CITY COUNCIL MAKES FIRST MOVE TOWARD SECURING PURE WATER SUPPLY FOR THE CITY

Meeting Held Yesterday to Consult With Well-Known Engineer—Times Crusade Bearing Fruit—City Has Thirteen Months Left in Which to Get Water.

"Civil Engineer Kelsey of Portland, was in the city between trains yesterday and talked with the waterworks station over informally with the mayor and council, leaving references which we shall look up and act on at the regular meeting Monday night," said Chairman Charles M. Smith of the water committee of the council this morning. "Mr. Kelsey was a city engineer of Salt Lake City for a number of years," he continued, "and is well known in the intermountain country, having put in waterworks systems at Butte, Idaho Falls, Blackfoot, Elko, and other cities not far from here. We did not engage him, but are looking up his references and if they prove satisfactory, we will probably do so Monday night. We have several sources of supply in mind and want to ascertain definitely the cost of installing a system from any one of them. Among those that we are figuring on are Snake river, Blue Lakes, Rock creek and different springs where the water supply might be sufficient for the city. We are not getting definite and will not have until we get a report from a reliable engineer."

Should the movement started yesterday bear result in the adoption of a definite plan for a pure water supply, the city will have thirteen months in which to install the system, before the supply from the low line canal will be shut off by the canal company. "It is true that arrangements could perhaps be made to secure a supply temporarily from the high line canal by installing a system for carrying it over the low line canal, but even that would be uncertain. And there has been a tendency among the people to take the position that nothing would be done and that the crusade of THE TIMES for pure water is in accordance with the platform pledge of the mayor and the majority of the council would prove insufficient to stir the city to action and that the meeting yesterday is the first step made toward removing that skepticism."

TWIN FALLS WINS FIRST GAME, 4-3

Locals Stave Off Defeat In Ninth Inning Rally

WITH GAME TIED, ROBINSON BRINGS IN CHRISTIAN.

Game Is One of Best Ever Played on Local Diamond—Next Game at Jerome Tomorrow.

With the game standing tied at 3-3, and two men out, Robinson landed on Alexander for a safe hit which brought in Christian from second, scoring the run which gave Twin Falls the initial contest, played Sunday afternoon, of the three game series with Shoshone, for the championship of the Southern Idaho league.

The game was one of the best base ball games ever witnessed in Twin Falls and from first to last there were thrills which kept the grandstand and bleachers continually on the alert. The game was closely played and the brand of ball presented was first class.

Alexander, Tharr and Christian pitched good ball, Christian and Tharr being in the eighth when the latter hit his hand.

Until the last inning the game was generally conceded to Shoshone. The score to one led seemed impossible to overcome, but by taking advantage of Alexander's deliveries in this inning the local team defeated its visitors. Twin Falls' inning began badly. Doran was caught in a swing between third and home, was put out, and Wistel was caught off second and a little later. With two men out and three on bases safe hits brought in two runs which tied the score. Robinson, who had been in the game, brought in Christian from second for the winning run and the game was over. The crowd had left the grandstand and bleachers during this inning and pandemonium reigned when Christian crossed the plate for the winning rally.

Losses playing on Twin Falls' part was greatly responsible for Shoshone's runs earlier in the game. Several times men were caught between bases and during one of these plays Robinson for Twin Falls, made a double play unassisted. With Shoshone men on first and second, the player on first tried to steal second, was caught between bases and was put out when he reached second, already occupied by Case. Case thinking he was out, walked off base only to be tagged out by Robinson.

The next game of the series will be played tomorrow in Jerome, and a little later. All wins this fall in Twin Falls will win this game there will

ACCIDENT INTERRUPTED THEIR HONEYMOON TRIP

Car Occupied by Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Miller Plunges Over Hill—Young Couple Escape Serious Injury.

The honeymoon trip of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Smith was rudely terminated Sunday morning at 3:30 o'clock when the auto in which they were traveling on their way to Boise, struck a rut on the top of the big hill three miles this side of Glenview, and plunged badly wracking the way down the railroad track, seventy-five feet below. The young couple sprang from the car to the rocks at the foot of the hill just as the car went over, and beyond a few bruises, escaped injury. Mr. and Mrs. Smith left home for their wedding ceremony and breakfast Saturday, and drove to Bliss, where they remained over night, resuming their journey in the morning. The road on the hill was in bad condition and resulted in the accident. The car tumbled over and over until it stopped on the railroad tracks, badly wracking the car and down. Had it not been for the presence of mind of the occupants, they would probably have been killed.

RECEPTION FOR BUSINESS WOMEN

Informal Gathering at Parish Hall Thursday Night to Which All Business Women and Girls Are Invited.

The Business Women's club is planning a reception for Thursday evening at the Parish hall, to which every woman and girl in the city who is engaged in business is invited.

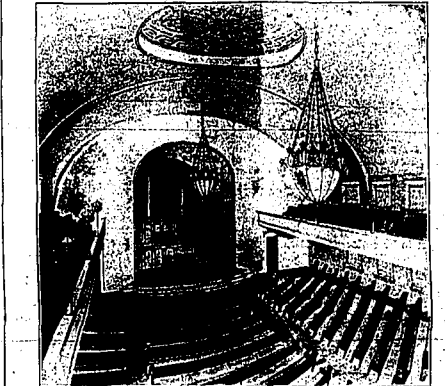

The use of the hall will be donated free to any non-sectarian organization, and the payment of expense of heating and lighting by such organization while it is in use.

A number of special departments will be organized for the year.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH PLANS ARE APPROVED

EXTERIOR OF PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH TO BE BUILT AT ONCE.

INTERIOR, SHOWING PART OF AUDITORIUM AND BALCONY.

A magnificent structure of which with exterior veneered with white enamel, sixty-six by 100 feet, the new Presbyterian church, for which tentative plans have been accepted, will stand back twenty feet from the property line, at the corner of Fifth avenue and Second street north, leaving ample space for a beautiful lawn on all sides.

The plans, drawn by Architect John Visser, contemplate a basement underneath for entertainments and for the Sunday school classes. The basement will be ten feet from cellar and of which only two and a half will be excavated, while large, seven-foot windows will furnish ample light.

Above the basement will be the main auditorium, with a seating capacity of 600 on the ground floor and 250 in the balcony; a conservative estimate, as the seats will be three feet from back to back. The auditorium is to be a simple affair, with a stage at the rear, and a balcony on the left side of the stage, with a large aisle on the right. The details of the furnishing have not yet been worked out. The structure, as described, will cost in the neighborhood of $30,000.

The committee ordered Mr. Visser to draft permanent plans along the line of the tentative ones, and these will be ready about the middle of October.

AUTO COLLISION CAMPAIGN OPENS IN STATE OF IDAHO

Mrs. C. F. Miller and Baby Both Parties Get Busy After Injured in Crash Election of Chairman

CARS MEET HEAD-ON IN THICK DUST SATURDAY. BRADY SAID TO HAVE BEEN ACTIVE IN REPUBLICAN AFFAIRS.

Party on Way to Fair Run Into Professor and Mrs. Miller, Near Elmer.

Democrat Leader Kept Free From Factional Fights of Party in the Past.

