THANKSGIVING SERMON BY REV. A. W. JAMES DELIVERED AT KIMBERLY

Let us assemble on this Thanksgiving and reverently thank God that the heritage of the fathers has fallen into the hands of worthy sons.
"Text": "By prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God."—Phil. 4:6.
America has never faced such a Thanksgiving as this year. We have been at war in the past and observed Thanksgiving. But for the first time we are in the midst of a world shaken by war. Man in his passion and fury has marked the world with ruin. Desolation has heaped upon desolation. Sorrow is added to sorrow. The cry of anguish is heard in many lands. The mourners go about the street.
A dread seizes the heart of parents whose sons are in the service, and being drawn into the vortex of the awful melodram. What shall the word be tomorrow? No one can tell. Hope strengthens the heart against and thenceforth.

And in the midst of all this desolation, sorrow and suffering we are asked to return thanks to Almighty God.
"It has been an honored custom of our people to pass a day in the fruitful autumn of the year and offer up prayer and thanksgiving unto God."
Our president reminds us that this honored custom we can follow now even in the midst of a world shaken by war and through the darkness of the war clouds we may see the great blessings God has bestowed upon us—blessings better than more peace of mind, better than the prosperity of enterprise.
For one accustomed to look upon the day as a time it is easy to ask, "why should we be grateful to God at such a time as this?"
Friends, there are great and valid reasons why we should render thanksgiving—yes, the offering of supplication with thanksgiving.
First, we should render thanks not only for the products of field, factory and mine—but for the example of conservation, and the lesson of a new battle in France about the year of the products of field, factory and mine which enables us to supply the needs of others as well as our own.
Again, we should thank God that as Americans we have arisen in our night, and are facing with a resolute spirit the serious tasks involved in this world crisis.
Could we have summoned a single throb of gratitude to God—had we refused or failed to answer "hero" when the call to duty and service came? Never. We should be thankful to God that America was saved from playing the part of a vassal in this crucial time. Let us be thankful that America has not debased and forfeited her soul, but even in the sacrifice her sons she is finding her true life.
That is a wonderful, thrilling and touching story told of Henry Leader visiting the grave of his only son and child, Capt. John Laurer, of the Sutherland Highlanders, who was killed in battle in France about a year ago. When the broken hearted father rose from the grave of his boy—he uttered this prayer: "O God, I could make but one request. It would be that I might take my ladle in my arms, just this once, and thank him for the part he has done for his country and humanity."
Let us believe there are thousands of parents in America, if called upon to visit the portals of this world in a sorrow, can rise to that sublime height of appreciation and thanksgiving.
These fine traditions—the inspiring examples of patriotic service and sacrifice of our national life are being upheld by the sons in such a way that our hearts are moved with a deepened sense of gratitude. This rich heritage is not being debased—but in the hands of those who stand for American ideals before the world today, is being enlarged, enriched and made more glorious, worthy to be handed down to our children's children.

We should offer up grateful thanks for the reports coming from the front. The Bible is the most popular book in the trenches—the demands far out distance the present supply. The admirals of the great navies—the generals in the army—are sending messages to the men on ship, in camp, and trench, taken from God's great book. Admiral Jellicoe sends Jehovah's message to Joshua, to his men of the English navy. Our own Pershing directs his men to trust in God for comfort and to exercise faith in our victory for strength against temptation.
There are in America a class of men called "pacifists"—they their tribe may grow small—who hold to the doctrine of non-resistance, and are shocked that this nation should be a party to the diabolic struggle for freedom and world democracy.
Had the doctrine of non-resistance prevailed in the past, the Stuart despotism would have been fastened upon England. The man who teach the doctrine of non-resistance to wrong and evil would have paid the ultimate money downed that John Hampton refused to pay. The brave freemen of that day believed that rebellion to tyrants was rendering obedience to God.
The question is not whether war is justifiable—but is it ever necessary?—is it unavoidable? War severed Greece being over-run by the Parthians hords.
Had the doctrine of the pacifists been accepted in Turkey would probably be the masters of Europe today. Certainly under the rule of such doctrine there would be no democracy, no life of liberty. The greatest and most thrilling chapters of history are those that tell of the heroism and sacrifice for freedom and democracy.
No man is entitled to be a pacifist. In the extreme sense; unless he is willing himself to submit, and to allow his family to be subjected to loss, outrage, insult, and death without any resistance or defense.
Unless he accepts such a condition he must fight, either himself, or through the police and courts.
Is it right to use force to compel wrong? If right for the individual, so is it right for the nation. It is deplorable when such a necessity arises. As things are now—when one nation attacks the rest of the world—the world must either resist or submit.
Submission would give sanction to wrong and the enslavement of mankind. Let us be thankful that under such provocation, that man believe it both necessary and right to fight against such monstrous evils.
Democracy and autocratic power now stand in the trenches of death to determine the destiny of the whole world. Let us pray that a new world will come forth from this blood birth agony.
On this day of national thanksgiving—it is well to remember that the American Protestantism has spoken through the Council of the Federated Churches of America.
"In part, here is her declaration: "This great hour in the world's history could not be made complete without the suffering and sacrifice of America with the other free peoples of the world."
We could not remain out of the conflict when the free peoples of the world were being beaten to their knees by the power of a cruel autocracy.
We owe it to our country to maintain intact and to transmit unimpaired to our descendants our heritage of freedom and democracy. Above and beyond this we must be loyal to the divine Lord, who gave His life that the world might be redeemed, and whose loving purpose embraced every man in the nation.
No one can foresee the end of the struggle. It will call for all the strength and heroism of which the nation is capable. The church has a mission in this time of crisis and danger.

6. "To care for the welfare of the young men in the army and navy, that they may be fortified in character and courage to face the world."
7. "To unite in fellowship of service in building up the waste places as soon as peace shall come."
On this Thanksgiving—how important it is that the church realize that we are facing a new world situation freighted with grave responsibilities. Today, it is a shaken world. It is shaken to its very base. Foundations are slipping. Nations of the far east that were once fixed like the plaster on the walls are becoming plastic; the old molds are being broken; those civilizations are to be recast and are ready to be recast in new molds—shall they be recast in Christian or pagan molds?
We are being told that Europe is in the melting pot. Even in India—like Russia and Turkey, the church is facing a new world. Old things are passing away. All things are becoming new, not because of magic or chance, but because we believe in the Christian church, these shall come a sufficient leadership to take hold of the nations and recast them in Christian molds and lead them out into the new age.
We are facing a burdened world, a world overburdened. Old burdens are light in contrast to the burdens today. The interest on the debts associated with this war will soon exceed the income of some of the nations. Impossible burdens are being hung about the neck of these nations, the or life of liberty. The greatest and most thrilling chapters of history are those that tell of the heroism and sacrifice for freedom and democracy.
No man is entitled to be a pacifist. In the extreme sense; unless he is willing himself to submit, and to allow his family to be subjected to loss, outrage, insult, and death without any resistance or defense.

THE GIRL WHO WAS A SOLDIER BOY

HOW I WENT "OVER THERE" WITH PERSHING'S DIVISION By HAZEL CARTER

Mrs. Hazel Carter of Douglas, Ariz., is a young woman, twenty-two, whose young husband, Corporal John J. Carter of the United States army, was ordered to France with the Pershing expedition.

Determined to accompany him, she obtained a soldier's uniform and fell in as a private on the transport before discovered through a chance. After the arrival of the famous division in France she was assigned to some special her.

CHAPTER III

"Spotted" by a Bluejacket.

