin Falls and Rupert at the Pioneer's celebration at Oley, Monday, went to Rupert, 2 to 0. The game was a pitchers' battle throughout, each leg one hit. The batteries for this game were: Twin Falls, Christian and Butler; Rupert, Angel and Hansen.

PREPARES FOR RETURN TRIP

Captain of Deutschland Clears His Ship for German Port

DECLINES TO ANNOUNCE TIME OF DEPARTURE.

Submarine Tested Thoroughly During Day and Conveyed Lives With Steam Up Ready to Move Momentarily.

BAITIMORE, Md. — The German submarine liner Deutschland Wednesday was cleared by her commander, Captain Paul Koenig, for "Bremen or any other port in Germany." At any hour now the vessel may start down Chesapeake bay, prepared to make a dash for the open sea through the Virginia capes and the guard of allied warships off the three-mile limit.

Surrounding the plans of Captain Koenig after obtaining his clearance papers at the custom house, he said in reply to questions asked for the benefit of Maryland Pilot's association, that the exact time of his departure was indefinite. Wednesday night he made no arrangements for a pilot, but he can procure one almost immediately at any time he desires.

Agents of the subsea freighter announced Wednesday afternoon that she was ready for the return voyage to Germany, and that clearance papers would be secured later in the day. This information was conveyed to the custom house, and the office of the local customs clerk was kept open for Captain Koenig, who arrived shortly before 4 o'clock, with Captain Hinch of the North German Lloyd liner. After the usual formalities the commander of the submarine requested that his manifest, which he had filed, be withheld from publication "for a reasonable time."

Collector of the Port Ryan communicated with the treasury department at Washington and then informed Captain Koenig that his request would be granted. Consequently the cargo was described officially as being composed of merchandise.

On his way from the building the little captain tarried long enough to shake hands with several officials, who wished him a safe voyage.

"We certainly are with you," said one of his well wishers, patting him on the shoulder. Captain Koenig smiled broadly, nodded his head, said "I thank you," and then continued on his way to the pier where the Deutschland has been tied up for more than two weeks.

The tug Thomas F. Timmins, which met the Deutschland off the Virginia capes upon her arrival, and which has been constantly near her ever since, pulled away from the pier late Wednesday and went to a nearby coal pier, where she filled her bunkers. Directly afterward she returned to the Deutschland's pier and some hours later it was apparent that she was maintaining a full head of steam in her boilers.
