

FARM HELP AND THE DRAFT

Rough estimates indicate that 40 per cent of the young men subject to draft are working on farms. A serious problem faces all American farmers. Rigid economies and efficient methods by labor saving equipment is demanded in today's management of your farm.

TWIN FALLS BANK & TRUST COMPANY

Don't put on the roof until you investigate

It is poor economy to save money by substituting something inferior but wouldn't you like to save on cost if you could get something better? You can get a better roof for less money if you put on

Certain-teed Roofing

Before its merits were recognized, roll roofing was regarded as a more or less temporary roof—but now CERTAIN-TEED has demonstrated that it is not only a most durable roof, but also the most efficient roof.

It is economical to buy, inexpensive to lay and costs practically nothing to maintain. It is light weight, clean, sanitary, fire-retardant and weather-tight.

It is now used as the preferable type of roof for office buildings, factories, hotels, stores, warehouses, garages, farm buildings etc., where durability is demanded. CERTAIN-TEED is guaranteed for 5, 10 or 15 years, according to thickness (1, 2 or 3 ply).

There are many roll roofings on the market, but only one CERTAIN-TEED. It pays to get the best. It costs no more to lay a CERTAIN-TEED roof than it does to lay a poor roof, but there is a vast difference in the wear. You can't tell the quality of a roofing by looks or feel. Your only safety is the label. Be sure that it is CERTAIN-TEED—then you are certain of quality and guaranteed satisfaction.

Certain-teed Slate-Surfaced Asphalt Shingles are supplanting wood and slate shingles for residences. They cost less, are just as good looking, wear better, won't fall off, buckle or split. They are fire-retardant, and do not have to be painted or stained.

Certain-teed Paints and Varnishes are the best quality paint materials, ground and mixed with mechanical accuracy. Made for all uses and in all colors. With paint as with Roofing, the name CERTAIN-TEED is a guarantee of quality and satisfaction.

Open Letter From Your Uncle Sam

Tails of Extra Taxes Begin Next Week, Which Will Affect Many Things.

(International News Service) Washington, D. C., Oct. 28. Mr. Ultimate Consumer: My Dear Sir—You are due for some terrific jolts about the end of this week, for by November 3 many of the new taxes will be in effect, and your pocketbook will grow smaller each day.

Some of the taxes are dated November 3. Others go into effect 30 days after the passage of the War Revenue Act, which would make the date approximately November 3.

Many of the new taxes are new in existence. And, while others have not gone into effect, dealers in the taxed articles are beginning to protect themselves. This is noticed by the case of tobacco, which should not properly be taxed until November 3.

From and after November 1, these taxes become operative: Three per cent upon transportation of property by freight

One cent for each twenty cents or fraction of cost.

Eight per cent of the cost of railway and steamer fares.

Ten per cent of the cost of berths, state room and chair car seats.

Five cents upon telephone, telegraph and radio messages costing more than fifteen cents.

Eight cents per $100 or fraction on amount of life insurance policies.

One cent per dollar on premium paid for marine fire, casualty and inland insurance.

One cent on each ten cents or fraction paid for admissions. Children under ten years pay but one cent total tax. Free passes carry a tax equivalent to that paid by the purchaser of a ticket. Shows where the maximum is five cents are exempted at amusement parks charging no more than ten cents. Charity fairs are exempt. Admissions will include some tax and there will be a tax upon reservations.

First class mail will call for three-cent stamps where it now calls for one-cent ones. Postages will cost twice as much as at present. However letters delivered by carrier from the postoffice where sent will be charged but the present rate. Mail to soldiers on foreign duty will go free.

Club dues above $12 per year will be taxed ten per cent.

The above are all taxes which will be imposed by the end of the week. The tobacco tax will go into effect at the same time. However, it has been delayed already by practically every retailer. It was put into effect by the dealers at the same time that the liquor taxes were imposed—that the passage of the act, October 3.

The automobile taxes, sporting goods taxes and drug taxes went into effect at the same time.

Of course, these taxes are all in addition to your income tax, upon which you will have to make a return before the 15th of March. So you had better begin your conservation of wealth right now—just at the time you are planning your Christmas expenses.

Yours regrettably, UNCLE SAM.

Speculation in Canned Stuff Stopped

Sales in Future Prohibited And Notice Is Served That Licenses Will Be Issued.