Of course we ran at night with all our portholes masked, and no smoking was permitted either on deck or below deck. If the guard caught a soldier smoking "fags" he flogged him and forced him to do guard duty until he in turn caught another at the same system worked pretty well.

The boys could see that they wanted to get down from the ship. They were absolutely dark, and there was a severe penalty for lighting even a match. The portholes were open to keep the men from suffocating.

Before dark I carefully located my husband's bunk since I knew I would have to travel by dead reckoning, and I couldn't afford to stumble over some thing, because that would get my husband in bad and lead to no discovery. Before going to bed I took off my heavy shoes and carefully hid them. I was going to wank the trip in my stocking feet.

Shortly after lights out I felt a gentle push on my arm, and Saithers whispered: "All right, kiddie. Go up forward." I sneaked out of the bunk and reached my husband's berth without mishap. He was glad to see me, and for awhile we forgot the ship and the war and the dangers and were ourselves. But, saddest, he suddenly came down to me.

"I've got to report you, kiddie," he said. "You can't go on or you will get all in bad."

I pleaded with him. He insisted that I go to his country and his uniform to report me.

"Forget you have seen me," I urged, "and let me go alone. I will join the first Cross as soon as I get ashore in France."

Alarm Interrupts Talk.

He finally agreed he would not report me, but just before lights out I got away with it that long, but he insisted he must do it then. However, we agreed to see each other the next night to have another talk, and I went to bed with a heavy heart.

The sergeant routed out the rookie without much ceremony, and I showed up along to a place assigned to me on a life raft, putting on my life belt as I went. All the men had orders to don their life preservers first and then go in an orderly manner to their places.

Already there had been two or three drills in the daytime, and the about fifteen minutes earlier on.

As I reached the deck there was no confusion and no excitement in the dark darkness. The men were proceeding quietly to their places, fastening on their life belts, although most of them had been without one of sleeping and, and I was proud of the behavior of the soldiers. Duke Sam was sending to the trenches.

That is, they would sleep with the sergeant, whose duty it was to see that every one was out, came along and stirred them some so gently from slumber. A few began to think they would miss one of the nights of the trip if they didn't meet a Dutchman and looked forward hopefully to the prospect.

Disappointed Through Failure to See "U-Boats"

However, these optimists were doomed to disappointment, for our ship did not see a submarine. The whole voyage, nor did we hear a gun fired. Since returning to the United States I have heard of the attack on some of the ships of the transport fleet, but it was not on the part of it we were with.

It would have been impossible for us to have been attacked and not to have known of it. As I say, lots of the boys were disappointed because they could not see the "fish" about the narrow escape from the subs, and the doughboys are great letter writers.

Perhaps some of them did, anyway, so as to let those at home know they weren't missing anything.

By this time I felt almost like a soldier and had learned to smoke "tallor-made" cigarettes, although I had tried it only once before this trip as an experiment when I was at school and had abandoned it for a couple of years.

In the privacy of my bunk I devoted a whole lot of time to trying to roll them with as much carelessness and real economy of tobacco as are shown by the best soldiers. I had acquired the "makin'" and spent hours at the task.

About the third or fourth day out I felt I was pretty proficient and got out my brown papers and tobacco and had abandoned it for a couple of years.

Off one of our biggest battleships who was in the gun crew assigned to defend the transport from attack. He was off duty, and I saw him watching me chomp as I rolled the pill. Finally he sidled up.

"Say," he asked, "you're a Jane, ain't you?"

"What are you doin'—kiddin' me?" I asked him.

"I guess you're kiddin' me," he answered. "I peered you by the way you wrap up one of those pills. No recruit is so raw he can't roll one better than that. They wouldn't let him in the army if he couldn't."

By this time I was a girl, but I didn't admit it. Near me was a major off one of our biggest battleships who was in the gun crew assigned to defend the transport from attack. He was off duty, and I saw him watching me chomp as I rolled the pill. Finally he sidled up.

"Well," he remarked, "it's hard luck they put you. The other two girls aboard could roll them better than you and slipped through all right."

"More power to them if they did," I answered. "I hope they made it."

Of course there were no more girls on board. He was trying to kid me and get my goat.

Life on Shipboard.

I was pretty happy and contented for the next couple of days, and I guess I became too sure of myself. Most of the boys were getting over their sickness by this time, and the inevitable crap game that follows the army was in progress. You could hear the men calling for "Little Joe" and "Jimmy Flicks" after they got out the "hot and colds," and they made plenty of noise.

The officers were not very strict aboard ship and let the crap game run with all the noise necessary to the successful playing of this national pastime. One of the boys had been in a particularly bad luck and had only a thin dime left to put up for a future margin when he capped a big pot. Just then the submarine alarm sounded.

We knew our time was up, and the "Hurry up!" shouted one of the players as we all broke away from our places.

The winner calmly collected the pot. "They may shoot me, and I will tell the world so," he announced. "Before I will leave this 'sugar' for a blooming Dutchman to put a torpedo into. That would be just my luck. If I ever rainsoup I will be caught with a fork."

It was another "stiff alarm," so the calmist returned to the game only to be "taken" for his roll.

"It would have been better for me if I had been torpedoed," he said after he had been caught.

And don't think the doughboy is a pliker. Many a time I've seen $1,000 in a single pot.

Headlines—the men sang and played "Black Jack, a favorite card game of campaigners and one in which they win and lose big." It wasn't long before a few of them had all the money.

The young man's trousers were unrolled I thought some of them would never be able to handle a gun on account of writer's cramp. One young fellow didn't slight a girl in the state of Texas, and I suppose he told each she was the only one. He ought to get lots of mail "over there."

Because of the breaks in the sleep on account of submarine drills and for other reasons I am ordered not to discuss any of the boys' antics in the daytime a good deal. There were not many duties aboard ship, and the officers let all hands take it as easy as they could. They knew there would be plenty to do in France.

That is why the American soldier is fighting for his captain and not to make the world safe for democracy. He knows his captain is the fellow who looks out for him. I speak of the regular, the neat, soldierly looking fellow you can always tell from a guardsman, when I say this. And I don't mean that as a reflection. Soldiering is the regular business.

In the daytime I saw little of my husband, but with the aid of Cupid Private Snatchers I sneaked up to his berth often at night. He still insisted he would never let me see him, and I followed and cut loose to go to him from somebody. The loyalty of the boys pleased me very much and dattered me a little, I guess.

My headquarters were the kitchen, where I was rated as one of the cooks and did my share. Here they called me "Silent Joe" because I talked so little. I afraid my voice would betray me. Glad that they save me this reputation. I was ready to live up to it.

Foals Husband. One day I was folding up my blanket when I saw my husband coming down between the tiers of bunks.

"What are you doing there, rookie?" he demanded. "Don't you know there is drill on deck?"

The Rookie Who Talked Too Much.

Most of the soldiers knew and had served with and seen General Pershing. He sees more of the doughboys than most major generals and gets in closer contact with his men. Yet they talked little of him except to show they had faith in him. He seemed to be a sort of distant person who spent his time in some indefinite place. The captain is the soldier's friend.

There was much speculation as to what they would do when they reached France, and all were eager to get into action. They wanted to try it anyway.

"We may be fed up on it a year from now," declared one fellow who had been watchfully waiting several months in Mexico, "but I hope we get some action."

I was beginning to think I would see the trenches myself and half hoped so. I knew I wouldn't be scared, and I felt it was part of the expedition by this time. Getting wound and killed was better than to have climbed into a ditch beside Corporal John Carter, U. S. A. I had caught the spirit of the crowd and had had half got my husband to consent to let me go along as far as I could make it. I was happy.

The one warning without any warning a talkative rookie, who had been sealk, but was now better and fresh, said:

"Did you hear there is a woman aboard?"