Thrown against the windshield of the auto in which she was riding at the time of a collision on the polo line road in front of the Paige ranch near Rock Creek, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Mrs. C. F. Miller, suffered severe lacerations about the head and face, was badly bruised and rendered unconscious, while her nineteen months old son who was thrown entirely through the windshield onto the engine sustained a cut hand and foot and a number of bruises. Mr. Miller, who was driving the other machine, which carried a party on the way to the fair in Elmer, Miss Ruth Munsell, of the Smith party, sustained cut hands and bruised head and knees.

Mrs. Miller and the baby were picked up immediately after the accident by a couple of men who came along in a car, and were brought to a local hospital in this city. Mrs. Miller did not recover consciousness until placed on the operating table, when she asked feebly for her baby. Four cuts on her face required stitching, while one of her knees was cut. She had so far recovered yesterday that she was removed to the home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Shepherd, at 441 Main street.

Mrs. Miller told the story of the accident substantially as follows: She with her husband and child were coming to this city from Mars, where her husband is principal of the Mars school, and were running at a slow speed at the time they crossed the bridge over the lateral near the Paige ranch. After they crossed, they met two auto loads of people, evidently going to the fair. The air was full of dust, a perfect cloud of which arose as the two autos swept by. As soon as her husband said "he had better slow down" she was hard to see ahead. He did so until he was not making more than ten miles an hour. He was hugging his own side of the road when the Smith family auto was on the road to the fair, crashed into their auto. That was the last that she knew of what happened until she recovered consciousness in the hospital. Professor Miller was able to resume his school work yesterday. The baby is unable to walk on account of a bruised leg.

"It was all on account of the dust," said R. B. Smith, when asked in regard to the cause of the accident. "It had signaled the car ahead that I was about to pass and started to do so. As near as I can tell we were both about in the middle of the road when the accident happened and neither could see the other. Miss Ruth Munsell was hurt the worst of any in our party. Other in our car were Mrs. C. M. Biggs and Miss Ethel Munsell, who were shaken up. I have a bad eye and my left arm was bruised. The dust was responsible for the accident."

Both cars were badly damaged in the smashup.

The Brady machine fastened its comely interest in the Republican party in this state upon its successful demand for Gregory as secretary of the campaign. Gregory has been Senator Brady's confidential man, his private secretary and one of the trustees of his property for the past ten years. He is considered not only Senator Brady's representative and spokesman in the state, but his most trusted financial representative next to D. W. Davis, the candidate for governor on the Republican ticket, who is regarded by many at least in a financial way as being more nearly a personal representative of Brady than anyone else in the state.

Davis, the candidate for governor, is president of the First National Bank at American Falls. Gregory is cashier of the same bank, and Senator Brady is principal stockholder of the same institution.

There was some opposition to Evan Evans, for re-election as Republican chairman, but the opposition it is said, was forced to divide away at the Brady machine.

Dr. Hamilton, selected by the Democrats to head the campaign this year, has kept himself wholly free from any factional fights that have disturbed the Democratic party for the past few years and it was because of this fact that he was chosen to head the campaign and also because of his well known popularity and executive ability and fidelity to Democratic principles.

Dr. Hamilton, the new Democratic chairman, called a meeting of the Democratic state candidates to be held in Boise on September 24, at which time plans for an aggressive campaign of the state were mapped out. It was decided to open the campaign in the Overland building and every effort will be made to off-set the influence of the Brady machine and the vast amount of money that it expended in behalf of the Republican candidates and the Republican organization in this state during the campaign.

AUTO POLO WILL SOON BE SEEN IN TWIN FALLS

Combining all the thrills of the Vanderbilt races, motorcycle fights and motor boat races, racing will be the three day exhibition of auto polo presented at the city hall park during the third week of the fall season. The exhibition will be presented under the management of several local men and plans are being pushed to make this the most exciting and profitable event in the history of Twin Falls.

C. Ray Stevens, representing Hankinson's auto polo attraction of Kansas City, has been in Twin Falls the last two days completing arrangements and makes assurance that the polo games to be seen here will offer some exciting and thrilling moments, entirely new and different to the great majority of those who have never witnessed this new sport.

The two original American and English teams will be in the contest and according to Mr. Stevens there is no doubt about the contests. Stuffed chassis of a popular make of automobile are used and four field machines are present. The ball is a broken wheelbarrow. The game is divided into ten minute intervals, and there are no walls in the field, as in polo.

The teams are appearing at the fair this week, appearing in Boise and then at the fair at American Falls. The teams are appearing at the fair this week, appearing in Boise and then at the fair at American Falls.

BUEL PIONEER OWNERSHIP TRANSFERRED BY J. W. WHITE

The ownership of the Buhl Pioneer was transferred this week from John Warren White to his wife, Lillian White, for a nominal consideration. It is reported here that the paper, which was formerly Democratic, and which independent will become actively Republican for the rest of the campaign. The Republicans have long been anxious to establish a paper in the west and, but have been hampered by lack of funds, pending the opening of the campaign.

REPAIR WORK ON MILLER DAM LARGE ITEM OF EXPENSE.

The water rate per acre for the coming year was raised at a special meeting of the canal board Friday morning, after a visit to the Miller dam and to other parts of the system. The board found on examination of the improvements going on at the dam, that the cost of the new retaining wall would be more than double the amount at first thought sufficient and the water rate is supposed to be one-half as thick as it is high, the difference in the quantity of concrete required is considerable.

The city formation is between two layers of lava and washes out, leaving an overhanging wall, which, when the city would be washed away, far enough back would fall. Engineers hold that eventually, if not stopped, this would endanger the gates and the dam. This repair work is one of the items of expense which made the board feel it necessary to increase the levy.

THREE YEAR PLAN FOR COW TESTERS

Organization a Success and Will Be Continued

SECOND ANNUAL ELECTION OF OFFICERS LAST WEEK.

Gathering held at Kunze Cheese Factory Ends in Birthday Party After Business.

Reorganization plans and the annual election of officers occupied the attention of the dairy men gathered at the meeting of the Buhl Pioneer Cow Testing association held at the home of Gustav Kunze Monday evening, says the Buhl Herald. The meeting was one of the best ever held by the association and was marked by enthusiasm for the coming year's work. Eighty persons, interested in the work of the association, were present.

Gustav Kunze, president of the association, presided over the meeting and gave some interesting talks along the line of dairy work in general and the benefits of testing in particular.
The association was reorganized on a three year basis, the first association in the United States to adopt this plan. The plan of a long term of enrolling has many advantages as was pointed out at the meeting. It saves the expense and trouble of organizing every year. It gives the members a three year record, which in many times more valuable than a one year record, and it also gives the members a chance to win records of a cow that has been dry but a few days as against six or seven weeks, which is considered by most dairymen the proper test for a cow between lactation periods.

W. E. Meyers, assistant with the western office of the dairy division at Salt Lake, was called to the meeting to reorganize the association. He was assisted by County Agent Birch, President Kunze and O. T. Koster, the official tester for the association. Mr.
Meyers, being sick part of the time he was here, most of the work was accomplished by the above men.

Mr. Meyers gave an interesting talk on the advantages of the new plan of organization and commended the local dairymen on the fact that ninety per cent of the old members joined again for the three year time. Mr. Meyers stated that eastern associations figure on a fifty per cent loss of membership at the end of the first year.