(I. N. S. Leased Wire) WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—The government today moved to check speculation in canned goods. Special regulations were issued by Food Administrator Hoover to govern canners, who will be placed under license on November 1st.

Rigid prohibitions were promulgated against the sale of futures in canned peas, corn, tomatoes, salmon and sardines before February 1. This date will be changed later, if it is deemed necessary to meet the needs of the military forces of the allies.

The custom which many canners have followed of overselling their estimated output will be discontinued under the following regulations:

"The licensee shall not sell for future delivery any canned peas, canned corn, or canned tomatoes in excess of 75 per cent of the normal yield of such crops, as the licensee has already agreed under contract or legal contract. The licensee shall not sell for future delivery any canned salmon or canned sardines in excess of 75 per cent of the estimated pack, conservatively figured with regard to his capacity and to the supply of fish which reasonably can be expected by him."

Other rules were issued requiring the canners this year to adjust their grades and sizes to more useful types of cans. The food administration announced that the government would compel the canners to sell at a reasonable margin of profit over cost price without regard to market speculative values.

Food Pledges Are Largely Signed

More Than One Thousand in The City And Good Results Expected In The Country.

While reports from the county are not yet all in, the indications are that notwithstanding the difficulties under which the food conservation committee labored, by reason of duplicating liberty loans campaigns, a great measure of success attended the city, where the general management was under the guidance of J. McMillan. 1031 pledges were secured.

The following is the list of product workers and the vote secured.

- Precedent 1, P. El Dean, O. E. Bryant, 191; Robert W. A. Guther, W. Lamb, 302; Precedent 3, C. W. Parks, Dr. Coburn, 180; precedent 4, H. E. Bowers, Ed. Talbert, 160; precedent 5, William Adams, 174; precedent 6, G. C. Taylor, Mr. Conover, 104; precedent 7, George Wilcox, 52. Total, 1081.

Veteran Embezzled Over $130,000

Was Custodian of Funds For Peoples Building and Loan Company of Chicago for Forty Years.

(I. N. S. Leased Wire) CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—Speculations alleged to total $130,000 by Harrison R. Kelly, 78 years old, civil war veteran, whose body was found in Lake Michigan October 15, were revealed today by the Associated Press. Russell closed the Peoples Building and Loan Association and installed a custodian for the affairs of the firm. The state auditor alleges the association is insolvent.

Among Kelly's alleged victims are said to be scores of widows and persons of small means who entrusted their savings to him for investment.

Directors of the loan association today expressed bewilderment over the reason for his alleged theft and as to in a quarry over what use was made of the money.

With revelations of his alleged shortage it now believed he conducted his life rather than face danger of exposure.

Kelly's pecuniations, it is said, extended over a period of 20 years. He had been secretary of the loan association for more than forty years.

The alleged defalcations were revealed when two books, a small red book and another marked "Ledger K," were found in an envelope addressed "Mr. Successor," which Kelly left in his desk.

Presbyterians Plan War Aid

Meeting in Pittsburgh Will Organize Laymen and Ministers To Help The United States.

(International News Service) PITTSBURGH, Oct. 28.—Nearly 1000 ministers and laymen of the Presbyterian church, many of them leaders in the denomination, are here today to attend the educational rally, which has for its purpose the outlining of methods of co-operation with the government in the prosecution of the war.

The rally, which is under the direct supervision of the national service of the church, will consist of three meetings—one of the members of the commission with the pastors, another of the commission members with the pastors and one layman from each church represented and the third a public mass meeting. The first two are to be held this afternoon and the third tonight. Dr. J. Wilbur H. Chapman, of New York city, Moderator of the General Assembly, and Rev. Dr. John F. Carson, Chairman of the Service Commission will make addresses at all the meetings.

The plans of the National Service Commission, which was appointed by the Moderator of the General Assembly at the meeting in May, involve, in brief, public gatherings throughout the country, obtaining the services of ministers, including pastors and officers of the various Presbyterian agencies, both for public meetings and for ministering to the enlisted men, evangelizing and personal work within the military camps in co-operation with the Young Men's Christian Association and similar agencies, aggressive and through work in the regions surrounding the camps by co-operation with pastors in nearby towns and villages, co-operation with the Red Cross, co-operating with the government in establishing and maintaining a white zone around every camp so as to render the environment of the enlisted youth free from the temptation of intemperance and impurity.

