WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—In losing first prisoners to the Germans the United States has truly to form, declared army officers today. At the same time they pointed out that it is a good omen.

In the war of 1813 the first American expedition against the British was a failure, ending in the loss of prisoners. In the Mexican war the enemy took American soldiers prisoners along the Rio Grande before our troops really got into action. In the civil war the Confederates took first prisoners and in 1904 several American sentries fell into the hands of the Spaniards before the real fighting began. The result of all these conflicts is easily recalled.

POSTMASTER IS ANXIOUS TO STOP GOOSE MAILING

SAYS LACK OF CO-OPERA- TION DELAYS TRANSMIS- SION OF MANY LETTERS

Should Have Street Number on Letters

Too Many Get Letters for the Clerks to Become Familiar With Them All—New Rules Regarding Parcel Post.

"Patrons of the Twin Falls postoffice are very careless about having their mail boxes checked for street and residence number, post office box, or business address," said Postmaster M. A. Strunk yesterday. "Owing to the fact that there are several employees in the local postoffice who have not been in the service a great while and are not acquainted with the city directory it is necessary to give a great many of these letters directory service. This means a lot of extra work in the office and a delay for the patron receiving the mail."

"Business firms should invariably have their box number or street address printed on their envelopes and postal cards should always place their complete return address on each piece of matter mailed."

It is also possible for postal clerks to familiarize themselves with the address of all patrons of an office having only two or three hundred patrons but it is an impossibility in an office having 18 thousand.

"Business firms and all other patrons are requested to post their mail as early in the day as possible. A great many firms hold all their mail for posting until about 5:30 p. m. That in the busiest times in the local office and quite frequently it is not possible to dispatch all the mail that the senders expect to be dispatched on the evening train to the post office."

"For the convenience of those sending packages, I wish that you would give as much publicity as possible to the following notice from Postmaster General A. S. Burleson:—"

"Section 456, Postal Laws and Regulations is amended by the addition of the following as paragraphs 7 and 8, effective December 1, 1917:—"

"7. Upon every parcel or package transported from one point in the United States to another by parcel post on which the postage amounts to 25 cents or more, there shall be paid a tax the amount of each 25 cents or fractional part thereof charged for such transportation, to be paid by the consignee. No such parcel or package shall be transported unless a stamp or stamps representing the tax due shall have been affixed thereto. (Act of October 3, 1917, Section 507, Paragraph 1.)"

"8. The tax on fourth-class matter referred to in the preceding paragraph is not applicable to parcels on which the postage amounts to less than 25 cents. On a parcel subject to 25 cents postage the tax is one cent; on parcels on which the postage is from 25 to 50 cents the tax is two cents, and so on. Parcels shall not be accepted for mailing unless both the required postage and tax are fully prepaid. Special internal revenue stamps shall be used to pay the tax; postage stamps are not valid for this purpose. The failure of any postmaster to observe the foregoing shall be reported to the Third Assistant Postmaster General, Division of Classification."

"Internal revenue stamps are affixed to parcels in payment of the tax must be cancelled by the sender placing, or causing to be placed, thereon his written or stamped initials together with the date upon which the stamps are attached or used. In no case, however, should the foregoing stamp postage stamps affixed to parcels; such stamps must be cancelled only by postage employees."

"Internal revenue stamps for use in paying such tax will be supplied to postmasters in due course for sale to the public."

white bread on Wednesday. Reduce use of crackers.
Most serve no meats of any kind on Tuesdays.

Use more chicken, fish, hare, rabbit, quail, quon, lobster, oysters, sea foods, clams and egg dishes of all kinds. Use less beef, mutton and pork. Serve smaller portions of all meats, and of these meats of moderate size, and charge accordingly. War portions at reduced prices may be served. Provide more entrees and small dishes. Hosts are more generous as they contain nearly the same nutritive values as meat. Serve banana or apple pie, or a tart, as a garniture. Serve no meat of any kind on Tuesdays, and institute wheatless and meatless or other days as far as possible.

Milk—Use it all. Economize on the milk and cream, except for children. Serve buttermilk. Serve cottage cheese, ricotta, and cream. Milk is especially nutritious. Use skimmed milk in cooking. A great quantity of it goes to waste in the country. Use creamed corn. The child must have whole milk, therefore, reduce use of cream.