"You don't say?" I answered. "Where the devil is she?"

"I can't make her," he answered. "I've been looking everybody over. All the boys on the ship are talking about it."

"Some men would make better old maids than women," I replied and turned on my heel and walked away.

There was a lull in my throat. The old timers knew enough to keep their mouths shut, but these rookies were natural gamblers. The officers would bear one and catch a snitch. Had I come all this way for this?

Try this treat in cooking economy

Any good cook can make a first rate cake with butter. But my! how that cake does eat into a pound of expensive butter!

Yet there is a way to make perfectly delicious cake without using a speck of butter. May we whisper the secret?

Use rich, pure Cottolene. Keep to your recipe. But instead of using butter, use Cottolene—one-third less than you would ordinarily use of butter.

Profit by the experience of other housekeepers, who have found that Cottolene—because of its greater richness—goes farther than other shortenings which they had been using.

See if you don't make a cake that you are proud of.

If you could taste the delicious cakes, flaky pies and pastries, crisp biscuits, tender muffins and digestible fried things that rich Cottolene makes, we are quite sure you would use Cottolene in all your frying and in all your baking.

Wholesome Cottolene produces perfectly delicious results. It combines true economy with better cooking.

Try it in any familiar recipe and see. Cottolene is sold by grocers in tins of convenient sizes.

Recipe for MARBLE CAKE

When the canal is undergoing future improvements. Betterments for this division also involve concrete structures at heading of 5A and 5B and at heading of No. 9 and furthermore for building up raised and low banks on laterals No. 3 and No. 5.

On the whole, comparatively little of sufficient importance to mention here, is to be found fault with, in examining the laterals of Division No. 4. There probably is more cleaning required of these laterals than others of the project but this is naturally to be expected. This is not the fault of the laterals but merely the result of being located where reference to the main body of the project so as to receive a large deposit of silt.

Low Line Canal

An examination of the available records concerning the capacity of the low line, showed the condition to be very generally good, but the field examination showed quite another story. Probably the low line is better than all the high line but it has practically never received a cleaning since its construction.

From Cedar Draw to the lower end of the low line, the silt deposit is heavy, and from the "I" coulee, (south and east of Buhl), to the lower end, numerous places where silt in the bottom of the canal exceeded a foot in depth, especially in the region of the so-called Belknap bridge. Testing the section at several points showed that the combination of silt and raised upper bank would not handle a 125 per cent delivery.

From the coulee back to Cedar Draw, the deposit of silt is serious but on account of a pretty generous free-board, the capacity maintains. In this section, the silt deposit is characterized by horns, very pronounced in the region of curves where there is a tendency for the water to eddy, resulting in a lowering of the velocity on the inside of the curve, and as the velocity is decreased, the water is able to carry a smaller and smaller load. In addition to this, there are high bottoms in the rock cuts and it may be said that practically every rock cut in the low line from Twin Falls to Cedar Draw is a silt trap.

It is nothing short of a crime to neglect maintenance work as it has been neglected on this canal. When these silt horns are being formed on the inside of the curves, the water is constantly being crowded more against the outside of the curve and cuts away the bank on that side. Of course you mend it and protect it as best you can but a repaired bank is not as good as one properly maintained. It is dangerous to ignore it, but the silted bank gets no attention and becomes a favorable place for plant growth, which makes cleaning more difficult. But the whole section from Cedar Draw to the lower end is being cleaned this fall and the rock grade is to be removed, if the weather offers sufficient time. It is encouraging to be able to report that at this time, most of the tasks are done and an outlet for about 100 teams is on this work; furthermore, a good thorough piece of cleaning is being done. In fact the writer is very favorably impressed with the thoroughness of all the clean up work.

At Cedar Draw, the revised capacity calls for an increase of 150 second feet. Here the draw was crossed by using a wooden retaining wall on the lower side of the canal. This so-called "wood fence" was a factor of control in the capacity situation, because there were times when this wall was really a spillway, but this wall is now being replaced by one of concrete allowing for greater capacity.

From Cedar Draw to Rock Creek, the canal does not need a cleaning. As a general thing, the freeboard is generous, being from 2.5 to 4.0 feet. The chief criticism of this section would refer to a total of 2700 feet of raised and low upper bank. This is being built up, and consistently high bottoms in the rock cuts. Some bank protection is also required at curves.

A test of the rock bottom section, just below the Rock creek siphon shows the section sufficient, but the freeboard reduced to a rather slim margin, on the lower side, but the lower side is a concrete wall, some what cracked and leaks a small amount but there are but two cracks about three feet apart. The section of safety with the section running full. The writer considers the wall safe but deems it advisable to occasionally inspect the vertical crack which shows transverse displacement of an amount sufficient to attract one's attention especially if looking for trouble. The rock bottom section here has a fairly uniform bottom but the upper bank is very uneven, so uneven in fact that a determination of its capacity is not possible. The test made showed capacity for 1495 against a requirement of 1472 second feet, which may possibly call for some small amount of filling of the upper side.

The siphon at Rock creek is in good condition, but attention is called to two matters which affect the section. First, the lack of a convenient blow-off or even a drain if any has been provided, its whereabouts is still a matter of speculation. For instance, the water should be cut off from the siphon. It is possible now to drain it by a skillful manipulation of the manhole cover.

Secondly, the consideration of the fact that a new wasteway is under construction above the Cottonwood flumes. The water released at this place, if the Rock creek does not pass the siphon. It is doubtful whether this wasteway at the time of discharge to full capacity, could handle any water. This water now provided over the siphon and approaching the siphon. If it is safe for the water to flow elsewhere, i. e., outside of this channel and under the siphon. It is important that the water providing the present banks and wing walls.

At the siphon, 300 second feet additional is called for by the 25 per cent excess capacity scheme, or in other words, the capacity must be increased from 1778 to 1472 second feet. In order to do this we must increase the difference between the elevation of water surfaces at intake and outlet as much as 3.8 feet, or increase the depth over the intake more than four feet. This means raising the concrete abutment walls at the intake, remodeling the recently completed concrete abutment about 200 feet above the siphon and raising the canal banks for several thousand feet above this point. An examination of the design for the intake structure, might reasonably be expected to show lack of strength to carry such an increase.

Although the entire distance from the siphon up the "fork" has been examined by the writer, the consideration of required betterments, did not, at the time, entertain the idea of 125 per cent delivery and although an estimate is included for betterments between Perrine coulee and the siphon, the solution of the problem of controlling the erosion which is taking place between the "forks" and the Perrine coulee, requires more study than has been devoted to it. The item most important in this connection is the elimination of the eroding agent, which is primarily, the mineral debris loosened from the channel itself. This can be overcome by the construction of an artificial channel but no estimate has been made as to the cost.

For a distance of more than 3 miles below the Perrine coulee, the banks are in bad condition. It seems safe to say that half the section of the banks has been washed away, leaving a vertical face of earth from 5 to 10 feet high exposed to the high velocity of this section. From 10 to 20 feet back of these vertical faces, large cracks develop for a thoroughly unsafe condition.

High Line Canal

The high line canal not only lacks capacity for 125 per cent delivery, but for 100 per cent delivery and though considerably smaller, than the low line, it is the source of far more dirt. Besides the fact that the silt in the heading of this canal, cleaning is now needed to the point of the concrete lining.

From station 269 to station 278, or from a point about two miles above the Cottonwood flumes, to a point about 3/4 mile above, the upper bank must be removed to prevent overflow.

At the flumes, the approach must be modified to offer an easier entrance of the water, and below it a deposit of silt must be made. In fact the whole canal from the flumes to Cedar Draw must be enlarged.

