AUSTRIA WOULD RE-ESTABLISH SERB NATION

SEMI-OFFICIAL PAPER PUTS FORTH FEELER ANNOUNCING CONCESSIONS

Sees No Chance of Absorbing the Serbians

Also Declaring Austria Will Concede Independence of Montenegro—Will Withhold Strategic Military Points.

(By International News Service) Vienna, July 10.—The semi-official Fremdenblatt, discussing the Serbian question, says the conquered kingdom will be re-established, but only as it was before the first Balkan war. "Austria-Hungary does not want to wipe Serbia from the map forever, but must insist that the peace of the Dual Monarchy shall never again be threatened by this turbulent little kingdom," the paper says. "The simple way to solve the Serbian problem would be to restore the Austro-Hungarian monarchy. Such an arrangement would bring all Serbs under a government of their own, would give them not only almost complete independence, but also an outlet to the sea. There is no prospect, however, that this plan can be carried out. The Serbs will insist on the restoration of their kingdom, even if they are not able to reconquer it with the aid of their allies. We must be ready to give them back all of the Old Serbian territory, but Macedonia, with its Bulgarian population, will remain in the possession of Bulgaria, and for our own safety we must insist on certain changes of the frontiers between Austria and Bulgaria. The Serbian demand for an indemnity is a piece of impudence and not worthy of serious discussion. As to Montenegro, the plan was established as it was before the war, but that Mount Lovcen must remain in Austria. The evacuation of the kingdom will be that King Nicholas shall abdicate in favor of his second son, Prince Mirko, who has been on friendly terms with the Austro-Hungarian government since his father fled to France, and often comes to Vienna.

Fire Destroys the Mutual Headquarters

Little Damage to Contents of Structures—Company May Erect Brick Building.

A fire from an unknown cause gutted the two-story frame building at 299 Shoshone street, Monday, July 9, when the Mutual Creamery company headquarters were destroyed. The fire broke out shortly after 7 o'clock Sunday morning. The fire company, which had been called after the alarm was turned in, and quickly extinguished the flames, which had done about $10 worth of damage to the contents of the building, though the structure itself was damaged seriously. A small stock of hardware and plumbing goods owned by "Plymouth" from the Mutual building, which was unoccupied, suffered most severely from the flames. The Mutual authorities have refused to allow the repair of the building on its present site. "The Mutual will move in the new quarters, although the Mutual still occupies its old office in the front of the burned building. The company is figuring on erecting a brick building here. The Mutual Manager Ham said that all fire had been extinguished at 4 o'clock Saturday evening and that he had no idea of how the blaze started.

BIGGEST DRIVING FORCE! A PRACTICAL MESSAGE TO BUSINESS MEN

Meeting of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at St. Louis

ADVERTISING PLAYS THE MOST IMPORTANT PART

A Great Meeting of Great Advertisers. They Tell What Advertising Has Done and Always Will Do.

(By H. F. Schaldach)

I wish every business man in this city could have given overland with me to the Thirtieth Annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, held during the second week of June in St. Louis.

I more firmly believe than ever before, as I have told merchants throughout the west for the past seven years, that advertising is the most driving force in the business world today and when rightly conducted, cannot fail.

The slogan of underlying thought of this convention was that "Advertising Wins the Cost of Distribution" and was amply proven by such executives as Samuel S. Dobbs, vice president and general manager of the Coca Cola company of Atlanta, and Thomas A. Wilson, president of Wilson & Co., food products manufacturers of Chicago, and many others.

Mr. William Rankin, a prominent advertising agent of Chicago, told how they journeyed to Washington to ask them to appropriate money for advertising the Red Cross in Chicago. How in the three months they secured 125,000 $2.00 memberships in New York City. When the government did not, or could not allow any money for this purpose, the "I will" spirit of the widely city asserted itself, and the business men of that city subscribed $22,000 to be used for newspaper advertising and how a properly conducted campaign secured not only the 150,000 memberships which they had aimed at, but 350,000 members, all in 30 days, through direct, forcible full page advertisements in the daily newspapers, whereas they had expended about $25,000 in New York City in circular letters and other literature.

It was emphasized and proved without doubt that the newspaper is the mighty and deep voice of the nation, and responsive to every honest demand made upon it in a legitimate manner. J. Murray Allison, one of the foremost men of England, formerly advertising manager of the London Times, in a very instructive address noted that advertising put England two years ahead in the war, by finding, for instance, through advertising, efficient workmen to be employed in the munition factories, by securing money for England's enormous war loan, and many other ways.