Mr. Meyers also said that the department of dairy husbandry of the state college desired the bulletins of the Buhl Pioneer Cow Testing Association to use in their work in the university. Mr. Meyers also stated that most likely, Mr. Koster would be called to the program at the dai-rymen's convention at Salt Lake, which is held some time in November to explain the methods used in Idaho's dairy testing association, and that it would be an excellent plan to send him to this convention, where the Buhl country would be well advertised as a dairyland.

O. T. Koster, official tester of the association, gave a brief summary of the year's work. In his report he mentioned that there were 435 cows on the association's record and that there will be complete yearly records on 337 cows.
Records of the cows of 24 of the 25 members of the association for the year are complete.

Mr. Koster stated that at the beginning of the association last October there were 15 purchased cows. At the present there are 25. Ten herds were all or partly purchased last fall, while at the present time there are 13.
According to the report of the tester, 53 cows were sold for beef, most of them "star boarders." Some of the dairymen, it was found, were actually saying money for the privilege of keeping these boarders on the ranch.

The new organization now has 25 members and a prospect of more to join. There are approximately 500 cows signed, on a $1.50 basis per cow a year, with 15 cents per month for cows that are entered after the beginning of the year. It is the plan this year to have the tester keep a close record on all cream separators. This has proven a great saving in the past.
In view of the efficiency of the new year's work, Prof. Ellington, in charge of state work, has decided to allow Mr. Koster to do the official testing of the purchased herds and his test will be recognized by the breed association as strictly official. This is the first time this has been done in the state. It will require the test each month, there being two purchased herds in the Buhl country.

The election of officers for the new organization was held as follows:
President, Gustav Kunze; vice president, H. H. Silter; secretary, Geo. A.
Childs; treasurer, M. P. Dau. These officers together with J. H. Galt, H. H.
Payne and W. S. Samuels, comprise a board of directors.

After the meeting was adjourned the well known hospitality and generosity of the Kunze home was displayed by the serving of delicious refreshments, and although there were many more present than could be accommodated there was plenty to go around. Mrs.
Kunze was assisted in the serving by Misses Charlotte McQuown, Nell Mc-Quown and Lily Lindstrom. The next meeting will be held at the H. H.
Silter home in November.

It was discovered during the evening that the meeting was the anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Kunze and also that of their daughter, Mrs. Tauler.

Filer Items

(From The Filer Journal)

At a meeting of the several former Illinois residents, held at the Commercial club rooms Wednesday evening, an Illinois association was formed.
S. H. Kayser was elected president and Harry S. Cowling, as secretary.

Miss Dorothy McGinnis entertained a few friends at her home last Wednesday evening in honor of her friend,
Miss Helen Stroheck, of Twin Falls, who left Monday to attend school at Abilene.

The enrollment of the high school is unusually large this year and, although school was delayed for a few days by an infantile paralysis scare, we have a good prospect for a splendid year's work. Reports from Supt.
Bracken state that about 3400 worth of high school text books have been sold to students this year. This greatly exceeds the amount which has been spent in previous years, owing to the number of new students. About $150 is yet to be collected. Class meetings were held last Thursday for the purpose of electing class officers for the coming year. The junior and senior officers are as follows: Seniors—
President, Ora Lee; vice president,
Bertha DeWitt; secretary, Fred Eaton, Edna Combs; Juniors—President, Jesse Boyd; vice president, Em-met, Bauer; secretary and treasurer, Howard Musgrave. Work in athletics will start next Monday when a meeting of all the boys will be called for the purpose of organizing an athletic association. Principal Widener has asked each class to elect a basket ball captain who is to see that a team is organized in his class. A class roster will be held the week before Thanksgiving. The boys have already showed their interest by giving their nickles and dimes to buy a ball.

Harry and Fred have met their fate. They were killed by a car driving down to the Snake river the first of the week, and Timm as usual carried off the honors, having caught more and bigger ones than all the rest of the party.

SECOND IDAHOANS THANK RED CROSS

Ditty Bags and Apples Welcomed
By Regiment

GENERAL HEALTH OF THOSE ON FRONT IS GOOD.

Much Talk About Coming Home But Nothing Definite Is Known—May Return in October.

Special to Twin Falls Times From Lieutenant R. E. Leighton.

NOGALES, Ariz.—Will you please thank the Red Cross society and the citizens of Twin Falls for the ditty bags sent the Twin Falls boys in the Second Idaho Infantry regiment, and the barrel of fruit which was received in fine shape. Everyone who used one of the ditty bags immediately becomes envious.

The boys are all well except Private Vernon W. Dodds, who is having a rapid recovery from an operation. Several of the boys got sore throats and it was feared they had diphtheria, but they are well, although still held in the isolation ward at the base hospital.

The Idaho regiment is getting a reputation that it will take lots of hard, hard work to maintain. Gen. Plummer in reporting to Gen. Panton on the march discipline reported discipline poor in all regiments except the Idaho and praised the Idaho.

Our drills are not so strenuous as they were. We now have battalion and extended order drill in the morning and one hour of signal drill in the afternoon. After 1:45 the men are free till reveille, 5:45 the next morning.

There is a great deal of talk about our coming home. While there is nothing definite on which to base a guess a great many think we will leave here in the early part of October.

Headquarters have been asked to furnish an estimate of the transportation required to return the regiment to mobilization point.

Weather here is fine. The days are warm, but the nights are so cool that the sentinels have been issued overcoats and all men have been issued sweaters.

Lieut. Kregel is commanding Truck company No. 54. We see him every day or so, as he has a Dodge touring car that he gets about in.

Also want to thank you for the papers. They are greatly appreciated by the men. Even those who never saw Twin Falls read the Twin Falls papers.

houses under President Harrison. The British house of commons had endorsed the American recommendations and not as a government measure, and Lord Salisbury refused to enter into a treaty unless it contained the stereotyped phrase.

The discussion on this question by the two great diplomats is one of the most brilliant in the literature of international relations. It is the most of the controversy, but Lord Salisbury, "sat tight" and the United States reluctantly agreed to incorporate the exception.

The exception as drafted was rejected by the senate.

In 1910 President William H. Taft signed the arbitration treaty, the settlement of international disputes by arbitration, with England and France treaties for the settlement by arbitration of "All questions, justiciable in law or equity" with the further provision that should one party to the treaty claim that a certain matter was not so justiciable, it should be referred to a commission to pass upon the validity of the claim and that the parties refrain from hostilities while the commission was in session; essentially the same provision was incorporated in the Bryan treaties. On March 22, 1910, President Taft in answer to those objecting that questions of national honor should not be submitted to arbitration said: "I do not see why questions of honor many not be submitted to a tribunal composed of men of honor who understand questions of national honor, to abide by their decision, as well as any other question of difference arising between nations."

Two years later in January, 1912, President Taft, reiterated the same views in still stronger terms, saying "I would rather take my chances of securing a just decision from a commission composed of honorable men than from the God of War." The treaties as drafted failed to secure the required two-thirds of the senate, though a majority favored them. The Republican campaign text book for 1912 said of them: "These treaties represented the world's highest aspiration toward peace and arbitration."

The only substantial difference between the Taft treaties and the Bryan treaties is that the latter were successfully negotiated, while the Taft treaties were not approved. The Bryan treaties, as the above review shows, are in accordance with the aspirations of many of the greatest of American statesmen for the past half a century.

Yet the blatant have said, and the uniformed and salaried have believed, that the signing of these treaties with thirty nations resulted in the lowering of American prestige abroad, just as if thirty other nations would sign treaties which they believed hurt their own honor or prestige. The plan in its most radical aspects had already been adopted between some nations abroad.