At the flumes, the approach must be modified to offer an easier entrance of the water, and below it a deposit of silt must be made. In fact the whole canal from the flumes to Cedar Draw must be enlarged.

By order of the general manager for 1917, it was pointed out that in order to give the high line, the same relative capacity as the low line, the silt in the heading of this canal, cleaning is now needed to the point of the concrete lining.

Below Cedar Draw, the high line is enlarged in 387 second foot cross sections show sufficient capacity.

Main Canal

Capacity revision of the high and low lines, brings about the following condition at the "forks", which is the lower end of the main canal:

High line requirements 1336 second foot; low line requirements, 1967 second foot, total requirements 3303 second feet.

To this amount we now add diversions and transportation losses between here and Milner and reach a grand total of 4097 second feet which is 387 second feet over and above the largest amount diverted to the main canal. This calls for enlargement, but it is at the point where the writer or that an enlargement of this canal is in order regardless of whether this 387 second feet is added or not, at least as far as the writer is concerned.

This report is not able to base an estimate of the cost of main canal enlargement on the notes of a survey made last October, but estimates the cost as compared with cleaning operations and the estimated cost of the high line enlargement.

Another item for consideration on the main canal, to which attention was called in the preliminary report of the writer, last October, is the necessity of still betterment at station 378, the point where the canal is the shortest distance from the Snake river canyon. This is found northeast of Hansen 24 1/2 miles, at what is known as "Hansen Point".

General Remarks

A more detailed inspection of the system since the preliminary report was made, has led the writer to the general opinion that the condition generally, is considerably better than it was believed to be at that time when the writer was on the project under conditions unfavorable for the work.

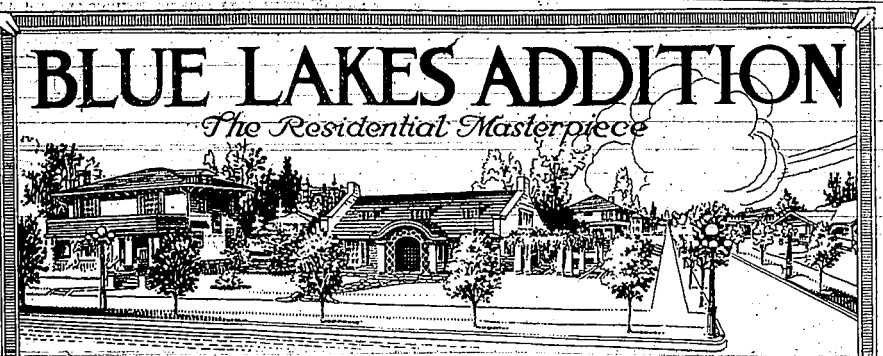

In addition to the substantial cleaning work which is now under way, it is noted that many of the structures of the tabs from the main canals which were still required betterments, have been placed in one or two, but many still lack suitable lifting devices.

Estimate of Cost

The following is an estimate of the necessary work to place the system in a safe condition, consisting of the most possible a reasonably equitable distribution of the water and provide canal capacities on the basis of 25 per cent excess capacity. This estimate includes the items of construction or betterment for which estimates have previously been made and funds provided.

A LEADER WHO LEADS

Every true American heart must have swelled with pride and satisfaction over the soaring sentences with which President Wilson enunciated our country's creed in the existing state of circumstance. Let Senator LaFollette sink in his seat while every other senator and every representative within sound of the president's voice arose to applaud his noble words. There can be no Jewry, no Jewry among us, one Benedict Arnold among us, but four score and only one now found among us, five hundred is a distinct gain for the twentieth century!

The firm, consistent and powerfully stated position of the president as to the war will not only give strength and purpose to every loyal soul at home and abroad, but will afford a complete answer to the one for which this world was waiting—to the Landowes upon one hand and the German Machiavellis upon the other. The greatest promise to which all present and future one, responded, has been and will be quoted by his biographer, not as being striking; but equally conclusive, can not be read too often nor remembered too well. It is as follows:

"PORK BARREL" AND "USURPATION"

It is not surprising that congressmen educated under the "pork barrel" regime should take violent exception to the suggestion of President Wilson that it return to the former practice of allocating and preparing all appropriation bills through a single committee. In the early days of the republic the question whether or not public money for internal improvements was to be appropriated by the whole body was a matter of great controversy. Many great statesmen thought that such course was impossible. Relative to interstate public highways and canals, the precursors of the great railroad systems for the carrying on of trade, there was much dispute. Jefferson, leader of the strict constructionists favored the idea on its merits, but thought that the constitution should be amended to specifically permit appropriations for the purpose, and voted measures on the constitutional ground that no such improvements had been provided for in the fundamental law—while regretting the fact, as he construed it, implied inhibition on such disposition of public funds. Hamilton and later Henry Clay, favored such improvements and held that the constitution permitted the use of public money for the purpose. The courts eventually interpreted the constitution according to the principles of the last named school. Up to the time when the matter was clearly settled in favor of the legality of such use of public funds, there was no question about the advisability of having all appropriations originate in the appropriations committee. But when the most ardent spring had grown into a mighty river; when every western railroad had "reason" for assistance and every cross roads "required" a public edifice and every gulley "demanded" draining, it was found that the magnitude of the work necessary to handle these with other matters, which were called for greater sums of public funds, was much greater than in the early days, so it finally came to pass gradually that a large proportion of appropriations originated in other than the appropriation committee.

brought the bacon" in the way of government "bargains" got the support of the thoughtful element which was able to swing elections, where, the more moderate were anything like equally divided on more fundamental issues. Hence, almost all statesmen yielded to this seemingly lesser evil in order to hold their places and carry out their larger plans. To a very great extent this was due to the division of authority and responsibility among several committees. It meant overlapping, overlapping and overlapping. It meant rival committees, any number within trades, and the work worked in such way that nobody could put a finger on the origin of the trouble. For years there has been a protest going up from everywhere and nowhere against a gigantic and growing evil. The Democrats roared Tom Reed and his "Billion Dollar Congress" and in many instances did so in good faith and prompted by a sincere general desire and in many cases determined to cut down the sum. But when they got in, and in spite of sporadic protests from within, and withering sarcasms from without, they spent a much larger sum. The Republicans got back in four years, but the appropriations grew and have been growing ever since.

The lesson that if appropriations are to be cut down, some definite body or men must be held responsible for their recommendation is plain enough. The extravagance of fifteen years ago led to the present commission government, and as a still further centralization of responsibility, to the city manager plan. It is a singular fact that with all the personalities indulged in on both sides during the most heated period of the local canal fight, all parties were agreed on the adoption of a similar system for the Twin Falls Canal company. The fixing of responsibility is the only way to accomplish the greatest good at the least expense. This does not imply that anyone is on his best behavior either in the canal company or in congress. Unless a man or a committee definitely can know the extent of authority and responsibility, it is impossible to work to the best advantage. The divided responsibility idea prevents the exercise of the greatest efficiency. It will be noted that congressional critics of the president's suggestion do not deny that it will work for economy or efficiency. Some say that it will give an undue preponderance of influence to a single committee. This is the obvious outcropping of a natural characteristic, personal jealousy. It is said that the president is interfering with a co-ordinate branch of government. The objection is absurd. The constitution itself provides for presidential reports and recommendations. Nobody objects on this ground to President Wilson recommending that the United States declare war. Yet the declaring of war is a function left solely to congress. The president did not tell congress that it would have to return to the old and simple system. He simply said, "I beg that the members of the house will permit me to express the opinion, etc." Surely, the suggestion of the president thus modestly voiced, to a body which has long insisted on the right of petition, can hardly be called usurpation.