Mr. Emory, a publisher of Edmonton, representing the Canadian Press, told how the Canadian government had since the beginning of the war, planned and executed in different individual advertising campaigns, each of which had exceeded the hope of the originators; one notably, advertising in this country for men, by which they succeeded in inducing many Americans to join the line and work on the farms, which were undermanned.

Another, how, when the war had started, their market for apples, of which they raised a great many and shipped to foreign countries, was suddenly cut off. The government to help the growers, who in many instances feared they would have to let the fruit rot on the ground, conducted a systematic campaign, showing their food value, encouraging home consumption, and as a result of the campaign the consumption of this article was increased three-fold.

The business man of this day and age, who doubts advertising doubts himself and his goods. His road to success will be slow, painful and plodding. His father may have made a success of business without advertising, but he cannot, in his modern age, even hold what his father gained without it.

tion was and what it could be used for.

The biggest problem the merchant is facing today is distribution—taking the things from his shelf or his manufacturing plant and putting them where they ought to be, that is, in the hands of the ultimate consumer.

Anyone can put up a plant, life men, buy goods, secure a place for the transaction of his business; but to take his goods and put them where they ought to be is what he has to solve, and the man who does has little to worry about. The man who solves the problem tells the people about his goods, what they are, what they can be used for, and then keeps right on telling them, as many of us are extremely forgetful and the clean newspaper advertisement, be it a full page or a half page or three inch wide column, is the most efficient and economical factor and help he can employ.

I say to the business men today: Advertise, first of all; second, advertise truthfully; and third, advertise consistently, and by all means, make good your advertising promises. Newspapers are judged, I am sorry to say, not by their advertising agencies, but rather their failures. John Doe always is very willing to point his finger at "The Times," who went out of business and who advertised, but never once does he think of the John Smith's by the hundred who advertise and succeed.

Advertising is an investment in a business, just the same as the stock a man has on his shelves and should be bought and sold accordingly.

I say that every business man in this city should sit down the first of every season and figure out how much money he is going to spend for advertising, plan his campaign intelligently, and then stick to it.

The next time you pick up a paper, look over the business news advertisement carefully. You will be surprised at the fund of information you will be able to acquire, and don't forget, it is all mighty useful information and particularly appropriate at this time. People never thought much about Spain, for instance, until the price went up of beef, mutton, and when they began to read all about it, and study up on them, and read the advertised prices. Think how much more you would have known if you would have done it before, not only on potatoes, but many other items as well.

HAY DEALERS ARE ASKED TO HELP SHIPPING EFFICIENCY

The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce of the department of commerce, has issued a circular requesting cooperation of all hay shippers in securing greater efficiency in sending hay over the roads. A copy of the circular received by the Idaho Hay, Grain and Feed company reads as follows:

The demand for freight cars at the present time is far beyond that of any previous period in our history. When our troops are actually in the field this demand will be greatly increased. The car service company of the American Railway Association is co-ordinating the freight traffic resources of the country in an effort to meet this demand, but it will be unable to do so without the help of all those interested.

It appears that a very large percentage of freight cars are sent out loaded only to the minimum capacity fixed in the tariffs of the carriers, although the maximum safe capacity of the car is in some cases twice that amount. The bureau believes that a great improvement will follow if this situation is brought to the attention of shippers and carriers and it is asked that you call to them unless cars are loaded to the maximum and delays obviated there will not be enough cars to go around with the hay raising to every one.

You are urged, therefore, to inaugurate a campaign in your locality for greater efficiency in freight handling by loading to the maximum and unloading. In such a campaign you may encounter difficulties in certain respects as a result of recognized conditions in other parts of the country. In such cases you should consider the advisability of modifying, for a limited period, or for all time, these equitable tariffs and conditions. The bureau has many years ago, when the cars in use were considerably smaller than the majority of those in use today.

PLENTY OF CRATES FOR STRAWBERRY CROP

Local Firm Says That It Has Enough Supply For All The Berry Raisers. Rumor Without Foundation.

There is no rumor, storage of crates for strawberries has been virtually without foundation and that the making of the crop is in no way impeded by this cause, is the statement of William T. Leslie, secretary and treasurer of the Barrow Brothers Seed & Supply company, which has handled a great part of the boxes used on the tract since it became a berry tract. Leslie says that the company had on hand long before the berry crop was ripe, a carload of pint hallecks, of which there has never been a shortage, and at the beginning of the season had a number of pint berry crates. An extra order for a carload of crates was put in early but was not filled immediately, with the result that for two days the company had no crates. During these two days only two applications were made for crates. Since that time plenty of crates have been on hand at all times.