I. W. W. Blows Up Oilman's Home

(I. N. S. Leased Wire) TULSA, Okla., Oct. 28.—The home of J. Edgar Pew, general manager of the Carter-Oil Company in the mid-continent fields, was badly damaged by a dynamite explosion here early this morning. Those arriving on the scene shortly after the explosion said that they remember the environment of distinguished and a fuse was found near the house.

The theory advanced is that the I. W. W. is responsible as all co-workers have been making things hot for that band in the mid-continent field for some time, taking precautions to have their farms and other valuable guarded.

The entire front end of Mr. Pew's home was blown in directly under a front bedroom in which he was sleeping. He was not injured.

Opportunity Awaits You on the Gooding Tract!

The following are a few of the many bargains in irrigated lands which we have to offer in the fertile Wood River Valley:

- 160 Acres 6 miles from Gooding, on mail and school wagon, 65 A. cleared and has been in cultivation, exceptionally good terms will be granted to purchaser who will improve the land. Price $65.00 per A.
- 240 Acres 3 miles from Gooding on Boise-Yellowstone Highway, all in alfalfa, fenced with woven wire, Little Wood river runs through the land making a splendid stock proposition, this is all barbed and the flood system used for irrigation. Price $140.00.
- 40 Acres 2 miles from Gooding. All in cultivation, 20 A. in alfalfa, 7 A. in strike, 6 A. red clover, 4 A. in bluegrass pasture, 4-room house, barn for 8 cows and 6 horses, deep well and wind mill, fenced and cross fenced. Price $155 per A. Cash $2200.00, balance easy terms.
- 80 Acres 5 miles from Gooding, 40 acres alfalfa, 25 acres tame grass pasture, fenced and cross fenced with woven wire, Good 4-room house. Price $155.00 per acre. Terms, $1800.00 cash, balance $1000.00 annually at 7 per cent.

Gooding is the educational center of Southern Idaho, has $40,000 graded school building; $65,000 high school building; $100,000 State School for Deaf, Dumb and Blind; $400,000 Methodist college now being completed. There is ample water for all irrigation purposes stored in the Magic Reservoir which impounds 200,000 acre feet of water. Plenty of fine quality soft domestic water can be obtained anywhere on the tract at depths of 10 to 150 feet. Gooding is on the main line of the O. S. L. railroad. Probably no portion of Idaho has better opportunities for raising sheep and cattle than the Wood River valley, with plenty of range in the unsurveyed foothills and plenty of government reserve land.

Further information will be gladly furnished on request.

ROADS AND ROAD BONDS

No sane man in Twin Falls county will deny the pressing necessity for better public highways—for all-the-year-round GOOD ROADS!

Every thinking man in Twin Falls county admits that the money expended on the roads spasmodically and by piecemeal from year to year is practically wasted; and that the problem of sure-enough good roads can only be solved by adopting some complete and comprehensive plan for their permanent improvement!

Every man knows and all men know that no satisfactory plan for the permanent improvement of a system of roadways throughout the county can possibly be financed without an issue of bonds for that purpose.

All men know and every man knows, or can know, that the present plan for a highway bond issue will impose no appreciable burden of taxation and will at the same time secure to the county a very considerable amount of direct aid from the revenues of the state at large!

They who, in the name of common sense, should any thinking man—especially any man who is compelled to constantly use the county highways for the transportation of produce and personal convenience—why should any such person fail to support the pending question of bond issue by voice and vote?

Now is the time! Opportunity may knock again at the doors of the farmers of Twin Falls county, and it may not. But it is knocking now and should, and we think will be heard and heeded.

McCLURE'S TWO LECTURES

men methods are provided for all. But, after the primary work, poverty makes further education for the many impossible.

China was taken up briefly and in close connection with Japan. The vast area of this country gives her great natural security; and it is in part for this reason that her people are not aggressive nor war-like. American are badly mistaken in thinking the European nations who have secured "so-called peace" in China are fastened like because she has never demanded any. Upon the contrary, she, therefore, and the United States believe in the American, and they say they are long on nice talk but never do anything. Millions of Chinese live inside the concessions with but thousands of Chinese and they are regarded as a godsend.

Taking the war in Europe and especially the German atrocities, as the subject of his second lecture, the speaker rapidly covered the kaleidoscopic phases of European diplomacy from the hour of the treaty of July 1914. Although wonderfully interesting and full of information, the details are impossible in a resume of this character. Emphasis was laid upon a treaty between England and Germany, fully agreed upon during the summer of 1914, and only lacking official ratification when the war came. The details of this accidental agreement of a copy of this treaty during an interview with an ex-diplomat on a railway train were strikingly interesting, as also his declaration that there could have been no war had the treaty been signed and acknowledged—although one wondered how long Germany would have lasted in the summer of 1914.