Sugar—Serve no filled dishes as possible as far as butter, lard and lard and in any event use vegetable oil for frying, that is, olive oil, cotton seed, vegetable oil compounds, etc. They are equally good. Serve all butter in standard pats for guests and employees. A butter pat machine is a good investment. Use all meat fats from meats before cooking and sell the waste fats to the soap maker, thereby increasing supply of soap for the household.

Do not waste money on candy and sweet drinks. Use honey, maple syrup, molasses, and dark syrups with hot cakes and waffles, in order to save money. Use all fruit, including all the classes of fruit preserves, jams, marmalades and jellies. Use brown sugar in baking and economize by the use of granulated sugar on the table. Do not frost or ice cakes unnecessarily. Use honey for sweetening pastry and other baked goods.

Vegetables—Use more vegetables and potatoes. Make fruits and vegetables into salads and attractive dishes. Use all vegetables, including all the classes of all kinds. Encourage the use of cheese with salads. We have a great surplus of vegetables and they can be used by substituting them for staples so the staples need not be saved.

HOW YOU CAN SAVE FOOD.

The following general plan as outlined by Mr. Herbert Hoover was adopted October 2, 1917, at the meeting of the State Executive Committee, called by Mr. H. P. Hicckel, food administrator for Idaho:—
Our problem is to feed our allies this winter by sending them as much food as we can of the most concentrated nutritive value in the least shipping space. These foods are beef, wheat, pork, dairy products and sugar. Our solution is to cut out less of these and more of other foods of which we have an abundance, and to waste less of all foods.

Bread—Serve bread or rolls made from corn, rye or mixed flours. Use breakfast food and hot cakes of corn, oatmeal, buckwheat or rye or honey. Under European plan, get individuals service of bread and butter of uniform weight, rolls, or slices to weigh not more than one and one-half ounces. Serve absolutely no toast as croutons or under meat, etc. Serve war bread. Do not serve bread and butter before the first course. Postpone them without thought. Serve no

 - 40 Acres 2 miles from Gooding. All in cultivation, 20 A. in alfalfa, 7 A. in milk, 6 A. red clover, 4 A. in bluegrass pasture, 4-room house, barn for 8 cows and 6 horses, deep well and wind mill, fenced and cross fenced. Price $155 per A. Cash $2200.00, balance easy terms.
 - 80 Acres 5 miles from Gooding, 40 acres alfalfa, 25 acres tame grass pasture, fenced and cross fenced with woven wire. Good 4-room house. Price $150.00 per acre. Terms, $1800.00 cash, balance $1000.00 annually at 7 per cent.
- Gooding is the educational center of Southern Idaho, has $40,000 graded school building; $65,000 high school building; $10,000 State School for Deaf, Dumb and Blind; $400,000 Methodist college now being completed. There is ample water for all irrigation purposes stored in the Magic Reservoir which impounds 200,000 acre feet of water. Plenty of fine quality soft domestic water can be obtained anywhere on the tract at depths of 50 to 150 feet. Gooding is on the main line of the O. S. L. railroad. Probably no portion of Idaho has better opportunities for raising sheep and cattle than the Wood River valley, with plenty of range in the unsurveyed foothills and plenty of government reserve land.

THIS STORY SHOWN AT THE ORPHEUM THEATRE

AN EXTRAORDINARY PHOTOPLAY Each chapter is a complete story in itself, and a jump can be made from one to the other without in the least destroying the sequence of the story. William Duncan and Carol Holloway in the scintillatingly-compiled-some death-defying stunts. The tale is brief follows the adventures which befall the discoverer of a valuable ingredient for the making of a powerful explosive, and the efforts of a foreign enemy to get possession of the secret. The photoplay is unusually beautiful and artistic.

The marvelous adventure story of the great outdoors written by J. Stuart, Blackton and Cyrus Townsend Brady.

THE CAST John Gwyn, William Duncan American mining engineer on whose shoulders rests the responsibility of furnishing the United States government with a rare mineral used in the manufacture of a very high explosive.