Congress has the constitutional power to refuse to amend its methods, but unless natural laws operate differently there from elsewhere, modern research and experience would indicate that it would get in standing on "The right to go wrong."

PROPOSED OPERATIONS Erection of 86-foot Standard Rig in Big Piney Basin on the south slope of the Lackey Dome—on the northern extension of the LaBarge Anticline. Developments in the Cretaceous well, where the Shannon Sands were struck at 835 feet and the remarkable oil structure—sealed and unfaunted—offer ample evidence of large producing wells in the Big Piney Basin.

IN THE FOSSIL FIELD Drilling operations are intended immediately upon the sale of our Pre-Organization Stock, on Section 11, Township 21 North, Range 117 West, in the Fossil Field, less than a mile north of the well of high grade paraffine oil recently brought in by the Idaho-Wyoming Company at the shallow depth of 242 feet. Excellent possibilities of profit-making exist in the Fossil field with a five to ten barrel production of this remarkably high grade, high gasoline content oil, with recent proven development, lot alone much greater possibilities as the drills penetrate the underlying oil sands.

PRESENT SHALLOW WELLS PROFITABLE It is estimated that wells of the present depth can be completed in less than ten days each, at a cost less than $1000 per well. TWENTY WELLS of this sort, which we propose to drill will pay dividends of a satisfactory amount while drilling operations are carried on in the second Big Muddy—the Big Piney Basin.

OIL LAND HOLDINGS

Present leases and claims in excess of 1000 acres of very choice unusually well located State, Patented and Government Land in both fields. Negotiations pending for the acquisition and title to several thousand acres additional holdings.

NINE PERTINENT FACTS

- 1. Absolutely NO WATERED STOCK. 2. Strong and responsible Board of Directors, insuring efficiency. 3. Organized on sane, conservative basis—NO "WILD-CATTING." 4. Executive, administration, engineering and geological departments complete. 5. Operation in proven fields. 6. Extensive holding of oil land—OF TREMENDOUS FUTURE VALUE. 7. Additional holdings to be secured, making this Lincoln County's LARGEST HOLDING AND OPERATING COMPANY. 8. Immediate production of oil from shallow wells. 9. Oregon Short Line main line runs through the center of Section eleven in the Fossil Field.

OF IMPORTANCE TO YOU

ONLY FOUR HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND SHARES will be issued to Directors and Board of Management for cash, services, oil claims and oil leases consisting of State, Patented and validated Government Lands. In other words approximately ONE-SEVENTH of the total Shares of the corporation will be held by the promoters. We believe no fairer offer could possibly be made to the investing public.

"PORK" SQUEALS AT WILSON'S SUGGESTION

SOLONS INDIGNANT AT INTERFERENCE WITH APPROPRIATIONS

Many Critics Stirred by Plan

Idea of Going Back to Old System Does Not Please Congressmen Who Voice a Vigorous Protest Against It.

(J. N. S. Lensed Wire)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—President Wilson will not be able to get legislation for a single house committee on appropriations without a bitter struggle. This is the one recommendation of Mr. Wilson's annual message which met an ardent immediate opposition. This opposition comes from Democrats and Republicans in the house. "I beg that the members of the house," said the president, "will permit me to express the opinion that it will be impossible to deal in any but a very wasteful and extravagant fashion with the enormous appropriations of the public money which must continue to be made if war is to be properly sustained, unless the house will consent to return to its former practice of initiating and preparing all appropriation bills through a single committee. In order that responsibility may be concentrated, expenditures standardized and made uniform and waste and duplication as much as possible avoided."

The house has long-standing friction between the house appropriations committee and the several other committees of the lower branch of congress over the question of appropriations. The other committee chairmen have continuously fought what they declared was the tendency of the appointment of a new committee on appropriations. "I am thoroughly opposed to the creation of any such powerful committee," said the chairman of one of the big house committees today. This member, one of the house "leaders" and usually a supporter of Wilson's policies, predicted the defeat of the proposal. He declared it was sure to meet with opposition from half a dozen of the other committees on military affairs, naval affairs, agricultural rivers and harbors and Indian affairs. The Republicans declare that a proposal is another executive encroachment upon the legislative branch of the government. They are outspoken in declaring that the organization of the machinery through which either house of congress works is no concern of the White House.

The publication in Tuesday's issue of the TIMES of the president's message substantially in full and within two hours after the conclusion of its delivery to congress, is claimed as quite an achievement for a country newspaper some thousands of miles from the national capital. The same issue contained war news to the minute, the new plan for city waterworks, submitted to the council only the evening previous, the proceedings of the annual meeting of the W. R. C. and G. A. R. and other important local happenings. Nothing is too good, or too costly, for the readers of the TIMES.

Great Comedies at Laving Saturday

Ben Greet Players Appear Saturday and Sunday at Popular Prices in Lyceum Course.

On Saturday evening of this week the Ben Greet players will appear at the Laving Theatre as the third attraction of the lyceum course. The local committee has arranged for a number of afternoon performances. Greet presents the best in dramatic literature with true historic art in a way which has not been excelled by any other producer. Mr. Greet is considered today one of the greatest living authorities on English drama, and is world famous for his remarkable "The Good Companions" which has been produced in London, Oxford, Cambridge, Stratford-upon-Avon and other places in "Shakespeare's England." Mr. Greet became well known in America several years ago through his presentation of the morality play "Everyman" under the management of Charles Froese. This was the first time a play was presented in America by a professional company in the Elizabethan manner. This was later followed by the production of Shakespearean plays and classical comedies.

The Ben Greet players gave a season at the Garden Theatre, New York, covering nearly two hundred performances, followed by appearances in other cities throughout the United States. The Ben Greet players gave their first open air play at Columbia university before an audience of over three thousand persons. This was followed by performances at Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Oberlin, universities of Chicago, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Minnesota, Michigan, California, etc., and repeated ever since almost annually. Mr. Greet's company was the first to be invited to appear at the White House.

with the sole purpose of depicting the character as it should be. Absolutely correct diction and pronunciation is a distinguishing characteristic of Mr. Greet's players. The company will present "The Merchant of Venice" in the afternoon entertainment and "The Palace of Truth" in the evening. Popular prices are charged: Matinee 50c and 75c; evening $1.00. —Advt.

LINCOLN COUNTY, WYOMING

oil ATTRACTING ATTENTION KEMMERER, Dec. 5.—(Special correspondent of the Lincoln-Wyoming Telegram) Lincoln county has become the center of much excitement over oil developments during the past month. Drilling has been going on there during the past year but since the well of the Idaho-Wyoming company came in recently and the Shannon sands were reached in the Dry Piny field, north of Kemmerer, at a depth of 835 feet early in November, the news has spread far and wide, and Lincoln county bids fair to burst into fame as the state's largest oil field as well as America's farthest west paraffine oil producing territory.

"George Whitfield," the Nevada multi-millionaire, has acquired 6000 acres of oil land in the Big Piny Basin. His associate, Kenneth M. Jackson, also a man of wealth and a noted Nevada mine operator, heads the directorate of the Lincoln-Wyoming Petroleum corporation, a newly launched oil operating and refining company, with headquarters at Kemmerer. This concern has holdings of patented and government land in two of the most prominent districts, Big Piny basin and the Fossil field.

J. Parker Thompson, a California man, well known in that west, is making his headquarters at Kemmerer. He is managing the affairs of the new company.