The fateful times in which we are living are so filled with great happenings that many of them pass almost without notice. One such is the enormous task of constructing camps for the six hundred thousand non-toilet soldiers which the government is just now undertaking. Sixteen sites have been selected in as many different states; and at each camp is to house and care for about forty thousand men and will require about a thousand different buildings, the lumber and other material that must be secured and transported and the labor to be done is simply appalling—as is also the cost, estimated at $375,000,000.

A Washington correspondent says: "Coal has become the hand maiden of food in the eyes of the World Administration." This account of the evident anxiety shown to assure the nation a sufficient supply of coal at reasonable prices, which is one of the most vital of the practical necessities and ability of President Wilson and his advisors.

"HYMN OF FREEDOM."
Recognizing the general dissatisfaction with anything that has been presented up to date, as a "National Anthem," Mrs. Gladys E. Hays, following by Mrs. Gladys E. Hays to which thrilling music is to have been composed, as a competitor.

Washington "Star": "Would you marry a man who was trying to marry to lodge military service?"
"Sure I would," she said with her eyes closed; "that's the kind of man you could first take to make up beds and wash dishes."

Another German "victory" was achieved last Saturday by killing and wounding some hundreds of women and children with bombs dropped into London from air ships!

No hate in our anger.
No vengeance in our wrath.
We hold the line of freedom.
This is the flag of freedom.
Where's oppression—smash it.
We lose the sword once more to stay the foot of conquest.
And pray an end of war.

There has been a labor organization in England known as "The Sons of Ives." The "I. W. W." should change its name in the interest of truth.

Portents of a radical political upheaval come from Germany. The meetings of the Reichstag this week are expected to be sensational.

The advent of American troops in France crystallizes the profound contempt for this country previously manifested by Germany into a perfect howl of abject hate. One German paper, after discussing with shouts of laughter the reports of our military preparation here says:
"Even if the reports were confirmed, they would represent, as far as we are concerned, nothing but pure American bluff, only less sumner the miserable little mobilization numbers worth mentioning. It is possible that the American government will use the war spirit which it has artfully inflamed in the city to make the army bigger and more efficient, but it certainly is not thinking of its employment in the European war."

The Chicago "Herald," speaking about the mayor of Chicago says: "We are too big to cry and too hard to urge to help." What is complaining is more negative than positive. Another Chicagoan says: "Chicago's motto is 'I will, that Mayor Thompson, I won't!' He has objected to or officially hindered almost every measure of progress, including the Liberty Loan and the endorsement of the Selective Training Law. This is not in accord with the spirit of the Chicago people and the council adopted a resolution looking toward impeachment. But as the 'Chicago Herald' says, 'Chicago is not a peacock land; a certain distinction to the impeached; some officials should be merely impeached; as if they had no honor left.' It is probably satisfied with having impeached him. As Mayor Thompson is an American born and American educated, the directors of the committee are explained only in the way least favorable to him, namely: that Chicago is the sixth largest German city in the world.

It is thought probable that the house will accept the action taken by the senate and Saturday in writing national prohibition into a food control bill, so far as a detailed bill is concerned. The further enactment requiring the president to take over to the government all the liquor in bonded warehouses at a certain date, raises a query as to what will then be done with it.

GERMANY EXHAUSTED FINANCIALLY BY THE LONG CONTINUED WAR

Resources of Empire Taxed to Utmost by the Tremendous Costs of Struggle—Deception Resorted to by Officials to Hide Condition From People—Ship Workers Demand Dutch Money.

(By Raphael Georges Levy, the well-known French Academician and Economist.)
(Copyright, 1917, by International News Service)

PARIS, July 8. (By Mail)—The time has arrived when a thorough examination can be made of Germany's economical and financial situation after nearly three years of war. The following summary of the situation is based entirely on German sources of information, so that it cannot be said to be a biased review—unless, indeed, in Germany's favor. The conclusion is irrefragable. The premature predictions of our enemy's exhaustion which were made in 1914 and 1915 to today have safely crumbled. The hour of the collapse of the economic edifice of the Central Empire is fast approaching.

From the industrial viewpoint, Germany has had no difficulty in maintaining the activity of her motor trades during the war, because she has considerable resources in coal and has been able to supplement her iron supplies from the deposits in Luxembourg and the French basin of Briey, which her troops occupy. The rise in prices of coal, steel and even of certain manufacturers, including locomotives and cars, is small compared with the increase that has occurred in France. But a host of other industries are held up owing to the difficulty or impossibility of obtaining raw materials, such as cotton, wool, silk, many metals, etc.