Na Lawton, the heroine. Carol Holloway "Cut Deep", Rawls, an outlaw. George Holt "Shoo String", Drant, his partner. Joe Ryan Hendrick, Von Bleck. Walter Rogert.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS

Fought at every turn by outlaws and agents of the Central Powers, John Gwyn, an American mining engineer, is trying to work a western mine producing an ingredient needed by the government in the manufacture of explosives. The mine is owned by Na Lawton, with whom Gwyn is in love. The outlaws kidnap Gwyn and his servants in an effort to obtain a missing part of the mine chart and finally trap Gwyn and Na in their own home.

They offer the imprisoned pair their lives in return for the mine chart, but are refused and the house burns to the ground. The outlaws ride away, believing that Gwyn and Na have escaped. They managed to escape, however, through a subterranean passage and reach the Lost Mine Hotel.

The next day they set out in search of the villains, who at the same time start to locate the mine. Gwyn meets Von Bleck and accuses him of murder and arson and forces him to admit that Cut Deep has the other half of the chart. He starts riding away leaving Na to guard Von Bleck. He gets the paper from Cut Deep and returns in time to save Na from Von Bleck. Na and Gwyn then set out for the mine over a wild trail and Na falls into a mountain torrent and is being swept away when Gwyn leaps in after her.

CHAPTER 7 "Now that we have changed our positions, I'll ask you my dear girl, just as I was asked will you be so kind as to turn over the other half of the chart? I would not care to take any bold step, but I might remind you, you are holding something which would warrant my risking almost anything to obtain."

Gwyn, as he rode at a rapid pace down the trail, looked back once or twice to assure himself that all was well at the barn. He did not fear leaving Na alone with Von Bleck, for the prisoner had been bound hand and foot and could scarcely move, he thought, let alone escape.

Suddenly, as he rounded another turn in the trail, his horse stopped short. Gwyn's hand, almost automatically, reached down to his holster. But a few moments ago, riding leisurely along the trail, was Cut Deep. Rawls, the man Gwyn was on his way to town to meet—the man, in fact, that Von Bleck had confessed, held the other part of the chart to the cinchbar mine.

Rawls' horse stopped almost as abruptly as had Gwyn's, but his rider was not as alert. When he lifted his eyes to see what had caused the unexpected halt, he found himself looking directly into the business end of Gwyn's revolver. He started, surprised and frightened, and obeyed Gwyn's command to dismount.

Reluctantly Rawls allowed Gwyn to remove his revolver from his belt and then, from the bosom of his skirt, he extracted the half of the chart. Gwyn took it from him, glanced at it to make sure that he had obtained what he desired and not a blank sheet of paper, and put it in his pocket. Then, ordering Rawls to lead his horse and drive slowly toward the barn, where he had left Von Bleck and Na.

When he arrived within about a hundred yards of the barn, Gwyn dismounted and approached the dilapidated structure from the side, keeping his eyes always in front of him, covered with his revolver. A few feet from the door, Gwyn stopped and listened. He could hear the threatening voice of Von Bleck addressing Na. At first he could not hear what the agent of the Central Powers was saying, and then the words reached his ears plainly. There was a nervousness in the tone.

"You can tell your friend, Mr. Gwyn, that I was very sorry to find Na, but until he returns to me, my important business made it imperative for me to leave immediately."

"Fortunately, I arrived before you left, so you can negotiate your business with me directly." Gwyn stood as he strode across the threshold and beheld Von Bleck backing slowly toward him while Na sat helplessly upon the box where the prisoner had been tied. Von Bleck wheeled in astonishment. Gwyn's return was the last thing he had expected. In his hand he held Na's gun, and he was tempted to turn quickly and fire upon Gwyn, but discovered that, upon facing the door, he was in a direct line with the revolver in the outlaw's own weapon. He had been covered first, and there was nothing for him to do but submit to surrender. Na, standing with a scowl in the doorway, regarded the whole scene in disgust. He seemed ready to pounce upon Von Bleck and thrust him for having told Gwyn that he had the chart. Gwyn obtained the remaining half of the map from Von Bleck without trouble folded it and placed it carefully in his pocket with the other, and ordered the central powers representative and Rawls out of the barn.