The Inchoate treaty here referred to was one covering the commercial division of the Asiatic Turkey between France, Germany and Great Britain which if carried out would have threatened the future of the British empire. This was to give the German greed for power in the interest of peace, and was lashed by both—Bismarck, Helldorf, and Zimmermann. He also stated that the speaker in person by Zimmermann while he was in Germany last year, and he was the first to publish it, but the Prussian military machine was already in motion and the military leaders so stacked the cards that the war moved on.

The popular campaign of the war was fully and carefully planned by the Germans through every stage—the plan being to move just as they did, to strike, but not to pause to dig in Paris, but to capture the French army by a flank and rear, cut it off from the sea and force the total disorganization or capture, a la Sedan, in the unexpected delay of just four days in pushing over, instead of through, Belgium, doubtless gave a chance for the small English contingent to add its weight to the Allied army of Paris to get into line. But the German army was still immensely superior, and its defeat at the battle of the Marne was absolutely due, in the last analysis, to a lack of munitions. This miscalculation was laid at the door of the then chief of staff, and von Moltke the official head of the staff. These facts came to Mr. McClure directly from German staff officers at rank and file fully believes them.

Looking to the present situation in Belgium, occupied France and Serbia, the speaker declared that the staff had not been told, nor would be any after the end of the war when the mass of fully authenticated facts would be given out and, repetition and, if possible, the punishment of individuals offenders sought. Then proceeded to bring before his hearers quite enough of detail to blanch the face, curdle the blood and cause each hearer to feel as though he were like quills upon the fretful porcupine.

Speaking first of the spoilation of Doljuna, he quoted from official and official German reports records of over two billions of dollars worth of money, machinery, raw material and other private property looted and carried into Germany during the first eighteen months. The outrages to the person, terrible as they were in Belgium, he declared, were more horrible in Serbia—and worst of all in Serbia. In support, detailed accounts, in every case from unquestioned authority: that of participants or eye witnesses, were adduced. These included the wholesale shooting of the burghers—"not in revenge," said the German chronicler, "but to deter others"; the burning and looting of towns; the violation of women of all ages, actually followed, in some cases, after every possible indignity had been exhausted, by burning alive. In one fine French mansion, the remote island as well as the servants were compelled to walk upon a dining party of German officers, absolutely nude, before suffering the supreme outrage!

The concluding portion of the time was devoted to the wonderful spirit of the French people, who both individually and collectively have sustained their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor for the service of their country in this its great hour of peril. Patriotic self-abnegation is the rule. Letters were read, written by young French soldiers in the trenches to be given wives or parents only in case the writers made the last sacrifice. These would melt a heart of stone, and all through last year and the first months of this year those fine French faces were turned to America, land of freedom and of freedom, whose first great struggle was won by the French blood, and paid lips were saying: "What will America do?" Pausing a moment, the speaker added: "And we stand out!"

But the United States is no longer out, and the feeling and spirit with which Pershing's men were greeted in France was graphically sketched. Mr. McClure makes no pretensions to oratory. He does not even arrive for a climax, nor striking peroration. But when he said, in his quiet way: "I have seven sons and nephews now in France, and I would rather not one of them come home than that none of them had gone," there was first a hush and then a burst of spontaneous applause which testified the heart of the audience to be in the right place. It was in the same quiet way, after nearly two hours during which he received the "finest" possible attention that he followed a moment's pause, saying: "That's all; I'm done." He afterwards confessed that it was by no means "all"; but that he was afraid of his own and the audience's reaction when he found himself when he looked at his watch.

The mass of material from which he selected his most striking details will soon appear in Book Form. The chief purpose it was thoroughly collected; and when this is the case, the American people will be able to see the full of the true inwardness of the situation, and of past events, both in the light and at the heart of the matter. It can be obtained from the whole library of war literature.

Baptist for Work for Conservation

Researcher Anderson Appoints a Committee to Co-operate in Saving Meat and Wheat.

After presenting the requests of the national food and administrators and of denominational leaders who are co-operating with the government in the conservation of our food resources, Rev. O. T. Anderson, pastor of the Baptist church, appointed a food conservation committee to represent the church and to secure co-operation of the entire congregation in the economy and conservation of meat and wheat.