From the commercial viewpoint, the blow which our enemy has sustained has been severe. Little is left of the former trade relations whose increasing volume was Germany's pride and placed her second in the world scale immediately after the United States. More than two-thirds of Germany's exports went to countries which are now at war with her and while she was able to continue her trade with contiguous neutral countries, I do not believe the volume of that trade has increased in the course of the war to any great extent.

The only prosperous workshops in Germany now are those working for the army and navy. Little is left of the ordinary trade, and have started a big branch near Munich. The building of cars and locomotives is active. But a great number of other plants are shut down.

One of the numerous German industries suffering from the war is that of potato, the exportation of which has been considerably reduced. In January last the Frankfurter Zeitung did not hesitate to declare that companies following an adventurous policy instead of husbanding their resources as they would do in peace time. The value of their potato output, which exceeded 500,000,000 yearly, has fallen to half that figure.

The intervention of the empire was tardy and vitiated by the fact that individual confederated States have their own interests in the potato deposits. The capital tied up in these undertakings is very considerable, but the dividend yield is small. There has lately been some talk of the essential monopoly of potato, but if the companies' stocks were taken over at present prices on the Bourse, the result would be deplorable for the public finances, if only the other hand the companies merely received payment on the basis of the real value of their potato deposits of which they would sustain an enormous loss.

cent treasury bonds of 25 being offered. The bonds are repayable from January 1, 1918, by half-yearly drawings at 110 per cent and one-twentieth of the total subscribed is to be thus to be paid off each year. From July, 1927, the treasury will have the bonds to finance all other existing bonds at par, but at the same time facility is given to holders to exchange their 4 1/2 per cent bonds into 4 per cent bonds to be paid off by drawings at 115 to the extent of one-twentieth of the remaining total over-year.

Ten years later, in 1927, the balance of the outstanding debt of the Reich will be paid off at par, or, if holders so wish, converted into 3 1/2 per cent, payable by drawings at 110 to the extent of one-twentieth yearly. The idea is to compensate the lowering of the interest rate by raising the price of reimbursement. The outstanding 3 1/2 per cent bonds cannot be paid off before 1907, when the loans, including unconverted bonds, will be completely liquidated.

In order to stimulate subscriptions, the German newspapers published charts claiming that Germany and her allies had spent only $25,000,000,000. The "per capita burden" in Germany was put at $23, and against $107.50 for France and $102 for England. It was also claimed that whereas Germany had expended only 50 per cent of her national revenue in war costs, Great Britain had expended 80 per cent for the same purpose.

It was noted that the prospectus of the "Sixth German Loan" spoke with less confidence than preceding ones in respect of obtaining a war indemnity for the repayment of war loans. Yet Herr Heydenbrand, chief of the Conservative party, has declared that the Emperor will be ruined unless a heavy war ransom be obtained. The subscription lists subsequently published showed that the number of subscribers had diminished, while municipalities, savings banks and diverse State institutions had increased their applications.

Among the efforts made by Germany to reduce her note circulation is the attempt to organize an underground circulation in Belgium and Poland and to withdraw the marks. It will be remembered that Germany arbitrarily removed from the Belgium National Bank and the Societe Generale of Belgium the $100,000,000 of Reichsbank and loan institutions held by these two establishments, which on December 22, 1914, were both invested with issuing rights by the Germans.

The military authorities in Belgium having declared that the value of the mark in that country shall be the par rate of 1:15, or about 50 per cent higher than the quotation on neutral markets, the usual result followed—the population hastened to get rid of all German notes and are holding on to all notes of franc denomination.

In Poland the invaders first tried to depreciate the value of the mark by assigning to it a value much too low in relation to the mark, but the measure failed. The ruble has never ceased to rise. In January, 1917, it was being exchanged at Warsaw for 270 marks, a figure higher than the metallic parity, which is only 217 marks.

Two banks have been founded in Poland. The Kowno Bank is a branch of the Bank of Commerce and Industry. It is authorized to issue bonds to the extent of 100,000,000 of rubles guaranteed by letters of exchange and German Treasury bills. The Loan Bank of Poland, founded at Warsaw in December, 1916, issues notes denominated in a new money, the Polish mark, to which is assigned the value of the German mark. The notes are guaranteed by Germany. It is hoped to have other notes replace German notes so that the latter can be withdrawn to Germany. Since April, 1917, the Polish note has been recognized as legal currency.

Interred Australian Says Junkers Feed Men Captured on a Wooden Diet in The Camps.

(By International News Service.)
LONDON, July 7.—F. Sifton Delmore, Australian soldier, who was taken prisoner by the Germans from the beginning of the war until he was released a few weeks ago, has arrived here and makes some remarkable revelations about the conditions among the Kaiser's people.