"The two of you," he said curtly and with a sternness that made both Von Bleck and Rawls heed his words, "had better get on your horses and ride out of town. If you want to be perfectly safe, my advice is that you keep on riding over then."

Dejectedly, and realizing that they had been defeated, Von Bleck and his confederate mounted and rode down the trail toward the town of Lost Mine. Gwyn and Na watched them until they had disappeared from view and then turned their attention to the map. The two portions, placed together, made a clear chart of the location of the cinchbar mine. Na and Gwyn, now that they had procured the chart, decided to find the exact location without further loss of time. Both men, in New York, Gwyn explained, would soon be requiring more of the cinchbar to continue the manufacture of the explosive, and if they did not hurry their operations the whole nation would suffer. So, replacing the chart in his pocket, Gwyn led the way, and together they rode along the trail to a point where a group of three pine trees, marked on the map, showed they were approaching their destination. But Gwyn, in overcoming Von Bleck and Rawls, had forgotten that there remained another of the outlaw band with whom he had to cope. Drant, the confederate, had remained in the mountains searching for the mine when Rawls had left him to return to the town, where he had intended to meet Von Bleck. Now, as Gwyn and Na approached, Drant was but a short distance away. He was attracted by the sound of their horses and saw them coming up the trail. As they halted by the pines to consult the chart, he hid and decided to watch them. The two dismounted, fastened their horses, and commenced the dangerous undertaking of fording the river which separated them from the entrance to the mine. Drant, crouching snugly behind the underbrush which hid him, followed.

Outside, the limbs of the pines cracked in the mountain wind with a dry, crackling sound. It was very dark and very lonesome in the thickness of the forest, but imperishable blackness or the solitude of the hills reached neither the eyes nor into the feelings of the little gathering in the brilliantly lighted room of the Lost Mine hotel. John Gwyn and Na Lawton were conversing both happily and seriously with a tall, robust individual, a stranger to Gwyn. The stranger, whose features, despite his jovial tones and jocular manner, were firm in their expression of sternness and determination, was William Casey, a strong, sturdy, Irish-American who had come to Lost Mine a few years previous in search of his fortune and was still searching.

"We located the mine this afternoon," Gwyn said, and his smile reflected the gladness revealed in his voice. "It is now imperative that I arrange for the immediate development of the mine and the shipment of the cinchbar to New York. The organization which I am representing is eager that no time be lost, and the days that have been consumed by our fight with the central powers, in the form of Von Bleck, have been precious ones. We must catch up now."

"Mr. Casey, since you are at the head of the vigilance committee hunting down the murderers of Don Carlos and Yaqui Joe, the developments of the future will depend very importantly on your action."

"My warrants," replied Casey, "call for only Rawls and Drant. Von Bleck, for some reason beyond my jurisdiction, is not included."

"If you get the men you are after—it's a pity that I didn't hold Rawls when I had him—Von Bleck will be practically helpless to interfere with us," Gwyn said. "As soon as operations are begun I am going to install you as manager of the mine. You will see that you have had a great deal of experience along these lines and are just the man I need. I hope that by that time, Na will be my wife, for she is married within the next few weeks, you know."

"During the few months that immediately followed the little town of Lost Mine, the village, with its colorful history, it was fairly alive with bustling humanity, hurrying to and fro, each absorbed with his own important mission. The village, from the town proper to the mine, lost, as it was, amidst the wilds of the unexplored and unsettled West, resembled a busy oasis, set in the center of an open plain. And prosperly came with the new life. The opening of the mine had created a demand for men, and the majority of the town's idle population was employed in the task of taking the cinchbar from the mine and preparing it for shipment to the east. As a result, the neighborhood was scattered over with little wooden houses, built in the quickest and the cheapest manner possible. Gwyn and Na, who had been married as they had planned, lived in a picturesque cabin but a short distance from the main shaft of the mine. Their wedding had been one of the most important, and surely the gayest, event of the year. Practically the entire town had turned out at the Lost Mine hotel, and from that time on, the young couple had been the most popular folk in town. Casey, very soon after his appointment as the head of the vigilance committee, had taken up his duties with an ardor that was not merely inspired by his desire for work. He had been stimulated by a natural love of fight, and the problem of ridding Lost Mine of Drant and Rawls, by putting a stop to the outrages caused by Von Bleck, offered many opportunities for him to satisfy the love. He had rounded the three men, as well as a goodly number of confederates who had joined them, in a little hut in the mountains, only to lose them again when they escaped by the use of swinging to the limb of a tree through a trap door in the roof, and making their getaway in the dark. Finally, however, Casey's persistent activities and his apparent determination to round up the gang, so frightened the fugitives that they had dispersed and evidently had decided that the healthiest thing to do was to attend to their own affairs and allow Gwyn to carry on his plans unmolested. For a time one of Von Bleck's new confederates, known as "One Lung" and notorious as a former New York gunman, continued to annoy the young engineer, but he, also, finally vanished and nothing more was heard from him.