The newly found oil in the Fossil field, just west of Kemmerer, has attracted much attention because of the unusual quality. A recent analysis made by the Utah, Oil and Refining company of Salt Lake City of the Fossil oil showed a 37 per cent gasoline (58 gravity) content; 16 per cent (42.7 gravity) kerosene; 36 per cent war distillate; 3 per cent cylinder anti-knock oil and only 2 per cent loss.

GEORGE HILLES TELLS OF HIS SOLDIERING

tion. The place is not very big, this room is about 10x20 or something like it. We have our two cots in here, a nice little fire at the foot of them, most everything is painted white and all the copper work is shined all the time. I have all my stuff under my bunk—arranged very neat.

Well, I must close with love, from PRIVATE GEO. HILLES.

Nov. 30, 1917.

Dearest Mother:
I have thought all of—just how I was going to start this letter. I have chewed the end of the pen and twiddled my thumb and all with no results. Well to start with the beginning, yesterday, at 5 p. m. where I was sitting in listening to the radio calls, someone called me up on the phone. It was a lieutenant of the old 4th company and he wanted to see me in the 4th company office at once. Gee what was up? I put on my hat and coat and suited right down. Well here comes the news. He said that one of the men in the anti-aircraft battalion, that they are organizing here, had "gone over to the hill," or, deserted. In other words, and as I was the only man around in the bay, I was seriously needed, to fill his place as radio operator. And I, well, I accepted. Yet, it still seems like a dream, or I am in a trance. Just think, I am going over to France. I hated to tell you how just as you were all worried over the mail, but the battalion is to leave shortly and I had to do it. Well after I saw the lieutenant of the eighth company we went and saw the new company commander of my new company. He said there was a fine position open as sergeant and it was worked hard enough I may get to be a radio operator. There are two other operators in the same tent, all of them under 21 and all fine fellows, all for business, and could not be a cleaner and better bunch. Then this morning while up at the radio station I was officially notified of my transfer.

Now that I am a radio operator, I do no K. P. stand, no calls but muster, revolve and sometimes retreat. All of an practice all of the time at the radio station, then when we "go over" we get a pack set. You have seen pictures of all these gaily dressed men sitting down cross legged, a lit-

Red Cross Service Flags are a feature of membership drive. How the spirit of the Red Cross and of Christianity will be linked together in millions of American homes.

In the Christmas membership drive which the American Red Cross will launch on December 17 to acquire ten million new members by Christmas eve, a striking feature will be the use of Red Cross Service flags, to be posted in the windows of homes. The flags are made of transparent paper, and bear the Red Cross emblem. The display of a Red Cross service flag in a window will mean that a person in that home is a Red Cross member. Space is provided in the white field of the flag for placing additional Red Cross emblems for additional members of the household who join the Red Cross.

The flags are to be issued from Division headquarters to chapters by December 1. With all chapters emphasizing the idea back of the Red Cross service flags, a splendid showing is expected throughout the country and a good foundation will be laid for the opening of the campaign on December 17.

CLEVELAND FIGHTING INFANT MORTALITY

(International News Service)

CLEVELAND, Dec. 6.—The city health department and Cleveland Reserve Army obstetrical department today are allied in a campaign to decrease the infant mortality rate in Cleveland. The plan, boosted by local health experts, will be worked out after a series of experiments are completed at the university, but the main idea will be to furnish valuable instruction to women approaching the motherhood stage.

Prenatal conditions brought death to 183 infants during the last year here. Of these, 149 were dead at birth, and the remainder died within two weeks of birth. More than a majority of these cases were preventable health experts declare. During the same year 123 mothers died as the result of child birth, a condition which could have been averted with modern and scientific care.

A maternally welfare centre has been established near the university and a remedy for the situation is expected to be arrived at within a few weeks when a definite campaign will be carried on throughout the city.

Rich Regiments Ready for War

Sons of Wealth Parents Form Personnel of Several Organizations That Are in Conflict.

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—American soldiers are generally known in the foreign lands by trail of coin which he leaves in his wake. With this reputation already before him, when the natives of other lands will think when certain American outfits arrive, "in their minds" is now a matter of conjecture with officers who have particular concerns these regiments.

The organizations referred to are a product of the war. They are known as "rich men's regiments," and are worthy of the name.

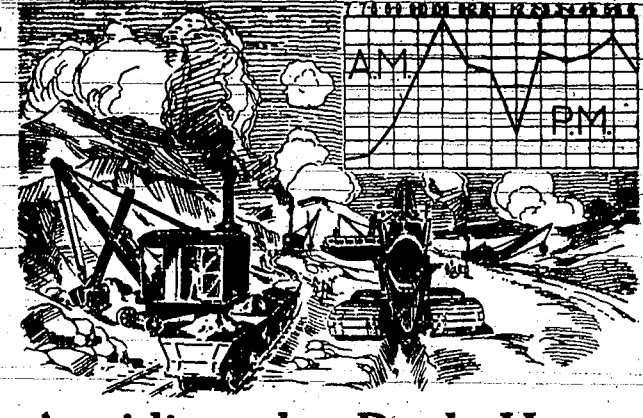

These units have already made a reputation for themselves, not as spendthrifts but for the big incomes possessed by the personnel.

For instance, a certain engineer regiment at Camp Meade is made up primarily of graduates of colleges and technical institutions. About 25 per cent of the enlisted men go away with incomes of from $5,000 a year upward to serve for 420 per month.

Another regiment of engineers at a camp near here is composed of men of high technical attainments, whose civilian careers are those of some of the technical branches were big consulting engineers whose incomes ran in the six figures.

In a big southern training camp is, or was, a squadron of crack national guard cavalry, whose members were big business men and their sons.

Some of these units distinguished themselves on the border when some of its "back privates" were in for high power make cars. One such squadron, now changed to field artillery, has in its ranks and among the of-

Avoiding the Rush Hours

The curve in the right-hand corner of the illustration shows approximately the fluctuations of telephone calls at a large central office in a business section of a city. The high spots represent the rush hours for which additional operators and adequate equipment must always be ready.

To get easier hauls, the railroad engineer lowers grades and straightens curves, cutting through hills and filling valleys.

If the telephone traffic curve could be flattened by distributing a percentage of calls over less busy periods, it would effect a material saving and assist us to meet the extraordinary demands for telephone service.

Important business calls cannot be deferred, but there are many calls, social and less urgent, which might be made at other times without loss to the subscriber.

By avoiding these high spots in telephone traffic, and by making telephone calls of a social or less urgent nature before or after the rush hours, the telephone user will be cooperating with us in the patriotic service we are rendering the Government and help us to meet the constantly increasing demands for telephone service.

Thrift Stamps Are at the Postoffice

Berger Items

Government Plans to Raise a Large Sum by This Method and Help Thrift.

Postmaster M. A. Strunk has received the $100 stamps which it is hoped will be conducive of saving and at the same time raise immediately a large amount of revenue for the government.

The theory upon which this effort to raise funds for the purpose of the government is based is the issuance of war savings certificates. These certificates are in a prescribed form and appear as left to attach 20 war savings stamps. These stamps will cost the purchaser $1 each if bought this month or in the succeeding month of January. As many of these stamps as a buyer desires can be purchased, not exceeding 100 in amount at one time. These stamps are redeemable on Jan. 1, 1923, and at that time the government will pay for each of the stamps the sum of $5, or for the war savings certificate, which has cost the purchaser the sum of $2.00, $3.00 will be paid. This means 50 per cent per annum for the war savings certificate, which is in itself a good investment, because all of the exemptions pertaining to the liberty bonds apply to these war savings stamps as well.

The certificates themselves may be registered at any money order post office, and then in case of loss the owner will be fully protected.