The plan is the same as that which will church have been asked to adopt—limiting the consumption of a food shortage for the American people and their allies, the government has asked the churches throughout the country of all denominations to present the matter to the people and ask them to appoint committees whose duty would be to distribute cards to the people in the congregation each Sunday from now until December 31, asking them to report on the cards on Sunday how many meatless, wheatless and wasteless meals they have had during the week. Each family is asked by the government to have at least seven wheatless meals, fourteen meatless meals and twenty-one wasteless meals each week. Any other cereals may take the place of wheatless meals. Any other meats may take the place of beef, pork and mutton. All leftovers at each meal should be saved and used at the next. The committee in the Baptist church consists of Mrs. H. F. Watson, Mrs. O. T. Anderson and Mr. Nasonman. They are to take up the cards and turn in to the pastor every week and he will tabulate the reports and send them in to Mr. Herbert Hoover.

The speaker made it clear that the government did not expect any one to go hungry or to starve himself, but at the same time he would urge that every family ought to substitute those things in which there is likely to be the greatest scarcity with some other food. He also emphasized the fact that the government was looking to the churches to help it in the conservation of its food resources, and showed how it was possible for the churches in this time of national crisis to prove anew their right to exist. The speaker thought it was a distinct honor which had been conferred upon the churches by the government. He believed that most churches would be willing to co-operate and that those churches which would not were untrue to their teaching of the brotherhood of man and the Golden Rule. He declared that he did not want his church to be a slacker.

ANNOUNCEMENT

DR. EVANS, THE OPTICIAN
 Will Open Offices about Nov. 3rd
 IN THE McCOORMICK BUILDING, OVER BOOTH'S STORE IN THE ROOMS FORMERLY OCCUPIED BY DR. PIKE.

Dr. Evans has practiced optometry in Twin Falls for many years, coming here first from Boise in 1908. In 1916, as the building which we occupied on Main Street was to be torn down, we moved our office temporarily to our home. This arrangement being rather inconvenient to our patients we have decided to open offices in the McCoormick building, FULLY EQUIPPED FOR THE EXAMINATION OF EYES.

IN THE LATEST AND MOST SCIENTIFIC MANNER
 With the Methods It is Unnecessary to Paralyze the Muscles of the Eyes With Drugs in Order to Get a Correct Diagnosis of the Errors in Refraction and the Consequent Eye Trouble.

It is only necessary for the skilled optometrist to use enough of your time to make a careful examination which he does while the muscles of your eyes are up and under their normal or usual condition. But the examination is conducted and glasses (if needed) are made with the idea of relaxing the muscles and relieving any strain which may exist. After wearing our glasses a few weeks the patient is requested to return to our office for another examination at which time we may find that different lenses may be made which will give still better results. Any changes which can be made during a period of a year we make at our own expense. The idea is to give the very best results which can be obtained and the charges will be reasonable enough for any one to pay.

We consider ours one of the most important of all professions, and if you have need of an eye specialist you should want the best. Many times evidences of eye strain are found in remote parts of the body. It is a well known fact that headache, nervousness, dizziness, indigestion and other ills of the body often come from eye strain. If you suffer, call and see us. Remember we fit glasses correctly and attend each case one year. If you don't know us ask your neighbors. We have many patients in your vicinity to whom we would gladly refer you.

OUR PRICES ARE REASONABLE
 YOUR EYES ARE PRICELESS
 Perhaps You Have Been Waiting for Some Time to See Us
 NOW IS THE OPPORTUNITY

THE FIGHTING TRAIL

ORPHEUM-THEATRE

AN EXTRAORDINARY FOOTPLAY

Each chapter is a complete story in itself, and a jump can be made from one to the other without in the least destroying the sequence of the story. William Duncan and Carol Holloway in the stellar roles accomplish some of the exciting scenes. The chapters follow the adventures which befall the discoverer of a valuable ingredient for the making of a powerful explosive, and the drama of a foreign enemy to get possession of the secret. The photoplay is unusually beautiful and artistic.

The marvelous adventure story of the great outdoors written by J. Stuart Blackton and Cyrus Townsend Brady.

THE CAST

Jobb Gwyn—William Duncan American mining engineer on whose shoulders rests the responsibility of furnishing the Central Powers with a rare mineral used in the manufacture of a very high explosive shell.