A FAR REACHING AGREEMENT

The agreement between the United States and Japan published today will have a far reaching effect on the future of both countries and on the history of the world. It will mean that cooperation to the uttermost in the great world war for liberty, for the tendency of Japan has for the past two generations been toward liberty. The fundamental interests of the two nations are the same. In fact the fundamental interests of all nations are the same, but they do not always recognize it as clearly as the United States and the Japanese do today.

HOOPER AND GOOD ROADS

That Food Administrator Hoover has come to the people with a message for good roads, should make a deep impression on all the citizens of our country. Good roads mean greater production. They mean conservation of energy, the saving of wasted effort, the husbanding of lost motion. Were all the roads in America as good as the roads in Europe, how much more time, now wasted in making extra trips hauling, could be utilized in primary production? And think how much more valuable land in Europe is compared with lands of our country in the United States. This shows that instead of impoverishing the land holders, good roads enrich them, while enriching the nation-and making it more efficient.

"THE GHOST HOUSE" WITH JACK PICKFORD AND LOUISE HUFF PROVES DELIGHTFUL TREAT

POPULARITY OF THESE YOUTHFUL STARS EVIDENCED BY CAPACITY HOUSES THAT ATTEND FIRST SHOW-A THRILLING GHOST STORY

"BEAR FACTS" AN EXCEPTIONAL YOUTHFUL COMEDY PROGRAM REPEATED TONIGHT AND WEDNESDAY.

(First Night's Review) Even for a "Ghost House" there was considerable doing, and the pretty young ladies, including the popular Louise Huff, decide to move into their uncle's home, although it had a "spooky" reputation. The same night a bank vault is "cracked" and one of the crooks, despite his fright and superstitions, conceals himself in the attic. Matters are complicated by a college initiation downstairs, in which Jack Pickford is the victim. The way things work out, and the whole, keeps everybody interested-not only in the audience-but the characters on the screen as well, especially because even the leaves of them have indication of "nerves" on approaching the "Ghost House."

Was Big Success The picture called "The Ghost House", both as a story and by reason of the two youthful stars that romp through its truly wonderful scenes, stars whose popularity is attested by the crowds that saw the picture Monday night, and who, in fact, are the picture's main attraction. The picture is the direction of Wm. C. DeMille, a typical ghost story chock full of comedy, thrills and tense situations, and a most delightful entertainment.

Enjoyable Program "Bear Facts," a Selk comedy, added more fun to the evening. The vaudeville program includes a classical dancing number of unusual interest, and closes with a singing act. The evening program on the big pipe organ is a most enjoyable attraction in itself. The same program runs Tuesday and Wednesday. WHAT THE STARS ARE DOING "Topping Her Romeo" is the next Mack Bennett-Paramount comedy scheduled for Wednesday. The purposes at the Idaho. Some of the actors who appear in this skit are: Polly Moran, Ben Turpin, Ben Somerville and Ethel Tera. These

ITALIAN READY FOR POSSIBLE RETREAT NORTH OF PINZANO

Drawing Army Toward Reserve Forces in Prospect of Great Battle-William Allen White Says Americans Will Fight Little Until Spring - Washington Officials Have Encouraging Information-Germans Cross Tagliamento.

(International News Service Summary)
General Cadorna's Italian army may have to make a further retreat. The Italian war office statement today admitted that the Germans have succeeded in crossing the Tagliamento river north of Pinzano. By this move the Germans now are in position to attempt a drive in the rear of the Italian army if General Cadorna maintains his stand along the Tagliamento.