Besides the war saving certificates, the government will issue thrift cards containing from 15 to 25 cents each and if purchased can be annexed to the thrift card and when 150 of them are bought they can be presented and with the addition of 12 cents will purchase one of the war savings certificate stamps. It will be seen that under this law a graduate investment of even smaller amounts may be made by any of our citizens and perfectly secured. Not only will a benefit be derived by the government but a still greater benefit will attach to the investor and a security safe because the credit of the government is behind it and in addition, will be drawing a large rate of interest.

After the maturity of the stamps in 1923 they will be paid upon presentation to any money order post office or to the treasury of the United States. If, however, the party owning the certificates containing stamps; whether such stamps are in the amount of $100 permitted or in any lesser amount, wish to redeem these stamps, they can by giving 10 days' notice to any money order post office, be drawing a large rate of interest. instead of the $4.12 that will have to be paid up to that time, in order to maintain the 4 per cent compound interest rate.

Ever Peel a Banana Skin? That's It!

"I should worry about those corns—just put some 'Get-It' on 'em. Corns used to pester the world into millions and millions of dollars' worth of suffering, itching toes, tinkering with plasters and tape, trying to fix a corn so it wouldn't hurt. But now no one in the world 'itchid' worries because the moment you put 'Get-It' on 'em, it gives quick relief. There's nothing in the world like 'Get-It'—nothing as sure and certain—nothing that you can count on to take off a corn or callus as fast as 'Get-It' does. You can't ever grow 'em again. 'Get-It' never makes you too sore. Just two drops 'Get-It' and you can peel the corn right off with your finger and there you are—corn-free and happy with the toes that were once so sore."

THANKSGIVING SERMON BY

(Continued From Page 3) graves—live millions laid away in them. See peasant women and children with their baskets filled with flowers—throwing them—over these graves. Oh, that homeless and poverty-stricken—these homes—an opportunity to make Christ known as He has never before been realized. The world is a suffering world.

What a world-opportunity for Christian evangelization. Go through the nations and you would find at least forty million men and boys undisciplined. Remember in previous wars not to exceed two million men have been killed and another two million in actual warfare. These forty million men are the flower of the manhood and boyhood of the strongest nations of Europe, North Africa, and Southern Asia, and Canada, and now our own Australia is being blighted.

They represent populations that include five-sixths of the human race. Where are these men? You may see them in that arch of steel and human blood that is bleeding now at every point, that reaches for 3000 miles from the English channel to the Swiss mountains. In the other long line, 1500 miles that stretch from the Baltic, through Rumania to the Black sea. In that zig-zag line through the Austrian-Italian Alps. In that wedge driven into the hearts of the Balkan states, in that other wavy borderland, stretching—the Bus—east—stretching—back to the gates of Jerusalem. Back of these unbroken lines, in remote cities, are thousands getting ready for their first battle—or man rearing from their twentieth or more struggle. Then away back in the vast country, great, more millions are being trained to be passed up to the reserves, then into the trenches, then into the law of death. These men are looking at things straight. They have put away honor, shame, and hypocrisy. They are looking more intently at the fact of life and death than any of us. They have studied the mathematics of the war—how quickly they reach back—hand-to-hand, the hand of kindness extended to them. How eagerly they receive a Bible or Testament. What response to a practical ministry of help.

There is a picture in one of the great art galleries, "The Last Days of Napoleon." There is the statue of the great Napoleon, sitting back in his invalid chair, with but a few days to live, feeble, broken, not now the master of Europe—but alone, brow-beaten, his hand on an outspread map of Europe, yet no helplessness—he looks on it all, presently those mobile lips moved in his question saw it all. He saw it all so plainly. He saw life. He saw truth. He saw, and said, "That the hand of kindness extended to me." He compared himself to Alexander and Caesar. He like them had built his Empire on Force. Where was it all? He saw it all. He saw it all. He said, he founded his Empire on Love—and at that moment thousands would die for the name of Jesus.

He saw it all. He saw it all. He saw it all. He said, he founded his Empire on Love—and at that moment thousands would die for the name of Jesus. He saw it all. He saw it all. He saw it all. He said, he founded his Empire on Love—and at that moment thousands would die for the name of Jesus. He saw it all. He saw it all. He saw it all. Medical Examination Day Today—Great Fight Made on Tuberculosis by the Red Cross Organization.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—The children of the country will come into their own this public health workers on December 7. This day, Friday, of Tuberculosis work has been designated as modern health crusade day, by the national association for the study and prevention of tuberculosis.

- 1. I washed my hands before each meal today.
2. I drank a glass of water before each meal and before going to bed today.
3. I brushed my teeth in the morning and in the evening today.
4. I took ten or more slow deep breaths of fresh air today.
5. I played outdoors with windows open more than thirty minutes today.
6. I was in bed ten hours or more last night and kept my bed up today.
7. I tried today to sit up and stand up straight, to eat slowly, and to pat-tend to toilet and each used of my body at its regular time.
8. I took a full bath on each day of the week that is checked (x).

Modern health crusade day will be devoted to interesting the children in the anti-tuberculosis and public health movement. Use will be made of the health plays, talks, composition contests, motion pictures and other features.

The children will also be enlisted on this day to sell Red Cross soups. Special thanks and accompanying notices will be awarded to crusaders who sell a given number of soups.

The national association, in co-operation with other organizations, is advocating an annual medical examination day for every person, sick or well and this date has been set aside as one of the feature days of tuberculosis week.

The compulsory examination of 100,000,000 of our citizens for army draft purposes has given a new impetus to the annual medical examination day and particularly to the anti-tuberculosis phase of the movement. For tuberculosis alone is 1 per cent to 2 per cent of the men are being rejected, which means a sharp reversal toward previous expert estimates of the prevalence of the disease.

NEW ECONOMIC ERA DAWNS ON THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

Belief Expressed That Vast Extension of Government Operations Will Follow the War—Public Utilities Likely to Remain in Hands of Government—Interstate Commerce Commission Favors Taking Over Railroads Now as War Measure.

(I. N. S. Lensed Wire)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The coming of a new era in which practically every public utility will be operated by the federal government and the price of practically every necessity of life will be fixed by the president is believed to be the result of the recommendation of the Interstate Commerce Commission this afternoon for the taking over the railroads.

The patient work of long years which has resulted in the building of an elaborate structure of laws and regulations of practice looking to the instant mandate of war that business cannot be as usual.

The recommendations of radical reform societies for government ownership and for price fixing which a year ago were regarded as visionary, today have begun to be the order of the hour. The United States seems to be on the verge of a huge economic revolution.

The Interstate Commerce Commission today recommended the taking over of the railroads by the government.

The federal trade commission has recommended the taking over of the coal mines by the government.

The postmaster general has recommended the taking over of telephone and telegraph companies.

The shipping board has taken over in effect the entire merchant marine.

The food administration has practically effected government monopolies as to certain of the more fundamental foodstuffs.

The fuel administration is working toward the control of supply and distribution of coal.

Under court order, the federal trade commission has been given control of the news print paper output of the country.

The director of the mint now is engaged in fixing the price of silver.

The federal trade commission and war industries board under the direction of the president have fixed and will fix prices of commodities vitally concerned in the war program.

A new board shortly will be created under the council of national defense to provide for the conversion of non-essential into essential industries, under government direction.

Even now there is scarcely any activity of the industrial world which is not under government supervision and the plan is to be greatly extended so that the industries of the entire country will work like one vast shop, all activities under a control centralized at Washington.

Forgotten are the decisions of the supreme court of the United States and of other federal courts condemning the pooling and monopolistic systems of industrial operation. This winter, congress will act to suspend certain existing anti-trust laws—an operation which seems unnecessary in view of the fact that these laws have been practically dormant for many months.