Says Reinsch in his International Law, "Some nations have agreed to submit all their controversies to arbitration. For example Italy with Argentina, Denmark with Switzerland." If the senate committee on foreign relations in 1881 and 1882 and Charles Sumner and the Republican house in 1874; and President Arthur and Secretary Freylinghousen; and John Sherman and the

THE VERA CRUZ INCIDENT AND THE A. B. C. MEDIATION—Bryan Treaties

By JAMES D. WHELAN

"Of the 159 telegrams and notes in the English White Papers, the one of the greatest pathos in that of Sir Edward Grey to Sir Edward Goschen on August 1, (1914) 'I still believe that it might be possible to secure peace in only a little respite in time can be gained'," says Rev. Dr. Charles J. Terson, pastor of the Broadway Tabernacle of New York City, in his work, 'The Cause of the War.' "Time was the one thing essential, and, alas, there was no time to be gotten."

Now all on earth that the much abused Bryan treaties provide to that before going to war the powers signing the treaties shall take a year after having exhausted every other available diplomatic means, in order that the issues may be examined by an impartial tribunal. It is true we had not signed such treaty with Mexico, but had previously, in 1892, signed a treaty to submit to arbitration all controversies over pecuniary claims, and when the A. B. C. powers, with whom we had signed the Bryan treaties requested that we extend the principle involved to Mexico, and to a fraction in actual charge of a considerable part of that country we could not logically refuse to do so.

"But," says a critic, "isn't such agreement an evidence of spinelessness, supineness, and the like to which no red blooded American will submit?"

So some politicians tell us. And yet many famous American statesmen have thought differently and have gone a great deal further, for they have advocated submitting all questions to final arbitration instead of merely waiting a year to try to settle them peacefully.

"What statement?"

Well, in 1891, the senate committee on foreign relations reported in favor of arbitration treaties with other nations for the submission of "All future misunderstandings that cannot be satisfactorily adjusted by negotiations in the first instance, before a resort to hostilities shall be had." Two years later the same committee reported in favor of a similar provision in "All treaties hereinafter entered into."

In 1872 the celebrated Senator Charles Sumner introduced a resolution which read: "Resolved, that in the determination of international differences arbitration should become a substitute for war in reality as well as in name. AND THEREFORE CO-EXTENSIVE WITH WAR IN JURISDICTION, so that ANY question or dispute which might be the occasion of war or misunderstanding between nations should be considered by this tribunal."

It was a resolution for general arbitration passed the house of representatives.

In 1883 President Arthur and Secretary of State Blaine introduced a treaty to a treaty for the arbitration of all questions with Switzerland and submitted it to the senate with approval for ratification.

On June 14, John Sherman in behalf of the senate committee on foreign relations of which he was chairman, introduced a resolution into the senate asking President Cleveland to endeavor to invite "Any government with which the United States has or may have diplomatic relations to the end that ANY difference or dispute arising between the two governments which cannot be adjusted by diplomatic agencies may be referred to arbitration and peacefully adjusted by such means."

On February 14, 1890, the senate and on April 3, 1890, the house, both Republican, passed resolutions exactly similar to the ones offered two years before by Senator Sherman. On April 18, 1890, the International American congress adopted resolutions in favor of adopting treaties of the kind above recommended, among all countries of the western hemisphere, with the sole exception, that if one nation tried to destroy the independence of another, arbitration should be optional with the one imposed on, but obligatory with the aggressor.

Of this proposition James G. Blaine, then secretary of state, said: "We hold up this new Magna Charta which abolishes war and substitutes arbitration between the American republics as the first and great fruit of the international American Conference." Unfortunately for the proposition it was not until William Jennings Bryan became secretary of state that the resolution was embodied into a treaty.

When Richard Olney became secretary of state under President Cleveland, during the second term of the latter, he with the co-operation of the president, undertook to negotiate with European nations the sort of treaties recommended by both senate committee on foreign relations in 1888; and both Republican houses in 1890; and Secretary Blaine; and Grover Cleveland and Secretary Olney; and President Taft. Secretary Knox and the majority of the senate in 1910; and all the thirty nations that signed the treaties, are supine and shameless and contemptible and all that, why the same terms may be applied with equal appropriateness to President Wilson and Secretary Bryan, but if these men knew more about handling diplomatic matters, and were actuated by higher motives than the interested political knocker, then Wilson and Bryan were right when they agreed to submit the Vera Cruz incident to arbitration.

Like all other human contrivances the peace treaties have their limitations, even in adjusting misunderstandings, but they are the best yet devised.

With a discussion of the effect of the arbitration on our prestige abroad, I shall conclude these letters in a future issue.

SANE PREPAREDNESS

The Democrats have raised a lot of dust over their army defense law, which they laid to the skies, but gradually the people of the country are learning to realize in detail what that law provides, and the inevitable result is an abrupt swing from a feeling of security to one of uneasiness, and a rapid spread of the conviction that universal national military service is the only preparedness measure which will be adequate.

The Democratic army bill falls far short of the recommendations made by the War College division of our general staff. Our mobile army and coast artillery had its ultimate strength fixed at 175,000 men and it is further provided that even this strength shall not be reached for a period of five years. The appropriations for 1917 provide for an army of only 105,000 men. The volunteer militia, under the law passed by congress, will consist of one regiment of 800 men for each congressional district—a total of only 320,000 men.

And that's all!—From the Boise Statesman.

For years the policy of the United States has been to get along with a small military establishment. Neither under Republican nor Democratic presidents has any other ideal been advocated. The army was more efficient under Wilson than ever before, except in time of actual war, even before the new army bill was passed. THE TIMES recently called attention to the address of James R. Mann, made after President Wilson announced himself as in favor of preparedness, in which the Republican house leader declared that he had been a small army and small navy man but was converted to the same view as the president. The people are slow to change their views on this question and they should not change them in a day. Even if they were convinced tomorrow that compulsory universal military service should be adopted, they could not secure it in a year.

A certain sort of military training could be given in the schools and will eventually be given there, but the United States has at hand no machinery to enforce such plan at the present time. President Wilson in his New York preparedness speech advocated a great system of industrial and vocational education under federal guidance and control, adding nothing more. "You cannot create such a system overnight. It has got to be built up, by slow and effective stages and there is much to be done in the meantime."

The sort of system advocated by the president would not necessarily run counter to the views of the most pronounced pacifist. The essential feature might be made the physical training involved, with an inculcation of patriotism, and without any word of war or of disrespect for foreign nations. There is no better physical training than that which goes with military discipline. A good shot, who gets his training at the traps or in a shooting gallery, doesn't necessarily grow blood thirsty. In this way the idea that, we must kill Mexicans, or Japs, or Germans, or English, or some other people against whom we have formed or inherited a dislike, or think we have, would not have to be transmitted to our children. It has been well said that we should have preparedness but not preparation for war.

The person who censures President Wilson for not forcing congress to adopt a compulsory universal military training system at once talks nonsense and punishes on the ignorance of his hearers. What would happen should we attempt today to take all the men from their vocations and rush them into military camps? Nothing, except that the business disorganization ardently desired by foes of President Wilson would be brought about.