It has been predicted that in the event of the Germans forcing a crossing of the upper Tagliamento General Cadorna would withdraw to the Piava river, which runs parallel to the Tagliamento. Military experts have pointed out that the Piava affords the Italians a much better line of defense than the Tagliamento.

The Piava starts in the Carnic Alps, fully fifteen miles from farther north than the Tagliamento and flows in a zigzag course, emptying into the sea about twenty miles above Venice.

By falling back to the Piava General Cadorna would be getting closer to his base of supplies and also would have his reserve forces closer at hand.
The Smoke Fund raised by the Statesman at Boise, is now over a thousand dollars. The sale will be conducted by Col. H. B. Lue and will begin right after a free lunch at noon.

Last Summer, at a Commercial club luncheon, the subject of labor at crop-saving time was canvassed with considerable interest, and each business and professional man present pledged himself to give a certain number of days work in case the expected need arose. Well, it did arise, "because of the school" as the school children, pupils and teachers went to the rescue, notwithstanding which some twenty-five per cent of the local apple crop froze on the trees! Where, of where were the Hottel's Dhus of the club then? The TIMES knows of one minister who put in about sixteen solid days apple picking, and, further, dependent sayeth not.

CUBAN CONGRESS TO PASS DRAFT LAW

(International News Service)
HAVANA, Cuba, Nov. 4.—Either conscription or the selective draft will be authorized by the Cuban congress, which will convene tomorrow in what is expected to be its most noteworthy session since Cuba became a republic. The raising and equipment in the near future of a strong military force in line with President Menocal's recommendations in his last message, and with the plan of Cuba's Council of National Defense, await only the determination of the method to be followed rather than the wisdom of the policy. General Menocal and his advisers who are determined that Cuba's alliance in the war against Germany shall take on a most active character. Leaders of both political parties are in accord with the raising of a large military force—possibly doubling the present strength of the regular army and militia more than 25,000 men, and a similar strengthening of naval units and personnel. Whatever differences exist on the eve of the session are solely as to conscription or its alternative.

In the Senate Vice President Emilio Nunez will convene the lawmakers, and Dr. Ricardo Dolz, new speaker of the house of representatives, will address his colleagues on the military program which Cuba is to follow, now that her war plans are on the eve of consummation. Legislators have reached the capital from every part of the island, and a public demonstration of loyalty to Cuba's allies is expected when the congressmen and senators take their seats. Whatever the character of the military measures to be enacted, all indications are for speedy action. The attitude of the Conservative party in power, which at first was lukewarm toward universal military service, has become more and more pronounced in its favor, and statements of the leaders show that there will be no opposition to the increase of Cuba's military strength. The Liberals, on the other hand, have no program of opposition, and the administration press hints conscription or the selective draft as a fortunate omen of Cuba's loyalty, and her national integrity at a time when the attitude of President Menocal has determined Cuba's leadership in war policies throughout Latin America.

Recent action of Cuba has raised nearly $2,000,000 for the second Liberty Loan; the action of the United States treasury in taking back the Cuban war bond issue of $30,000,000, and progress made by the Council of National Defense under General Menocal's direction have so unified sentiment throughout the insular republic that Cuba's strong position, both politically and commercially is expected to find expression in an ambitious program of legislation, which will serve as a guide to other Latin-American allies in the months to come. Members of the diplomatic corps and their attaches will view the proceedings in the senate chamber, and public interest is not high.

At the last session in July the portfolio of Minister of War and Navy was created, and Major General Jose Marti was named for the place. President Menocal later, by an executive decree, increased the army appropriation to the record figure of $13,600,000, and when, by his appointment of the Defense Council, he promulgated the plan for active war cooperation, universal military service remained to be authorized by the congress.