Nan Lawton, the heroine—Carol Holloway

"Cut Deep" Rawls, an outlaw—George Holt

"Shot Sling" Drant, his partner—Joe Ryan

Heidrick Von Bleck—John H. Gray

The eye of the Central Powers, not an enemy to an individual, but to a country—an international spy.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS

Fight at every turn by outlaws and agents of the Central Powers.

Gwyn, an American mining engineer, is trying to work a western mine producing an ingredient needed by the Central Powers in the manufacture of explosives.

The mine is owned by Nan Lawton, with whom Gwyn is in love.

Rawls kills her father and her servants in an effort to obtain possession of the mine chart and finally trap Gwyn and Nan in their own home which they set in flames.

The offer the imprisoned pair their lives in return for the mine chart, but are refused and the house burns.

The outlaws ride away, believing that Gwyn and Nan have escaped, but they are captured and reach the Lost Mine Hotel.

CHAPTER SIX

The Lodge of Deceit

"His head!" the matter of Gwyn's head!

He said not a word while Drant made the explanation, but his heavy brown eyebrows closed together in a frown that signified that he was anything but pleased.

Suddenly, as Von Bleck was peering through the half light at his captives, the three men started to their feet with a jump.

Outside in the distance, could be plainly heard hoofbeats of two horses. They were approaching the hut at a gallop, but they were still perhaps a quarter of a mile away.

Von Bleck and Drant looked at each other; in the minds of all was a single thought, Gwyn and Nan were returning, possibly with assistance, to get the chart. It was impossible to tell from the sound of the approaching horses, how many of them there were. The three in the cabin knew that they would be caught if they did not act immediately. They would have to think quick, and move quick.

Drant was the first to awaken of the situation. He ran into the kitchen and returned a moment later with a can of kerosene oil. Von Bleck watched him almost with dread as he poured the fluid over the floor and the furniture, and then went into an adjoining room to which the body of Corbion had been removed, to sprinkle the oil about the walls.

It was obvious he intended to burn the hacienda to the ground. Although Von Bleck and Rawls knew this much, they did not reveal all of Drant's dark thoughts. When he had poured the kerosene profusely about and emptied the can, he lit it with a candle which had been serving as an illumination.

With a wave of his hand he indicated toward the kitchen. Von Bleck and Rawls followed him out.

The hoofbeats were no time had grown louder and more distinct. Just as Drant drew the bolt of the door that separated the living room from the kitchen, they stepped outside. In another moment the living room door swung open and Gwyn rushed in, closely followed by Nan. They were alone. A glance at the flames which were leaping high and thick against the kerosene revealed the truth to them immediately. Gwyn, about over his shoulder to Nan, rushed to the kitchen door and opened it and pulled. Then his face ghastly white in the light of the flickering fire, he turned to Nan.

"What?" he exclaimed, his voice choking, as he feared to utter the words. "They have been here and started the fire—and they have locked us in. It's a trick. We can't get out."

Gwyn's words were the truth. Von Bleck, Rawls and Drant had bolted the kitchen door after they had gone through it. They had run outside by the rear entrance as Nan and Gwyn had entered, and locked the door through which they had come, from the outside. The windows of the hacienda were barred with stout iron imbedded in the sills. This had been a precaution taken by Corbion when he had been in possession of the mine.

Nan and Gwyn were prisoners in the burning building. Already a heavy smoke caused by the burning of the kerosene was filling the room. They could feel it filling their throats and lungs. Suddenly, Gwyn was seized by the hand and the door behind the flames with a rattle and whistle.

Gwyn was vainly attempting to bend the window bars apart, the leering, and indicated for her to look at him from the outside. In the glare of the fire as it showed upon the panes it looked hideous. Von Bleck broke the glass with his fist.

"You might as well give in," Von Bleck announced. "You can't get out until the side burns away and you'll suffer before then. All we want is the chart—half your life and we'll open the door and be your friends. What do you say?"

"All I can say," replied Gwyn, "is that if you want the map you'd better find a more practical way to obtain it. It is in my pocket and it will stay there if it burns. And then it will be more impossible for you to get it than it ever was." He turned and left the window.

Von Bleck's face remained at the window for perhaps a minute longer and then disappeared. The agent of the Central Powers realized that what Gwyn said was true. If he burned to death in the flames, the chart also would burn.