We have not trained men to drill one-tenth of the available men of military age in the country. We have never had, either under Democratic or Republican administrations. Even if we had all the machinery needed to equip and drill everybody, we could only force them out by patting after the great military nations of Europe, and at a fabulous expense. This should never be our goal.

On this and on other great questions at issue, President Wilson is right and his critics are wrong, and most absurdly.

RAILROAD POVERTY AND DESTITUTION

"The net earnings of the principal railroads of the country increased only 2 1/2 per cent. during the last fiscal year," says the New York World. "The total net revenue of these roads was only $1,176,804,000, an increase over last year of only $305,969,000."

"These are the railroads that are about to be ruined by an eight-hour day which will add to their operating expenses $50,000,000 a year according to the railroad presidents and $20,000,000 a year according to the brotherhood chiefs."

"Taking the railroad figures as a basis, an eight-hour day would decrease the net revenue to a paltry $1,116,804,000, which in turn would be barely $245,969,000 in excess of the total net revenue of last year."

"It ought to be plain enough to anybody that the railroads are sure to be ruined by an eight-hour day. No wonder they appealed to the unfortunate shippers to intervene and prevent the government from pressing this crown of thorns upon the brow of Wall street. Such a picture of railroad poverty and destitution as the reports to the Interstate Commerce Commission present ought to furnish a new inspiration to the Hughes eloquence."

Senator LaFollette has previously shown in his discussion in the senate that the total increase in net earnings of the railroads for the past five years has been forty per cent. The new report of the interstate commerce commission from which the World takes its figures indicates that the past year has been far more prosperous than the average year of the preceding five.

The railroads and their friends are making the Adamson bill, for which seventy-five Republicans in the lower house and one in the senate voted, the principal issue of the campaign against President Wilson, and they are doing so, not on moral grounds, but principally on the theory that the increased wages will necessitate an increase in freight and passenger rates which the ultimate consumer must pay. The figures taken from the interstate commerce commission report show that they are not entitled to any increase in rates. If the rates last year were fair, their present rates are outrageously unjust, even after allowing for the increased cost of moving trains incident to the passage of the Adamson bill. If their rates five years ago were sufficient the divergence must be no greater.

The roads are not permitted to raise their rates unless the commission finds that they are too low. Perhaps the real opposition of the roads to the measure lies in the fact that it provides for an exhaustive examination of the whole question involved. Perhaps this is the reason for the deft of President Ripley of the Santa Fe who declares that he will not obey the law unless ordered to do so by the supreme court of the United States.

Anyhow, since the railroads have appealed to the people against the law on the ground that they will be entitled to a raise in rates should the Adamson law be enforced, the people should not forget that their net earnings for the past year was over twenty-six per cent. greater than for the year previous. That according to their own figures, the increased cost of the Adamson bill will be only one-twentieth of such net earnings, and that the result of the investigation provided for in the bill is much more apt to result in a substantial decrease in rates than in any increase.

THE REMEDY NOT DIFFICULT TO FIND.

It is time to reflect upon what it is that prevents the recruiting of our army to full strength. Congress has adjourned after making a long stride towards national preparedness. But at no time, except during a period of actual war, have the ranks of the United States army been full. The cause, as we have pointed out before, is not hard to find. It is simply a question of pay. The private's allowance has not been sufficient to entice the required number of men into the army's ranks.

The recruiting officer is as a rule a pretty good fellow, who with some show of logic can argue that a workingman who joins can, one year with the other, do better in the army than he can following his occupation. But the inducements held out will hardly appeal to most men, especially at this time, when wages are on the decline as a result of our national prosperity.

As a matter of justice, to say nothing of expediency, the wages of our soldiers should be raised and raised materially. What is true of the regular army is true of the national guard. Sixteen dollars per month is no adequate compensation for our boys on the border. Many of these men were forced by circumstances to make considerable sacrifice of both their time and money; some, no doubt, have lost their positions; others have had dependents to take care of. They were pressed by dire necessity into national police duty and the country ought to provide an adequate wage for them. In no small number of instances even a liberal wage would fail to reimburse the men for the inconvenience and loss sustained by reason of the enforced neglect of their private affairs.

The polishing of the border will have the effect of making men, married or unmarried, realize the seriousness of joining any branch of the army service of the United States and will not stimulate recruiting. The only stimulant that recruiting needs is a respectable wage scale.

WANTED—CENSOR OR POOL KILLER.

The Hughes national campaign committee needs a censor, an expurgator and a discriminator.

In the edition of campaign matter sent out for the use of editors of the faith it was stated that the congressmen who voted for the railroad eight hour bill were "politicians."

This stuff, without any deletion, was furnished to the Idaho party organs, although both Republican congressmen from this state, Addison T. Smith, of Twin Falls, and McCracken, both voted for the bill. It is to be presumed that the same sheet was sent to the Republican papers in Joe Cannon's district in Illinois, and circulated in all the other districts, including those of the seventy Republicans who voted as Smith, McCracken and Cannon did.

In fact a large majority of the Republicans present and voting at the time that the bill was passed voted for it, and therefore lie under the epithet applied by the Hughes committee indiscriminately to all who supported the Adamson bill.

Somebody ought to work over the manager of the national Republican press bureau.

BRAINS VERSUS MONEY SAYS WOMEN DEMOCRATS

Woman's Bureau Bulletin Declares That Wilson Has Accomplished Things For People.

CHICAGO—Blazoning the social reform record of President Wilson and the Democratic congress just adjourned against the veto record of Charles Evans Hughes during his term as governor, the woman's bureau of the Democratic national committee, the woman's bureau has prepared to come out with a booklet on the subject. Harry Payne Whitney, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim of New York will represent on the special train, on which they will tour the west, by sending broadcast the testimony of Miss Ida Tarbell, the greatest woman publicist in the country. Ella Flagg Young, former superintendent of schools of Chicago and eminent educator, Mrs. Belva Lockwood, leader of the peace party and woman over on a wheel, will also editate for president of the United States, Mrs. Antoinette Funk, former leader of the Illinois progressives, and scores of other famous public-opinion women who have broken away from party ties or non-partisan silence to declare themselves for Woodrow Wilson.

"The Democratic party is fundamentally opposed to the British rotten-borough methods adopted by the congressional union in campaigning in the suffrage states," Mrs. George Bass, chairman of the woman's bureau, declared. "The campaign which the woman's bureau is directing is leaving the conduct of local affairs up to the local leaders. We are merely aiding them by counsel, by literature, and by publicity. We will hold conferences of local affairs with our chairmen, but we will send out no flying column, no special trains, no multimillionaire spectacles for the enlightenment of western women voters. We are perfectly willing to trust our cause to the intelligence of the women who will vote at the November election."

"Woodrow Wilson kept peace with honor, and because women know and pay the ultimate cost of war, they are grateful to him for it," said Mrs. Whitney. "They know that Woodrow Wilson brought about the passage of the child labor law, and because women know what thousands of children in industries and servitude have endured, they are grateful to him."

"They know that he has given the country a peace that has not been confined to the few, but which has been showered upon the many, and they will prove their appreciation by voting for President Wilson's re-election."

"Mr. Hughes may imitate the ostrich by declaring his belief in woman suffrage at the eleventh hour, but he cannot do so in his campaign as such," said Mrs. Young. "He vetoed the Coney Island nickel fare bill, which provided cheaper fares for the poor of New York City to their amusement ground, the two-cent-a-mile bill, and the equal pay for equal work bill for New York teachers, a measure which gave women the equal emolument as that received by men doing the same work."