After reviewing the various organic laws of Cuba relating to military measures, President Menocal's recommendations assert: "The task of enlisting and mobilizing the militia of 17,000 men last February permits the hope that the raising of a larger army necessary for the carrying on of the war against the Imperial German government will give results no less favorable, and in which the name of the republic will remain unblemished." After referring to the increased responsibilities of Cuba as an ally in the war, President Menocal's message adds: "For all these things voluntary enlistment was insufficient. As had happened in all parts of the world when it was necessary to enlarge the service, so in England and the United States, a complete change in the tradition and the custom was obligated. In our republic voluntary enlistment always 'encountered' hindrances, and I consider it my duty to recommend to the honorable congress the immediate adoption of the only means by which we will be able to overcome the difficulties quickly—the imposition of obligatory military service, based on a system of selection, as was recently instituted in the United States."

President Menocal adds that obligatory military service in Cuba will prove to be a grand school of discipline. It makes a citizen understand and feel from the first years of youth his obligations to his country, and makes him respect the law, not by the imposition of force, but by the consciousness of duty. Our people will surely sympathize with this new system, General Menocal says, "for which they will prepare, as being of the most ardent patriotism and traditional spirit of sacrifice."

In addition to increasing the Cuban army and navy, the congress is expected to discuss the wisdom of an annexed measure and a parliamentary form of government.

mission a daily report showing the total wheat purchased; then a weekly report showing amount shipped or stored and, of course, the balance on hand; and, finally, a monthly report giving the number of barrels of flour and tons of bran and shorts made, together with a detail of each and every item of expense connected with the manufacture—which monthly report must be signed and acknowledged before a notary. In addition the books from which these reports are made are, and must be, open to official inspection at any and all times. Referring to the charge of Governor Cap-por, we are not here investigating the retailers or the bakers; but if the governor, or any local critic, can tell how the mill people are going to beat this game for a "rake off" equal to the "freight charges," or anything else, the TIMES, as well as the company, invites them to step forward at once and do so.

"They say," also refers to another source of profit to wheat buyers in the reimbursement by the government for holding the grain on account of lack of shipping instructions or facilities. This seems to be true, as the TIMES was informed that, after thirty days continued inability to ship from those reasons, the food commission allows one-fifteenth of one cent per bushel per day. As this must cover interest on the investment, insurance and storage, its value as a "get-rich quick" proposition can be pretty easily understood.

Another feature of the business perhaps not so generally known is that, in calculating and allowing the stated profit, no account is permitted to be made, or taken, for the value of or interest upon, the property invested in the business—the mill, machinery, etc. The average profit allowed during the current season—no such thing being permitted as an accumulation of profits now—to be applied against a dull period next spring.

As already stated, the information herein formulated was obtained from the local Mill & Elevator company.

The TIMES wishes further to say that it was willingly furnished and that it bore every indication of being quite ingenuous and truthful. If it is not so, the one who knows is again invited to show where!

both countries.

"That Viscount Ishii has, throughout his conferences, shown a sincerity and candor which dispelled every doubt as to his purpose and brought the two governments into an attitude of confidence toward each other which made it possible to discuss every question with frankness and cordiality," is asserted by Mr. Lansing.

Secretary Lansing expresses confidence that the understanding reached will make for an essential to that "potential international peace," which is the ambition of President Wilson.

The results of the conference between the ambassador plenipotentiary of Japan and the secretary of state is looked upon in diplomatic and official as a monument to the diplomacy of Secretary Lansing when it is considered that Viscount Ishii was vested with plenary power in procuring the affirmation of the "open door" policy. Further it is considered the greatest diplomatic achievement in Secretary Lansing's administration.

fact the the independence or territorial integrity of China or that would deny to the subjects or citizens of any country the full enjoyment of equal opportunity in the commerce and industry of China.

"I shall be glad to have your excellency confirm this understanding of the agreement reached by us.

"Accept, excellency, the renewed assurance of my highest consideration. (Signed) "ROBERT LANSING."
Viscount Ishii's reply:

"Sir:—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of today, communicating to me your understanding of the agreement reached by us in our recent conversations touching the question of mutual interest to our government relating to the Republic of China.

"I am happy to be able to confirm to you, under authorization of my government, the understanding in question set forth in the following terms."

Here Viscount Ishii quotes Secretary Lansing's note verbatim beginning with the second paragraph.

"I take this opportunity to convey to you, sir, the assurance of my highest consideration. (Signed) "K. ISHII."