Meanwhile, Nan had thought of a plan. Taking Gwyn by the arm, and standing out of the window to assure herself that Von Bleck or his companions were not watching, she led him to the trap door through which Corbion had brought the can of kerosene from the cave. With nervous haste she made her way to the fact that the room was filled with smoke, almost to the point of suffocation, they opened the door in the street. Gwyn held Nan up to the opening and then lowered himself from view, closing the door after him.

Von Bleck raised his head from his hands and stared at Nan through the open door. For hours, it seemed, he had been sitting before the hard board table in the mountain above of Drant and Cut Deep Rawls, with his head resting in his open palms. He had been staring blankly at the rough wood that served as a table top, and his fingers had drummed nervously against his forehead.

Now, as he raised his head and a breath of cool air swept through the door, he braced himself. He arose, brushed back his ruffled black hair, and strode out to the trail.

For nearly half an hour he wandered aimlessly down the trail, without raising his eyes. Suddenly, he started at the sound of voices. He looked through the trees and a group of men mingled with fear and astonishment.

Not fifteen feet away, seated upon two logs, were the three he had thought had been burned to death in the hacienda of Don Carlos de Cordoba! His first impulse was to turn and run, but he checked himself.

He faced a smile and regained his bearings. In a moment he was again the cool-headed Gwyn, and he had borne successfully the responsibility of the Central Powers upon his shoulders.

Gwyn dismounted and approached him.

"I'll trouble you to come with me," he said, calmly. "If I could cause your death, I would be glad to do so, but in the charge of attempted murder, but I have better use for you."

Von Bleck made no reply. He turned and followed Gwyn, and as they again mounted and rode slowly along the trail in the direction from which he had just come. Nan walked her horse behind, so that the agent of the Central Powers was between her and Gwyn.

For several minutes they traveled thus, until Gwyn finally drew to a halt in a clearing.

"What?" he asked, as he looked at Drant and Rawls, stood a few feet in from the road. Into this Gwyn led Nan and Von Bleck. There were no signs of life about the place, and an old bear standing on end, was its only furnishing. Gwyn moved it to the side of a post that ran to the roof and motioned to Von Bleck to sit on it. Then, without speaking a word, he proceeded to tie his captive to the post with a rope he had taken from his saddle.

Then, with a snick he made a tourniquet of a piece of the rope and drew it tighter and tighter about Von Bleck's arm until the latter winced with pain.

"There will be no bush-boating," Gwyn announced firmly. "Tell me where the other half of the chart is or I'll break your arm. You are not a child, enough to brag. Von Bleck, to know when you are beaten. You have the country and the law against you. You can't go on acting like a chory outlaw and keep on getting away with it. The cards are against you and you can't win. Where is the other part of the map?"

"Cut Deep Rawls has it," he said slowly. "He will be in the hotel in Lost Mine some time today. I was to meet him there."

Gwyn smiled as Von Bleck spoke. He could see from the defeated look upon the Central Powers' agent that he was telling the truth. Taking the coveted half of the chart which he held from his pocket, he gave it to Nan with his revolver.

"I am going to Lost Mine to get the rest of it," he said. "I'll leave this with you. I might get into a fight and lose it. I think you'll have any trouble with our friend, here, so just keep him covered with the gun until he gets back. If he went out, mount his horse and take away toward the town."

As soon as the clatter of hoofs died to silence in the distance, Von Bleck began to plead with Nan. He complained of a stinging pain in his arm, and indicated her to look at his hand. The sight of it made her shudder. It was wet with blood that had been flowing from the bullet wound made by Yarek Joe in the fight at the hacienda. At first Nan refused to listen to his pleading, but finally, giving way to her sympathies, she loosened the rope which bound the wound.

Von Bleck, as she did so, reeled backward against the post in apparent exhaustion. Nan watched him for a moment to see if he would recover, but when he did not, she became frightened and rushed out for some water, which she obtained in a gourd that lay beside a well but a few feet from the well.

She placed the gourd to Von Bleck's lips, and she stepped from it. Nan watched him with sympathy, though she knew in her heart that he did not deserve it. Suddenly, with such rapidity that she was taken absolutely by surprise, Von Bleck jumped from his seat and snatched the revolver from her hand. He had worked his hand loose after Nan had slackened the rope that bound it and unfastened his bonds. Leveling the gun at her he demanded in tones that made her wonder how she could have held any sympathy for him at all.