SIXTEENTH EPISODE

A Modern Pirate

People who raise children are sure of a life of surprise. They would have more than they get if they could see everything that goes on.

Pierpont Stafford had been kept pretty well surprised of late by his daughter's actions. In his haste he had said that she was probably on that canal barge in the river. He did not expect to be taken seriously by the fates. But there his daughter was, at least on another barge, drifting farther up the stream but drifting downward. She was in command of the ship, at the tiller, trying to steer the bulky tug.

When Gloria saw that the captain of the tug had noticed the slight detail of the parted hawser and the lost convey she was vexed. When she saw the tugboat turning around to recapture the barge she felt that it would be hard to explain about the prisoners she had fastened down in the cabin. She supposed it was mutiny or something for a passenger to tie up captain, crew and cook, and change the course of the ship. She believed that people who did that were usually hung from the yardstick or something. She hoped that the old barge did not have such a thing on board.

The nearer the tug came the louder the pilot and the crew yelled at her and the less Gloria wanted to meet them. She had never met any tugmen and she felt no ambition to get into their social set. It was growing so dark by now that they could not see how near the tiller, they kept calling her, "Trask" or "Oh Jed."

She Did Not Exchange Information for Hospitality.

river was dark and menacing, and its current was like some invisible giant dragging the ship away to its lair. Still, when Gloria saw the tug come alongside the barge and make fast, and saw Trask, Jed and Nell dash up the companionway and meet the tugmen on the deck, she felt that the current would be kinder to her than the men would have been. What explanation Trask and Jed made she could not imagine. Evidently it was not a good one, for the crew from the tugboat resuscitated violently and looked as if there would be a big fight. Gloria hoped that they all would throw one another overboard. The tugmen crew went back to their quarters. Trask ran back to stare at Gloria. He shook his fist at her and she rowed faster. But the barge moved northward, following the puffing tug.

Gloria breathed a sigh of relief at her escape. Then she realized that after all Trask had escaped. She was so angry at his escape that she started to row back after the barge. What she would have done had she overtaken it she did not stop to think. The current prevented the possibility of knowing. The Hudson streaming into the sea carried Gloria with it in spite of all her efforts at the oars. She gave up at length and devoted all her energies to rowing ashore. The nearer shore was the farther from her, because a landing on the west bank would compel a lengthy roundabout to fetch her to her home on the east bank.

She rowed for the New York shore and crept toward it slowly, though the boat turned southerly so fast that she feared to be swept on down to the city's crowded water pavements. It was lonely out there on the dark river. Her arms ached with fatigue, her slick hands were pouting with blisters. Finally she felt the keel grate and she landed on a rocky point. She forgot the little dinghy and it slipped back and danced on down the river to some unknown fate. Gloria felt better on the firm earth and she grew angry again. She stared at the barge, now a mere smudge on the vague horizon.

She whispered to herself: "I'll get him yet, and he won't get away!" Gloria thought of her father's yacht. She believed that it had been recently put into commission. If only she had it now! But it was loading at anchor in the river at her father's country home, the last she had heard of it.

"To get a yacht! That was her small requirement now. She must get home to get it. She plunged along all the while, but they were going at it now. A lone boat. After a time a farmer appeared driving a wretchedly empty milk can. Gloria envied him his horse on the high seat. He was too rich one and she was the pauper. He called out: "Have a ride, miss? How far ye goin'?"

"I'm going as far as you'll take me, please."

"Get in, then, miss, and we'll jog along." The farmer was naturally anxious to know what errand his guest was on, but she did not exchange information for hospitality. She grew so impatient for faster progress that when the farmer came to his own lane and turned left it was glad to get down and walk.

Gloria trudged till she was worn out. All the motors she saw seemed to be going the wrong way. When finally she heard one coming toward her she was so delighted that she turned and held out her hands. She wanted to embrace the driver for being so kind as to be going her way.

Anybody looks well coming to a rescue, but the young man driving the southbound automobile was too good looking for his own comfort or anyone else's. He accepted Gloria as a passenger with more enthusiasm than she relished. He jumped to the ground, offered his hat, assisted Gloria into the front seat, and took his place beside her. He shot the car forward with a swagger and his compliments began to puff out of him. Gloria endured a number of compliments because she needed his motor, but she grew impatient and when he began to call her "Cutie" she decided that his usefulness had ceased to exist. One of the twin simply had to get out and walk. Gloria was sure that it was her own selfishness. She plotted carefully how to throw this new skipper overboard. The victim hoped her to an idea by leaning close to her and murmuring: "Kind of cozy, Cutie, huh?"

"Very," said Gloria, frowning at his impudence. "We make a great team, huh?" "Great," said Gloria. "Atta girl," said the youth and slid his left arm around her. Gloria laughed harshly and somehow managed to knock the hat off her own head. The wind whipped her back and the driver shut off the engine and threw on his emergency brake. "So sorry," said Gloria, smiling in the dark. "Atta girl, Cutie," said the young man. "Back in a minute."

He did from his place and ran back along the road for his hat. Gloria had been studying his methods of running the car and comparing it with his own. As soon as the driver started back Gloria pressed the self-starter button and put the car into motion. The man heard the engine sputter and he yelled, "Hey!" thinking the gasoline to blame. He was sure that he had forgotten to stop his engine and he was afraid that the car was running away with its pretty passenger. He ran after it, forgetting his hat in his alarm. Just Gloria he dashed to pieces on the side of the road. The clean way the car leaped across the hill and the hand Gloria waved in farewell reassured him, as to her safety, but filled him with disgust and with fear that she were some new type of motorist.

Gloria's conscience was clear. The young impertinent had earned his punishment. The walk would do him good. She would restore his car to him by hunting up the owner of its motor. As she walked across the marshy, her father could buy the car. It was a nice car. She loved its apparatus for miles and fed it well. And finally it brought her back to her home. As she ran in through the gates she almost forgot to stop for a moment. The piercing searchlight blinded her until she heard his voice from behind it. He welcomed her to his arms and was so glad to have her safely there that it was several minutes before he began to scold her.

"She asked him to hush, please, as she had no time to waste and she wanted to borrow his yacht and its entire crew for a while. Pierpont refused the loan with all the severity of a bank president, but Gloria calmly sent for the sailing master and in the presence of her father gave him orders to be ready as soon as she had her long-delayed dinner."

Doctor Royce and Judge Freeman were at the house. They sat with Gloria while she told them of her adventures as she ate a hastily reassembled dinner. She said to Doctor Royce: "I am surprised, Stephen, at your leaving me alone by myself to solve my new problems. Of course, you didn't know where I was going, but you usually manage to arrive in the nick of time. You ought to have been there."

"I wish I had been there," Royce replied. His heart ached at the sight of her beauty and at the adventurous spirit which sent her tender body into so much danger with so few resources. "I won't let you quit my sight again, Gloria," he said and stared with such jealousy that she felt afraid that he was loving her too well.

"Then you will come along and help me to capture the man who killed my beloved Dick?"

"All right, captain," said Royce with a plucky smile, though her allusion to Freeman cut him to the quick.