The supreme court of the United States has now before it the United States Steel case, the International Harvester case, the United Shoe Machinery case and several other cases involving the fundamental features of the anti-trust laws. The court has had these cases for a long time and it has been hinted that there would be no decision on them for the period of the war. It is known that Attorney General Gregory has for many months regarded the nation to be at the crossroads in the matter of monopolistic control. He has said that the future course of the government in regulation of monopolies depends upon the action of the high court in these cases. But no decisions have been forthcoming. It is quite possible that no decision ever will be handed down.

While the pooling of American utilities and industries has been effected with the understanding that the actions were temporary war measures, the belief now is growing that the end of competitive business has come and that the ante bellum status may never be re-established. This is regarded as particularly true of those industries designated as public utilities, many of which, it is believed, will be hereafter operated directly by the government, while others not classed as natural monopolies will be only regulated.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The American railroad system must be conscripted. This is the verdict of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and that body's answer to the railroads' petition for a general advance of 15 per cent in freight rates.

In a special communication transmitted to the congress today, the commission declares that one of two things must be done to put American railroads on an operating basis that will expeditiously win the war:

First—The pooling of every railroad in the country into one management system, to be operated under the direction of some central body to be designated by congress, and the temporary suspension of anti-trust laws now making such a move.

Second—The taking over of the entire American railroad system by the president and its operation as a war measure.

Steady action is demanded by the commission. This is no time for temporizing," the letter states.

Commissioner McChord, who has had charge of the car shortage investigation and the railroads' dissent from the majority of the commission as to that portion of its recommendation which would permit the railroads to form their own operating pool. His experience has demonstrated, he says, that the government must take control as no voluntary committee of the railroads will work harmoniously and effectively.

In view of the letter of the commission, the railroads may expect no increase in railroad rates in response to their petition for a general advance. The letter makes clear that the commission has concluded the time has come to put a stop to the "vicious circle" of increasing rates and increasing costs. The railroads' own past wage increases have been followed by rate increases and rate increases again followed by further wage increases.

The commission points out that it would be useless to give the railroads more revenues at this time and they do not see how the government could get the funds. The commission also points out that the cost of living is so high and the government's own demands for more and more money for the war could not find spare cash to put into railroad securities, no matter how good the interest and the premium.

It is stated that the railroads cannot now make further improvements in tracks, yards and terminals because labor is fully employed at present and it is impossible to obtain new cars, new steel supplies or any new equipment. In short, the commission says that the railroads today had unlimited cash they would be like the man who started to death on the mountain of gold because their cash would buy them nothing.

Accordingly, centralized control of all railroads, either by a pool of their own, or by the federal government is the only expedient. In one great system, the roads could re-arrange priorities, could re-adjust routing, could revise their own ordering in such a way that production of essentials could be greatly increased. In the opinion of the commission.

The commission's letter to congress says that, in addition to the pooling and operating under one head, it will be imperative that the railroads be granted substantial credits out of the federal treasury.

Should the government take over the entire American railroad system, the vested interests of individual owners of railroad securities would be protected by provision for the guarantee of payment of interest and dividends, the commission says.

The commission's letter reviews the history of American railroad and points out that the European war has made it imperative to completely reverse the state of regulation.

It is pointed out, all legislation, state and federal, has been directed to the fostering of keen competition, and the prevention of just such pooling as now is recommended.

This reversal of policy must be accompanied by appropriate legislation which will prevent the punishments of the existing laws from falling upon the railroads. A suspension of these laws must be arranged.

It is made plain by the commission that its recommendation is distinctly a war measure. It is stated clearly that the United States is in a financial straits, engaged in turning out the munitions of war, are wholly dependent upon the railroads. For that reason, the government must be left alone which would increase the efficiency of the railroad machinery.

In his disarming memorandum, Commissioner McChord says that if the president under the powers given him in the act of April 29, 1916, does not see fit to take control of the railroads, congress should, on its own initiative, enact legislation creating some central body to administer the railroads, at least, for the period of the war.

In justification of its revolutionary recommendation, the commission says: "Since the outbreak of the war in Europe and especially since this country was drawn into that war, it has become increasingly clear that the unification in the operation of our railroads during the period of conflict is indispensable to their fullest utilization for the nation's safety and welfare. They must be drawn, like the individual, from the pursuits

Governor Alexander Commends Conference

Writes Letter in Which He Strongly Endorses Meeting Held of December 14-16.

Governor M. Alexander commenting on the Older Boys' conference one of which is to be held in Twin Falls, December 14-16, has written as follows:

"I am somewhat interested in your line of work and am pleased to know that you are arranging for this conference, and sincerely hope it will be a success, as I can agree with you that never before in the history of Idaho has there been a greater need for a conference of the older boys as planned by the Interstate Y. M. C. A. committee."

Every community in the state should be fully represented by the presence of boy and adult membership. Several special features are being arranged for this year's program. The first session on Friday afternoon will be devoted almost entirely to the reading of letters from boys who attend the sessions at Pocatello or at Baker, Oregon, last year, and are now in the service of the nation as soldiers or sailors. These letters are coming in almost daily to Jean Blahnik, of Pocatello, president of last year's conference. At this session the "honor roll" will be prepared and hung in the conference headquarters until the closing session of the conference. A patriotic assembly Friday night will hold some surprises for the delegates and furnish a fitting setting for the following sessions. A "Honorized" banquet Saturday evening has everyone guessing. The closing session Sunday night will be unique, wonderful and gripping—in view of the service of the war development.

DOROTHY DALTON--INCESTAR AT THE IDAHO IN "THE PRICE MARK"

BEAUTIFUL STAR MAKES PARAMOUNT DEBUT THURSDAY
IN A DARING AND SENSATIONAL LOVE STORY OF GAY ART COLONY

DOROTHY DALTON, whose recent triumph in "The Flame of the Yukon," is recalled by photoplaygoers the country over, will be seen at the Idaho Theater on Thursday, Friday and Saturday in "The Price Mark," by John B. Ritchie. This is a Thomas H. Ince production—the first he has made with Miss Dalton for Paramount. The scenes of "The Price Mark" are located in Egypt and New York City. Miss Dalton has the role of a girl, who comes from a small Ohio town to procure a theatrical engagement, and, failing, is forced to pose for an artist. The story is daring, and replete with romance and adventure.

A professional reviewer says of this picture: "The sets and atmosphere are very pleasing and quite distinctive." As a matter of fact, it is this combination of Miss Dalton's personality and production fine points that makes this such a splendid production. It was decidedly noticeable, if the technique of the action were studied, that the tense situations were played upon the faces of the principals.

With the Film Folk

"An International Sneak," is the next Paramount-Mack Bennett offering following "Are Waitresses Safe?" It has as its bright particular stars Chester Conklin, Ethel Tiren, William Armstrong, Lillian Birch and Earl C. Kenton. Fred Fishback is director and as usual it has been supervised by Mr. Bennett with the stirring events of the day as the title implies. High explosives feature but the laughter that will result is certain to be the most explosive of all.

Joseph Kaufman, director of the Paramount photoplay version of "Arms and the Girl," is a stickler for accuracy and realism. To insure the following of the stage version he secured the services of two of the actors who appeared in the stage version. The lead is taken by Billie Burke, who is supported by Thomas Meighan and an excellent cast.

"The Hungry Heart," by David Graham Phillips, which was shown by Pauline Frederick as her newest Paramount picture, was first published serially in one of the popular magazines; next in book form in 1909 when it was one of the six best sellers of the year.