Judge Freeman seemed to be agitated by the plan Gloria outlined for pursuit and capture of Trask. "You must not permit this, Pierpont," he protested, anxiously. "Your daughter has no legal right to arrest the man Trask. If she should capture him she would have to turn him over to the authorities and she would have to face a public explanation."

Gloria retorted with vigor: "You had him, Judge, and you said that he slipped out of your fingers. Now you advise me not to go after him again. You set him loose once and want me to let him escape a second time. Why, I do not know. Why don't you tell me why?"

Judge Freeman looked away guiltily. His eyes turned to Pierpont and his answer was to him and not to Gloria. "You must realize, Pierpont, that such a cruise is no place for a girl of Gloria's position and breeding."

"That's true," said Pierpont. "It's all off, Gloria."

"No, it isn't!" Gloria cried. "If you don't help me to catch that fiend I'll get the police after me."

"What police?" Pierpont laughed. "The local chief? He couldn't capture a snail."

"My law is out of his jurisdiction, anyway," said the judge. "It would be quite a complicated process getting the fellow arrested and he would probably be hard to find."

"My way is a very simple way," said Gloria. "Instead of sending me to catch a good motto. But the judge will neither send nor go, and once more I want to ask him why?"

The judge was not used to being cross-examined and he bore it ill. He faltered: "Some day you'll know and you'll realize that I acted for your peace of mind."

"My piece of mind depends on capturing that man," Gloria answered curtly, "and anybody that wants to come along now."

Royce saluted and waited for orders. Pierpont decided to go. Judge Freeman man refused and repeated his warnings, but Gloria would not even tell him goodbye. She, her father and Royce went down to the yacht landing and were carried aboard in a little boat, the engine flashing in the moonlight and the sailors coming hand somely alongside.

It was splendid to feel the deck underfoot. Gloria chuckled at the contrast between the yacht and the canal boat. She rejoiced in the famous speed of the engines and she could imagine the prow sailing the waves in pursuit of the lumbering barge. She was on a racehorse and she was chasing an cat. But racehorses are delicate giants and so are race cars and racing yachts. This sea rover decided to rove. There was engine trouble in the works and the captain brought the hateful news that the yacht could not budge for several hours. Gloria was bitterly disappointed and completely baffled. "It's the old story of the tortoise and the hare," she grumbled. "While we are sleeping here the barge is moving along every moment. We'll never find it. I'll get away for keeps this time."

"Never despair," said Royce stupidly.

"Don't speak to me," said Gloria. She flounced away to the stern deck to be by herself. Then the soft breeze blew away her anger and her furies. In spite of herself she fell asleep. Her father came to urge her to go to her berth, but she refused to stir.

"You'd better sell this old tub and buy a motor boat," she said.

Later Gloria was half-awakened by a little chill. She was too cold to say where she was and too drowsy to move. She saw a shadowy figure tiptoeing up. She knew that a steamer rug was gently laid over her. Half a dream, she murmured, "Thank you, Stephen."

When she awoke the yacht was re-decked its lost reputation. It was hastening up the river at a splendid gait. The sun was just crossing the eastern wall of hills.

Gloria went to her stateroom to bathe and dress for a new and busy day. Breakfast was served on deck, and the Palmbeis slid back with encouraging rapidity.

Before Gloria had finished her breakfast, a tug, towing a barge, was sighted on the northern edge of the water.

Gloria went to the pilot house to stimulate the pursuit. She had great fun pulling down the tube to the engineer to go as fast as possible and then faster. She tried to hurry the pilot, too, but he explained that he could not increase the speed by turning his wheel. Gloria asked him numberless questions and made him teach her how to steer the yacht. At first he helped, but soon she could throw the wheel over to the queen's taste.

Gradually the barge grew larger and larger and its ugliness more distinct. The men on the barge said no word to the yacht following closely. But Gloria saw a gaunt figure on the barge watching anxiously. Soon he was distinguishable as Trask. Gloria left the pilot house and went forward to make sure. She recognized him as he recognized her. She called to him to surrender. He laughed. Then she saw that he had a rifle in his hand.

Trask had been mystified beyond measure by the whole transaction. He had left Freeman's body in the canal. It snows in front of the Soldiers' and Sailors' monument on Riverside drive. He had watched the papers for days, expecting to read in each one an account of the ending of the body.

He had been given freedom from anxiety by the silence of the journals. He had begun almost to wonder if he had really killed his man or only dreamed it, when suddenly the headlines had flared out with the statement that Freeman's body had been found in the lower bay, miles below the spot on Riverside drive where he had left it empty of soul.

He had cudgeled his brain trying to connect the dots of his discovery with the evidence of his crime and with what motive. The papers said that Freeman had committed suicide, and nobody disputed it.

"Then she escaped, but after that nothing occurred to hamper Trask's northward voyage in his canal boat. His night was sleepless, however. He started up dozens of times, seeing Gloria's little white finger pointing at him, hearing her cry out again: "You killed him! I saw you!"

The daybreak found him stretched out at the stern of the canal boat, looking so sad some possible avenger. He saw the yacht swooping up the stream long before Gloria made him out. He seemed to feel that the unanny speed of the boat meant business. So he hunted out his old rifle and kept his eyes on the yacht, as it joined, with relentless persistence. Finally he made out Gloria on the prow, pointing at him.

Now Trask felt assured that Gloria was a witch. She had appeared in his cabin, then vanished, only to reappear with a posse of yachtmen. He felt that he had been a fool to let her dupe him when he was alone. Now she had a little army and navy of her own. But if he got rid of her he would be rid of the only witness against him. So he reasoned with a man's logic. He leveled his rifle at Gloria. He took careful aim. He fired!

"What's he doing?" asked the gentleman sitting next the door.

"He's the driver of this 'ere 'bus,' came the answer. "Did I give ye yer ticket, please?"

COMMENT BY EXCHANGES

STRAW VOTES FOR

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE

A GREAT DEAL of interest is being aroused throughout the Inland Empire, where live readers of the Spokane-Review, a strong "Hughes-Poll" advocate, and who watched eagerly the outcome of each day's turnstile vote at the fair at Spokane, visitors at the fair being afforded a privilege of going through a Hughes gate or a Wilson gate, to indicate their preference. The total vote for five days including Saturday was as follows:

Wilson	25,120
Hughes	19,748

Lead of Wilson

Wilson soon took the lead from the start and kept it, his majority increasing from day to day. Some refuse to see any significance in a straw vote, this coming from Hughes supporters especially. It nevertheless indicates specifically in the case of fair visitors at Spokane just how many representative people are actively interested in the candidates.

Evidence the Review believed that it indicated something, for Wednesday's paper contained an editorial, in which it asked "whether the Republican national committee is asleep" stating that everything indicated a growing popularity for President Wilson throughout the northwest.

In The Forum, a column which they maintain for the expression of views of readers, in Thursday's issue, a writer answers the Spokane-Review editor's question of "asleep" stating that it is worthy of reproduction. It is as follows:

"To the Editor of The Spokane-Review: Your plaintive editorial query in today's issue was called to my attention. Is the Republican national committee asleep?"

"It's the writer's impression that with the many avenues of information open to you it must be patent that the Republican national committee is awake to the utter weakness of its position and nominee."

"Mr. Roosevelt would at least have appealed to the blood-and-iron element of our electorate—the class that is fighting first and explaining later. But Hughes, whom does he appeal to?"

"Can you expect the national committee to become widely enthusiastic over the cold ashes of cherished hopes? Can you expect the people to go wild over the obsequies of Hughes, a man, I'm told, who has never registered or voted in six years, asking the suffrage of the American people. Ye gods!"

"As Mr. Hughes has chosen to make this a campaign of criticism and fault finding instead of constructive suggestion, let us see what we know of."

him. During the time he was socialized from public gaze in the supreme court he was a friend of the people, as he so urgently suggests at this time. Ask the haters of Danbury, Conn. "Has he been in position to vote for women's suffrage or any other measure that would help the people of the country? Ask the registration clerk of his home precinct."

"The Republican national committee is not asleep or overconfident. But one should not blame them for refusing to spend their money like drunken sailors in a cause they know to be lost. It simply wasn't in the cards to beat Mr. Wilson this year. Those who by astute Republicans have left it for months. Now it is becoming apparent even to us common folks."

"Progressives of four years ago have no reason to vote for Hughes, while there is any amount of reasons for supporting Wilson. The Republican convention, dominated by the same men who threw Roosevelt out in 1912, again handled things this year and in virtually the same way. Why should men who left the party in 1912 go back to it now? Merely because Teddy says so? It is to laugh."

"The writer states it nicely. As for the significance of straw votes, in ordinary times straw votes may have little or no significance. But in years when public sentiment is afflicting the national Progressive movement, such as Wilson, it indicates the greatest landslide in history. Besides there is nothing to Hughes to appeal to anyone but the strictly partisan individual or someone with a grudge. He has offered nothing but carping criticism. The voter expects evidence of competence and purpose coupled with apparent ability to perform. Hughes is lacking.—Grangeville Free Press."

QUITS ROOSEVELT FOR WILSON.

HUO WINTNER, a prominent New York attorney, who became a Progressive at the birth of that party, has written a letter to President Wilson asking that president to his intention to "labor unqualifiedly and uncompromisingly for your reelection."

Mr. Wintner was a nominee on the Progressive ticket for justice of the supreme court of New York state at the 1912 election. He participated actively in the national Progressive convention at Chicago in June last.

"The statements exploited in the Republican press, of individuals up to go high in Progressive leadership, that they have enrolled under the Hughes banner," said Mr. Wintner in his letter to the president, "are the statements for the most part of the very men who from the first furthered, or at least did nothing to hinder, the covert movement (and which the thousands of my fellows now believe was initiated months before the convention), to betray the Progressive party for the gain of the Republican party."

"But the truth is that not even the plausible phrases of Mr. Roosevelt nor the action of the national committee dominated by him, have succeeded in effecting the transfer to Mr. Hughes of the allegiance of the mass of the Progressive party."

As Review Suddenly Born.
"Mr. Roosevelt's pretended show of horror at the thought of another four years under you, and his recent glorification of Mr. Hughes (an ecstasy all too suddenly given to him), are now known as fit reality, the one an ignominious personal hatred, and the other an insincere justification for his own conceited and premeditated abandonment of his followers."

"Neither his clamors nor the resolutions of any committee have driven the thousands of us thoughtful Progressives to the side of Mr. Hughes. We had for years foolishly worshipped at the shrine of a personality: when that personality without a word of warning before, or a word of comradeship thereafter, so cynically and readily deserted us when he had sworn to cleave to us, the spot was for all times broken. We are now ever grateful for it. Self-respect, if nothing else, forbids us not alone to do this, but even to find sanctuary with him in the same party."

"Whether the failure of our party to nominate its own candidate was due to chicanery or to our own stupidity, matters not now. The fact remains that the logic of events has not permitted us to nominate a candidate of our own. Since then, earnest reflection and solemn heart-seeking have driven most of us to the conviction that the character, the traditions and the associations of Mr. Hughes, and of his party offer little for the triumph of the Progressive ideals which we still crave."

See the Light at Last.

"We have seen the light at last, and it leads not to Mr. Roosevelt, but to Mr. Wilson. I, and those for whom I speak feel sincerely that in you they find a worthy leader and exponent of those fundamental humanitarian and social ideals which made up the stuff of Progressivism and which we foolishly compromised in so large a measure by our misplaced devotion."

"We believe that your patriotism is a vital thing; that your real for ideals in government, your love for mankind, your special vision, your intellectual powers, your capacity for growth, your persistence under adversity, and dignity under defeat, are qualities that all these are great and compelling and admirable. Disillusioned, we see"

now that your achievements stand out as big as those of any man in public life for a generation or more, and find that 'standing by the president' is not a difficult feat for sincere Progressives in this year of grace, 1916.

"So let the knowledge go out to the American people that the votes of the large majority of Progressives, in New York state at least, are not to go to the Republican nominee."

IDAHO SOUTHERN RAILWAY NOT ENTIRELY DEAD YET
Evidently the Idaho Southern railroad is yet to be regarded as an enterprise by rail. The service as outlined by the Gooding Leader as follows looks like a very handy arrangement and makes use of the track until finally removed.
The Idaho Southern Railway is not so entirely and hopelessly dead as was announced last week and it will soon be possible for people to again take passage over this road between Gooding and Jerome. Mr. Young has leased the Idaho Southern track until such time as the rails may be torn up, which probably will be a year or more. He has purchased a high power Popeil electric light engine and has a capacity of sixteen passengers, which is now being fitted with flange wheels at Portland. A trailer will also be used for hauling express and light freight traffic. The old train schedule will be followed, leaving Gooding at 8:30 a. m. and returning at 3:50 p. m.

About the first of October, the Pacific States Land company will open offices on Shoshone. The building now occupied by the Peterson Hardware company, which company will move to its new location in the Rice building. The Pacific States Land company, with Robert Tyler of Twin Falls as manager, will be incorporated under the laws of Idaho, and it is Mr. Tyler's purpose to later become a branch of the home office in Portland.

BEHIND FOOTBALL TEAM
The high school football team will have the backing of the business men of the city during the coming year. A movement has been started by Mayor E. M. Staley and Charles D. Thomas to get the people to take an interest in the boys and give them the needed community support which they have not had heretofore. It is planned to put up a real fight for the championship this year and make the boys feel that everybody is interested in their success.

Today's hog market was a repetition of yesterday's, good steady prices ruling in the run. Bulk sold at $3.70 to $3.75. Most offerings were from the valley. Outside demand continues very good.

DEMOCRATS WILL WIN SAYS WORTHINGTON

Candidate for State Treasurer Finds People Everywhere Favoring Wilson.

"The people of Oakley are enthusiastically for Governor Alexander on account of his work in behalf of the settlers on the Twin Falls-Oakley tract," said S. P. Worthington, Democratic candidate for state treasurer, who was in the city Saturday getting acquainted with the people. Mr. Worthington expressed the belief that the people of Idaho would line up for the national and state tickets, his convicition being based on the statements of voters whom he met during his canvass. He said that Oakley has been prosperous this year and that the people there felt that with the irrigation problems in the way of successful adjustment, through the determination of Governor Alexander to have their rights asserted in court, they looked forward with hope and confidence to the future. A shipment of wool was shipped from the town this year and money has been plentiful. Mr. Worthington attended the fair at Filter last week and left Saturday night for Boise to consult state leaders.

CAID OF THANKS. I desire to extend thanks to the Elks lodge, the Knights of Pythias, the Christian Science church and to all my friends who assisted me in my recent bereavement.
